"When all is said and done, chance is the great detective. Read any book of true criminal stories and you'll be surprised how often chance has won when human ingenuity has fizzled out. Chance seems determined that the mills of the gods won't permanently shut down for lack of a grist to grind.

"Some years ago there was an atrocious murder in California. It was committed by an Austrian officer who had been cutting a swath in social circles for quite a while. He wasn't a fake officer, either. He had distinguished himself in the Austrian military service and had medals and decorations which had been pinned on him by the emperor's own lily white hands. He was a gentleman of gorgeous appearance and made a great hit with the girls.

"As I recall the case, he needed money and failed to find it growing on the trees, so he slew one of his lady friends for her jewels. The police soon figured out the identity of the murderer and went to get him, but he had disappeared, and no trace of him could be found. The police wanted to advertise for him all over the country, but there was no picture of him to be had. Then chance came along and took a hand. A Chicago man happened to be there and he remembered that a friend in his own town had a photo of the Austrian.

"This photo was secured and a half tone was made from it and copies were sent to all peace officers in the United States. But nothing happened. The months and years slid away and nothing was heard of the Austrian, and his crime was practically forgotten. All efforts to trace him had ceased.

"One day a Texas farmer got sore because hunters persisted in chasing around his place and every now and then they shot up a cow, thinking it was a ground-hog. He lived in a lonely region and the county seat was far away, but he was so indignant that he made the trip just to see whether the sheriff would do anything.

"He told his story to the sheriff and received advice and consolation, and then, being in no hurry, he began reading the reward advertisements hanging around the walls. He came to an old, fly specked one and looked at it attentively. 'This fellow,' he said, 'is a dead ringer for the school teacher in our neighborhood.'

"You can guess the rest. The sheriff went out and found the Austrian officer teaching a country school. And the officer shot himself through the head, and so ended the story. But consider the long line of chances, dovetailing into each other, that resulted in his discovery."

DEATH CAME TO MAN WHO SAT IN THE 13TH CHAIR

Thrilling Play at Grand Opera House Last Night — Occult Powers and Detectives Genius Employment to Unravel a Crime.

Thirteen persons sat in a circle to take part in a spiritualistic seance, which was really a frame-up by one of those in the group. The unlucky number still held its fatal charm and death came to a member of the party in ghastly form but nevertheless mysteriously.

The play, "The Thirteenth Chair," which was presented at the Grand Opera House last night, is based on the Rosalie La Grange stories by Will Irwin, the noted American author, and which gave the adventures of Sherlock Holmes so hard a race for popularity. [illegible] young man had been mysteriously murdered, and the evidence pointed to a woman as the culprit. A friend of the dead man enlists the aid of a medium to discover the murderer, and the seance is held in the palatial home of a mutual [illegible]

The lights are turned down when those in the circle have joined hands and the performance proceeds. The dead man's friend to all appearances gets into communication with the spirit world. He is insisting that he be told the name of the murderer. Just as interest is worked up to a white heat there is a cry of pain, the lights are turned on and the friend is found dead, having been murdered in exactly the same way as was the man whose death he was trying to avenge. One thing seems certain, the same hand committed both murders, the culprit is in that room. To discover him is the real plot of the play.

A typical bumptious and somewhat thick-witted New York detective sets out to unravel the mystery, and as usual gets on to the wrong trail and suspects an entirely innocent person. The spiritualistic medium is only a shallow fraud who had lent herself to a plot to bring home the crime to a woman who turned out to be her own daughter. To save the latter she sets out to land the real criminal by the exercise of natural gifts for investigation rather than by occult powers. She succeeds and the real murderer confesses.

The play was excellently staged, and every part was played by an artist in his profession. The interest of the audience aroused at the start was held to the end. Spiritualism gains no new converts by the portrayal. The so-called science is exposed as a combination of sleight-of-hand and working in co-operation with a confederate.

FRECKLES AT THE STRAND.

A New Screen Play Starring Louis Huff and Jack Pickford.

The Strand Theatre is offering on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week the fascinating story of "Freckles," adopted to photo play from the book of that name which made Jean Stratton Porter famous in the library world. "Freckles" on the screen has attracted crowded houses wherever shown and is featuring such well known stars as Louis Huff and Jack Pickford, supported by a cast of the first magnitude. The story is too well known to need extended reference; suffice it to say that in motion pictures it presents a charming panorama of love and adventure staged in uncultivated regions, which irresistibly carries one back to the very heart of nature. This offering stands apart from the ordinary screen story and has an attraction peculiarly its own.

THE DANGER OF A FAMINE

Food Controller Hanna has addressed the following circular letter to the clergymen of the Dominion:

Office of the Food Controller,
Ottawa, Dec. 12, 1917.

Dear Sir:

I appeal to you, as I am appealing to other clergymen throughout the Dominion, to make known to your congregation the desperate world shortage of food and the tremendous responsibility resting upon us in Canada to feed our soldiers overseas and to support the Allied cause with our food resources. Authoritative information has just reached my office which shows that the danger of actual famine throughout the world is terribly real and that only the sternest resolve on the part of the producers of this continent and equally stern economies on the part of all of us as consumers can possibly save the situation.

These are the facts, derived from official information and stated without exaggeration:

1. France this year had a crop which was only between one-third and one-half that of a normal year. The women and children and the aged of France did their utmost to support the men who were fighting. Women hitched themselves to the ploughs and did the work of draught animals in a determined effort to make the impoverished soil of France produce every possible ounce of food. They now look to us to make up their deficiency of essential supplies.

2. The harvest in Italy was far below normal and today hundreds of thousands of people are in peril of starvation. Great Britain, and even dauntless France, have been sending food to Italy and from this continent large supplies have been shipped with the greatest possible despatch. Italy will require much larger supplies to save her people until the next harvest.

3. Until, and unless, new shipping becomes available, it is impossible for the Allies to spare many cargo carriers to transport foodstuff from more distant countries such as India, Australia, New Zealand and even the Argentine Republic. This means that the Allied nations are practically dependent upon North America to supply them with the food which must be forthcoming, if terrible suffering is to be avoided and the fighting efficiency of the armies maintained.

4. There is a great shortage of food in nearly all the neutral nations and much suffering, perhaps actual starvation in many cases, is certain during the coming winter.

5. The United States has not a single bushel of wheat for export, after allowance is made for domestic requirements on the basis of normal consumption. The United States Food Administration is endeavoring to bring about a reduction of 20 per cent in home consumption of wheat and flour. This would release 100,000,000 bushels for export, but the Allies will require nearly five times that amount before the 1918 harvest.

6. Canada today is the only country in the world, practically accessible to the Allies under present conditions of shipping shortage, which has an actual exportable surplus of wheat after allowance for normal home requirements. The surplus today is not more than 110,000,000 bushels.

7. The day may not be far distant when the Canadian soldiers overseas may be dependent upon the food actually sent from Canadian ports. The United States will require all its available resources to maintain its own army overseas.

8. The outlook for production of foodstuff in Europe next year is distinctly unfavorable. France has been dependent upon intensive cultivation of land, which in turn has required an abundant use of fertilizers, but since the beginning of the war the available supply of fertilizers in Europe has dwindled and the land of France has deteriorated until today it is incapable of large production. In Great Britain, much new land has been brought under cultivation by the aid of tractors, which have also been used to some extent in France, but there is little prospect of much improvement in production in Europe while the shipping shortage prevents the transportation from overseas of nitrates, phosphates and other fertilising supplies. Indeed, the Allies must be prepared for even poorer crops in 1918 than those of the current year.

Such is the situation—grave beyond anything that we thought possible a few months ago. Unless our people are aroused to a realization of what the world shortage means to us, to our soldiers and to our Allies and of the terrible possibilities which it entails, disaster is inevitable

Canada is fortunate above nearly all the countries of the world in having an apparent abundance of food. But that apparent abundance involves a tremendous obligation to our Allies. Upon our stewardship with Canada's food resources may depend in no small measure the ability of our armies to win a decisive victory. The supreme food needs overseas are for wheat and wheat flour, meat, sugar and fats and the people of Canada must restrict their use of these commodities to an increasing extent. Fortunately, we have a large supply of wholesome substitutes, and these should be used more freely, in order that the vitally needed foodstuffs may be released for export. Poultry and fish should be used as far as possible instead of beef, bacon or ham. War cereals should be substituted in part for wheat flour. The use of cane sugar should be curtailed in candies, etc., because the failure of the sugar beet crop in France and the shortage of shipping to move the new sugar crops of other countries have made heavy drains upon the available supply oolhtctos dbpn ply on this continent Fats in any form should not be wasted.

Production, too, must be increased to the greatest possible extent in this country. Present war conditions demand extraordinary efforts and every man, woman, boy or girl who can produce food has a national duty to do so. Pigs might be kept and fed on household garbage by many people who live in the suburban districts of our cities. People in the rural sections have made splendid efforts to increase production of food. Those efforts must not be relaxed. Rather they must be added to in every possible way.

I am confident that when the people of this country realize that the food situation is of utmost gravity, they will willingly adjust themselves to the necessities of the case and make whatever sacrifices may be demended of them. The call which is made upon them is in the name of the Canadian soldiers at the front, the Allied armies, and the civilian populations of the Allied nations who have already made food sacrifices, the extent of which is little realized by the people of this country.

As Food Controller for Canada, I earnestly commend these facts to your consideration and ask you to use your influence to impress them upon our people.

Sincerely,
W. J. HANNA,
Food Controller

SPORT DOINGS HERE AND THERE

ALL HOCKEY PLAYERS eligible for the junior O. H. A. series are invited to the initial practice at Brock street rink tonight at 7:30. The invitation is not confined to any group of young fellows. Anybody who can play the game, is willing to practise regularly and work for the best interests of the club will be given every encouragement.

ACCORDING to reports from the Queen City, Bill Stoddart, of North Bay, formerly of Lindsay, will be given a trial with the Toronto professionals by Manager Querrie. Bill is a veteran of the game and was a member of the famous Midgets who captured the intermediate O. H. A. championship several years ago. Bill ought to get out of the way.

VILLAGES OF GALICIA.

Where Family, Cattle and Fowls All Live In Two Rooms.

The villages of Galicia are especially interesting on Sundays and holidays, when the national costumes are donned.

The cottages are generally made of stone or board plastered over and are then covered with a coat of whitewash. The straw roof is frequently crowned with green growing moss, which adds to its picturesque appearance if not to its healthfulness. Water is drawn from the wells by a long pole balanced near the center. These wells have a decided old world appearance.

The interior of the cottages is usually divided into two rooms. In one room the entire family lives, eats and sleeps; in the other, in more or less harmonious contentment, dwell the cows, pigs, chickens and geese. No household would be complete without a number of geese.

Around the cottages a number of children are sure to be seen playing. A dozen or twenty or thirty of such cottages, each separated only by a small yard, make up a village. If there is a marriageable daughter in the house the lintel of the door and the window surroundings are ornamented with little irregular bands, which is a notice to the marriageable young men.

Where Knowledge Stopped.

Bill—Do you know you borrowed [illegible] from me over six months ago?

Gill—Yes, I know that.

"And do you know you have never paid me?"

"Why, yes, I know that."

"Do you know when you are going to pay me?"

"Well, say, you don't expect me to know everything, do you?"

"NOW'S THE DAY."

Arise! for the day is passing
While you lie dreaming on;
Your brothers are cased in armor
And forth to the fight are gone.
Your place in the ranks awaits you:
Each man has a part to play—
The past and the future are nothing
In the face of the stern today.

Arise from your dreams of the future
Of gaining a hard-fought field,
Of storming the airy fortress,
Of bidding the giant yield.
Your future has deeds of glory,
Of honor (God grant it may!)
But your arms will never be stronger
Or needed as now—today.

Arise! If the past detain you.
Her sunshine and storm forget:
No chains so unworthy to hold you
As those of a vain regret.
Sad or bright she is lifeless ever;
Cast her phantom arms away,
Nor look back, save to learn the lesson
Of a nobler strife today.

Arise! for the hour is passing.
The sound that you dimly hear
Is your enemy marching to battle.
Rise, Rise, for the foe is near.
Stay not to brighten your weapons,
Oh the hour will strike at last,
And from dreams of a coming battle
You will wake and find it past.

MR. HALL ADDRESSES THE SMITH TOWNSHIP VOTERS

Reiterates His Now Familiar Argument in Favor of Greater Production—Winds up Campaign in Country.

Mr. R. R. Hall addressed a representative meeting of the electors at Temperance Hall, 4th Line Smith, last evening.

Mr. Hall said that this was the last meeting that he was holding in the Country.

Mr. Hall laid special emphasis upon the fact that 45 million men had been withdrawn from production. They have become the destroyers of property and have become a vast army of consumers. The result has been that there is a great shortage in food production and that the world is rapidly drifting into what may prove to be one of the greatest famines that was ever known in the history of mankind.

Already this famine is upon the people of Belgium who are dying of starvation.

Already this famine is upon the people of Italy which is straining the resources of Great Britain and the United States to avoid.

Already this famine is rapidly coming to France whose production has fallen down and that notwithstanding the fact that the women of France have actually been performing the work of the beasts of burden.

"Such being the situation," said Mr. Hall, "I ask you why has not Sir Robert Borden long ago inaugurated a policy of increased food production by the use of gasoline tractors, plows, discs, harrows, seeders and reapers. Millions of acres of land in the North West could be made during this coming year to produce grain which now only produces grass.

The Government should long ago have placed an order for these agricultural implements and the whole nation should be organized to produce food in the great plains of the North West on a most extensive scale, and the American army could be used to help harvest this.

Most Bountiful Crop.

The criminal policy and neglect of Sir Robert Borden is beyond belief. In his blindness and neglect he is committing the greatest crime against humanity that this world has ever known, because the Dominion of Canada has the lands that can be utilized by the people of this continent to prevent Great Britain and her Allies from being starved into subjection.

"Sir Robert Borden has been warned," said Mr. Hall. "He actually laughed like a monomaniac before 3000 people in Peterborough because I advocated a policy to produce cereals, meats and fats upon an extensive scale.

Is it necessary for Sir Robert Borden and his servile followers to actually see famine and disaster before they will make one single effort to avert it.

"I therefore, appeal," said Mr. Hall, "to the sober minded electors of this riding regardless of political parties to vote against a short sighted unbelieving prime minister and to vote against a "do nothing speechless candidate."

What we want in this country is immediate action to avert the famine, disaster and ruin that will overtake us before the close of next year.

The real truth regarding the desperate situation of Great Britain, France and Italy is being concealed by Sir Robert Borden and his Government but the force of truth and of want will be brought home to the common people of this country notwithstanding the wilful concealment of public news by a government that is completely in the hands of grafter, parasites and profiteers.

Surely the men and women of Peterborough have not become so blinded by passion, prejudice and interest that they will not believe the truth.

"I say," said Mr. Hall in conclusion, "let Hon. W. J. Hanna, Canadian Food Controller speak out the truth regarding the world's approaching famine or else his name will become a by word and reproach to a starving world."

A Mistaken Raid.

"They fooled some cops the other evening at a tango dance contest."

"How did they fool 'em?"

"Told 'em they had better raid the hall as a lot of dips were getting in their work."—Baltimore American.

Appearances.

"Biggins is doing his best to appear youthful."

"Dyes his mustache and wears a toupee?"

"No. Puts on outing clothes and tries to look like a boy scout."

Almost.

STOP DANDRUFF! HAIR GETS THICK WAVY, BEAUTIFUL

GIRLS! DRAW A CLOTH THROUGH YOUR HAIR AND DOUBLE ITS BEAUTY.

SPEND A FEW CENTS! DANDRUFF VANISHES AND HAIR STOPS FALLING OUT.

To be possessed of a head of heavy beautiful hair, soft, lustrous, fluffy, wavy and free from dandruff, is merely a matter of using a little Danderine.

It is easy and inexpensive to have nice, soft hair and lots of it. Just get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now—all drug stores recommend it—apply a little as directed, and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance, freshness, fluffiness and an incomparable gloss and lustre, and try as you will, you cannot find a trace of dandruff or falling hair; but your real surprise will be after about two weeks' use, when you will see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting out all over your scalp—Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower, destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp, and it never fails to stop falling hair at once.

—If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair—taking one small strand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments—a delightful surprise awaits everyone who tries this.

NEW SPOKESMAN FOR CANADIANS

Sir George Perley Is High Commissioner in London.

BORN IN UNITED STATES

Successor to Lord Strathcona Spent His Youth in the U. S., but His Parents Came From This Country, and He Returned to Canada Long Before Entering Public Life

ONE of the important changes arising from the formation of the Union Government at Ottawa has been the permanent appointment of Sir George Perley to the post of High Commissioner in England. He has been representing Canada in London now for several years, and is well acquainted with the duties of his new office. It is not at all improbable that one of these days the American papers will make the discovery that Sir George was born in the United States, and that he spent his youth there, receiving his education at Harvard. Then it will be declared proudly that a son of Uncle Sam is Canadian High Commissioner in London. It is well to remember, however, that Sir George, though born in the United States, was the son of Canadian parents.

SIR GEORGE PERLEY

Sir George Halsey Perley first aspired to the Commons in 1900, when he unsuccessfully contested Russell. Two years later he was unsuccessful in Argenteuil. However, he has retained the confidence of the electors of this constituency since 1904. He took a most active part in the campaign of 1911, accompanying Mr. Borden through Western Canada. With the defeat of the Liberal Administration he became Chief Whip of the Conservative party, a Privy Councillor, and a member of the Cabinet without portfolio. After the death of Lord Strathcona he went to England to temporarily fill the post of High Commissioner.

Sir George Perley is of Welsh descent. The Apperley family emigrated to America in 1636. His father was the late W. O. Perley, M. P. for Ottawa. He was born at Lebanon, N.H. He was graduated in Arts from Harvard University in 1878. He is identified extensively with the lumber interests of the Ottawa Valley. He has done considerable for charities. He is rated as a millionaire.

SOCIAL TIME HELD AT HOME FOR THE AGED

ST. ANDREW'S BIBLE CLASS OF LADIES ENTERTAINED THE OLD FOLKS.

A very enjoyable social evening was held Wednesday night at the Protestant Home when the members of the Ladies Adult Bible Class, Mr. F. E. Kerr, B.A., teacher, of St. Andrew's Church entertained the old folks. Mrs. McNeely, president of the class, presided and in a few words spoke of the pleasure it gave the members to be present and enjoy a social hour with the inmates. From the many expressions of thanks it was quite evident that the old people thoroughly enjoyed the following program:

Piano solo—Mr. H. C. Treneer.
Reading—Miss Stringer.
Vocal solo—Miss Jessie Stevens
Reading—Mr. F. E. Kerr.
Vocal solo—Mr. H. C. Treneer.
Recitation—Miss Barrie.
Vocal solo—Mr. H. C. Treneer.

Dainty refreshments were then served by the members of the social committee, after which all joined heartily in singing God Save the King.

OFFICERS WILL RESIGN POSTS

IF SIR WILFRID LAURIER WINS THE ELECTION NEXT MONDAY.

Toronto, Dec. 14.—Military officers in high positions in the C. E. F. will resign their posts if the Union Government is defeated and Sir Wilfrid Laurier becomes Premier.

This was stated by a prominent Toronto officer who has had a great deal to do with the organization and training of the Canadian troops, and who has been overseas to see the conditions there.

"We would be in an impossible position if Laurier were put in power," said this officer. "His policy is one of delay, and with it, of course, we can have no sympathy. I know the sentiments of my brother officers, and what I say goes for them."

For obvious reasons the officer's name cannot now be made public.

LET EVERY WOMAN HELP.

How We May Attain the Stature of Our Grandmothers.

Fifty years have passed since American women have been able to show the stuff they're made of.

Since the days when your mother and mine scraped lint and prayed for the reunion of a divided nation we women of America have come into wonderful privileges.

Coeducation has become a magnificent reality. In many lines of industry and commerce we have attained a measure of economic independence of which our grandmothers hardly dared to dream. Medicine and the law have opened their doors to us as practitioners. Statutes have been revised increasing our rights. When the sovereign body of our government was called to decide the grave question of declaring war a woman sat in that historic hall and cast her vote.

For these privileges we must pay in added responsibility. In this grave crisis we must rise in the measure of our opportunities. We must prove that because of these advantages we are stronger, more purposeful, more resourceful and if possible more patriotic than our grandmothers.

How shall we reach this high standard? How can we prove that we have profited by our privileges and opportunities?

First by rising superior to the petty things which years of prosperity have transformed from luxuries into necessities. Like Martha of old, some of us still cumber our days with such serving. We have come to concentrate on such petty problems as curtains which shall rouse the envy of our friends, a new frock in which daughter Edith shall outshine her young friends, a machine which shall outstrip our neighbor's.

Today if we are to prove ourselves worthy of the privileges with which progress and our country have endowed us we will see something bigger than neighborhood rivalry beyond the old mended curtains at our windows—men marching forward to right wrongs. Daughter Edith is no longer the family beauty to be decked in high priced finery, but a women whose country may call her to perform those grave duties for which her broader education has fitted her. The high power machine no longer stands for personal ease and pleasure. It becomes a messenger at the service of the government. And this transformation of the family viewpoint, of our national life, must come through women. Instead of "I must have," we must learn to say "I do not need." For there is so little that we really need, so much that we can give to a world which calls as it has never called before!—[illegible]

BAD COLD? TAKE "CASCARETS" FOR BOWELS TONIGHT

THEY'RE FINE! LIVEN YOUR LIVER AND BOWELS AND CLEAR YOUR HEAD

NO HEADACHE, SOUR STOMACH, BAD COLD OR CONSTIPATION BY MORNING

Get a 10-cent box now.

Colds—whether in the head or any part of the body—are quickly overcome by urging the liver to action and keeping the bowels free of poison. Take Cascarets tonight and you will wake up with a clear head and your cold will be gone. Cascarets work while you sleep; they cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter and poison from the bowels.

Remember the quickest way to get rid of colds is one or two Cascarets at night to cleanse the system. Get a 10-cent box at any drug store. Don't forget the children. They relish this Candy Cathartic and it is often all that is needed to drive a cold from their little systems.

EDITOR'S MAIL

WHAT THE BOYS AT THE FRONT ARE SAYING

Editor Review: A constant correspondent, who went over with the First Contingent, fought with the artillery in the second battle of Ypres, and has been almost continuously in France, now acting as a Brigade Major of Artillery, writes me under date 23rd of November as follows: "One's mind is concerned at this moment above all with election prospects in Canada. When the composition of the Union Government was announced I felt as if we were out of the woods. But I realize now that, that was premature. However I still can't think so ill of my country as to believe that they will not support the "ministry of all the talents." By the time this reaches you it will be decided. If it goes against us I hate to think of the result."

How could the Dewarts, the Dentons and the Bowlbys and other English speaking champions of no conscription look a man like this in the face

A DAY WILL DO IT

People who suffer from dyspepsia, indigestion, acidity of the stomach are sometimes under the impression they have to continue to suffer from their ailment and will be unable to obtain relief.

Dr. Bantas Dyspepsia Tablets are a positive cure for diseases arising from imperfect digestion. Headaches, soreness in the bones and limbs are frequently caused by poisonous gases being absorbed into the system and the kidneys are overtaxed in their effort to expell these gases. Dr. Bantas Dyspepsia Tablets will prevent the formation of gas, assist digestion and strengthen the entire system. The manufacturers are so confident that these tablets will do what we claim for them that your dealer is authorised to refund your money if they fail to give you satisfaction. Will you try them and be convinced. They are sold by one reliable dealer in each county. Sold in Peterborough at Lynch's Drug Store, 168 Hunter street. Price 50c per box. Mail orders attended to promptly.

GERMANS MAKE SLIGHT GAINS

SOME BRITISH SOLDIERS MISSING AS RESULT OF RAID.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Dec. 14. "Our troops improved their position slightly east of Bullecourt as a result of bomb fighting in that locality reported in last night's communique. The enemy raided one of our posts last night south of Pronville. A few of our men are missing. On the remainder of the front here was nothing of special interest during the night."

Slight Loss for British.

HOW SOLDIERS CAST BALLOTS

INCIDENT SHOWS THE SPIRIT OF CANADIANS IN THE TRENCHES.

American Field Headquarters, France, Dec. 14.—Conscription in Canada will win in a walk—if the sentiment of Canadians among the American militia now "over here" can be regarded as a barometer.

The "Simon pure" Americans in the expeditionary forces rooted out all their Canadian pals and cheered them as they entered the polling booths to vote on the question.

Out in front of one polling place a red-haired New Yorker, formerly a Tammany Hall soap-box orator, pulled an impromptu electioneering speech from the tailboard of a supply wagon.

"What will happen if conscription loses in Canada?" he demanded. "Why, the Canadian corps will melt from the line like September snow under an Indian summer sun. Am I right?"

"Of course you're right," came an answering yell from his audience.

"You're dog-gone right I'm right," the orator resumed.

And what'll the Kaiser say if conscription loses? Well, he'll slap Hindenburg on the shoulder and say: "Hindy, old boy, we've licked Canada,' am I right?"

The chorus came instantly and thunderously: "Of course you're right."

"You're dog-gone right I'm right," the New Yorker assented. "Now what'll happen if you boys and all other Canadians voted your heads off in favor of conscription, well, this time next year, we'll be bumping steins in the Kaiser's throne-room at Berlin, and the Kaiser will be asking the allied street commissioner for a job pushing the broom.

"Am I right?"

Again and laughingly the chorused about came back: "Of course youre right."

"You're dog-gone right I'm right," yelled the New Yorker in conclusion. Then the crowd melted away.

BOLSHEVIKI PLAN WITH GERMANS TO HELP RESTORE THE MONARCHY.

London, Dec. 14.—The real aim of the Bolsheviki is a monarchy at least, and possibly a despotism, in the opinion of the Petrograd correspondent of The Post. He wires that for more than a month the Bolsheviki have been openly preparing public opinion for the acceptance of what, he says, after all is the only fit form of government for Russia. The popular rumor at present, he adds, is that the former Russian heir to the throne, Grand Duke Alexis, will be made the emperor under the German aegis.

Y.W.C.A. BAZAAR FINE SUCCESS

GIRLS OF THE INSTITUTION HAD PROCEEDS OF TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS.

The girls of the Y. W. C. A. had splendid success with their bazaar in the Association building yesterday, the proceeds amounting to $200. The girls wish to thank Cressmans, Ltd., for the use of a Victrola, and the members of the Y. W. C. A. board for donations of cakes.

The booths were prettily decorated each one representing one of the Entente Allies, the flag of each nation being prominent in the decoration scheme. Tea was served in the green room.

Miss M. Armstrong contributed a vocal solo, and Miss Haslam and Miss Baird piano solos. A number of the girls from the gymnasium classes were seen in dances.

The dolls' booth was draped in the colors of France, the Athena Club booth with miscellaneous articles represented Canada, the booth conducted by the intermediate and advanced gymnasium classes represented Great Britain, the Y. W. C. A. Home Girls' booth with aprons and bags represented the United States, the school girls' booth with fancy goods and novelties, Belgium, and the Italian flag was unfurled over the fish pond in charge of the junior girls.

TO THE WOMEN OF CANADA

Who Have Done Wonderful Things in This War

Women of Canada---Read what Sarah Bernhardt, the world famous French actress and glorious woman, said recently in Montreal:

"And your Canadians. What wonderful soldiers, too! They have done wonderful things, marvellous things. The world will not forget them. And France will never forget. They have won our hearts. They have fought, and sacrificed, and won—and France is ever grateful."

"But remember, the war is not over yet. There is work to be done—grim fighting yet to come. Reinforcements—yes, you must keep them up, you must not give up the fighter now. You will not. That would be unbelievable. I know you will not. Your boys have been so splendid—you will give them all the help they need to the end, of course."

Yes, it is unbelievable that the women of Canada would go back on the boys at the front. They will never do that.

Every women loves a fighter, and hates a quitter.

It is impossible to believe, therefore, that any woman voter will be found voting on the same side as the French Canadians who have shirked their duty in this war.

Women! Bear in mind it is because the French Canadians did not, and would not, do their duty that Conscription had to be resorted to. They stand isolated and aloof from the civilized peoples of the world—and not only are they unabashed and unashamed, but they are brazenly defiant.

The grievous suffering of their mother country--France--glorious, heroic, self-sacrificing France--the wreck, ruin, and devastation of Belgium--closely akin to France--touches no responsive chord in their hearts.

Support Union Government

Union Government is pledged to procure the 100,000 reinforcements so urgently required by the strong and impartial enforcement of the Military Service Act, 1917. There will be no evasion. Quebec will be made to contribute its quota of men.

Union Government has no alliances with the interests. It is composed of representative, patriotic men, Liberals and Conservatives, on a fifty-fifty basis, who have cast aside all political differences in this great hour of Canada's history, determined to prosecute the war to ultimate and victorious peace, and to direct the economic life of Canada to the one end of making her more efficient to wage battle on the Hun.

Shall Laurier and Bourassa block the way? Shall Canada's honor be trailed in the mud by the Province of Quebec? Shall our boys in France and Flanders be supported, or shall Bourassa sacrifice them to the world's enemy?

Women of Canada: The answer may rest with your vote on Dec. 17th. You who are the wives, mothers, daughters and sisters of those men who have fought heavily for Canada in the muddy trenches, who have borne discomfort and have made untold sacrifices in the cause of our liberty. Are we to let them dwindle to a mere handful, or are we to place OUR WILL on Canada on Dec. 17th by an overwhelming majority for the Unionist Candidates.

Women Who Vote: Every Woman may vote who is a British subject, 21 years of age, resident in Canada one year, and in the constituency 30 days, who is the mother, wife, widow, daughter, sister or half-sister of any person, male or female, living or dead, who is serving or who has served without Canada in any of the Military forces, or within or without Canada in any of the Naval forces of Canada or of Great Britain, in the present war, or who has been honorably discharged from such services, and the date of whose enlistment was prior to Sept. 20, 1917.

Unionist Party Publicity Committee

Canadians With U.S. Army for the Act.

CONTINGENT WITH PERSHING'S FORCES ARE IN FAVOR OF CONSCRIPTION.

American Field Headquarters in France, Dec. 13.—Two Canadian officers arrived in the American camp delegated by the British Government with the permission of American headquarters, to instal voting booths in the American camps and take the votes of Canadian soldiers in the American army, most of them in National Guard regiments, on the question of Canadian conscription. The voting began in several villages Wednesday night.

Conversation with these officers, who have talked with a number of Canadians, indicates that the Canadian contingent in the American army is overwhelmingly in favor of conscription for Canada. The numerical strength of the Canadians with the U. S. army cannot be given, but it is permitted to say that it is fairly important in certain units.

PRESBYTERY ENDORSES UNION.

The Presbytery of Paris, with but one dissenting voice, passed a resolution endorsing Union Government.

OUR ARTISTS ABROAD

MANY HAVE WON FAME IN OTHER LANDS.

Some of the Painters and Sculptors Born in Canada Who Have Gone to England, France, and the United States, and There Won Reputations in the Great Galleries of the World.

THE life of an artist in Canada 20 years ago was something like that of Gilbert's policeman, "not a happy one"; it is not even affluent to-day but a generation ago so little was the public appreciation of Canadian art that a goodly number of those painters and sculptors who possessed ambition as well as talent were forced to seek "fresh fields and pastures new" in order to find the sinews of their endeavor to work out their artistic salvation. It is not a state of affairs to be recalled with much pride, for if there is one thing a new country needs and which should be State-aided from the first, it is its native art, for the necessarily intensive pursuit of commercial gain gets from art at once an antidote and an aid; an antidote to turn thought from commercialism to the beauties and truths of form and color and an aid in directing design toward what is useful and beautiful instead of what is hideous and accidental.

In Australia to-day in spite of a progressive spirit regarding art which leaves Canada somewhat behind, Australian artists cannot live at home but must seek the wider field of European appreciation; so in Canada outside of a few portrait painters, commercial art workers and art teachers it is extremely difficult for an artist of even recognized ability to live and to feel himself free to express the truth that is in him. So it comes about that a formidable list of Canadian artists are living abroad, where although they are often not known to be Canadians, they are appreciated and so are better off than at home, where, although they were certainly known to be Canadians, they equally certainly were not appreciated. In only one respect is Canada better off than Australia in her failure to support her own artists; there is nowhere nearer to Australia than Europe, while Canada adjoins the United States and the connection with home has not, in a majority of cases, been so completely severed that it could not be renewed.

The list of Canadian artists who are working abroad naturally divides itself into two groups, those who have made their name in the United States and those who have done the same in England, or on the continent. The first list is the greater, and it may be well to begin with it and to place at its head Horatio Walker, whose landscapes have brought him great honor among American painters. Horatio Walker was born at Listowel, in Ontario, and after getting as much art training in Toronto as was available in those days he went to New York, where, with great natural talent and capacity for draftsmanship, he has progressed and been honored with many awards and memberships, including that of the National Academy of Design. Horatio Walker's connection with Canada has never been completely severed, for he has resided a large part of each year at his home on the Island of Orleans in the St. Lawrence near Quebec. It is on the Island of Orleans that the relicts of the Breton peasantry still cling to ancient customs and habits and the last of the shepherds tend their flocks, crook in hand, as they have done since time immemorial. It is the simplicity and old-worldliness of this life that have inspired so many of Horatio Walker's studies, and in all his work, whether reaching to greater or lesser heights, there is the painstaking effort to tell the story of the simple lives of the tillers of the soil.

Then there is Ernest Lawson, who, with his subtly conceived impressions of winter snows or pale spring buds, has won for himself an important place in American landscape painting. Ernest Lawson was born at Halifax, N.S., and has settled down to his life work in New York and there are few important art exhibitions in the country in which he is not represented by some characteristic picture. Ernest Lawson has also been honored by membership in the National Academy of Design.

GOOD WORK FOR SICK WOMEN

The Woman's Medicine Has Proved Its Worth.

When Lydia E. Pinkham's remedies were first introduced, their curative powers were doubted and had to be proved. But the proof came, and gradually the use of them spread over the whole country. Now that hundreds of thousands of women have experienced the most beneficial effects from the use of these medicines, their value has become generally recognised, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the standard medicine for women.

The following letter is only one of the thousands on file in the Pinkham office, at Lynn, Mass., proving that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is an article of great merit as shown by the results it produces.

Anamosa, Iowa. – "When I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I suffered with a displacement, and my system was in a general run-down condition. I would have the headache for a week and my back would ache so bad when I would bend down I could hardly straighten up. My sister was sick in bed for two months and doctored, but did not get any relief. She saw an advertisement of your medicine and tried it and got better. She told me what it had done for her, and when I had taken only two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound my head began to feel better. I continued its use and now I don't have any of those troubles." — Mrs. L. J. HANNAN, R.F.D. 1, Anamosa, Iowa.

HASTINGS

(Special Correspondence.)

Hastings, Dec. 13.—The memorial service which was to have been held in Westwood on Sunday in memory of the late Pte. James Warner was postponed on account of the unfavorable condition of the weather, and will be held this (Tuesday) evening.

A storm of unusual severity passed over this district on Saturday and Sunday and is being followed by very severe frosty weather. The roads in some places were so badly drifted that some rural mail carriers were obliged to turn around and were unable to make the trip.

Services preparatory to communion were held in the Presbyterian Church on Friday afternoon. Rev. D. A. Thomson officiating.

A wedding of local interest was solemnized in Toronto when Miss Eva Moore, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Moore, became the bride of Mr. McKinnon of Acton, Ont. Mrs. McKinnon was well and favorably known here, having spent her girlhood in the immediate vicinity and her many friends are sorry to lose her from their social circles. However, universal good wishes are extended to them both, that they may spend a long life of connubial bliss. Mr. and Mrs. McKinnon will reside near Acton, where the groom has purchased a fine farm. Congratulations.

An illustrated lecture was given in the town hall on Wednesday evening by the Rev. J. H. Dyke, field secretary and lecturer for the National Sanitarium Association. The lecturer showed plates of the healthy lung, then of the diseased lungs in the different stages and tried to show how important it was always to have access to a liberal supply of fresh air and sunshine. At the close of the lecture, a vote of thanks was extended to the reverend gentleman for his instructive address. The audience was rather small owing to the neglect of proper advertisement.

A number from here attended the public auction sale at the farm of Mr. S. Rusaw last week and report a very good crowd. Mr. Rusaw has purchased the residence of Mr. S. Patterson on the South Side of the river and intends moving into town.

Mr. and Mrs. Patterson and family are intending to go to Toronto to reside.

Mr. Jas. Moore took a trip to Acton during the week to visit his daughter, Mrs. McKinnon.

A social and Xmas entertainment were held at Elgin School house on Friday night. A large crowd was in attendance and a good program rendered. Mr. Isaac Snell gave a short address which was much appreciated.

The regular monthly meeting of the local Chapter of the I. O. D. E. which was due to be held last week, was postponed out of respect for the late Mrs. J. P. English, who had been for some time the worthy regent. Universal sympathy is extended to the bereaved husband.

A number of our people have been over to Norwood on different evenings to enjoy the special evangelistic services which are being conducted by Rev. Mr. Sharpe, assisted by the Hartshorn sisters, who are delighting the audiences with their singing.

Saturday being Conception Day, special services were held in the R. C. Church which were well attended.

Mr. Ed Dodd of Oshawa was home for a few days last week visiting his mother.

We are pleased to know that Mr. Bruce Warner is recovering from his recent illness and is so much improved that he was able to be removed from the hospital in Peterborough to his home in Asphodel. His many friends will be glad to note the improvement.

Mr. Wilbert Beavis of Westwood was in town on Saturday.

Mr. Bruce Hutchison of Peterborough was in town during the week in the interests of the Heintzman Piano Co.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert McAdams of Otonabee spent Friday in Hastings.

Mrs. Herb McKay and Miss Lila of Otonabee have been guests of Mrs. N. Beavis, town.

Miss Conley spent Saturday in Belleville.

Mr. Wes. Huycke of Peterborough visited friends here during the past week.

Miss Flossie Hall of Peterborough has been visiting Hastings friends.

Mr. John Carter is confined to his bed suffering from an acute affection of the eye and head.

Mrs. W. Atkinson of Peterborough spent Tuesday with her mother, Mrs. S. Carter,

Mrs. McConnal left this week for her home in Montana after a protracted visit with friends here.

Mrs. S. Carter spent a few days during the week with her daughter, Mrs. Wm. Atkinson of Peterborough.

Mr. J. Oakley has purchased the residence of Mr. Wm. Atkinson and will move to Hastings in the near future.

Mr. Sargison of Peterborough was in town during the week on a business trip.

The merchants are busy decorating the windows with Xmas attractions, games and toys, to suit every taste.

CAPT. BURNHAM'S ADDRESS

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

Election-day is December 17th. Its nearness admits of no further delay on the part of candidates in formally addressing you. It was hoped that political parties in West Peterborough might unite, as the members of the Borden Union Administration have done, in its support. But since the Liberal Convention has met and chosen its standard-bearer, who has not declared himself to be a supporter of the Borden Union Administration, it becomes necessary for me, without more, to solicit your suffrages. At the convention of the Conservatives of West Peterborough, duly assembled, I was chosen as their candidate to support Sir Robert Borden and his Administration. The Prime Minister has formed a Union Administration, composed of Conservative, Liberal and Labour representatives, to the end that he may the more fully and surely carry in a spirit of national unity and co-operation Canada's share in the war to a successful conclusion.

I pledge myself, therefore, with that same spirit of unity and co-operation, to support the Borden Union Administration and its policies, and I earnestly and respectfully solicit your votes and support accordingly. This is no ordinary political campaign, and it is hoped that all well-wishers of the Borden Union Administration will make every effort to secure the return of its supporters.

I have the honour to remain,

Yours truly,
J. H. BURNHAM.

Peterborough, Nov. 10, 1917.

"SO LONG, LETTY."

A New One in Musical Comedies.

Local theatregoers will have the opportunity to see something new and original in musical comedies in "So Long, Letty," which comes to The Grand on Tuesday next, Dec. 18. "So Lon, Letty," which is offered by Oliver Morosco, is out of the beaten paths of musical plays. It is a play of California: the scenes are laid in California, the story deals with California, and the greater part of the cast, and all of the chorus, comes from the Golden West. During the two years of its career it has played from coast to coast, and always to crowded houses and pleased audiences.

NEW WINNIPEG TRAIN.

Travel between Eastern and Western Canada is always heavy in winter months, particularly December with its holiday season. To meet the requirements of the public, therefore, a special daily service between Toronto, Winnipeg and Edmonton is announced by the Canadian Northern Railway; Westbound, Dec. 3rd to Jan. 2nd, 1918 only; Eastbound, Dec. 1st to Jan. 5, 1918 only. Thereafter regular tri-weekly service between Toronto and Winnipeg will be resumed. Service between Edmonton, Vancouver remains tri-weekly as at present, through connections being made by leaving Toronto Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. For further particulars see Time Table Folders, or apply to Thos. Mark, town agent.

GLOBE SUES FOR $25,000.

Claims Damages From Wentworth Man For Alleged Slander.

Toronto, Dec. 14.—In connection with the political campaign, a writ has been issued at Osgoode Hall by the Globe Printing Company, against John Herbert Dickenson, of Glanford Township, Wentworth County, in which the newspaper claims $25,000 damages for "slander in relation to its business."

"The slander complained of," says the endorsement on the writ, "was the speaking of the defendant on the 0th day of December, 1917, and also on other occasions, the respective dates of which are within the knowledge of the defendant, of the words: "The Globe has been bought up by the Union Government."

Mr. Dickenson is the Laurier Opposition candidate in Wentworth.

WANT CITY TO SELL MILK.

Toronto Board of Health Asks Council to Pass By-law.

Toronto, Dec. 14.—The board of Health passed a resolution recommending the passing of a by-law to enable the city to engage in the sale of milk and other necessaries of life. Dr. Hastings said he was assured by the City Solicitor that the city had legislative power to pass the by-law. Whether the city will actually engage in the milk business depends on the conditions that may arise.

Dr. Hastings wanted to make it compulsory that all wiping cloths used for cleaning machinery, tools, etc., should be sterilized. The board approved of the idea and sent on to the Provincial Officer of Health a resolution to that effect.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

Lieut.-Col. L. E. Irving has returned to England from Canada and resumed command of Epsom Convalescent Hospital.

Fire in the Canadian Northern station at Port Arthur did damage to material and records to the extent of about $65,000.

Although a strike on the entire Michigan Central Railway system has been called for Thursday, the men in Canada will not go out, but will respect Canadian law and ask for a Board of Conciliation to deal with their case.

DEALERS HAND OVER COAL.

This is Being Distributed at Cost by Halifax Relief Committees.

Halifax, Dec. 14.—The coal dealers of Halifax have turned over to the relief committees all stocks on hand, and these are being distributed at cost to residents of the city. In some cases where the need is urgent, small quantities are given free.

"At the present time, approximately 200 tons per day are leaving the yards," stated ex-Mayor Powell himself a dealer, and one of the most active in relief work. "The greatest difficulty is the securing of transportation facilities. Being near the mines, Halifax, unlike Toronto, has no coal famine, but the price is and has been $15 per ton."

Cook's Cotton Root Compound.

A safe, reliable regulating medicine. Sold in three degrees of strength—No. 1, $1; No. 2, $3; No. 3, $5 per box. Sold by all druggists, or sent prepaid on receipt of price. Free pamphlet. Address: THE COOK MEDICINE CO. TORONTO, ONT. (Formerly Windsor.)

Synopsis of Canadian Northwest Land Regulations

The sole head of a family or any male over 18 years old, who was at the commencement of the present war, and has since continued to be, a British subject or a subject of an allied or neutral country, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion Land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for District. Entry by proxy may be made on certain conditions. Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of land in each of three years.

In certain districts a homesteader may secure an adjoining quarter-section as pre-emption. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Reside six months in each of three years after earning homestead patent and cultivate 50 acres extra. May obtain pre-emption patent as soon as homestead patent on certain conditions.

A settler after obtaining homestead patent, if he cannot secure a pre-emption, may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

Holders of entries may count time of employment as farm laborers in Canada during 1917, as residence duties under certain conditions.

When Dominion Lands are advertised or posted for entry, returned soldiers who have served overseas and have been honorably discharged, receive one day priority in applying for entry at local Agent's Office (but not Sub-Agency). Discharge papers must be presented to Agent.

The Premiers of eight out of the nine Provinces of Canada are actively supporting the Union Government. Gouin of Quebec alone opposes it. Of the eight who favor it, six are Liberals and two are Conservatives. Thus is answered the Laurier campaign cry that the new Government is just the old Conservative Government dressed up in new clothes. Such a Government would not be supported by Liberal Premiers and men like the Hon. W. S. Fielding. Among the subjoined pictures is that of Hon. A. L. Sifton, who resigned the Alberta Premiership to join the Union Cabinet. His successor, Charles Stewart, is supporting Union Government.

NEWS FOR SOLDIERS.

"The Canadian Daily Record" Circulated at the Front.

Although the large majority of Canadians are probably unaware of the fact, soldiers of the Dominion Overseas, even those in the trenches in France and Belgium, receive a daily paper filled with news from Canada. This little publication, which is of such immense value to the boys at the front because it contains news of home, is published in London and goes by the name of "The Canadian Daily Record." It is the latest development of the Canadian Military authorities in Canada and overseas to meet the demand of the Dominion's soldiers for news of their own country.

Ever since December, 1915, the military authorities at Ottawa have been trying to furnish the boys at the front with news. At first news cable despatches were sent from Canada to London, where they were printed in intelligence summaries which formed part of the divisional orders. This method proved unsatisfactory because these intelligence summaries did not reach the rank and file, and, moreover, at times pressure of purely military work sometimes crowded out the news. In October, 1916, the plan of printing news bulletins upon small slips of paper which were sent forward to the front through the Canadian postal corps, was adopted. This also proved a poor way of handling the news, because the slips were small, easily lost, and because of their unattractive form, not always read.

Finally, at the beginning of this year, it was decided to publish an interesting daily newspaper under the auspices of the Canadian War Records Office, London, a Government department headed by Lord Beaverbrook. The newspaper started with a modest circulation among units in France and Belgium and camps and hospitals in Great Britain, and was received with enthusiasm and a demand for more copies.

Owing to the appreciation expressed by officers and men, and at the suggestion of Sir George Perley, Sir Edward Kemp, in September, decided to extend the news service from Canada, and for this purpose to establish a news bureau in Ottawa to supply the material for the Canadian Daily Record. Captain William Wallace, M.C., formerly of The Toronto Star, who had been wounded and invalided to Canada, was placed in charge. The Canadian Daily Record now consists of four pages, magazine size, and each issue contains the happenings of the preceding twenty-four hours in Canada. The news is furnished from Ottawa by cable nightly, and through the medium of press clippings and special articles forwarded by mail. The Canadian Press Limited gives access to its news service free of charge. Thanks to the co-operation of the Canadian Army Postal Service, the paper reaches the majority of the units in France on the day of publication, containing news despatched on the previous day. It is hoped to so extend the circulation that every individual member of the Canadian Expeditionary Force can count on seeing the newspaper daily.

In a recent letter, Lord Beaverbrook, the head of the War Records Office, informed Sir Edward Kemp that The Canadian Daily Record had now attracted the attention of the Imperial authorities to such an extent that they might undertake the publication of a small journal along similar lines.

A GREATER ECHO.

Explaining Why the Yankee Smiled at the Boast of the Scot.

"HOOT, mon, it's a grand land!" said the Scot proudly as he showed his American visitor the glories of the highlands. "And we've an echo here that cannot be beaten."

Suiting the action to the word, he yelled his warcry, and exactly four minutes later the echo returned as clear as a bell.

"That certainly is some echo," agreed the Yank, smiling a trifle superciliously.

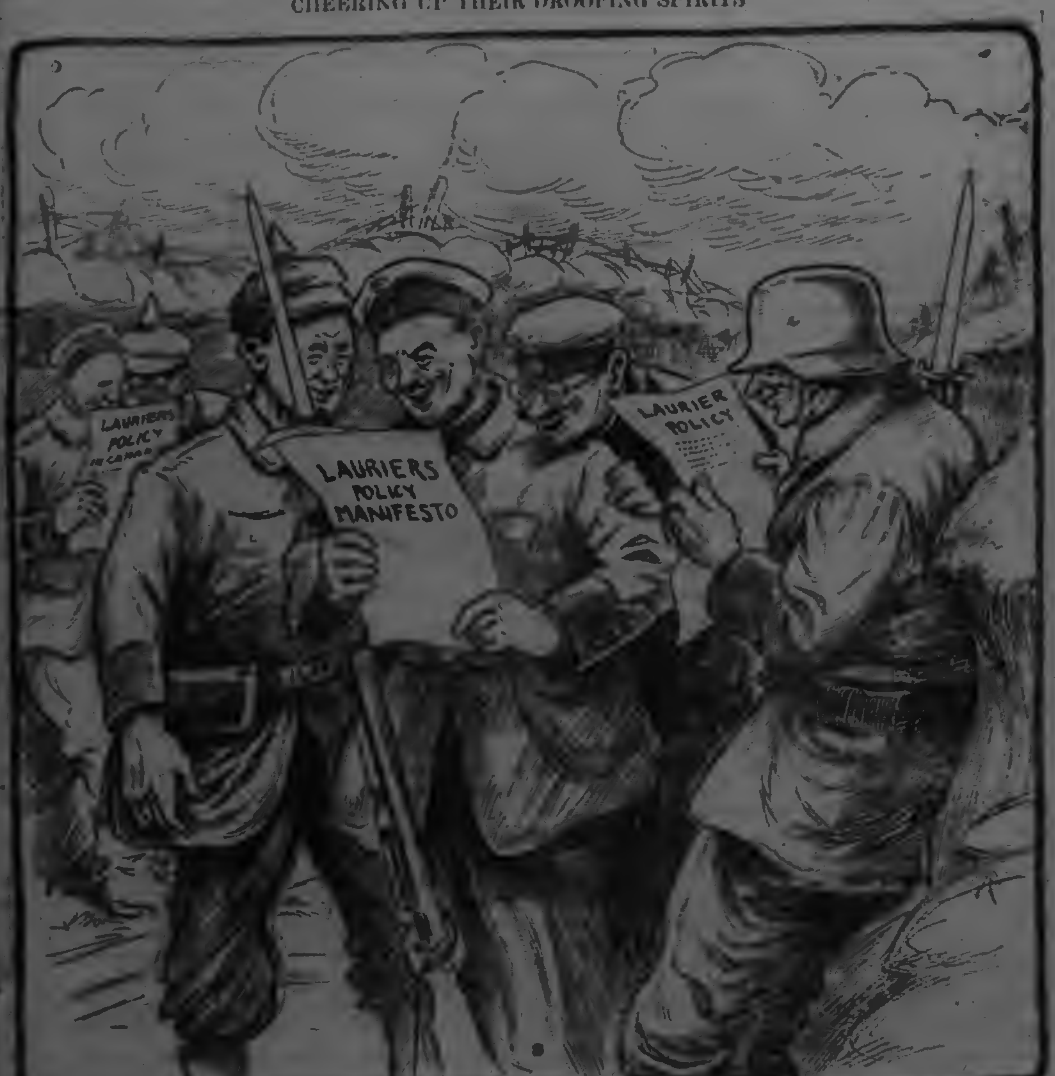
"What for do ye smile?" inquired the Scot, all the pride of possession quickly aroused.

"Waal," drawled his companion, "I wish you were comin' back over the 'pond' with me. In my home in the Rockies I could show you some more echo. When I go to bed at night I just lean out of bed and shout 'Time to get up—come on!' and, sure, just eight hours later that echo comes back and wakes me up!"—London Answers.

Making Potash.

A company making Portland cement at Durham, Ontario, is said to be now turning out as a by-product from the feldspar twelve to sixteen tons of potash daily. Feldspar rock is added to the limestone as a raw material for cement, and a process has been evolved for collecting the potash.

CHEERING UP THEIR DROOPING SPIRITS



BOWSER WRITES ODE

He Delivers a Corker at the Gay Old Boys' Club.

WAS AGAINST WIFE'S WISHES

But Samuel Would Have His Way About the Matter, and After His Visit to the Meeting He Arrives Home in Joyful Mood.

AT dinner the other evening Mrs. Bowser noticed that Mr. Bowser was very much preoccupied and that he also appeared to be in a hurry to get through with the meal. She gossiped away for a quarter of an hour and then suddenly asked:

"Has anything unusual happened at the office today?"

"Nothing," he replied.

"Aren't you feeling as well as usual?"

"Just the same."

"But you seem to be preoccupied."

"Yes, I am. I got a letter at noon from the Gay Old Boys' club that I would be expected to deliver an ode on Columbus at the anniversary dinner this evening. It has bothered me some to write an ode on such short notice, but I guess I've got it all O. K."

"And so you are going to the dinner?"

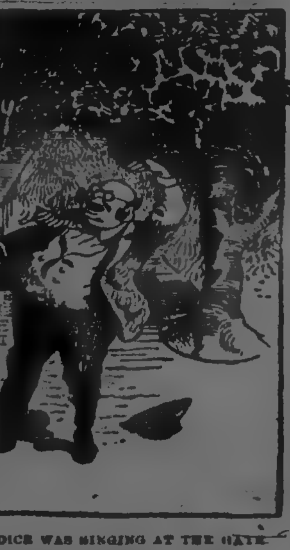
"Of course."

"I wish you wouldn't. The last time you went two men had to come home with you, and I found you seated on the doorsteps at 2 o'clock in the morning."

"Woman, do you know what your words imply?" demanded Mr. Bowser as he suddenly woke up.

"You were—were tired, I suppose."

"It is well that you put it that way. No living man or woman can say that they ever saw me intoxicated. It had been a strenuous night, and as I have rheumatism a couple of gentlemen walked home with me to see that my legs did not give out. I was simply resting for a moment before coming in when you came down to the door and made a great fuss. Mrs. Bowser, when Samuel Bowser is not able to take care of himself he will send for you."



"A VOICE WAS SINGING AT THE GATE."

"And you have written an ode?"

"Didn't I say that I had?"

"And it is on Columbus?"

"Didn't I say it was?"

"And you are going to deliver it at the dinner?"

"Certainly I am. Do I write odes on Columbus or any other man to throw in the wastebasket? Please don't take me for an idiot."

"And you will read me the ode before you go?" persisted Mrs. Bowser.

"No, ma'am, I won't—not a line of it. You would simply find fault with it and try to show your superiority over me. The ode suits me and will suit the club, and that's enough. I don't want to be all upset by your criticisms. When I get mad my voice gets husky, and I want it in good trim tonight."

Mrs. Bowser said no more on the subject until he was about ready to leave the house. Then, as she saw the roll of manuscript in his hand, she asked:

"Couldn't you read me the first verse? You know an ode is not a poem."

"Not a line will I read. When Samuel Bowser does not know an ode from a poem he wants some one to soak his head."

"Is it about Columbus discovering America, or what?"

Advised to Go to Bed.

"Never you mind. You go to bed at the usual hour and don't worry about me or Columbus."

With that he was off. Mrs. Bowser sat up until 10 o'clock and then went to bed. She was awakened two hours after midnight by a voice singing at the gate. It was a voice trying to sing the "Sweet By and By" and "You Can't Shake Me, Charlie," to one and the same air. She leaped out of bed and started downstairs, but before she reached the door it was being kicked and shaken, and the same voice was shouting:

"Lemme in, ole gal. Lemme in!"

It was Mr. Bowser. He stood there hatless and had his coat on his arm.

"Warm night—mighty warm night," he said as she reached out and pulled him into the hall just as a policeman was coming along.

Mr. Bowser was escorted to the sitting room and deposited in a chair, and then Mrs. Bowser stood before him and looked at him for a moment before asking:

"Mr. Bowser, what's the matter with you?"

"Nothin', dear—nothin' 'tall. I just got home from the Gay Old Boys' club, you see."

"Yes, I see! I thought it would be this way. Nice thing in a man of your age! All the neighbors must have heard you bawling at the gate and kicking at the door."

"Nobody heard me 'tall. Came home as quiet as a mouse. Don't look at me that way, Mrs. Bowser. It hain't right—it hain't right. If you had gone to the Gay Old Gals' club and read an ode I wouldn't look at you that way."

"So you read your ode, did you?"

"I did and made the hit of the evenin'. Big hit. Awful hit. Most awful hit you ever heard of. The applause was simply tremendous. Oh, if you had only been there to hear!"

"And what has become of the manuscript?"

"Got it right here," he replied as he began feeling in his vest pockets. "No, I haven't. The secretary wanted it to send to Historical society. Best ode on Columbus ever delivered by mortal man. Want to lay it up 'mong archives. Mrs. Bowser, why can't you stand still a minute instead of whirlin' round?"

"I am standing still; it's your head that's whirling. Oh, the shame of it!"

"What 'bout shame, Mrs. Bowser? Can't feller deliver an ode on Columbus without being shamed? 'Course he can. Oh, but you orter been there! You orter heard the applause! You orter heard what they said 'bout me! You'd been proudest woman in America."

It Brought House Down.

"What was the ode?" she asked as his eyes began to close.

"What was 'er ode? Why, it was ode to Columbus. It praised him for discovering the pyramids, you know. Yes, sir, set right out and sailed and sailed and sailed till he discovered the pyramids. Then he went ashore and said to 'em, 'Pyramids, you are the real stuff—come here.' And 'er pyramids come. That's what brought down 'er house."

"And I don't wonder at it. I feared some such blunder on your part, and that's why I wanted you to read the ode to me before you started. It's no wonder the members guyed you."

"Guy me? Not a guy, Mrs. Bowser! Just laughed and applauded. Just said my ode was best ever written. Just said Bowser took 'er cake. You are proud of me, hain't you? Course you are proud of me. If you had written that ode I would be proud of you."

"Don't ask me to feel proud of a husband in your condition. It will probably be in the papers, and I won't dare show my head outside the house for a week. Mr. Bowser, how could you—how could you!"

"How could I write ode on Columbus? Why, just as easy as grease. Gimme pencil and I'll write 'nother. I'll write one 'bout Columbus crossin' 'er Alps."

"And how can I get you upstairs? I'll have to have the help of the cook."

"No, you won't. I can walk right up. Shoo! I'll go ahead and"—

And he sank down on the floor, groaned and grunted two or three times and then began to snore. The best Mrs. Bowser could do was to fetch a quilt and pillow and leave him there. He had written and delivered an ode, and it was a corker.

TO THE ELECTORS OF EAST PETERBORO

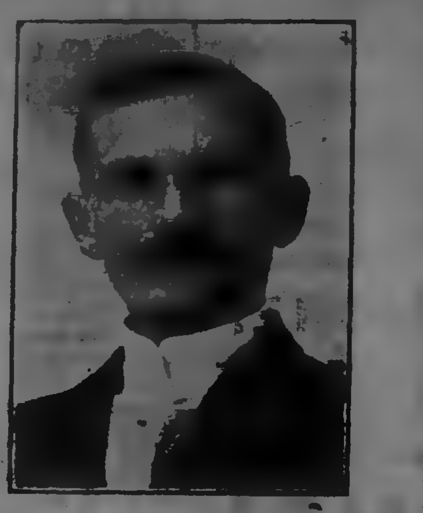
LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

I believe no greater disaster could at the present time befall our country than the defeat of the Borden Union Administration at the polls on December 17th.

The policy of this Administration is the speedy and continuous reinforcements of our Canadian troops on the battlefront; and the putting forth of all our national strength for the cause of civilization and freedom.

To carry out this policy, a number of Canada's ablest public men of vision—sinking for the present all political differences—now stand together—strong to battle for the right—united to WIN THE WAR.

For over three years thousands of loyal Canadians of many creeds and of different nationalities have stood shoulder to shoulder on the battle-fields of Europe, gallantly fighting our common foe, and sometimes, sometimes failing, have won for the name of Canada undying fame. Shall we, with all possible speed, send help to these, our heroic defenders, now holding the battle-line, or shall we, breaking faith with them as well as "with those who die"—delay—vote—while the enemy advances?



As the Union Candidate in this Riding, I am putting forth every effort to win East Peterborough to the support of the Borden Union Administration, and, if elected, shall to the utmost of my ability support the same.

To this end I now earnestly solicit the co-operation and influence of every loyal and patriotic man and woman in East Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, faithfully yours,

JOHN A. SEXSMITH.

Havelock, November 20th, 1917.

Canada's Fixed Determination.

We in Canada have been at war for over three years and we are weary. The strain has been great; the sacrifices have been terrible. We have given in blood and human suffering and the anguish of bereavement; we have given in gold and toil and effort. We need rest, and we want rest, but, if I know the spirit of Canada, we will not take rest until the war is ended and victory is achieved.

Up to now we have done well. We have enlisted about 400,000 men, equal in proportion to 5,000,000 from the United States. If in striking the proportion we should omit the French-Canadian population and the French-Canadian enlistments, it would be equal to 7,000,000 men from the United States. We have raised about a billion of dollars, which, on the basis of the wealth of the two nations, would be equivalent to some forty billions from the United States. We have produced huge quantities of munitions. We have kept up the production of our farms and our factories. But if we are to continue the full performance of our duty, it must from now on be under government direction and government compulsion.

We have said again and again that we were in this war to the last man and the last dollar. We have said this clearly and flatly; we have not qualified it by saying to the last voluntary man, to the last willing dollar. There are timid men and timid dollars; if we are to use them we must take them; it is not enough to invite them and say that they will be welcome.—Atlantic Monthly.

Why the Widow Got Him.

The folks were talking gossip with some neighbors who were making a social call. They were discussing a certain man that everybody agreed was such a fine man and wondering how ever it was that a rather gay grass widow had succeeded in leading him to the altar. "Well, I kin tell ye," said Uncle Ebenezer, who had continued to smoke his pipe without taking part in the discussion, "he had no chance."

The team of Bertie township, Welland county, which canvassed for the Victory Loan in its municipality, has given back the half of one per cent. commission allowed for the work.

Military Voters' Act, 1917

To the Editor of The Review:

Sir:

As I have had so many enquiries as to the soldiers' vote, will you please allow me through your columns to state for the benefit of all enquirers what the law is on this subject? It is as follows:

The returned and discharged soldiers and nurses, as well as all persons, male or female, that have enlisted or enrolled or are called out for and placed on active service in the C. E. F., the Canadian Navy Militia, Volunteer Reserves, Air Service and Motor Boat Patrol, whether of age or not, including Indians, are all entitled to vote.

Soldiers and nurses in uniform vote under the military regulations wherever they may be.

Discharged soldiers can vote any place on producing their discharge papers and making oath that they are the persons named therein.

The above need not be on the Voters' List, they may Vote whether on or not, wherever they happen to be on Polling Day.

Yours truly,

JAS. GUISE-BAGLEY.

Inheritance Tax Argument

Inheritance taxes are very heavy. Unlike Fire hazard, they are not merely possible, they are absolutely certain.

They deplete your estate at once, and to your heirs represent a specific and definite loss of money.

In New York a $250,000 estate would pay a combined federal and state tax of about $12,000. If left to a friend or distant relative, about $22,000. The John Jacob Astor estate paid $3,150,000. J. P. Morgan has insured his life for $2,500,000 to cover a similar loss.

Thus the estate is provided promptly with the ready cash to pay this tax and other expenses without the need of hurriedly disposing of securities or other assets, perhaps at a loss, to meet such needs. The logic of the situation urges immediate action. Premium rates, however low, advance with age, and so does the possibility of entering the physically impaired group and losing the opportunity to secure this protection.

Knowing that this loss is actually coming, it is simply a matter of ordinary business prudence to guard against it. The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada offer you a plan to do so at very low cost.

The Rev. Brother Bones Preaches on the Sinfulness of Waste

Dearly Belubbed Breddern an Sistern:

I shall take fo de subjec ob my discurs dis ebening de tex "waste."

Firstly—Dere is seberal kinds ob wastes; dere is de kind yo puts yo arm around which is not sinful if it ain't married to anober feller, which if it is an he is biggern you, yo is apt to reerlize de truf of dat ole tex, "Be shur yo sine will fine you out."

Secondly—Dere is de kind made ob cotten wot yo wipes yo hans on, though I thinks some ob yo niggers uebber wipes yo hans.

Thirdly—But it is neider ob dese kinds I'se goin' to discurse on dis evenin. De sort I means to draw yo attenshun to is when yo spens twenty-free cents on yo dinner an puts two cents in de collection plate, insted ob puttin de twenty-free in de plate and de two in yo greedy insides.

Fourthly—Den dere is de kinds were yo goes to de expensive stores fo yo eats instid ob buyin at de place ware yo gits mos fo yo nickles. Dis is de worse kine ob waste, cost de more yo spens dat way de less you hab to inscribe fo de upkeep ob yo preacher.

Now sister Emily dis week made a pie which cost her mor'n it should've did. She cud ob got de flour fo 45c and de shortnen fo 28c and de mince meat fo 17c a pound which wuld ob bin a clear sabin ob 17c.

Den Brudder Ebensnezer bot sum bacon at 52c a pound wen he cud ob got de same ony better at 35c a pound. An Brudder Tom bot sum fish at de fish trust stores when he cudob got it cheeper an a biggerr selection by goin to de man wot gibs yo a square deal.

Now breddern an sistern, I'se berry grieved to see yo wastin yo patrimony in dis lavish manner an I wans yose to mend yo ways, an wen we haves our annual monthly banquet I wants yo all to get de mos fo yo money 'cos I'se likely to be considerably hungry by that time seein I'se not had any salary for de las two months.

If yo go to de place I'se goin to inscribe yo ken git mose eberyting dats good. De sister wats goin to presentate a cake ken git de raisins ready seeded fo 2-pounds fo 25c an mix peels fo 35c, small raisins widout de pips fo 17c, new currants fo 30c a pound and if de brudder wans to donate dey kin git lubly sweet biscuits at 16c to 20c a pound, and delopshus apples at 55c a peck, an done fogit de margarine wots bettern butter at 37c a pound. An jes to top up done miss de peanut butter at 28c a pound, or a few of dose delopshus pickles dat makes my mouf water as I thinks ob 'em.

Now deerly belubbed friends I see yo all gettin augshus to know ware dis lubly place is. Some ob yo will think I'se bin discursin about heben, but, its not there my frens, not there. De place I'se bin inscribin to yo is

HEED BAD ODORS.

They May Warn You of Places Where Disease Germs Lurk.

Even a bad odor has its uses. Scientists say that the offensive smell which comes from decaying and disease breeding matter is in reality one of nature's measures of preparedness and of prevention.

Offensive odors indirectly prevent the spread of epidemics by calling attention to the breeding place of the disease. They give warning that something is wrong, and they persist in this warning by becoming more and more offensive until the wrong is righted.

The odor does not convey the germ or communicate the disease, because in most cases direct contact is necessary to do this, or the infection is communicated by some substance taken into or brought in contact with the body. But it does tell where the disease exists or is likely to exist. It also gives warning of tainted or unfit food, as the nose is intended by nature to be one of man's chief allies in the fight for health.

Some have even gone so far as to state that mothers should not discourage or forbid children smelling their food before they eat it. The tendency to do this is said to be a natural one. The nose is not placed above the mouth by accident. It was designed in primitive man as a guide-post for his stomach, and it is still a good guide.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Looking Glass In Fiction.

All nations have shown by their stories how the looking glass is regarded as ministering to vanity. The ancient Greeks depicted Venus with a mirror and even described her chamber as lined all over with mirrors, so that whichever way her eyes turned she could behold her beautiful self. But Minerva never used a mirror. Pass to West Africa and we find a native story which begins with a magic mirror that possessed the power of speech and always said, "Mistress, there is none," when its owner, a woman called Maria, asked it, "My mirror, is there any other beautiful woman like myself?" But one day Maria's daughter entered the forbidden room where it was kept, asked a similar question and got a similar answer. A tale of maternal jealousy and vengeance follows.

Sunlight and Germs.

Here is an instructive experiment made by scientists to show the effects of sunlight. Some germs of the terrible disease anthrax were sown on two plates of gelatin, and while one plate was kept in the dark the other was placed in the sunlight. The germs grew, and at the end of ten minutes there were 300 colonies or groups in the sunshine plate and 400 colonies in the dark plate.

One hour later the result was: In the sunshine plate, none; in the dark plate, 2,520. No disease germ thrives in sunlight.

Early Opportunity.

"We came to this country and took the innocent red man's land away from him."

"Yes," replied the man who has been having trouble with real estate, "and in some cases the innocent red man was lucky to unload just when he did."

A Classy Youth.

"What classes is your boy in at college?"

"He's in the 300 class at baseball."

"Yes?"

RICE FIELDS OF JAPAN.

Mostly Tiny Gardens, but They Feed 50,000,000 People.

Almost one half of the land capable of cultivation in Japan is planted in rice. Handkerchief gardens would perhaps best describe the little rice fields, many of which are no larger than a tennis court, are equally flat and are surrounded by rims of earth to hold the water when the fields are flooded. The average rice field in Japan is about one acre and a half in size; but, large or small, each field must be leveled, and each must have its rim or dike. Then there must be a system of canals to bring water to the fields and another system of ditches to take it away when it is no longer needed.

If the land were fairly level the preparation of the ground, which is all done by hand, would not be so hard nor would it require such vast amounts of human labor, but Japan is a mountainous country. Terraces must be cut from the steep hillsides and so leveled that they will hold the water at a uniform depth over the small fields.

It is said that there are 12,000 square miles of rice land in Japan, the greater part of which has been prepared with an almost infinite amount of labor. That area of land cultivated in rice virtually feeds a nation of 50,000,000 people.

The little fields are usually permanent, and frequently a farmer owns three or four scattered fields. That further increases the work of caring for his crops. In recent years, however, the government has tried to consolidate the holdings of farmers by a process of land exchange.

SASH WINDOWS.

Probably a Dutch Invention of the Seventeenth Century.

The history of sash windows is somewhat obscure, but the probability is that they were a Dutch invention and that they were introduced into England soon after the revolution of 1688. The derivation of the word "sash" in this sense is the Dutch "sas," a sluice—old English "sasse." In Queen Anne's reign they were yet so comparatively uncommon as to be mentioned as a special feature of houses that were advertised as "to let." In the Tatler, for instance, May 27-30, 1710, there is this advertisement:

"To be left, in Devonshire Square, near Bishopsgate, a very good Brick House of 3 Rooms of a Floor, and a good Hall, with very good light and dark Closets, the whole House being well wainscoted and sash'd with 30 Sash Lights."

From England they passed into France, where the first to put them up was Marshal de Logge at his new house at Montmartre. Speaking of this, Lister in 1699 writes in his "Journey to Paris:" "We had the good fortune here to find the marshal himself. He showed us his great sash windows, how easily they might be lifted up and down and stood at any height, which contrivance, he said, he had out of England."

Trapping Turtles.

In the old days in the south the negro fishermen used to have an ingenious and simple way of trapping fresh water turtles. Any boy today can use the same method with the same effect. Turtles have favorite sunning logs. Beside one of the logs sink a water tight box two feet long and a foot and a half wide. The open top of the box should stand about an inch above the water. Nail the box securely against the log in such a position that it will catch the turtles that fall from the log. After the trap has been set leave the pond or lake for a time. On returning approach the log quietly from the side opposite the box. If there are any turtles on the log, frighten them suddenly. They will pitch off hurriedly into the box.

A Queen Who Resigned.

One queen who got tired of ruling over her nation and resigned was Queen Christina, daughter of the great Gustavus Adolphus II. of Sweden, whom she succeeded in 1632. Growing tired of reigning at the age of twenty-eight, she passed the crown over to her cousin, Charles Gustavus, and went to Rome, which city she is said to have entered in the costume of an amazon. Later she tried to regain her throne, but failed. She died at Rome in 1689.

Witty Willie.

One evening a panhandler sidled up to William Collier as the player was walking around to the theater and addressed him thus:

"Sir, I began life poor and in hard luck. I"—

"Don't say anything more, my man," interrupted Collier as he slipped the man a quarter. "It's worth money to learn how well you have held your own."

Willow Trees.

Willows are mentioned in the Biblical books of Leviticus xvii, Job xl, Isaiah xliv, Psalm cxxxvii. The tree upon which the captive Israelites hung their harps was the Salix babylonica. This tree is abundant on the banks of the Euphrates.

FAVORS UNION VOTES LAURIER

MR. DAN O'CONNELL A SPEAKER AT A MEETING IN TORONTO.

Mr. Dan O'Connell, formerly of this city but now of Toronto, was one of the speakers the other night at a meeting held by Mr. C. W. Kerr, Liberal candidate in the riding of West Toronto.

Mr. Dan O'Connell declared it was his belief there was a great misconception throughout Ontario as to the issues in this election. This issue was not whether Canada intended to remain in the war, because both Borden and Laurier agreed that Canada must go and help win the war.

Nor was the issue that of Union Government as he saw it. The one and only question to be considered was whether Laurier's policy or Borden's policy is best suited to bring the war to a successful conclusion.

He admitted that a Union Government was the best method of administration in a time of peril. But this Government, he said, was not a union to win the war, but a Government to win the election. "Why, the Government is made up of fifteen corporation lawyers. Sir Edmund Kemp, head of the tin combine, and Ballantyne, head of the paint combine."

At great length he referred to horse, boot, and munition scandals for which the old Borden Government was responsible, and said there wasn't a single opportunity for graft that this Government overlooked.

"It was the Joe Flavelles who put this Borden Government in power in 1911, and they had to be rewarded."

THE

Hospital for Sick Children

College St., Toronto

ITS CHRISTMAS MESSAGE

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Thanks for your kindness in allowing me the privilege of appealing to your readers this Christmas time on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children, the "Sweetest of all Charities," which has as its mission the care of the helpless, the sick, the crippled and the deformed.

There never was a year in the history of the Hospital when funds to carry on the work were more needed than now.

Your purse is the Hospital's Hope. Your money lights the candles of mercy on the Christmas trees of health that the Hospital plants along the troubled roadway of many a little life.

So I am asking you for aid, for the open purse of the Hospital's friend is the hope of the Hospital at Christmas, just as the open door of the Hospital's mercy is the hope of the little children throughout the year.

Calls on generous hearts are many in these times. Calls on the Hospital are many at all times, and especially when food and fuel and drugs and service costs are soaring high. YOU know the high cost of living. Do you know the high cost of healing—of helping the helpless to happiness? What you do to assist is the best investment you will ever make.

Do you realise what this charity is doing for sick children, not only of Toronto, but for all Ontario, for out of a total of 3,740 in-patients last year 646 came from 254 places outside of Toronto. The field of the Hospital's service covers the entire Province—from the Ottawa to the far-off Kenora—from the borders of the Great Lakes to the farthest northerly district.

The Hospital is doing a marvellous work. If you could see the children with crippled limbs, club feet, and other deformities, who have left the Hospital with straightened limbs and perfect correction, your response to our appeal would be instant. In the Orthopedic Departments last year a total of 330 in-patients were treated; and in the Out-Patient Department there were 1,946 attendances.

Let your money and the Hospital's mercy lift the burden of misery that curses the lives, cripples the limbs and saddens the mothers of the suffering little children.

Money mobilizes the powers of help and healing for the Hospital's drive day and night against the trenches where disease and pain and death assail the lives of the little ones.

Remember that every dollar given to the Hospital is a dollar subscribed to the Liberty Loan that opens the prisons of pain and the Bastilles of disease, and sets little children free to breathe the pure air, and to rejoice in the mercy of God's sunlight.

Will you send a dollar, or more if you can, to Douglas Davidson, Secretary-Treasurer, or

J. ROSS ROBERTSON,
Chairman of the Board of Trustees.

A TREAT FOR THE ORPHANS.

Grand Opera Management Invite Them To Special Performance.

Messrs. Turner, managers of the Grand Opera House, have invited the inmates of St. Vincent's Orphanage and the Children's Shelter to attend a special performance of "Jack and Bluebeard," which will be given at 9:30 tomorrow morning. The invitation has been gratefully accepted. The school children of the city will be given a special rate at the same time.

HELP CANADA KEEP HER PLEDGE TO BOTH THE LIVING AND THE DEAD

BACK UP THE MEN WHO ARE FIGHTING FOR US

TO THE WOMEN WHO CAN VOTE

Dear Madam: In view of the gravity of the crisis which now imperils the welfare of this Dominion which we love, we take the liberty of suggesting to you a number of reasons why we believe you ought to vote for the candidate for the Union Government Monday next, December 17.

BECAUSE we have fathers, husbands, brothers and sons fighting our battles in France who will receive no support if Laurier is returned to power.

BECAUSE the Union Government is pledged to send reinforcements to these brave boys who for over three years have fought to protect our homes against German brutality.

BECAUSE there is still great danger of German world domination unless concerted action such as the Union Government proposes is carried into effect.

BECAUSE if Laurier is returned to power Canada will practically drop out of the war altogether, which will certainly mean that our gallant army at the front will receive no support and that our whole Dominion will be under the domination of Quebec.

BECAUSE if the Union Government is returned to power the war will no doubt be won much more quickly and our boys be back home much sooner.

BECAUSE conscription under the Union Government will select for the front men who can be easily spared and will prevent men enlisting who are needed for work at home.

BECAUSE under Union Government measures will be introduced to increase food production and provide help in sections where help is required.

BECAUSE the Union Government has abolished all war profiteering and graft resulting from party patronage.

BECAUSE Union Government is a determined, whole-hearted effort on the part of men and women of all political parties in this country to join hands for the common welfare of Canadians both at home and overseas.

BECAUSE your King, your Country and your God demand that in this hour of national peril you should realize your imperative duty to help bring victory and peace.

Believing that united we may stand, but that divided we shall surely fall, and believing, too, that you will not fail to discharge your responsibility by going to the polls on Monday and voting for J. H. Burnham, the candidate for the Union Government, we are,

Yours for Unity, Patriotism and Victory,
Women's Union Government League.

A SIDE SHOW AT VICTORIA HALL

Two of Mr. Hall's Henchmen Attempt to Break up The Union Meeting.

William Hickey and "Red" O'Connell devout admirers of Laurierism, and both of military age, attempted to create a diversion at the meeting in Victoria Hall last night, insisting that the letter from Food Controller Hanna, dealing with conservation production, and which had been addressed to all the clergymen in Canada, be read. Just what these young men had in mind is hard to understand. It is plain, however, that their assurance was supernal in attempting to convert the meeting into a boost for Mr. Hall. The circular in question was issued by a government official, and The Review has yet to see the document coming from such a source that it has any objection to printing. It dealt with exactly the same subjects that the Administration has been preaching since the war broke out—the necessity for saving food and for increasing production. Mr. Hall has no monopoly on his one battle cry. There is nothing original in anything he pleads on the food issue. It was taken up by the Government before he began to sound it with such a flourish of trumpets.

There is a little local history connected with that circular which is not without its significance, a significance that was further emphasised by events that transpired on the side at the meeting last night. As soon as he received and read his copy of the circular the pastor of one of the leading churches in this city, made all haste with the document to the office of Mr. R. R. Hall, no doubt with the purpose of rendering unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's. Incidentally the reverend gentleman told Mr. Hall how much he approved of his platform.

Everybody recognises the necessity for keeping up the production of food. It is not, however, the one thing needful, as Mr. Hall would seem to believe. Canadians are not expected to quit fighting and devote all their attention to the production of the "cereals, meats and fat" that Mr. Hall talks so much about. The Government for example, is doing its utmost to encourage the raising of sheep, but not to the exclusion of every other line of endeavor.

MEN, FIRST NEED SAYS MR. HANNA

In an address delivered a few days ago to the Women's Institute in Toronto, Hon. W. J. Hanna, Food Controller for Canada was asked which should come first, food production or reinforcements for men at the front. His reply was, "There is one paramount issue just now—reinforcements for the men at the front. What use would your farms be to you if the Germans got here?"

SEPARATION ALLOWANCES

From the Minister of Militia's private secretary Capt. J. H. Burnham has received the following wire:

"Cheques for December separation allowance had already been made out before increase was authorized, when announcement of increase was made. It was specifically stated that while December cheques would be for only $20, January cheques would be fore thirty in order to adjust. January cheques will be sent out a little in advance of usual date."

A purse of gold was presented to the Rev. G. H. North, pastor of Gospel Tabernacle, Brantford, who has accepted a call to Port Huron, and another purse to his wife.

LET CANADIANS SEE TO IT THAT TOO MUCH POLITICS DO NOT PUT CANADA OUT OF WAR, STIRRING BATTLE CRY OF HON. N. W. ROWELL

Canadians Must Not Repudiate Their Obligations and Deny The Men at the Front the Reinforcements They so Urgently Need--If we Fail it will Mean that Canada Has Lost Her Soul in the Critical Hour.

CANADA HAS TO MAKE THE GREAT DECISION

"Tonight these gallant men, more than 32,000, sleep their long sleep under the skies of Belgium and of Flanders. They died cheerfully in the faith that Canada would be true to them to keep the pledge to stand by them, and I come to you tonight to ask you to help Canada to keep her pledge to both her living and her dead."

In these words Hon. N. W. Rowell concluded his stirring and earnest appeal to the audience in Victoria Hall last night, to back up the boys at the front.

"This is the issue," said Mr. Rowell: "Will the people of Canada stand by the pledge they made to the men when they left this land and went across the seas, which was to stand by them, or will we repudiate these obligations and deny these men the reinforcements they so urgently need? Much as we may seek to evade it, that is the only issue of this election. Never in the history of Canada was there a question so clear cut. We have the whole question in a nutshell. The Military Service Act means the sending of reinforcements and that Canada will maintain her place in the battle-line. The other means deserting the men at the front and Canada's ultimate dropping out of the struggle. Every man must give his aye or nay on that proposition. It is the most solemn and most serious responsibility electors have ever been called upon to face. It is the responsibility we all have to face on Monday next."

Mr. Rowell told of the situation in Russia and on the Italian front, the former being affected with too much politics during the war, the latter nation with too much politics in the second Italian army. Politics were all right in times of peace, but in times of war it was necessary to stand together, shoulder to shoulder. "Let us see to it," urged the speaker, "that too much politics do not put Canada out of the war on the 17th."

To stiffen the Italian front, France has been compelled to draw upon her already depleted reserves and send an expeditionary force to Italy. Britain, the mother of us all, also had had to send men from her reserves. Germany had been enabled to move great forces of men from the Eastern front to the West, and Germany was concentrating her energy in the hope that she could break the Western front before the Allies could stem the tide. "If Germany breaks through and is able to establish submarine bases and bases for her air force, she will so cripple Britain that she will not be able to continue sending reinforcements, food or munitions, and Britain will be compelled to conclude peace. Britain tonight is being preserved because the Western line stands secure."

If the British fleet were once driven from the high seas, where would Canada and the United States be before the Prussian forces? Canada would be like Belgium and Northern France—with her cities laid in waste. Yet in this most critical hour of the war there are men in Canada who would say, "Canada has done enough; we're tired of the war and we are going to concern ourselves with things at home."

"You can send that message if you like; as far me, never," said Mr. Rowell. "We told the boys that we were going to be with them to see the war to an end. Some people in Canada wish to send this message: 'We're prepared only to see the war through to your end.' What message are you going to send? To me it's unbelievable that Canada will give any but one answer to that question. The heart of Canada beats true for the cause for which our men have gone forth to fight.

"Belgium chose the path of honor. Belgium has saved her soul. Germany has lost her soul in the struggle. Canada has to make the great decision on exactly the same issue. Shall it be self-ease or sacrifice? Shall we stand by them or desert them? Canada will find her soul in that path of honor. If we fail, it will mean that Canada has lost her soul in this critical hour. But we haven't lost our soul, and the women of Canada are going to lead us in the path of service. Their hearts are with the men across the sea—the men who sailed away. The hearts of the wives and mothers went with them into the trenches, into the firing line and all the terrors of the bombardment, into the hospitals—the heart of the women of Canada is buried in the graves of the loved ones in Flanders and Northern France. Tonight these gallant men—more than 32,000—sleep their long sleep under the skies of Belgium and of France. They died cheerfully in the faith that Canada would be true to them, true to keep the pledge to stand by them, and I come to you tonight to ask you to help Canada to keep her pledge to both her living and her dead."

Will You Trust This Province?

Apart from the splendid work of the small English-speaking population, Quebec has failed the Red Cross, has failed the Patriotic Fund, has failed in recruiting, and has failed in the Victory Loan. Dare we trust our soldiers, their wives, their children, their pensions and their allowances to Quebec, that will neither give, enlist nor invest, and which will resist taxation for the support of our men and their dependents?

FOUR CRIMINAL CASES ON TRIAL

Four criminal cases are on the docket for the County Court and General Sessions which open in the City Council chamber next Tuesday, before Judge Huycke. They are:

King vs. Frederick Oakes, bigamy.

King vs. Frederick Oakes, perjury.

King vs. Martha Ann Althouse, arson.

King vs. [illegible] E. Stevens, false pretences.

The charge against J. S. Knapman will not be heard at this court.

Voice From Trench "Be Sure and Vote"

"We are getting very much thinned out for officers and men as the demand for reinforcements have been heavy lately. Am afraid we will have a very large shortage of officers. If you have a vote on the elections be sure and vote for the Unionist candidate and tell all your friends to do likewise, if they think anything of the boys who are over here." (From Arther Perks, 32nd Highlanders).

Exemptions granted temporarily to a man because of his occupation holds good upon his continuing in that employment, but not necessarily with the same employer.

WOMEN WILL LOSE VOTES IF---

Now that their work of assisting to get women on the voters' lists is over, the Women's Union Government League is doing its utmost to help see that their votes may not be lost because of the inexperience of so many women.

Here is an A B C of things that might make a woman lose her vote:

(a) Might go to the wrong polling sub-division.

Should have consulted proclamation.

(b) Expects a card of notification. Does not go to the polls without one. Official cards are sent out for municipal elections, and while candidates are sending some, no voter should wait for cards.

(c) A woman who goes to vote on way home from work at 5:30 will find it too late.

(d) Some women might stay away from polls because afraid to go, believing no one but men there. But there will be at least one woman at every poll.

(e) If woman writes own name on ballot it will be lost.

(f) A woman might spoil her ballot and not know she can ask for another.

(g) Let no woman mark with soft pencil, ballot will be spoiled.

(h) Woman, of course, loses vote if name not on list. There is no remedy in towns of over 9,000.

(i) If a woman finds name has wrong initials, she will still get vote, for she may be sworn.

(j) In case of husband's initials can also be sworn.

(k) Let no woman lose vote by leaving booth. Even if she went outside to see if child is all right she could not return.

(l) If woman puts cross in wrong place or in two places she loses her vote.

(m) In case of blindness she can take an oath.

(n) Or unable to write, she can do likewise.

(o) If inmate of House of Industry or recipient of charitable or government funds, she cannot vote.

(p) If employed as enumerator, a woman must add name to own list and vote in the district she has been enumerating.

(q) A woman loses vote if she refuses to answer questions, to take oath, or to produce evidence if she happened to be challenged.

(r) If another person has voted in her name she can swear she is person.

(s) If she cannot speak English she cannot vote unless interpreter is found and sworn. He explains process of voting, etc.

(t) Let no woman try to vote on property as in municipal election.

(u) She brings a ballot already marked—three years' imprisonment.

(v) Woman loses vote if she shows ballot after marking.

(w) If a woman accepts or gives money for vote—fined $200, disqualified for eight years.

(x) Vote lost if woman asks or offers money for vote.

(y) Women voters must remember it is illegal for candidates to pay or promise to pay for transportation of a voter to the polls.

z) Woman loses vote if under 21 and is challenged.

APPELLANTS FIND IT HARD JOB TO GET BY BOARD OF APPEAL

Tribunals Upheld in Their Refusal to Exempt.

Appellants from tribunal decisions are finding it a hard task to get by Judge Huycke, who constitutes the Appeal Board and Crown Attorney Hatton and Lieut. McNab, the military representatives. Up to last night not one absolute dismissal of an appeal had been made. The following appeals have been decided:

Russell Hales, farmer, Apsley, dismissed.

James Healey, farmer, Westwood, dismissed.

Joseph Trainer, farmer, Hall's Bridge, dismissed.

Frank H. Emmerson, 297 Park street, dismissed.

Norman Mitchell Bolton, farmer, Burleigh Falls, dismissed.

James Hayes Kelly, farmer, R. R. 3, Norwood, dismissed.

Charles Gordon Kingan, 205 Aylmer street, dismissed.

William Alvine Graham, Lakefield, dismissed.

J. L. Shaughnessy, farmer, R. R. No. 11, Peterborough, dismissed.

George Watson Connell, 328 Charlotte street, dismissed.

Bertram Wardle, 228 Park street, dismissed.

Hilliard E. S. Clements, blacksmith, Warsaw, dismissed.

Chalmers Roy Pue, farmer, South Monaghan, dismissed.

Harry P. Mather, clerk, Keene, dismissed.

Joseph Stafford Walsh, farmer, Norwood, deferred.

Peter Cecil Spencer, farmer, R. R. 3, Lakefield, deferred.

Allie Ellsworth Watkins, farmer, Keene, reserved.

Joseph Henderson, grocer, 260 King street, deferred.

Dolphus Leo Picard, 127 Romaine street, deferred.

George C. Brock, 328 Charlotte street, until class 2 is called.

James Ernest Fleet, 274 Sherbrooke street, transferred to C. P. R. tribunal.

Thomas Doughty, 123 Stewart St., deferred for medical examination.

Gilbert Downer, barber, 128 Stanley street, dismissed.

Maitland Wells, 500 Park street, deferred.

James Hubert Gilgour baker, 207 Dublin street, reserved.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 15, 1917

THE ONLY ISSUE.

THERE IS ONLY ONE ISSUE before the country next Monday. When you stand in the polling booth with the ballot in your hands, it is not yours to consider mere party interests because there is really no such question at stake. It is not a matter of men, but of principles. The duty of every elector is clear. The issue is grave. Never before in this nation's history has so much depended upon how you mark that ballot when you go behind the screen and are left to make your own decision.

Before you vote, think of the soldiers overseas. If you put a cross opposite the name of the Laurier candidate, it means that you have forgotten that this country is pledged to stand with those soldiers to the end in the task that they took upon themselves to perform without urging. It means that you have forgotten that other pledge that the dependents at home will be cared for so long as their natural protectors are in the service of the nation. If the party now in opposition succeed in their ambition, the soldiers in the trenches will be left unaided, their relatives at home will be allowed to suffer. In Montreal it has been found necessary to raise a fund to protect the soldiers' wives when they go out on Monday to vote for their husbands overseas. What have these women to hope for in the way of assistance if the faction that would interfere with their rights as citizens are invested with the power they seek, power to put an end to Canada's part in the war?

A cross opposite the name of the Union candidate is a helping hand and a message of cheer to the soldiers, a confirmation and a renewal of every promise given. It will mean that Canada, having set its hand to the plow, does not propose to look back. It will mean that the reputation of the Canadian people for honor and faith is to be kept unsullied among the other civilised nations of the world.

A vote for the Laurier candidate will be as a word of encouragement spoken to the enemies of the British Empire.

A vote for the Union candidate will be second in effectiveness only to a rifle shot aimed at a German or Austrian soldier.

The campaign conducted in West Peterborough by the Unionists has been unique in the history of elections. It has been the campaign of a party that was convinced that its cause was righteous, of a party who did the electors the honor of recognising their intelligence and their patriotism. The people knew what was required of them and could be depended upon to discharge their duty. There was no attempt to mislead the voters with cunningly-devised sophistries. None of the usual tricks of electioneering were resorted to. Two important meetings only were held, leading public men being brought here to discuss, not politics, but the one and only issue. Any other gatherings were held simply for the purpose of instructing in their new duties those voters who will use the ballot for the first time.

The issue was left to the patriotism of the people from the start. It is finally committed to them now in the full assurance that they will, by their verdict on Monday, justify the confidence that has been reposed in them.

"RELEASE UNTO US BARABBAS."

SIR ALLEN AYLESWORTH hails Sir Wilfrid Laurier as his country's savior. He declares that only by the return of Sir Wilfrid to power can racial strife be avoided.

"Release unto us Barabbas" shouted the mob two thousand years ago, when a choice was left them. Human nature has not changed, after all, to any marked extent, since those days. History is repeating itself. Sir Allen is as blind as were the wolf-hearted Pharisees of old. The only difference is that it was bigotry in the one case, excessive religious zeal, and it is partisanship in the modern instance.

WHICH WAY?

EVERY SLACKER in the country will vote for Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Every pro-German in Canada will vote for Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Every faint heart, every quitter, will cast his ballot against the Union Government that stands pledged to stay in the war until the end.

The success of Sir Wilfrid Laurier means protection for the slacker and the pro-German.

The success of the Union Government means protection and help for the Canadian soldiers who for the past three years have all of them suffered and many of them have died.

Which is most entitled to the consideration of the people of Canada, the slacker and the indifferent or the men who have proved their worth by getting into the fighting line?

For which of these two classes do you propose to vote?

FOR THE STOMACH'S SAKE.

Someone has said that the way to reach a man's heart is through his stomach, and every housewife has profited by the hint. It was Napoleon who declared, according to historical records, that an army travels and fights on its digestive economy.

All of which philosophy has not been lost upon that resourceful politician, Mr. R. R. Hall. In all his campaign he has appealed to the voters' stomachal organism rather than to their heads, to their appetites rather than to either their reason or their patriotism.

BE WARNED IN TIME.

"I, the undersigned candidate for the Federal deputation, by these presents agree, if I am elected, to exact the immediate suspension of the Military Service Act of 1917, and of all its effects, until the Canadian electors have been consulted by a plebiscite, and should the majority of the people condemn conscription in the referendum, I agree to require that it (the Military Service Act) be considered as void and without effect from its very origin and that in consequence the conscripts be liberated from service and discharged. I also agree to vote against any Government that would

THAT IS THE PLEDGE that the candidates in Quebec, who are the followers of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, are taking. The import is clear.

Mr. R. R. Hall is a Laurier candidate. He may not have taken this pledge, but he has been endorsed by the Liberal leader, who is evidently confident that Mr. Hall will support him and his policy.

Is West Peterborough going to send to Ottawa a representative who would recruit the forces of those who pledge themselves as above?

THE EXAMINER'S ROORBACK.

THE EXAMINER'S final attempt to make a gain in this campaign is to set the city voters against the electors on the farm. It claims unfairness in the administration of the Military Service Act. It insinuates that all the farmers are to be exempted and that the entire draft of 100,000 is to be raised in the cities.

There is to be no blanket exemption of farmers. The Examiner should know that, if it has any confidence in its own reports of the appeal board's proceedings. Warden Brown has been appointed to investigate cases that are in dispute. He has no authority to make a final ruling, but his recommendations will have weight.

The conscription law is to be fairly and firmly enforced in rural and urban communities alike. Men who are required in essential pursuits, whether on the farm or in the factory, will be left. Those who can be spared will be taken. The Examiner can rest in peace with that assurance.

WHY YOU SHOULD VOTE FOR THE UNION GOVERNMENT.

YOU SHOULD SUPPORT the Union Government both for what it has done and for what it will do, if sustained at the polls next Monday. Beyond all doubt it is the strongest government that this country has ever seen. It consists now of nine Liberals and eleven Conservatives, but the number will be equalized after the election.

The Union Government has been in office over eight weeks, and, though it has been hampered by an election forced upon the country by a self-seeking opposition, it has already made an enviable record for itself. The campaign which is so near a close has been conducted by the Government upon a higher plane than was ever before reached by any party.

The Union Government has already abolished all patronage in appointments to Government positions. Men will be chosen for the public service for their fitness, not for any political work they may have done. In the awarding of Government contracts there will no longer be any political favoritism shown.

The Union Government has controlled the business of the packing houses so that a total profit of more than eleven per cent. is impossible.

They have limited the profit on a barrel of flour to 25 cents. In addition, and most important of all, they have put a stop to the use of grain in the manufacture of liquor. They have given the Food Controller practically unlimited powers to regulate the distribution of foodstuffs and to set prices.

All expenditure on public works has been stopped. Every available dollar in Canada is to be used in the prosecution of the war.

Quebec tried to dodge its duty, even in the face of conscription, and military exemptions were granted by the wholesale. The Union Government stepped in and thousands of appeals from these decisions will be tried at once.

The Union Government is made up of the strongest men from both of the old parties. It is supported by all of the leading newspapers in the country without regard to party. If that Government is sustained at the polls next Monday, as there is every indication it will be, public life in Canada will see the dawn of a new and better order dating from December 17, 1917.

A MATTER OF LAUGHTER.

A SARCASTIC SMILE, when indulged in by Sir Robert Borden becomes the laugh of a monomaniac, when Mr. R. R. Hall describes it. Mr. Hall will find out that he who laughs last invariably laughs best, and the cachination is likely to be on himself for fair when the returns are in Monday night.

THE LIBERAL CANDIDATE'S STAND.

A FEW DAYS AFTER Mr. Hall was nominated, Mr. Andrew Macfarlane, who placed his name before the convention, announced at a public meeting, in a manner which suggested an attempt to put himself right with the people, that his nominee was not an ally of Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

"Before I consented to nominate him," said Mr. Macfarlane, "Mr. Hall told me he would have nothing to do with Sir Wilfrid. He is an independent."

When Mr. Macfarlane nominated Mr. Hall, it will be recalled that he said it was necessary to send someone to Ottawa who would help to unhorse Sir Robert Borden. Unless Mr. Macfarlane had Mr. Hall himself in mind for the Premiership, it is hard to say with just whom he would replace Sir Robert if he refused to consider the claim of Sir Wilfrid to the position.

Anyway, Mr. Hall is a Laurier man out and out. He has said he will support him for Premier if the chance ever arises. He wears Sir Wilfrid's tag of approval. He will be counted in with the Quebec contingent if elected.

Further, Mr. Hall is in an anomalous position, finding himself, as he does, at variance with the man who first brought him to the front.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

WHICH IS IT TO BE, Burnham or Hall, Borden or Bourassa?

• • • •

IF THE TIDE keeps up against him, the unspeakable Turk will be denied a resting place even in Asia.

• • • •

IT IS NOW OR NEVER for Canada, now to stand fast, or never to hold up her head with the honorable nations of the earth again.

A LAST WORD TO THE ELECTORS

It is unnecessary to appeal to the patriotism of Canadians. All loyal citizens of the British Empire are devoted to its preservation. "God save the King" means much to all true Canadian hearts. The governments of all the allies have made mistakes. The criticism has been severe. But they are doing their best. Whether we vote for the Union Government or for Sir Wilfrid Laurier, for the province that failed in men, in money, and in the Red Cross and patriotic work, and in the Victory Loan, or for that part of Canada that has strained every energy to provide for the men at the front, let us go to the polls, not with party prejudice and political party rivalry or hope of patronage in our hearts, but with the warm flow of the red lifeblood of the nation. Let us vote as men and women and not as party slaves. We have had to endure much at home—but think of the lads at the front. They are brave. Are we not brave, too? Let us show ourselves worthy of them, as I am sure we shall, and I will do my level best, if elected, to prove worthy to represent you and to justify your confidence. Believe me, ladies and gentlemen,

Yours sincerely,
J. H. BURNHAM.

IF THE WESTERN LINE BREAKS.

THE GERMANS are massing their forces on the Western front for a great final effort to break the Allies' defence before the American army can be effectively placed in the line. There is impending what will beyond all question prove the bitterest struggle of the war. As Mr. Rowell so eloquently said in his address in Victoria Hall last night, if that Western line breaks, the war is as good as lost, and Britain will be obliged to conclude an inglorious peace.

At such a time as this should Canada hesitate? Should there be talk of delay, of a referendum to decide whether this country is to quit or still carry on? Germany is not taking a referendum as to whether or not one supreme effort is to be made for victory. The cables tell us that the confidence of the masses in Germany has been restored and that they are more hopeful today for a complete triumph than they have been since the tide of battle first went against them.

A properly marked ballot on Monday will help to hold up the hands of the Union Government and will strengthen that line in Flanders, the line upon which the fate of half the civilized world depends.

Campaign Notes

Of course, you may vote for Laurierism if you feel that way, but, thank heaven, this is a free country.

• • •

He is the same Rowell in 1917 as he was three years ago. Those who voted for him then can support him Monday.

• • •

Compare the speeches of Mr. Rowell with those that have been heard from the opposite side in this campaign, then make your choice.

• • •

Mr. Hall says 75,000 men should be taken from Quebec before the English-speaking provinces are asked to send another recruit. Brave as he is, would Mr. Hall care to make that statement, say in Montreal?

• • •

Go over the top Monday. Do not emulate the thermometer these days and burrow in the bottom of the trench.

• • •

None but a soldier in uniform can swear in his vote if his name is not on the list.

• • •

Of the nine provincial premiers in Canada, eight are for Union Government and of these eight, six are Liberals. If these six were worth following in former years, they are worth following now. It cannot be that eight are wrong and one is right.

• • •

A farmer's wife in Smith telephoned to a friend in the city yesterday that if she had to sit up all night she intended to be at the polls in time Monday morning to cast the first vote—her first, too— for Union Government. The voting will be held at this lady's home, so she is likely to be able to gratify her ambition.

• • •

"I am going to vote for Burnham," said one lady to another at Victoria Hall last night, "and to show my good feeling I intend to mark my ballot with two or three crosses." Do nothing of the kind. One cross is sufficient, and any other kind will spoil your ballot.

• • •

Some enthusiastic young Unionists are planning to give expression to their feelings by writing such sentiments as "To hell witht the Kaiser," "Down with Germany," on their ballots. All such should restrain themselves. Any such commentatories, however worthy, would spoil the ballots.

THREE LITTLE FOXES.

Editor Review: We have decided to destroy our famous pet foxes? Sir Wilfred, Bourassa and Bob. They are now getting vicious, spiteful and beyond control. They are the true thoroughbred black and silver fox specimens (with colors).

They have been raised and bred on our own farms:

Sir Wilfrid—Black Fox; having a very nice glossy coat, nicely marked, with yellow streak down the back.

Bourassa—Black Fox—Very black and of the deepest dye, nicely marked pelt, with very broad yellow streak from tip of nose to the end of the tail.

Bob—Silver Fox—Having a very nice soft pelt (splendid skin) with yellow spots here and there.

These specimens have gained the admiration of his Imp, the Kaiser, and the aristocracy of Berlin, Germany, on account of the war; we cannot ship them to Berlin.

They will be killed on the 17th Dec., 1917. These skins will be sold for the benefit of the troops at the front.

God Save Our King.

Is a United Quebec to Rule All Canada ?

This, the most tremendous question in Canada's history, is to be answered within ten days.

Our answer involves Canada's honour, her freedom and her future. Old-time party questions are being advanced to obscure the gravest issue ever placed before a nation. Canada is in real danger. The clouds that obscure her vision must be brushed aside so that the great issue stands forth clear and distinct.

"Is a United Quebec to Rule All Canada?"

To-day, in our national crisis, Quebec alone among all the provinces stands more united than ever before. She knows what she wants:

(1) Withdrawal from the war.
(2) Bilingual schools everywhere.
(3) Weakening of the ties of British connection.
(4) Political control of Canada.

From the Ottawa River to Labrador and the Gulf, a common purpose actuates Quebec in her determination to profit by the factional divisions of Canada and to impose her will upon all the people of Canada.

Within the last few weeks, Quebec has mobilized all her forces to dominate Canada under the unified leadership of Bourassa and Laurier. Canada knows that these two men in their earlier days were personal friends and political associates. Canada knows how in recent times they gradually drew apart—until in 1911 Bourassa opposed Laurier and helped to bring about his defeat, at the polls. Canada knows that from that time forward, until a few weeks ago, the breach between them steadily widened until envy and hatred, each toward the other became the possession of both. Bourassa and his followers were anathema to Laurier.

Should not the people of Canada ask themselves, before it is too late, why these two men have suddenly agreed to bury the past, why this sudden embrace each of the other? If we will but let the scales drop from our eyes the answer is obvious. The all-compelling influences of Quebec have combined to force the union of Laurier and Bourassa in the common purpose of French Canadian domination.

We concede the right of French Canadians to make common cause of anything they think it is in their interests so to do. This is a free country. But as the French Canadians have already combined to assert their views, it is the duty of the hour that we English-speaking Canadians get together and present to Quebec a united front in the defence of our rights. This is imperative.

With sixty solid seats Quebec is about to accomplish her designs. Bourassa, the real master and idol of Quebec, is in sight of his goal.

To attain her purpose, Quebec has not scrupled to ignore British traditions and to suppress freedom of speech. So thoroughly organized is her campaign to prevent even the discussion of the war that Unionist candidates are prevented from holding public meetings throughout that Province. The Unionist minority in Quebec are the victims of organized obstruction.

To be successful in her determination to rule all Canada, Quebec has but to secure a few seats in each of the other Provinces. Quebec leaders now seek to divide the rest of Canada into factions by insidiously bringing into political discussion old-time party questions, to divert the public mind from Quebec, her purpose and her ambitions.

United in her determination to quit the war, Quebec would compel a divided Canada to do likewise. By union only can the English-speaking people prevent this calamity.

However well-meaning Laurier candidates in Ontario may be, they will be helpless against a united Quebec.

Apart from the splendid work of the small English-speaking population, Quebec has failed the Red Cross, has failed the Patriotic Fund, has failed in recruiting and has failed in the Victory Loan. Dare we trust our soldiers, their wives, their children, their pensions and their allowances to Quebec, that will neither give, enlist nor invest, and which will resist taxation for the support of our men and their dependents?

Canada must decide whether she will become a deserter and quit with Russia, or fight to the end for liberty with Belgium. This decision must not be dictated by the only Province which has shirked its obligations throughout the war.

All Canada knows that Germany has been working through agents, spies and bribes in every country in the world. The latest evidences are the revelations recently made to the world by President Wilson. Do we Canadians think the Kaiser has overlooked Canada? If we do, what a fool's paradise!

Germany benefits by division among her enemies. Upon whom would she look in Canada as furthering her designs? Not Sir Robert Borden, Mr. Rowell and their colleagues in the Union Government. That is certain. But can the same be said with respect to the leaders in the Province of Quebec whose attitude in this war is against Canada's continuation in the war. We regret to be compelled to say these things, but we must not shut our eyes to facts.

The Citizens' Union Committee, anxious for the maintenance of British ideals and traditions, views with alarm the menace of French-Canadian domination with its inevitable influence upon the home, the school and the state.

We, therefore, call upon all English-speaking men and women to realize that—Canada, divided by political factions and old-time party questions, is at the mercy of a united Quebec. Union Government alone can save Canada from the menace of French-Canadian domination.

LET CANADIANS

The mass meeting in Victoria Hall last night under the auspices of the Women's Union Government League, in the interests of Capt. Burnham, Unionist candidate for West Peterborough, was a huge success in every way. The large hall was well filled, the speeches were good and to the point, and the attendance comprised a large number of ladies, to whom the utterances of the distinguished lady visitors, Mrs. Henderson and Mrs. Arthur VanKoughnet were especially applicable. The whole meeting was characterized by intense enthusiasm for Sir Robert Borden and Capt. Burnham, and an atmosphere of unqualified optimism for the result of Monday's polling prevailed.

The Women's Union Government League was present in full strength, the members taking seats on the platform. Mrs. Arthur Stevenson, president of the League, made a very capable chairman of the proceedings.

Mrs. Henderson.

Mrs. Henderson of Toronto was the first speaker and gave a clear and concise address on the one clear-cut issue in the election, and opined that women should be thankful that on the first occasion on which they can exercise their franchise in a Dominion election they are asked to vote on a question of right and wrong—Union or Disunion of Canada. Peterborough women are doubly fortunate in having but two candidates in the field, thus avoiding perplexity and confusion.

Best of Parties United.

The speaker approved of the uniting of the best of the two old parties in one Union Government, in which labor is very well represented by one member in the Cabinet at present and two more to be added later. She commended the Government's war tax measure, which practically means a conscription of wealth, and also the abolition of patronage from which pernicious party system the country had suffered for many years.

Must Enforce Act.

The speaker here went on to say that were our Canadian divisions not kept up to strength by an enforcement of the Military Service Act, Canada would see a breaking down of her brilliant army at the front, which has won so great a measure of glory for this Dominion and the Empire. She quoted reliable authority for the statement that Canadians in France are not being used wastefully in the relief of English units, but are resorted to on big occasions because of their magnificent organization and the wonderful work of their intelligence department.

Conscription the Only Way.

The speaker contended that in a time of war conscription is the only fair and democratic way of raising an army in defence of the country, and she ridiculed the contention of non-Unionists that Canada can maintain her four divisions at strength with the men already enlisted and now overseas.

"Could Canada do this she would indeed go down in history as a miraculous country. The fact is," she continued, "that from April 9 to May 1 Canadian casualties in France numbered 38,000 for three big engagements; there are in England only 31,000 infantry reserves, and under such conditions those gallant divisions at the front would last six months, with luck, unless reinforcements are shortly forthcoming."

No Faith in Sir Wilfrid.

Mrs. Henderson had no faith in Sir Wilfrid's promise to enforce conscription, should a referendum declare for it for, she said, Quebec would not let him do it. The last time Laurier took a referendum was when prohibition won a majority vote of 125,000 in the whole of Can

THE BLESSING OF A HEALTHY BODY

"I think it my duty to tell you what "Fruit-a-tives" has done for me. Three years ago, I began to feel run-down and tired, and suffered very much from Liver and Kidney Trouble. Having read of "Fruit-a-tives", I thought I would try them. The result was surprising. During the 3½ years past, I have taken them regularly and would not change for anything. I have not had an hour's sickness since I commenced using "Fruit-a-tives", and I know now what I haven't known for a good many years—that is, the blessing of a healthy body and clear thinking brain".

prohibition yet because Quebec, being very largely in opposition to the measure, imposed her will upon the rest of Canada. "And I have no doubt that history would repeat itself were Sir Wilfrid Laurier to take another referendum on the present issue."

Three Things To Do.

Talking directly to the women the speaker said there are only three things for them to do on Monday next—to vote either for or against Union Government, or to stay at home. And she urged upon them the need of their votes in relief of the men in the fighting line and in defence of the Empire and its glorious traditions. To those who had diffidence in voting to send some other mother's boy to risk the dangers of war she asked them to remember that by sending a neighbor's boy to the front they are but forcing one boy to do his duty and thus enabling another who has been, say two years in the trenches, to return home for a well-earned rest.

"There are some people, and I'm one of them, who think we should have had conscription quite a long time ago."

Go With Light Hearts.

In conclusion, Mrs. Henderson referred to instances where many men had refrained from enlisting in consideration of parents or wives, and declared with the Military Service Act in force that hundreds will go forth to war with light hearts, rejoicing that the country had settled the question for them. While some mothers may find it difficult to vote for conscription, still they should bear in mind that other mothers have sent their sons to the front under the voluntary system, and it is their duty to see to it that they are fully supported and reinforced at this time of the Empire's crisis.

Mrs. Vankoughnet.

Mrs. Vankoughnet paid a graceful tribute to Peterborough as being credited in Toronto as standing second to none in the way of donations to men at the front through the various patriotic organizations, and with its handsome contribution of $1,500,000 to the Victory Loan. She felt privileged to stand on a public platform in a city which had done so much for the great cause, and had no hesitancy in determining how the citizens of such a city are going to vote on Monday next.

As to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, he had had nothing whatever to do with sending men to the front. In fact, when asked to endorse, by a brief appeal in local papers, the Canadian Club's recruiting effort he had replied that he could not then answer in the affirmative, but would look into the matter and send further advisement. And there has been no word from Sir Wilfrid Laurier since, but Sir Robert Borden and Hon. N. W. Rowell both endorsed and fostered the movement.

A Sacred Vote.

The speaker characterized the present woman's suffrage measure as one offering to women with kin who have died or who are fighting for God, King and Empire, a vote which

AT ONCE! STOPS STOMACH MISERY AND INDIGESTION

"PAPE'S DIAPEPSIN" MAKES SICK, SOUR, GASSY STOMACHS FEEL FINE.

Do some foods you eat hit back—taste good, but work badly; ferment into acids and cause a sick, sour, gassy stomach? Now, Mr. or Mrs. Dyspeptic, jot this down: Pape's Diapepsin helps neutralise the excessive acids in the stomach so your food won't sour and upset you. There never was anything so safely quick, so certainly effective. No difference how badly your stomach is upset, you usually get happy relief in five minutes, but what pleases you most is that it helps to regulate your stomach so you can eat your favorite foods without fear.

Most remedies give you relief sometimes—they are slow, but not sure. "Pape's Diapepsin" is positive in neutralising the acidity, so the misery won't come back very quickly.

You feel different as soon as "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach—distress just vanishes—your stomach gets sweet, no gases, no belching, no eructations of undigested food, your head clears, and you feel fine.

Go now, make the best investment you ever made, by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder due to acid fermentation.

should be held sacred by their sisters not similarly privileged. She could not conceive of any woman with no kin at the front desiring to take part in so sacred a vote. The speaker has no vote herself, and, with other right-thinking women, was proud to await her turn for that privilege while their sisters with the interests and memories of loved ones at stake cast their ballots for the first time on Monday next. She here explained to the ladies present how to vote, and took it for granted that their ballots would be cast for Capt. Burnham. (Prolonged applause from the gentler sex.)

Hurry-up Call.

Mrs. Van Koughnet very aptly compared the needs of Halifax with those of Canada's armies in France inasmuch that they did not permit of delay. When the cry for help came to Toronto the Provincial Government promptly sent a goodly sum. They did not say, we'll think it over, take a referendum, and possibly send help in a year's time. The wire from Halifax was considered a hurry-up call; and the call for reinforcements is a hurry-up one also and requires equal despatch in responding thereto. (Applause). This is not an election of controversy, but one for fair play to and reinforcements for men who are fighting against slavery and serfdom, and support of brave Canadians who are dying that all men shall be free.

The Candidate.

Capt. Burnham met with an enthusiastic reception. He eulogised the ladies as energetic workers in a good cause, and contended that whoever had their support was sure to win. He also had a good word to say for the newspapers and congratulated them upon having conducted a very respectable and proper-spirited campaign. Neither did he forget Mr. R. R. Hall, his opponent, whom he considered a jolly good sport, but regretted that the impulse of the moment had betrayed him into supporting a cause which he (Capt. Burnham) could not believe he has at heart. Again, the speaker was proud of the firm of Matthews-Blackwell, because they had been above board in all their dealings, generous to every call in support of the war, and had neither concealed anything nor clothed their operations with hypocrisy.

Enlightened Democracy

Speaking of the uplift of people's through education, which is teaching them to realize that they have the making of their conditions in their saw hopeful signs of the time which bespeaks an enlightened democracy.

Catch Up We Will.

Captain Burnham here spoke of the Empire's shortcomings in the war by reason of being, unlike Germany, quite unprepared for so stupendous a struggle, he regretted that there had been serious remissness and frightful waste. "But," he said, "we are doing our best to catch up, and catch up the Empire with Canada included. (Cheers).

Sir Wilfrid and Quebec.

Turning to Sir Wilfrid's position, the speaker contended that Laurier is by force of circumstances a slave to Quebec, and is bound to either concede to Quebec's wishes or retire from public life. French Canadians in the House had told him (Capt. Burnham) that they had not thought the opposition to conscription in Quebec to be as serious as it is, and that French Canadians would event-

Happiest Man in Canada He Says

"It's All Because of What Tanlac Did For Me, States Ward.

"I believe I am the happiest man in all Canada today and I want to tell the public it's all because of what this Tanlac has done for me," said Henry Ward, who resides at 20 Batavia avenue, Toronto, and is employed by the Swift Canadian Company, in a recent interview.

"Sometimes," continued Mr. Ward, "when I stooped over a pain would catch me in the small of my back and I could hardly straighten up again. My kidneys were all out of order, and disturbed me so I could scarcely get any rest at night. My stomach was so out of fix that I couldn't eat like other people and for fifteen years I have simply suffered torture. Many a morning my back hurt me so bad and was so stiff that I couldn't raise my head and I would actually have to roll out of bed. I have gone to work hurting so bad that I could hardly drag along and felt that I would be compelled to go back home. I have had to quit work many times on account of my condition and last spring I got in such a bad shape I had to stop off for more than a week, and I can't describe my suffering. Then my legs became affected with something like rheumatism and there were sharp, cramping pains going through my muscles that made my legs feel like they were drawing double. Many a night I have had to crawl out of bed, walk the floor and rub to get relief from those awful cramps, and I just tell you I was in misery nearly all the time.

"This is just the fix I was in for fifteen years and while I doctored and tried nearly every kind of medicine recommended for such troubles, nothing did me any good until I began taking Tanlac. Others said so much about Tanlac helping them that I thought I might as well try it. So I did, and when I found it was doing me good I kept on taking it. I have taken six bottles now and I can say it and tell the truth, I am feeling better than I have in fifteen years. I am simply getting along fine and have gained five pounds in weight, which I think is wonderful for one of my age, as I am now sixty-four. I haven't been bothered with my stomach and kidneys since I took my first bottle of Tanlac and I believe these troubles are gone for good. All signs of the rheumatism have left me too, I'm not constipated any more and I feel stronger and more vigorous than I have in many years. I certainly am happy over my wonderful relief and I think it nothing but right that I should tell about it for the benefit of others."

ually respond to the call for reinforcement of their kin in France. But on visiting their constituencies so mighty a phalanx of opposition to the Military Service Act was in evidence that they had been forced to change their tactics or else drop out of public life entirely.

Quebec, the speaker went on to say, will neither furnish men, money to the patriotic funds, nor do anything to help [illegible] the war we are doing, and the situation is quite serious. As one very high up in public life has said, it is quite plain that force will have to be applied to French Canadians. But it is not their armed, but their passive resistance which is to be feared—the weeping and wailing of women, which will offer, regrettable spectacle to the world at large.

However, continued the candidate, French Canada must and will be made to do her duty .(Applause). And that part of Canada which refuses to do her duty is no better than a Hun, I san ally of Germany, and is ready to admit the Huns within her own gates. (Applause). Likewise, those here who support hostility to Union Government and the war are allies of the French Canadians and of the Huns also. (Renewed applause).

Self Sacrifice.

Turning to the question of coalition Captain Burnham said the Confederation of Canada was brought about by the self-sacrifice of Hon. George Brown, who stated that rather than lead a great party in Parliament at the expense of a United Canada he would retire from that leadership. He then rose to the duty of the hour, and relinquished the party principles he held for the sake of his beloved adopted country, as a result of which Canada was united. And after a period of 50 years we are called upon today to set aside all party differences, and recognize that we must again unite to save the country from ruin.

Take Your Chance.

In conclusion of an eloquent address, the speaker pointed out that Sir Wilfrid promises to suspend the operation of the Military Service Act, and he (Capt. Burnham) could not conceive of a soldier's wife voting for a party which proposes to desert her husband at the front. A referendum means long delay of reinforcements at best, and if answered in the negative one can take one's chance afterwards. "May God forgive the man who can go to the polls and vote against sending immediate reinforcements and supplies to the men in the trenches, and against the efforts of a democracy to preserve itself from the shackles of Prussianism."

Scene from Oliver Morosco's big musical sensation, "SO LONG, LETTY," direct from its second New York triumph, with the same magnificent cast and production, enlarged orchestra, and a California beauty chorus. Coming to the Grand Opera House Teusday, December 18th.

MR. HALL FIRES HIS FINAL GUN

Something About Mr. L. F Heyd K. C who Speaks in Victoria Hall Tonight

The Examiner again last night violated all the ethics of journalism and of common courtesy when it allowed an anonymous writer to use its columns to make an ungallant personal attack upon two distinguished ladies who were expected to speak at the mass meeting in Victoria Hall. That writer even went the length of holding one of the ladies responsible for the political deeds of her husband.

If it comes to a question of speakers, it must be said that any brought in by the Women's Union Government League or by the Union party will more than hold their own in comparison with those imported by Mr. Hall. The citizens of Peterborough have been given an opportunity to hear such men as Sir Robert Borden, Sir George Foster, Sir Sam Hughes and Hon. N. W. Rowell. Not one public man of note has been brought here by Mr. Hall. The best he could produce were professional campaigners who follow the business for the honor and emoluments that may be in it.

Mr. Hall has planned his big effort for tonight, when the speaker will be Mr. L. F. Heyd, K.C., of Toronto. Look out for roorbacks. There will be no chance to contradict anything that Mr. Heyd may say, and he is a resourceful gentleman in the matter of creating sensations. He is the versatile speaker who at a meeting in Toronto the other night, held in the interests of Controller Ramsden, a Laurier candidate charged the Borden Government with responsibility for the Halifax disaster. There was as much justification for this assertion as there would be for a declaration to the effect that the present excessive cold weather is due to lack of proper governmental control.

Even Mr. Ramsden himself could not stand for such a freak election cry. He was not at the meeting, but he took the very first opportunity to disavow the statement.

"A speaker at a recent meeting on my behalf," Mr. Ramsden said, "according to the newspapers has attempted to fasten the Halifax disaster upon the Government. I say I would rather go down to defeat than receive one vote on the strength of that statement."

Mr. Ramsden could not stand for Mr. Heyd, but Mr. Hall is not so fastidious. He brings him here to close his campaign.

Beyond all doubt Mr. Heyd is anxious to see the war over. It has proved something of an inconvenience to him by disturbing his social arrangements. While it is in progress he finds it impossible to visit his friends in Germany. His last trip for that purpose was as long ago as before the opening of hostilities in 1914.

Zutoo Tablets
At Any Cost
Such is the statement of Mr. A. O. Norton, of Boston, the largest Jack Manufacturer in the world. His voluntary testimonial regarding ZUTOO follows:
286 Congress St., Boston, Mass.
"I have been a sufferer from Headache since childhood and have used all, or nearly all the so-called 'cures' on the market. Some months since my attention was called to Zutoo Tablets and I have been using them ever since with the most gratifying results. I find they cure a 'sick' or 'nervous' headache in a few minutes and leave no bad effects. My family use them whenever needed with equally good results. I have frequently given them to friends who were suffering from Headache and they never failed to give quick relief. I always carry Zutoo Tablets in my grip on the road and WOULD NOT BE WITHOUT THEM AT ANY COST."

TENDERS FOR PULPWOOD LIMIT.

Tenders will be received by the undersigned up to and including the seventeenth day of December next for the right to cut pulpwood and pine timber on a certain area situate in the vicinity of the Kapuskasing River in the Districts of Timiskaming and Algoma.

Tenderers are to offer a flat rate per cord for all classes of pulpwood, whether spruce or other woods. The successful tenderer shall be required to pay for the Red and White Pine on the limit a flat rate of $10 per thousand feet board measure.

The successful tenderer shall also be required to erect a mill or mills on or near the territory, and to manufacture the wood into pulp and paper in the Province of Ontario, in accordance with the terms and conditions of sale which can be had on application to the Department.

Parties making tender will be required to deposit with their tender a marked cheque payable to the Honourable the Treasurer of the Province of Ontario, for Twenty-five Thousand Dollars ($25,000.00), which amount will be forfeited in the event of their not entering into agreement to carry out conditions, etc. The said Twenty-five Thousand Dollars ($25,000.00) will be held by the Department until such time as the terms and conditions of the agreement to be entered into have been complied with and the said mills erected, equipped and in operation. The said sum may then be applied in such amounts and at such times as the Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines may direct in payment of accounts for dues or of any other obligation due the Crown until the whole sum has been applied.

The highest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

For particulars as to description of territory, capital to be invested, etc., apply to the undersigned.

BEAUTY CHORUS AND MOROSCO CAST WITH "SO LONG LETTY."

One of the brightest, fastest and most tuneful musical comedies which ever visited Peterborough will be presented at The Grand next Tuesday evening, Dec. 18. In addition to a company of over forty performers there is an orchestra of twelve pieces. In Sidney Grant and Walter Catlett local theatre-goers will find two of the best comedians ever before the local footlights. "So Long Letty" is a play of California, with a California beauty chorus and a typical "Morosco" cast, which means the very best obtainable. It is one of those productions that goes with a thump, a bang, something doing every minute. There are no less than eighteen song numbers many of which will be whistled and hummed after next Tuesday evening. "So Long Letty" will give such extreme satisfaction to patrons of The Grand that Manager Turner does not hesitate to personally recommend it. The seat sale opened this morning.

RED CROSS WORK.

The Red Cross auxiliary of Murray Street Baptist Church report the following work for the past month:

Nine pairs of bed socks, four grey flannel shirts, 24 stretcher caps, 13 suits of pyjamas, one hospital shirt, 20 pairs socks.

The proceeds of Dr. Shields' lecture on "England in War-time" were also turned over to the Red Cross Society of Peterborough. The amount was $40.

TO THE ELECTORS OF EAST PETERBORO

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

I believe no greater disaster could at the present time befall our country than the defeat of the Borden Union Administration at the polls on December 17th.

The policy of this Administration is the speedy and continuous reinforcements of our Canadian troops on the battle-front; and the putting forth of all our national strength for the cause of civilization and freedom.

To carry out this policy, a number of Canada's ablest public men of vision—sinking for the present all political differences—now stand together—strong to battle for the right—united to WIN THE WAR.

For over three years thousands of loyal Canadians of many creeds and of different nationalities have stood shoulder to shoulder on the battle-fields of Europe, gallantly fighting our common foe, and, sometimes, sometimes falling, have won for the name of Canada undying fame. Shall we, with all possible speed, send help to these, our heroic defenders, now holding the battle-line, or shall we, breaking faith with them as well as "with those who die"—delay—vote—while the enemy advances?

As the Union Candidate in this Riding, I am putting forth every effort to win East Peterborough to the support of the Borden Union Administration, and, if elected, shall to the utmost of my ability support the same.

To this end I now earnestly solicit the co-operation and influence of every loyal and patriotic man and woman in East Peterborough.

I have the honor to be, faithfully yours,

JOHN A. SEXSMITH.

Synopsis of Canadian Northwest Land Regulations

The sole head of a family or any male over 18 years old, who was at the commencement of the present war, and has since continued to be, a British subject or a subject of an allied or neutral country, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion Land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for District. Entry by proxy may be made on certain conditions. Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of land in each of three years.

In certain districts a homesteader may secure an adjoining quarter-section as pre-emption. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Reside six months in each of three years after earning homestead patent and cultivate 50 acres extra. May obtain pre-emption patent as soon as homestead patent on certain conditions.

A settler after obtaining homestead patent, if he cannot secure a pre-emption, may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

Holders of entries may count time of employment as farm laborers in Canada during 1917, as residence duties under certain conditions.

When Dominion Lands are advertised or posted for entry, returned soldiers who have served overseas and have been honorably discharged, receive one day priority in applying for entry at local Agent's Office (but not Sub-Agency). Discharge papers must be presented to Agent.

FINE HEARING FOR SEXSMITH

EAST PETERBOROUGH UNIONIST CANDIDATE AT LAKEFIELD.

Lakefield, Dec. 15.—The meeting in the town hall last night in the interest of J. A. Sexsmith the Unionist candidate, was well attended. Hon. N. W. Rowell, who spoke for an hour, was given an attentive hearing as he pointed to the one issue before the electors, and appealed to his auditors to back up the boys at the front.

Dr. J. R. Fraser was chairman. Capt. Stuart and the candidate also gave addresses. Mr. Sexsmith received a fine reception.

Hopes Burnham is Sticking to Guns

Under date of Nov. 15 Capt. R. E. Layfield writes from overseas: "I have not heard yet who is running as the Win-the-War candidate in Peterborough, but expect Burnham is sticking to his guns. Hope there will be no one to oppose him. In our little paper that is issued here every day they say they are making a lot out of the exemptions in the army. It will certainly take a Veterans' Raid to wake up Quebec."

OUR ALLIES IN DANGER OF STARVATION

Mr. Hall Wants More Ships and Food Produced.

At last truth and want has forced Food Controller Hanna and Sir Robert Borden to allow the fact to be published that "today hundreds of thousands of people are in peril of starvation."

Sir Robert Borden and his followers, in control of public news, must be desperate when they have concealed from the Canadian public the fact that Great Britain, France and Italy are in danger of losing this war through being starved into defeat by hunger and want.

Food Controller Hanna made it known only yesterday that "the call which is made upon us is in the name of the Canadian soldiers at the front, the Allied armies and the civilian population of the Allied nations who have already made food sacrifices, the extent of which is little realized by the people of this country."

The serious facts are now being brought to light that our Canadian boys at the front do need food. That the Italian people need food. And that today "hundreds of thousands of them are in peril of starvation."

Even Sir Robert Borden's supporters are forced to admit that neither he nor his Government are doing anything whatever to assist our Allies to escape from starvation during the coming year by preparing for the production of food on an extensive scale. Let the women of this city, whose hearts, by party zeal, have not been hardened into stone, see that on Monday next Sir Robert Borden and his "do nothing" candidate receive the condemnation they deserve for their criminal neglect to take steps to produce food to keep our Allies from starvation.

Even Mr. Burnham at last night's meeting in Victoria Hall refused to allow Food Controller Hanna's letter to be read, which contained the unpleasant news that through the Canadian Government's neglect even our own Peterborough boys fighting in the trenches "have already made food sacrifices the extent of which is little realized by the people of this country."

Even the Hon. Mr. Rowell at last night's meeting refused to discuss Mr. Hanna's letter, and made no reference whatever to the approaching world-wide famine which is liable to envelope our Allies in disaster and ruin.

Hon. Newton Wesley Rowell knows full well that here are over 115,000 Canadian soldiers in England who have not yet crossed over to France, and if, as the Hon. Mr. Rowell says, our boys in the trenches have been calling out for months for help, then why in the name of humanity have Sir Robert Borden and Hon. Mr. Rowell been guilty of criminal neglect to send to their aid these 115,000 men who are already in England prepared to go to their rescue?

This is the time when our people should be guided by common sense.

I pledge myself to support a policy that will lend Government aid to assist in building ships on an extensive scale, to assist in carrying men and food to assist our Allies.

I pledge myself to support a policy which will lend Government aid to the production of foodstuffs of all kinds both here and in the Northwest Territories on an extensive scale.

This would be a double blessing. It would reduce the cost of living at home and would help supply Great Britain and her Allies with food to keep them from starving.

REV. J. W. WOODSIDE ANNIVERSARY PREACHER AT KNOX CHURCH

Tomorrow promises to be a day of unique interest and importance for Knox Church. The seventh anniversary of the opening of the present building is to be observed by special services. The Session has secured Rev. J. W. Woodside, M.A., of Chalmers' Church, Toronto, to conduct these services. Mr. Woodside is among the outstanding preachers of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, and the Session feels confident that all who possibly can will avail themselves of this opportunity of hearing him. A special offering will be taken on behalf of the building fund of the church. Those who were unable to bring their mite-boxes to the social held last night are asked to leave them with the ushers at the church tomorrow.

The choir has arranged to render special music.

Ladies' Cigars

"Does your wife pick your clothes? No—only the pockets."

When the time-worn gag, about the wife who picked the neckties and bought the cigars, finally died, this old joke came to life.

To-day, she can give away cigars and be certain that brother, husband, sweetheart will enjoy them.

For, such is the fame of ARABELA Cigars that she can get them at any tobacconist's, round any corner, in boxes of 10, 25 or 50 cigars.

As they contain only the finest blend of Havana tobaccos, they will please any discriminating smoker. They are mild, mellow and of delicate aroma.

For forty long years they have been a boon and a blessing to men, and, as Charlie says, "ARABELA to-day is not merely the good old ARABELA, but a better cigar than ever."

Our word and reputation on it!

Financial Help Badly Needed For Relief at Halifax

Mrs. T. F. Matthews has received the following letter from Dr. Florence Piers at Halifax:

Dear Mrs. Matthews:

Thanks so much for the wire. Financial help is badly needed, as there is plenty of clothing. Everything is simply terrible, and I am trying to help a McLennan family, who are such good, hard-working people. They have four children, one killed, the others, including the father and mother, all injured. They have lost everything, their home, goods, etc. There are, oh, ever so many cases like this but as I know what brave, ambitious people they are, I am trying to do all I can for them.

Another family, the father and mother are injured, one child is blind, another most seriously injured, and these people we must help individually as we come across them.

We will be most thankful for any financial contributions, as money is most urgently needed.

(Dr.) Florence O'Donell Piers.

A CHILD DOSEN'T LAUGH AND PLAY IF CONSTIPATED

IF PEEVISH, FEVERISH AND SICK GIVE "CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS."

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious "fruit laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside" cleansing. Directions for babies and children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

BRITISH REGAIN LOST POSITION

Turn Tables on Germans in Engagemnt at Polderhoek.

London, Dec. 15.—The British have regained part of the ground won by the Germans on the Ypres front yesterday, the war office reports. The statement follows: Local fighting was recommenced yesterday evening in the neighborhood of the Polderhoek Chateau in which our troops regained considerable part of the trench into which the enemy had penetrated during the morning.

The hostile artillery was active during the night east of Messines and northeast of Ypres.

American Is President.

London, Dec. 15.—The Inter Allied Council which is to take up questions of war purchases and finances met in London today. Oscar T. Crosby, assistant secretary of the United States Treasury, was elected president.

Gives Germany the Lie.

London, Dec. 15.—With reference to the German Government's statement that it had received through the neutral government last September an inquiry in regard to its war aims under circumstances indicating that the inquiry was made with the sanction of the British Government, the Daily Chronicle prints a statement from Lord Robt. Cecil, Minister of Blockade, branding the whole thing as untrue.

Progress Against Subs.

Paris, Dec. 15.—Real progress is being made against the German submarine campaign, George Leygues, Minister of Marine, declared in an interview in the Petit Parisienne today. He warns, however, against too optimistic conclusion being drawn from reassuring developments.

Fighting In Italy.

Italian Headquarters in Northern Italy, Dec. 15.—Heavy fighting is in progress today on the Mountain front northeast of the Brenta river. The enemy is attempting to advance his positions as he has those west of the River which would give him two lines of approach to the Brenta Valley and open the plain. The chief Austro-German effort is centering about Monte Beretta. There the enemy succeeded in advancing only a short distance in the course of repeated attacks in which he suffered large losses.

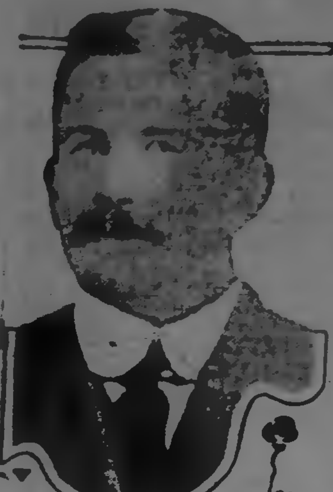
MEMBERS OF THE UNION GOVERNMENT, THE MEN WHOM YOU SHOULD SUPPORT

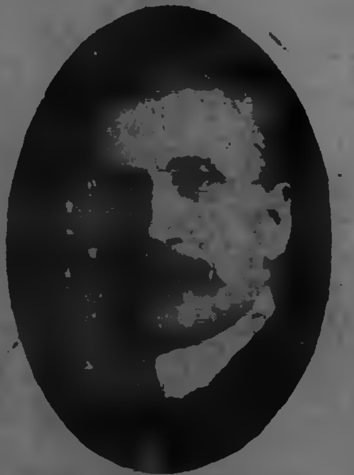


HON. T. A. CRERAR

Hon. A. T. Crerar, Minister of Agriculture, is an Ontario man who has more than made good in the west. He is a practical farmer, but all his public efforts for years past have been devoted to the Grain Growers' Association of Western Canada. No man in the country knows the needs of the western farmer better than Mr. Crerar. He has never been a member of parliament before and is running in Marquette, Manitoba.

HON. C. C. BALLANTYNE

Hon. C. C. Ballantyne, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, is contesting his first election in St. George's St. Lawrence (Montreal). He was born at Colquhoun, Ont., the year of Confederation. He entered upon a business career in Montreal at an early age, and at present is head of the Sherwin-Williams Paint Co. He is a past president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association and was an active member of the Montreal Harbour Board.



HON. FRANK COCHRANE

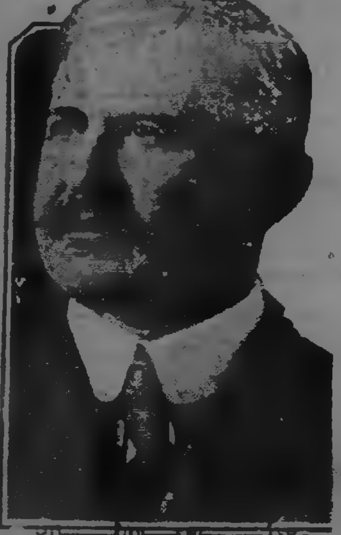
Hon. Frank Cochrane, who is a Minister without portfolio in the Union Government, is contesting the riding of Temiskaming. He is one of the men the late Sir James Whitney discovered and became Minister of Lands and Mines for Ontario in 1905. This position he retained until the formation of the Borden Government in 1911 when he went to Ottawa as Minister of Railways, a portfolio he held until Union Government was formed. Mr. Cochrane was formerly a hardware merchant, is a Methodist and is 65 years old.

Hon. A. K. Maclean.

Hon. A. K. Maclean who has always been one of the strongest Liberals in the Dominion, is chairman of the Cabinet Committee on Reconstruction after the war. He is a well-known Halifax lawyer where he is running as Union Government candidate. He was an unsuccessful candidate for the Commons in 1900, was elected to the Nova Scotia Legislature in 1901; resigned and was elected to the Commons in 1904 and 1908: became Attorney General of Nova Scotia in 1900, and resigned his portfolio to enter the Commons in 1911. He is a Presbyterian, aged 48.

HON. HUGH GUTHRIE

Hon. Hugh Guthrie, Solicitor General, who is contesting South Wellington, was the first Liberal to make the break with Sir Wilfrid on the question of conscription. He entered the Commons in 1900, and was re-elected in 1904, 1908, and 1911. He was chairman of the Railway Committee in the Commons for a while. His home is at Guelph. He is a lawyer, a Presbyterian, and is 51 years old.

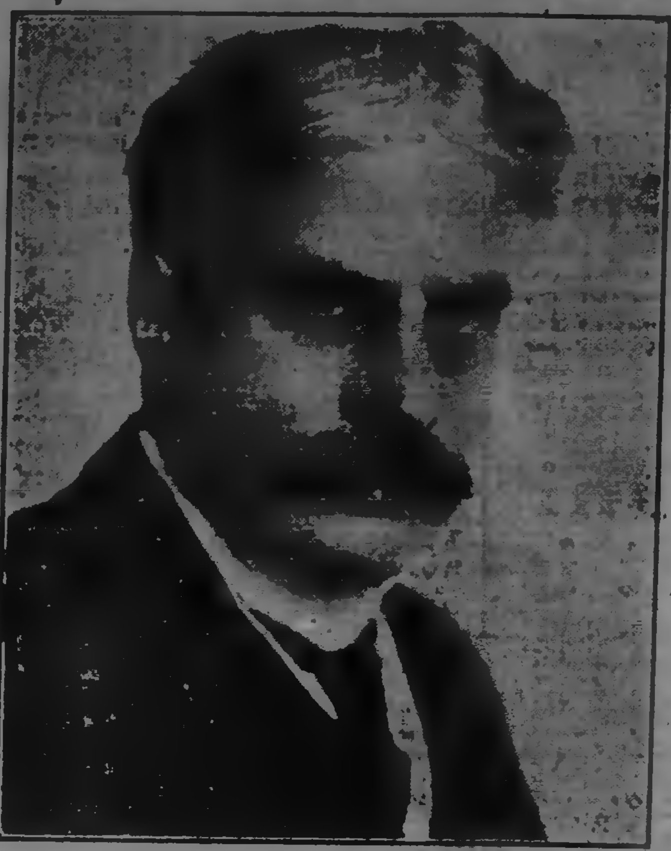


SIR EDWARD KEMP

Sir Edward Kemp, Minister of Militia Overseas, is Union candidate in East Toronto. He was first elected to the Commons in 1900 and re-elected in 1904. In 1908 he was defeated but came back with a big majority in 1911. He was first a Minister without portfolio in the Borden cabinet and in 1915 was appointed head of the War Purchasing Commission where his business ability made his work a marked success. He was Minister of Militia after Sir Sam Hughes' resignation until the formation of the Union Government. He was knighted in 1917, is 59 years of age, and is a Methodist.

HON. PIERRE E. BLONDIN

Col. P. E. Blondin, Postmaster General, at present serving overseas. He vainly tried to stir up his countrymen in Quebec to greater war efforts. His attempts to form a fighting battalion proved futile, though he went overseas with a few hundred men. He made his first entrance into the Commons in 1908 and was re-elected in 1911. He served as Deputy Speaker, was Minister of Inland Revenue, Secretary of State and later Postmaster General. He offered to resign when going into active service, but his resignation was refused. Col. Blondin is Union candidate in Laurier-Outremont (Montreal).



RLBorden.

Men and Women of Canada

DO YOU realize the momentous duty, the tremendous opportunity your vote places upon you on Monday, December the seventeenth, nineteen hundred and seventeen? Everything is at stake—everything that your forefathers have fought for—everything that you have lived for—every good thing you have hoped for will stand or fall as you vote on December the seventeenth.

This is not an Election
It is a Battle with the Hun

Whose cause will be injured WHEN you cast your vote for the Unionist Candidate?—The Kaiser's.

Whose cause will be supported WHEN you cast your vote for the Unionist Candidate---Canada's and the Allies.

Whose cause will be injured IF you cast your vote for Laurier and Bourassa?—Canada's and the Allies.

Whose cause will be supported IF you cast your vote for Laurier and Bourassa—The Kaiser's

Never before in the history of this great Dominion has such a terrible crisis appeared, and yet it is called an election, and some electors appear not to understand its awful import. Union Government, formed of representative men, both Liberal and Conservative, has realized that in this crisis party affiliation must be cast aside and every energy expended to win the war. One hundred thousand reinforcements are desperately needed by our men in France. Union Government is pledged to raise them under the just provisions of the Military Service Act, 1917.

YOUR DUTY IS CLEAR

Support Union Government

Bourassa has joined forces with Laurier as he knows that the Laurier policy can only mean one thing---QUIT---take Canada out of the war---break our pledge to the brave boys in France---drag Canada's fair name in the mud of world opinion---and clear the road for the Kaiser.

Shall Quebec Force Her Will on Canada?

Quebec, who has spurned her duty to Canada in the war, made Conscription necessary. Had the French-Canadian done his duty under the voluntary system of recruiting, the Military Service Act, 1917, would not be in force today.

Are our boys in France and Flanders fighting for the liberties of all the people in Canada, or only for part of the people?

Shall Union Government be returned to power to enforce impartially the Military Service Act and procure the 100,000 reinforcements from ALL of Canada, making each province do its full duty, or shall Laurier and Bourassa annul the Military Service Act?

It rests with you---you have the vote for the Boys---or the Kaiser

"Shrapnel Corners" and Its Heroes

"SHRAPNEL CORNERS." Assuredly the very name is a reminder of the war. Yet thousands of people pass and repass it daily seemingly without a thought of what it has meant or of what it still involves. Is it thoughtlessness? Or is it not an awkward proof of the cynical claim of the Hun that in wartime one gets accustomed to tell and ruthless things and that humanity hardens?

For "Shrapnel Corner" to the reflecting person is one of the saddest peeps in Toronto, though, oddly enough, actually one of the cheeriest. It is the name that has stuck, some day when war is over it may be even historic, to the corner of Yonge and College streets. Here on four or five park benches may be seen every afternoon about thirty or forty returned wounded men from the Central Military Hospital close by. Maimed and be-crutched for the most part, all limping or with an armless sleeve, they are usually as merry and chattering as so many monkeys, whiling away their convalescence.

Of course none of the severer cases come to public view. Up in the top ward of that dull red brick building there are sadder things than one in ten thousand of those who pass can fancy. There are in all 150 cases at the hospital, and there are about 100 outdoor cases. Any artificial limb case is treated at North Toronto, so that even these College street cases are not the reflection of the worst war has brought the world.

But the boys are our best exemplification at this enormous distance of the indomitable cheerfulness which has added Canada's quota to the noble traditions of the British army. Wet or fine, storm or sunshine, these wounded boys never seem to stop smiling. What they do at meal times can only be guessed. If they are not smiling they are smoking. These young heroes seem to find in pipe or cigarette the recollected comfort "My Lady Nicotine" brought them in the vile mud of a Flanders field or possibly even of the solace it gave when after their wound the fumes carried away the black depression of the nightmare of the trenches. For is it not as true to-day, in spite of subterranean warfare, as of Waterloo, that

"This mass of living valor, rolling on the foe,
And burning with high hope, shall moulder cold and low?"

No one of them speaks willingly of what is past. Their one desire is to forget, to pass the whole war memory into the background of the mind, intentionally to "disremember." Doctors and nurses encourage this, for thought only retards recovery. What they dearly like is the cheery greeting of the passerby, the "How do you dos" and the "How's the leg?" All of them are still boys in years. Some of them are big babies yet—hero-babies.

One lost his leg at Moque Farm, in Belgium; a year ago. He spent the summer at the Thousand Islands and came back to the hospital on the anniversary of the wounding. Another, a French-Canadian, delighted to find someone who could speak to him in French, called a comrade from Three Rivers to prove that he had lost a little more leg! Then both laughed loud and long. These fellows seemed to love to tease each other. The mocking spirit of France has not left this old race. That is what is helping to break the Hun's heart.

There are very few cases of arm amputation. Arm and shoulder wounds seem more amenable to treatment today. One man from near Winnipeg was, however, as pleased as Punch because he had only lost the left arm. Now he is sure of getting back into work when he is discharged. So it runs—this marvelous optimism of the Canadian soldier.

But they observe things, too, these boys. "We don't get so many people to notice us now as a few months ago," said one of them, half-regretfully. Are we, too, in loyal Toronto getting a bit war-weary and weary of war work? There used to be many more invitations for these boys to motor rides and to evenings at homes than now, it appears. They miss it, for they do not differ, these modest heroes, from those of an older but less happy time, which Goldsmith has told us of in "The Deserted Village," when at the minister's home.

"The broken soldier, kindly bade to stay,
Sat by his fire and talked the night away;
Wept o'er his wounds, or, tales of sorrow done,
Shouldered his crutch and showed how fields are won."

This and much more of heroism, of true nobility, of patience, and of all that the consecration of sacrifice means, these boys can tell, and teach if you seek it at any of the military hospitals in the Province. But it beckons to you most of all in Toronto at "Shrapnel Corners."

Punches From Punch.

The following from Punch has something very appropriate for Canada just at present: "Capt. N. Bernier, who has just returned to Quebec, reports that the Eskimos had not heard of the war. We should be the last to worry Lord Northcliffe at present, but it certainly looks as if the Circulation Manager of The Daily Mail has been slacking."

Punch has also found a flaw, above all, in some of our French in Canada. It almost justifies the claim of Quebec in calling it "Francais Torontien," that little and nastiest of reflections on Toronto's scholarship. Punch says, quoting from a Canadian newspaper: "The name of France herself might well be altered to 'Glorieux (Glorieuse) France.'" and then, with the sting in the tail, the Old London Joker adds: "Vive le (la) France."

LAURIERITES ARE NOT LIBERALS

Today Canada is standing at the crossroads of her destiny. Before her is the narrow track of sacrifice and self-denial that leads to final victory, while all the other broad roads that converge at this point lead through the bogs of sluggishness along the easy path of self-interest and self-indulgence to the betrayal of the men overseas and to national dishonor.

NO POLITICAL SOPHISTRY CAN CAMOUFLAGE THE CONTEST WHICH WILL BE DECIDED ON DECEMBER 17.

The Laurier campaigners are leading a double attack: first, on Sir Robert Borden and those of his colleagues who have remained in office since 1911, and, secondly, on those Liberals who have set country before party and have made a Union Government possible.

Both of these attacks are hypocritical and unjust.

The men who are now assailing Sir Robert Borden voted a little more than a year ago to continue his Cabinet in office. But in attacking the late Government they are breaking their lances against a bogey of their own fashioning.

THE BORDEN GOVERNMENT HAS PASSED AWAY.

The Borden Government is dead. It passed away on the day on which the Union Government was created. Its failures and its performances are beyond the critic's range.

The Borden Government will be judged at the bar of public opinion when the personal and political animosities it has aroused have grown cold in the ashes of history.

Again, in maligning the men who, though still holding Liberal views, have agreed to sink party differences until final victory has been achieved, the Laurier party is stabbing in the back those with whom it has taken counsel for many years and through whose support the Liberal party has maintained its virility.

Men who know Calder and Ballantyne and Rowell and Sifton will laugh at the accusations of self-seeking for political or personal advantage which have been freely levelled against them. These men today are as strongly Liberal as they were when they opposed the late Government with all the skill, all the determination and all the ability at their command.

No attempt has ever been made to read these men out of the Liberal party. They are still Liberals. They are not Laurierites.

The dictators of the Laurier campaign complain because the number of women who will be permitted to exercise the franchise is limited. Yet Sir Wilfrid Laurier, speaking in the House of Commons last session, declared that he was not in favor of extending the franchise to all women in the Dominion, preferring that only the women living in those provinces in which the franchise had already been granted to their sex should be permitted to vote at a Federal election.

Such action would have debarred half the women in Canada from voting. Not a woman in the Province of Quebec could have gone to the polls.

The present limited franchise may, and does no doubt, work a hardship on some loyal women; but it is based on National Service, and no more equitable yardstick of patriotism has yet been discovered.

BROWN VELVET MOST MODISH

Care Must Be Used by the Buyer, However, to Select Just the Right Shade.

If you are planning a velvet frock or a velvet tailor for this winter, by all means have it brown, urges a fashion authority. Brown velvet is just now the ne plus ultra in modishness. But be careful to select the right brown.

Maryland brown is the shade of shades, according to Paris. In America this color is dubbed tobacco brown and Paris has named it Maryland brown after a cheap grade of cigarettes sometimes called "coachman's food." In velvet, however, Maryland Brown is an exclusive shade, and some of the big couturiers are turning out stunning suits and dresses of brown velvet.

Copper brown is liked also, and in the yellow shades, gold, canary, mandarin and banana are favored. Evening frocks of banana tulle or satin have touches of black in strong contrast to the pale yellow of the material.

Tongue None Dare Utter.

Ukrainian differs from Great Russian fully as much as Dutch does from German. In fact, the highest learned body in the Russian Empire, the Petrograd Imperial Academy, admitted a few years ago that the Ukrianians possessed a distinct language and culture of their own, says T. Lothrop Stoddard in the Century. That, however, was not the Russian Government's view of the matter. "There never has been, is not and never will be an Ukrianian language or nationality," declared a Russian Minister of State in 1863, and this was merely the formal expression of what generations of Russian bureaucrats had already considered as axiomatic.

Belgian Guillotined.

A Belgian named Jean Roose, who with two accomplices, murdered and robbed one of his countrymen, was executed in Paris recently. This is the first time since the war began that the guillotine has been used in Paris.

NEW WINNIPEG TRAIN.

Travel between Eastern and Western Canada is always heavy in winter months, particularly December with its holiday season. To meet the requirements of the public, therefore, a special daily service between Toronto, Winnipeg and Edmonton is announced by the Canadian Northern Railway; Westbound, Dec. 3rd to Jan. 2nd, 1918 only; Eastbound, Dec. 1st to Jan. 5, 1918 only. Thereafter regular tri-weekly service between Toronto and Winnipeg will be resumed. Service between Edmonton, Vancouver remains tri-weekly as at present, through connections being made by leaving Toronto Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. For further particulars see Time Table Folders, or apply to Thos. Mark, town agent.

Be Orderly.

Orderliness, of course, is the mother of convenience. A place for everything and everything in its place is the principle from which is evolved the science of easy housekeeping. The homely saying, "Make your brains save your heels," is well worth heeding. Every housekeeper owes it to herself and her family to practice intelligent methods and convenient arrangement.

Things forgotten consume a vast amount of time and labor. As an aid to memory the memorandum pad is invaluable. On it one may jot down engagements for weeks ahead. The morning the painter is due, the day the carpenter comes, will find one well prepared if one has noted the engagement beforehand.

A desk calendar arranged like a pad may be bought for 25 cents; also is a great help in keeping order in the house.

Can Pick Their Wives.

Sir Sam Hughes expressed himself with his customary candor when asked his opinion concerning the organization that is proposed in London for marrying English girls to Canadian soldiers.

"As a part of war organization," he said, "it is an absurdity. It is merely one of the many fads developed by weak people, who wish to be considered as doing something in the war. Why Canada should be burdened with a lot of extra women to maintain just now or why soldiers should be helped to pick wives passes comprehension. Since the V. A. D.'s are wound up, this new fad seems to have developed.

"I don't wish to be misunderstood," said Sir Sam. "Many of the English girls would make admirable wives for anyone, even for Canadian soldiers, but all this kind of thing should be left to the individuals themselves. I have never been afraid to trust in the Canadian soldier to shoot, to fight, and to conduct himself as a gentleman, and I should have no hesitation whatever in trusting him without the aid of any tuft-hunting society to pick for himself a good wife in England or elsewhere."

Richard the Hunchback.

Of all the kings of England perhaps Richard, the hunchback, has the most sinister reputation, his only rival being the crafty John. He died on Bosworth field fighting for the crown he had gained by murder. It is a matter of history as well as of Shakespeare—not always the same thing—that the tide of success turned against Richard when Lord Stanley took himself and his men from his side to that of Richmond. When hard pressed Richard cried: "I am king of England! I will not budge an inch." Then, being overwhelmed, he died, crying: "Treason! Treason!"

CAPT. BURNHAM'S ADDRESS

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

Election-day is December 17th. Its nearness admits of no further delay on the part of candidates in formally addressing you. It was hoped that political parties in West Peterborough might unite, as the members of the Borden Union Administration have done, in its support. But since the Liberal Convention has met and chosen its standard-bearer, who has not declared himself to be a supporter of the Borden Union Administration, it becomes necessary for me, without more, to solicit your suffrages. At the convention of the Conservatives of West Peterborough, duly assembled, I was chosen as their candidate to support Sir Robert Borden and his Administration. The Prime Minister has formed a Union Administration, composed of Conservative, Liberal and Labour representatives, to the end that he may the more fully and surely carry in a spirit of national unity and co-operation Canada's share in the war to a successful conclusion.

I pledge myself, therefore, with that same spirit of unity and co-operation, to support the Borden Union Administration and its policies, and I earnestly and respectfully solicit your votes and support accordingly. This is no ordinary political campaign, and it is hoped that all well-wishers of the Borden Union Administration will make every effort to secure the return of its supporters.

I have the honour to remain,

Yours truly,
J. H. BURNHAM.

WOMEN'S PARAMOUNT DUTY

To Vote for Union Government and so Extend a Helping Hand to Their Friends in the Trenches.

On December 17th, many thousands of Canadian women will for the first time have the privilege of voting in a Federal election. It is of dramatic significance, that in this, their first election, the future and honor of their country are at stake. It is the most supreme opportunity whereby the voter may show his or her fitness for citizenship, that has ever occurred in the history of Canada. No issue of such tragic importance has previously arisen in this land, as that which will be decided at the polls on December 17th. This election will decide whether the Canadians are a heroic people, or a rabble of ingrates and quitters.

As election day draws near, the hand of the enemy conspirator grows bolder and more active; and it is becoming more and more obvious that patriotic Canadians must look to the women-voters to save their country from dishonor and disgrace. If the women fail in their duty, then God help Canada—she cannot help herself.

This journal speaks with a full sense of the meaning and responsibility of its words when it asserts that Canada is face to face with a vast pro-German pacifist conspiracy to upset patriotic government in this country, and to destroy it body and soul. To the sorrow of thousands of his former supporters, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, an aged and deluded man, has become the tool and figurehead of this conspiracy. He may not realize it himself, but the Hidden Hand which is trying to thrust him into power and use his weakness for its own ends is the Hand of Potsdam, of the predatory German Government.

Germany's reptile diplomacy uses many agencies in many lands, and the most important agency that it is today using on Canadian soil is the Roman Catholic Church. The Vatican presented a spectacle of supine cowardice when Catholic Belgium was ruined. It feared Germany too much to effectively protest when Belgian men were slain, despoiled, and enslaved, Belgian women outraged, and Belgian children mutilated. But the Vatican is apparently using all its influence to secure a peace satisfactory to Germany.

We attach the religious faith of no one! But this is not a question of faith, but of insidious political policy. Countless Roman Catholics are bitterly humiliated because their Church refused to act as the protector of the weak, but has rather chosen to serve as the agent of the ruthless and strong.

Lamentable as the fact is, it is nevertheless a fact to be faced. As a consequence we find Roman Catholic churches in Canada head centres of activity in power those whose policies aim at the withdrawal of Canada from the war, the desertion of our soldiers at the front, and the betrayal of Great Britain.

By what promises and devices the Kaiser's Government has secured the support of the Roman Catholic Church, is not wholly clear. He has promised to restore the temporal power of the Pope in Europe; and if victorious to extend her influence in South America. It is altogether probable that he has also promised his aid in extending the powers the Church now enjoys in the Province of Quebec to all Canada. Already we have had during the past summer, the spectacle of Cardinal Begin setting up his authority against that of the Government of Canada, and counselling disobedience in the matter of conscription.

The women of Canada are religious by nature. They are the backbone of our churches. Let them remember what is at stake!

Again, there are those who will tell you that it is nonsense for Canadians to fear a German victory; that Canada would be safe in any event. Such is not the view held by President Wilson and his predecessors at the White House, Mr. Taft and Colonel Roosevelt. If such men are convinced that a German victory would imperil a great country like the United States, what are the perils which a young country like Canada must face? A rich land, with great naval bases on two oceans, with enormous undeveloped resources, with everything that could tempt a predatory foe! Suppose France was defeated and compelled to cede her colonies as the price of retaining the semblance of her nationality! Germany's first demand would be for the French colony of St. Pierre-Miquelon, which she would organize as a strong naval base for operations against Canada and New England. Those who tell you Canada has nothing to fear from Germany are deceivers or people who live in a fool's paradise.

Let no one think that German influences are not at work in Canada. Can it be supposed that the enemy intriguers who have for three years been actively conspiring in Argentina, Brazil, Mexico,—not to mention the United States, — have been content to let Canada alone. No! The Hidden Hand of Germany has been at work, and is now at work in every constituency of Canada, to defeat Union Government, and to paralyze Canada's arm in continuing the war. In Quebec, where most of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's candidates are pro-German, where opposition to conscription has not stopped short of murder-plots, this fact is obvious. What is true of Quebec is true of every Province, but the Hidden Hand is elsewhere more insidiously disguised.

Canada's soldiers have made a record for valor in this conflict that has not been surpassed in the entire annals of war. That is admitted by German generals themselves, and it is one of the reasons why Germany is anxious that Canada should be jockeyed out of the war. But there are greater reasons! Germany wants to be able to advertise to her own people that Britain's greatest colony has withdrawn her support from the Motherland! The moral effect of that would be stupendous! Germany also desires that the Canadian troops which have fought so nobly, and endured so much, should be humiliated and disheartened by the knowledge that their fellow countrymen and fellow country-women had deserted them in the hour of trial. It is for the mothers, wives and sisters of these soldiers to say whether Germany's hopes shall be gratified.

Women,—the mothers of mankind,—by their very nature, love peace. They are peculiarly susceptible to pacific appeals. But let it be clearly understood that the kind of peace Germany wants, and which the Vatican is trying to promote wherever its influence extends, would not be a real peace. Every German junker and every German general speaks of this war as but a preparation for a greater war to come. This means that if Germany is not substantially defeated now the little toddler, clinging to his mother's skirts today, will have to take up arms before he attains full manhood to defend his mother and sisters from the Hun. The pacifist of today is the advance agent of future wars.

Germany can only be defeated by sacrifice and stern effort on the part of every fraction of the Western nations. Union Government was formed, and is pledged, to carry out such an effort. Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his candidates exalt the traitor and the slacker and contemn the soldier. It is for the womenfolk of the soldier to give them their answer at the polls.

Every woman who has a vote and fails to use it to support Union Government is herself a slacker. She will be as one who deserts the living soldiers, and forgets the sacrifices of the dead. If she fails to realize that the future of Canada is at stake, and the nation in peril, she is unworthy of the trust imposed on her in giving her the ballot.

Canada is menaced by open foes in Europe and insidious foes at home. To vote for Union Government is the woman's paramount duty, the duty of the hour.

Military Voters' Act, 1917

To the Editor of The Review:

Sir:

As I have had so many enquiries as to the soldiers' vote, will you please allow me through your columns to state for the benefit of all enquirers what the law is on this subject? It is as follows:

The returned and discharged soldiers and nurses, as well as all persons, male or female, that have enlisted or enrolled or are called out for and placed on active service in the C. E. F., the Canadian Navy Militia Volunteer Reserves, Air Service and Motor Boat Patrol, whether of age or not, including Indians, are all entitled to vote.

Soldiers and nurses in uniform vote under the military regulations wherever they may be.

Discharged soldiers can vote any place on producing their discharge papers and making oath that they are the persons named therein.

The above need not be on the Voters' List, they may Vote whether on or not, wherever they happen to be on Polling Day.

Yours truly,
JAS. GUISE-BAGLEY.

R. R. HALL'S ADDRESS

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST PETERBOROUGH

I have the honor to accept the unamious nomination of the Liberal Party to contest the election as a Candidate to represent the people of West Peterborough in the House of Commons.

MASSES REQUIRE JUSTICE

Now is the time in the history of this country when we should be guided by true Liberal principles and stand by the masses as against the classes; stand by the people who earn their bread by the sweat of their brow and against the classes who exact unjust profits and extortionate tolls out of even the very necessities of life.

WAR POLICY

Today we are engaged in a great War with the Germanic powers in defence of Canada and the Empire. In the great struggle is involved the very existence of the freedom and liberty of mankind.

Our duty is plain. Our course is clear. We must prepare for any sacrifice of blood and treasure. We must fight Germany until we secure a just and a lasting peace. In this resolve all Canadians are united from Lake Champlain to the North Pole and from our furthest East to our furthest West.

Such being our Nation's resolution I pledge myself to support any effective war measure no matter from what source it may come. We must give immediate and constant support to our noble Canadian armies who have covered themselves with glory. We must support them with men. We must feed them. The rich and poor alike must serve. Our only difference is in how to serve but serve we will.

FOOD PRODUCTION

Great Britain has appealed to Canada to send her 300,000,000 bushels of wheat to feed her teeming millions and those of Italy and of France.

This enormous quantity of wheat would feed 40,000,000 people for a whole year. This shows our Allies want food.

To this appeal the Borden Rowell Government only answers, eatless, slay and eat the calf and the lamb and prepare for meatless days.

Let the Government encourage the Farmer to produce more. Give him agricultural implements duty free. Supply him with suitable labor on fair terms to till the soil. Use our banks and Loan Companies to lend him money on fair and easy terms of payment to assist in every possible way to plant and produce food stuffs. Supply the farmer with steam or gasoline tractors to enable one man to do the work of five. Shield us from the profiteer who plunders the farmer and robs the consumer, makes a profit of a million a year and supports Sir Robert Borden and his hypnotizer Sir Joseph Flavelle.

A forward policy on these lines would be a double blessing. It would reduce the cost of living at home and would help supply the necessities of our Allies overseas.

Remember one single North West farmer produces 2000 bushels of wheat per year when well directed and equipped. 100,000 men would produce 200,000,000 bushels of wheat. Those already on the ground in the North West properly equipped and manned could produce 200,000,000 bushels more.

I pledge myself, if elected, to support prompt and immediate efforts to reduce the high cost of living.

BORDEN DISCRIMINATES AGAINST ENGLAND

Since the war began the Borden Government imposed an increased duty of 5 per cent. on British made goods entering Canada. This should be removed at once. Our great Mother of Nations has troubles enough without the Borden Government thus increasing them.

PROFITEERS AND SOLDIERS

The profits made by War Profiteers should be investigated. The profiteer should be made to disgorge his excessive profits to be used to increase the pay of our soldiers and to increase the pensions or allowances to our soldiers, their mothers, wives, sisters and dependents. None of them should ever be subjected to the indignity of "cold charity" by this grateful Nation on whose behalf they have suffered or died.

NO CONFIDENCE IN BORDEN

Sir Robert Borden has been for six years and is now the Prime Minister of this Country. Its chief head and front with full power to choose and remove his Ministers. He is appealing to this Country under an assumed name, but the policies and methods of his Government remain.

I cannot stop to repeat the well known charges of grafting proved on sworn testimony from the mouths of unwilling witnesses respecting the purchase of motors, of horses, of binoculars, of bandages, of drugs, of boots, of shells of gauze fuse and of all the implements of war

These unseemly transactions have taken place under the nose of Sir Robert Borden who now seeks to stifle and conceal further investigation with the hollow pretense of so called Union Government which in no sense whatever represents true believers in the principles of justice, truth and liberalism.

BORDEN CONDEMNED FOR SUPPLYING DEFECTIVE AMMUNITION

I have no confidence whatever in Sir Robert Borden who supplied our troops for many months with the Ross Rifle and defective ammunition which he must have known would jam and become a useless weapon after our Canadian boys had nobly entered the battle. The Ross Rifle was used by our troops at the six battles of St. Julien, of Givenchy, of Festubert, of St. Floi, of Zillebeke and of Sanctuary Wood. In each battle the rifle jammed and many a Canadian soldier was needlessly killed or wounded and some of them today languish in German prisons justly cursing the Borden Government without a chance of voting against it.

GRAFTERS

We must destroy the parasite, the profiteer, the grafter and camp follower, who are our worst enemies and fight our common foe with all the resources at our command.

TO OUR NOBLE WOMEN

I appeal to the women of this Riding who are casting their vote for the first time to act on the pure impulse of your heart alone and vote according to the dictates of your own conscience. My heart goes out in sympathy for you in these anxious times. I know your "beloved is white and ruddy; the chiefest among ten thousand. His countenance is as Lebanon, excellent as the cedars" and by him and his I pledge myself to stand.

UNITY OF ACTION AND SENTIMENT

Let us unite our people in this Great War as the armies of Great Britain and of France are united, marching and fighting side by side, the parents and guardians of Freedom and Justice.

"With firmness in the right as God gives us to see the right" I appeal to you fellow electors to press on to finish the great war in which we are engaged "to bind up the nation's wounds, to care for him who shall have borne the battle, his widow and the orphan to do all which we may achieve and cherish a just and a lasting peace with all nations."

For these reasons I appeal to you my fellow electors for your vote and influence in the pending election.

Your Obedient Servant.

R. R. HALL.

Progress.

"Are you trying to economize?

"Yes. I've actually gotten on s far that I've quit telling people wha to do and am going without a fe things myself."

Beaux Plentiful.

Mary—Has your sweetheart bee ordered to camp?"

Jane—Yes; now I must fall bac on my reserves.

NO TROOPS TRANSFERRED FROM RUSSIAN FRONT DURING TRUCE

Kaiser and the Bolsheviki Finally Agree on Terms of Armistice Which is to Last Until January 15, 1918.

Petrograd, Dec. 17.—Announcement was made by the Bolsheviki official news agency that Russia and Germany had agreed upon the terms of an armistice.

The Russian delegates constituting the armistice committee at Brest-Litovsk have advised the Bolsheviki authorities at the Smolny Institute that an agreement was reached with the Germans on Friday concerning the transfer of troops. It was to this effect:

"Both sides signing this agreement bind themselves until Dec. 30, 1917, (Jan. 12, 1918) not to carry on operative military transfers on the front from the Baltic to the Black Sea, except such transfers as were already begun up to the moment of signing this agreement."

Five Signatories.

Berlin, via London, Dec. 17.—An armistice agreement between the Bolsheviki Government in Russia and the Teutonic allies was signed at Brest-Litovsk, Saturday, according to an official communication issued today. Russia, Germany, Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria and Turkey are signatories of the agreement.

The communication says the armistice begins at noon, Dec. 17, and remains in force until January 14, 1918. Unless seven days' notice is given it continues in force automatically. It extends to all the land, air and naval forces of the common fronts. According to clause 9 of the treaty, peace negotiating are to begin immediately after the signing of an armistice.

Peace Negotiations Next.

Petrograd, Dec. 17.—Leon Trotsky, the Bolsheviki foreign minister, declared at a meeting of the Petrograd council of soldiers' and workmen's delegates last night that peace negotiations would be begun immediately after the armistice had been signed. The foreign minister announced that for a time a break in the negotiations seemed imminent because Gen. Hoffman, the German negotiator, insisted on the right to transfer troops in small units. The German commander finally accepted the Russian formula.

"We can't and won't aid militarism in any way," M. Trotsky said. "This question of transferring troops was most fundamental. I think our formula is considered by our allies to be satisfactory."

SOLDIERS' VOTE MAY DECIDE RESULT OF ELECTION TODAY

There are 260,000 of These to be Counted and Distributed Among Different Constituencies.

Ottawa, Dec. 17.—It is estimated here that upwards of two million votes will be polled in the approaching election contest, as against about 1,250,000 in 1911. Of the total vote polled, about 260,000 will be those of soldiers. As the result of the soldiers' vote will not be made known until about thirty days from today will be seen that today's results, indicating the trend of the earlier vote, will represent only about seven-eighths of the whole voice of the electorate. So that many results today will be upset at the New Year. In 1911 the Government's popular majority was about 45,000. The soldiers' vote, which will still remain to be counted after today's results have been made known, is thus about six times the total popular vote in 1911.

Soldiers May Change Many Results.

It is estimated that, outside the Province of Quebec, there have been about an average of 1,500 soldiers enlisted in every constituency of the Dominion. Government advices from the other side are to the effect that sentiment in the ranks of the men, both in England and overseas, indicates that a very heavy vote will be polled for the Union Government, so that in many seats where tonight there may appear a majority for the Laurierites, the results will be changed when the soldiers' votes are counted and allocated 30 days hence.

Comfortable Majority Expected.

However, indications on the eve of the polling day are to the effect that the Government will be returned by a comfortable majority, even without the soldiers' votes.

Reports at Unionist headquarters here are to the effect that a minimu mof six and a maximum of twelve is all that the Laurierites may hope to get out of Ontario. Laurierites claim an even break in the Maritimes, but advices at Union headquarters are to the effect that Union will do better than that.

NEUTRAL VESSELS WERE SUNK BY GERMAN CRAFT

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Loudon, Dec. 17.—Two neutral merchant vessels and a trawler were sunk off Tyne on Dec. 12 by German destroyers, Thomas J. Macnamara, financial secretary to the Admiralty, announced in the House of Commons today.

25 DEGREFS BELOW ZERO RECORDED SUNDAY MORNING

The temperature took a decided drop, and early Sunday morning had reached 25 degrees below zero as its low point. In the morning it began to rise. By church time it had risen to 10 below, and by noon to zero. The winter has set in unusually early and also with exceptionally severe weather.

The following are the lowest figuser reached in some recent winters:

The coldest day last winter was Jan. 27 with 21 degrees below.

Feb. 24, 1916, was the coldest day of that year with 18 below.

Twenty-eight degrees below was registered Jan. 30, 1915, as the lowest.

Twenty-nine below was the low point Dec. 26, 1914.

January 13, 1914, gave us 32 below. This was the coldest day in recent years, but is not a record.

The preceding winter gave 17 below on Feb. 17, and 1912 28 below on Jan. 13.

1911 gave 15 below, and 1910 26 below.

These figures refer to Peterborough and are official.—W. P.

BIG VOTE POLLED FINDS CANDIDATES CONFIDENT

Complete Returns by Lantern Display at the Review Tonight.

The fact that Canada is facing a critical hour, is reflected on the faces of hundreds of citizens today, as the ballots are being marked to decide the greatest question that has ever confronted the electors. On many faces, the enthusiasm and excitement of election day is revealed, while other citizens go about without giving the least suggestion of interest in the voting.

For the first time in the history of Canada, women are marking the Federal ballot. They are taking an active part in the proceedings in the polling booths and they are doing sentinel duty both inside and outside. Their part in the elections and the manner they are going about their duties is one of the studies of the day.

The voting will be heavy. Every man and woman qualified to vote was given the opportunity to do so. All the manufacturing concerns and all the big business houses gave their employes an extra hour at noon, and this had the result of giving the officials at the polling sub-divisions a busy time between 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. The De Laval employes had from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and the C. G. E. employes were off work from 12 o'clock noon till 2 p.m.

All manner of conveyances were pressed into service, but the runners were in the majority. Automobiles that had been practically scrapped were patched up and restored to running order for the day. The consequence was that some of these gasoline steeds took occasion to rest when on the way to the polls, and the occupants had to get out and walk.

Candidates Confident.

Both Capt. Burnham and Mr. Hall took a keen interest in the voting today and both candidates expressed themselves as satisfied with the way the vote was being brought out. Capt. Burnham expressed confidence that Union Government would be victorious in his own riding and in the country at large.

"It's just one of those guesses," said the Liberal candidate, "everythings look well. The vote is coming out well both in the city and the country."

Returns At The Review.

The returns from the polling subdivisions will be bulletined by The Review, as well as the returns for the whole of the Dominion. These returns will also be flashed on a large canvas by a powerful lantern as well as a large number of very fine views. The Review has arranged a quick and complete service for the citizens, and all are invited.

Early Voting in Toronto.

Toronto, Dec. 17.—Voting in the Dominion election here opened briskly and early in this city, and in some instances there were many men and some women waiting at the booths before the deputy returning officers and other officials arrived with their impedimenta at 6 a.m. The prospects are that this city and the province of Ontario as a whole will produce a record male vote today, in addition to a very heavy increase brought about by the soldiers' women vote. It is expected that the majority of the vote will be polled here before noon.

In the rural constituencies of Ontario it is thought that the vote will also be very heavy, though in some cases the roads are almost impassable owing to heavy snowdrifts. Motoring is out of the question in many localities, and all kinds of sleighing rigs have been pressed into the service.

From February 1 wholesale dealers in fresh fruits and vegetables must have licenses.

ELECTION RETURNS TONIGHT

The Review will announce the election returns tonight just as soon as reports are received. Complete arrangements have been made for the purpose. A lantern service has been secured, and the returns will be shown on a large screen on the wall of the Oriental Hotel building opposite The Review office.

The returns will cover the entire Dominion, and it is believed that before midnight it will be known just how the election has gone. Summaries of the results in the various provinces will also be given, and a detailed statement of the vote in the various polling sub-divisions in West Peterborough.

Besides the returns, The Review will show pictures of prominent public men, and will reproduce interesting war scenes. There will be no waiting between returns. The exhibition will be continuous, and the public are cordially invited to avail themselves of the opportunity to learn the result without delay.

Those who cannot come down town to see the lantern returns are invited to use the telephones in The Review office, at which the attendance will be constant. Call 435 or 189.

As usual, The Review will publish tomorrow full reports of the election results in all parts of the Dominion, with the latest Canadian Press comments on the various phases.

ALLIED POWERS TO RECOGNIZE BOLSHEVIKI

To Prevent Russia From Becoming a Mere German State.

RUSS. PRISONER RELEASED

Had Been Chosen To Represent Russian Powers at London.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Dec. 17.—London newspapers forecast that the Allies will recognize the de facto rule of the Bolsheviki in order to prevent Russia from passing under the political and economic heel of Germany.

This is along the lines of a statement made by Lord Robert Cecil, Minister of Blockade, in an interview with the Associated Press on Friday. A step in the reestablishment of relations with Russia may be seen in the report that Great Britain has decided to release the Russian Tchitcherin who is in prison in London as treasonous propaganda, is but who has been chosen by the Bolsheviki as ambassador to London. The Bolsheviki have now withdrawn their refusal to permit British civilians or couriers to leave Russia. Presumably the Bolsheviki will not insist on Tchitcherin occupying the post of ambassador and he will return to Russia immediately.

Washington, Dec. 17.—Information received here today among the neutral diplomats agrees with intimations from abroad that Germany is considering another offer of peace.

In the Province of Quebec, outside of Montreal Island, 9,486 subscribers contributed more than seventeen and a half million dollars to the Victory Loan.

PROTECTION IS ASKED FOR THE IMO SAILOR

Suspected German Spy Taken From Police Cell To Hospital.

COUNSEL COMES TO HIS AID

Claims That Johanson Has Been Harshly Treated By Authorities.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Halifax, Dec. 17.—The inquiry into the Imo-Mont Blanc collision was taken up again this morning. Before the evidence was resumed Mr. Burchell, counsel for the Imo, read an affidavit of his own, stating that he had been retained by the owners of the Imo and by the Norwegian consul to act on behalf of John Johanson, a Norwegian seaman, whom it was intended to call as a witness. The man had been in the hospital, but had been removed from there to the city police station as a prisoner, though suffering from injuries to his leg, arm and eye.

The affidavit was a lengthy one, and stated that eventually a New York physician had examined the man and found his injuries were dangerous and needed attention, Johanson being finally returned to the hospital.

Mr. Burchell applied for the protection of the court for Johanson. He felt the treatment of the man was instigated by persons desiring to injure him, and false and malicious statements calculated to injure him had been sent out from Halifax.

MOB IN MONTREAL ATTEMPT TO PREVENT WOMEN FROM VOTING

Police and Unionists Unite to Protect the Ladies—Soldiers Also Refused Ballots—Record Vote all Over Canada.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa Dec. 17.—Polling is actually taking place today in 199 Canadian constituencies, returning 202 members to the House of Commons. Twenty-nine acclamations and four deferred elections make up the 235 seats constituting the House. Generally, fair election weather prevails in all parts of Canada, though snow-drifted roads and pavements are everywhere. West of Manitoba is is milder and inclined to thaw, but in all eastern parts of the Dominion it is cold and bright. A very large vote is expected in all provinces.

Both the Government and the Opposition are expecting victory, but many people think the result may be indefinite till the soldiers' vote is known and applied.

Premier Sir Robert Borden will be here to receive the returns tonight. Sir Wilfrid Laurier is in Winnipeg, and most of the other leaders on both sides and the Cabinet Ministers are in their respective constituencies.

Trouble at Montreal.

Montreal, Dec. 17.—There was a tremendous rush and some congestion at the polling booths here today, caused to some extent by the women voters who turned out here, practically every woman entitled to vote exercising her franchise. In some constituencies late this morning there was organized obstruction to prevent the women from voting. Unionists, supported by the police, formed wedges to get the women into the polls. Deputy returning officers in some constituencies refused to put women's ballots in the boxes, claiming they had been challenged. It was 12 degrees below zero, and the voters who were kept out in the cold suffered severely. Soldiers under 21 were refused in some cases, although they are entitled under the law.

POLITICS CAUSES TROUBLE IN REV. R. G. PEEVER'S LONDON CHURCH

Former Peterborough Pastor Advised Congregation How to Vote and Several in Audience Walked Out—One Member Slaps Another.

A despatch from London says: Political feeling, which has been running high the past few weeks in this city continues strong on the eve of the elections, even though it was Sunday. Yesterday morning Union Government received support in several churches, and in one case the mention of politics produced a sensation. This was in the First Methodist, one of the largest churches of western Ontario. Rev R. G. Peever, who came here about six months ago from Peterborough, undertook to advise his congregation how to vote. One member who differed from him stated afterwards that many kept their seats because they were here before Dr. Peever, and they did not want the church to suffer. However others could not tolerate what they considered objectionable from the pulpit, and in the middle of his address half a dozen men left the church, also one lady, who walked from the front in protest. A prominent citizen who remained seated made a remark to another who was leaving, which provoked the latter to slap the other.

After the minister's remarks were finished the sensation of the morning was increased by a member of the congregation voicing his protest, saying that he had intended voting for Union Government, but that Dr. Peever's action had made him alter his decision.

Didn't Want Church Wrecked.

In the Askin Street Church, the pastor, of which, Rev. Dr. Dougall, had been quoted as favoring Union Government, the minister announced today that he had no intention to use the pulpit for political purposes. He made the explanation, he said, because a deputation had warned him not to refer to the elections, as they did not wish the church wrecked, which would certainly occur, they said, if he tried to tell the congregation how they should vote.

AIR FIGHTING FAVORS ALLIES

THREE HOSTILE MACHINES COME TO GRIEF IN RECENT ENGAGEMENT.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Dec. 17.—British war office statement on aerial operations issued last midnight reads: "Although the weather was fine Saturday a very high wind and a ground mist interferred with reconnaissance and artillery work. During several fights three hostile machines were driven down out of control. None of ours is missing.

Secretary Knight of the Dominion Great War Veterans' Association at Ottawa, says no political candidates have been endorsed by it.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, DECEMBER 17, 1917

SAVING COAL.

THE MUNICIPAL coal yard is practically defunct for the simple reason that it is impossible to lay in a stock. Every artifice known to the trade has been resorted to in vain. Money no longer counts in the acquisition of a supply of fuel. It is just as difficult, apparently, for a city, with practically unlimited means at its disposal, to buy coal as it is for the small dealer with no regular connection and limited credit.

There is practically no coal coming into the city, and the outlook for a further supply is not encouraging. Mining operations are being carried on under difficulties in the United States. The labor question is acute over there as well as in Canada, and the fixing of the price by the government of all coal at the mouth of the mine had the invariable result that follows such legislation—it limited the output.

There has been received in Peterborough so far this year several tons of coal less than was shipped in the preceding season. It is almost foolish to live in the hope that this deficiency can be made up further importation. There is only one way in which suffering can be avoided and that is by saving the fuel already on hand.

The churches of the city are well heated. No matter how low the mercury may drop, the temperature of the various places of worship is comfortable at all services, even though the members and adherents may make the cold weather an excuse for spending the Sabbath at their own firesides. It seems a sheer waste of fuel, however, to heat up to summer temperature an edifice which is never more than half filled during the winter months. If churches of the same denomination, wherever feasible, would double up and meet in the same building while the cold weather lasts, the saving in fuel would be considerable, and the laity naturally look to the churches to set the example in any measure designed to prevent general suffering.

FIXING FOOD PRICES.

DURING THE FRENCH revolution the revolutionary government fixed the price of foodstuffs. The result was that at the end of one and a half years many products entirely disappeared. No one bothered to produce, as there was no profit to be derived therefrom, and the government had to repeal the act. Just the moment prices are regulated downward, to reduce the cost of living to consumers, the balance of the economic machine is upset. Production begins to fall off.

"Food prices cannot be fixed arbitrarily so long as the basis of production is voluntary labor," says Professor James Mavor, of the University of Toronto.

Herbert Hoover, chief of the Food Administration of the United States, has guaranteed a minimum price for wheat. But he has not fixed prices generally; in fact, he has himself stated that fixing prices is not his business. He has refused absolutely to fix the price of meat. To do so would entail an endless chain of disturbances and reduce production of live stock, he has stated.

PROHIBITION IN THE UNITED STATES.

THE AMERICAN CONGRESS will take a vote this evening on the question of country-wide prohibition. The movement is growing. State after State has voted itself into the dry column until fully half the number of States and more than that proportion of the population are under sumptuary laws of their own enacting.

The American Congress has no authority to impose prohibition upon the country as a whole, as some of the Canadian temperance workers and newspapers—for their own ends, no doubt—claim that it has when they urge similar unconstitutional action upon the Federal Parliament of Canada. All that Congress can do is to pass a resolution adding a new article to the Federal constitution providing for nation-wide prohibition. Such a resolution must receive a two-thirds vote of the members of both branches of Congress before it becomes effective. It is then voted upon by the various States, and if endorsed by three-fourths or thirty-six States, the liquor traffic becomes outlawed by constitutional provision.

It is only three years since such a proposed amendment to the constitution was defeated by a few votes. This does not indicate that those who opposed it object to the principle of prohibition. They took the ground that prohibition was a matter which should be dealt with by the individual States without Federal interference, and so long as the majority of the people in any State favored the license law, their wishes should be respected. There are States in the American Union in which the hopes of the prohibitionists are dim. These States would be coerced into the dry column if such an amendment to the constitution as is now contemplated were adopted by the required majority.

The constitution of the United States is clear in the matter of making amendments or in changing any section of that document. In Canada such power on the part of the Federal authorities is lacking. It has never yet been decided just how our constitution, the B. N. A. Act, could either be expanded or abridged. At all events, it is conceded that the rights of the various provinces to control the liquor traffic is above question. So long as the majority in one province vote to remain wet, just so long will that province remain alone with a license law on its statutes.

The United States Supreme Court has just handed down a decision which is of interest to the temperance people of Canada. It is especially recommended to the notice of the individuals and the newspapers that are prohibitionists largely for political purposes. That court has decreed—and there is no appeal from the ruling, which becomes law at once and forever—that no citizen has a right to keep liquor for his personal use if a State prohibits it. This means, among other things, that when a State votes itself bone dry, the Federal authorities will step in and forbid the export of liquor to that State. The right of a State to prohibit a private citizen from keeping liquor in his possession, either in his private dwelling or in his garage, is thus clearly established. That being conceded the rest is easy.

The Dominion Parliament will prohibit the importation of liquor from a wet province to one where the use of liquor in any form as a beverage or the keeping of liquor for that purpose is illegal. The right of a province to go to that length in temperance legislation is conceded. How under the sun is a provincial legislature to be prevented from forbidding a man from keeping liquor in the house occupied by himself and his immediate family, when it exerts the same authority over the householder who keeps three or more boarders? What is dangerous for three or more transient guests or regular inmates of a house should be equally dangerous for one.

The importation of liquor into Ontario will continue so long as the Legislature permits its use under certain conditions and in certain places. It will be stopped by Federal action when that limited use is forbidden. So-called personal liberty should not be vouchsafed one man and denied another who may be compelled to open his door for the accommodation of strangers.

Within the past thirty years the United States has led the world, Canada included, in advanced temperance legislation. The reason is on the surface. The issue has not been kicked around the political arena as a football.

LLOYD GEORGE ON TRIAL.

OVER IN ENGLAND they have had no election since the beginning of the war, but they have had a change of Premiers and more than one shift in the various departments. While the war is progressing satisfactorily there is easy sledding for the leaders. When a reverse comes to any branch of the service or to the divisions on a particular front, there is immediately a demand for an investigation and for some official head. To appease public sentiment such demands are usually granted. The statesman in charge of a department is sacrificed out of consideration for the popular clamor.

Lloyd George, since he was appointed Premier one year ago, for months held his place as the hope of the Empire and the idol of the people. The tide has, however recently turned against him. The Northcliffe papers, once his most outspoken champions, are beginning to criticize his administration. Whether or not Lloyd George will be able again to silence his enemies remains to be seen. All will depend upon the success of the British arms within the next few weeks. Unless there is a change for the better, Lloyd George cannot hope to escape the fate of other Premiers who have been cast out when they failed to accomplish something that appeared humanly impossible of performance.

THE SPREAD OF RADICALISM.

IT MUST BE THE WAR that is responsible for the spread of radical ideas in other countries than Russia. In Toronto there is a growing demand for State ownership of all public utilities. That city has just decided to go into the meat business as the only means left by which prices can be regulated. There is a well-developed agitation that the city also take over the distribution of milk. Peterborough led the way in establishing a municipal coal yard and other cities are following.

In remote districts, as well as in those nearer the centres of civilization this radicalism is spreading. The Independent Labor Party, which has made large gains in membership during the last three months in the Island of Cape Breton, is out with a platform which includes equal suffrage for men and women at nineteen years of age, and direct legislation through the initiative, referendum and recall. It desires the abolition of the Senate and Legislative Council in order that there might be absolute direct legislation, and it insists upon old-age pensions for both sexes on reaching the age of sixty. Finally, it has inserted this plank in its platform: "In order to win the war and pay for the war and subsequent reconstruction, when peace has been declared, we demand that all public utilities including banks, railways, telegraph and telephone lines, mines, factories, dwellings other than those occupied by owners, lands other than those worked on by owners, be conscripted and placed at the disposal of the government for the benefit of the workers and the army."

That staid journal, the New York Post, commenting upon the above, raises its hands in what must be construed as an attitude of mild horror, and ejaculates, "And this is in Canada, not Russia."

Yes it is in Canada. Out West the people are of the same mind. The move portends a social revolution which no power on earth can avert. The coming changes may not be as radical as those demanded by the Labor Party of Cape Breton, but changes in the construction of the industrial system of the country are sure to come with the new order that will arise out of this war.

WHEN FOOD PRICES CAN BE FIXED

People in the cities all expected the price of potatoes to be fixed somewhere about $1.25 a bag. Potatoes last summer cost some farmers more than that to produce. There is a surplus in the country this year, of course, but what is the inducement for the farmer to go ahead marketing his potatoes if everything more he adds to his cost is going to put him further in the hole? He'd sooner feed his potatoes to the hogs and sell them as bacon. So there it is—unless you have slave labor you cannot successfully fix prices."

"But," people exclaim, "prices were fixed in Germany."

"Prices were fixed in Great Britain. Some prices were fixed in the United States. Why not in Canada?"

Those questions are hurled at Food Controller Hanna, doubtless, every day, and he must be tried out by now answering them.

In the first place price fixing did more harm than good in Germany and created enormous confusion. Further it necessitated an enormous amount of human machinery and an army of officials. Hundreds and hundreds of new regulations were passed, cancelled and repassed, following each other endlessly, and the complications multiplied so that no one knew where he was at. To lessen the cost of living the price of meat was fixed, and the farmers killed off their live stock, because grain was too expensive to feed. The net result of that was a decrease in the supply of live stock. But the complications were manifold.

In England, Baron Rhondda fixed the price of bread below the natural figure as based on the cost of wheat and flour, because bread is the staple food of the poor upon whom the living conditions imposed by the war press most cruelly. But the deficit is to be paid out of the national exchequer, that is, by the people as a whole out of taxes, and cheaper bread has cost Great Britain $200,000,000 to date.

Great Britain can fix prices because she is a small, thickly populated, close-knit, well organized country, with unanimous public spirit developed by centuries of tradition and by her immediate proximity to the actual scene of conflict.

Great Britain can fix prices because of her control over imports.

Great Britain can fix prices because conditions in the British Isles are more uniform and her transportation hauls are short.

But Great Britain can fix prices only upon the articles of prime necessity over which she can exercise effective control from producer to consumer.

"My policy, broadly speaking," said Baron Rhondda, the British Food Controller, "is to fix the prices of those articles of prime necessity over the supply of which I can obtain effective control at all stages from the producer down to the retailer. I have to see that the legitimate interests of food producers are safeguarded, and above all, to avoid as far as possible, action which may tend to curtail the necessary supplies."

"The danger of fixing prices for any commodity, said Baron Rhondda on another occasion, "is, of course, that the supply may cease. The general rule, therefore, should not be to fix prices unless the whole supply is controlled."

In cases where complete control may be had over a commodity, the Canadian Food Controller could also if necessary fix prices but not otherwise. In the case for example of winter caught fish in the Provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, the price to the fishermen has been fixed by agreement and the maximum profits of the middlemen have also been fixed so that the price to the consumer will be in direct proportion to the price actually paid to the fishermen. The authorities of each municipality have been empowered to regulate the retailer's "spread." This is a case where price-fixing is possible, but under our system of production, such cases are rare.

TODAY'S STORY

The successful spy is generally the least obvious person in the community he endangers, says A. Curtis Roth in the Saturday Evening Post. He may be a commercial traveller, a small tradesman a waiter, a mechanic or a wandersome bon vivant.

One of the most successful German spies operating from Saxony was an old Russian merchant who dealt in damaged laces and broken lots. He brought laces and embroideries from the manufacturers in Plauen and in St. Gall, Switzerland, and before the war had built up an excellent business in England. His business address was in Rotterdam, where his laces were warehoused pending shipment to English customers. When the war broke out the German foreign office detailed one of its agents to take over the supervision of the Russian's office in Rotterdam and employed the old merchant on English business. He made regular trips to England, and, I understand, garnered some very valuable information.

As this agent was typical of hundreds of other agents, it is worth while to describe his methods. He visited England on a Dutch passport, equipped with nothing more formidable than lace and embroidery samples and two cases of cigarettes. The cigarettes in one case contained, impregnated in their paper covering, the chemical out of which the Germans manufacture their new invisible ink. All more bulky messages were forwarded in this invisible ink. They were contained in commonplace business messages to the firm offices in Holland. The visible messages detailing English orders were written upon any sort of letter paper, and then the secret information was written across the apparent message. The merchant would soak a cigarette covering in a cup of water, the resulting fluid being the invisible ink, and would write the invisible message very lightly with a toothpick. These messages were developed by chemical treatment in Holland, and their purport sent by courier to the Dutch border whence they were telegraphed to Berlin.

A great deal of important information concerning the enemy is relayed in this way through commercial houses in Switzerland, Holland, Denmark and Sweden.

J. A. Ruddick, Canadian dairy and cold storage commissioner, has been invited to act on a commission for the refrigeration of food which is being organised in the United States.

"Is this son of yours adolescent?"

"Oh no, sir; he's just a little queer in the head."

"He's entered the Aviation Corps."

"Wanted a chance to rise quickly, I presume."

"I understand your servant has notified you that she is going to quit work."

"Not exactly," said Mrs. Crosslots. "She hasn't been working to speak of for some weeks. Now she has announced that she doesn't intend even to associate with us."

"A wise man may change his mind."

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum. "But a man sometimes gets credit for changing his mind when caution has caused him to shift his line of talk."

CHRISTMAS AND HOME MUSIC

"While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks by Night," is Still a Favorite—The Piano as a Home Maker.

The family gathered around the piano for the Christmas carols, hymns and songs, to accompany the dancing about of the little ones, the games such as Musical Chairs, Hot Coffee, Twirl the Trencher, is in the way of really enjoying the great festival. Without music even the merriest hearts find it hard going to make all experience the Christmas feeling.

Was it old Herrick, or was it George Herbert who sang:

The Shepherds sing,
And can I silent be?
My God, no song for Thee?

When all is over the Christmas Tree [illegible], the candles dying in their sockets, the bon-bons pulled, the candies eaten or pocketed, then comes the recollection of the, time that:—

"The Star rains its fire
As the beautiful sing
And the manger of Bethlehem
Shelters a King."

What better than to gather once more about the organ or piano and join in the sweet old strain: "While Shepherds watched their flocks by night?" And then with that music as a cradle-song to bed with joy in the heart, and a sweet flavor in the soul.

Of all the fine arts, music possesses this great advantage, this quality so important to its lovers and so conducive to its diffusion—it is the one most easily introduced into the home.

Nearly every one can be taught to sing, provided the training is commenced in early life, and fewer still are those who cannot be taught to play some instrument of music.

A Democratic Accomplishment.

Music is a fine art of the people, a truly democratic accomplishment within the reach of all.

A true home is more than a place in which to live. Life consists of more than shelter and food and clothing. These things are essential, but for home life there must be an intellectual and spiritual as well as a material side. There must be newspapers and books to read, and also the refining and soothing influences of music.

Looking back upon the days that are no more, how many now past the meridian of life, in picturing in the mind old home scenes and family gatherings, find that they cluster about scenes of which the parlor organ or piano was the centre.

Within the Means of All.

There are very few farm-homes to which the means of providing instrumental music should be denied because of want of means; and if instrumental music is provided vocal music will follow. Where there is a piano there is certain to be singing, and home life for Sundays and evenings, for the instrument not only leads and guides, but it also instructs and inspires.

The season suggests these considerations. Christmas is a festival of music. Its message was set to music, and music has ever been part of its entertainments, and its services. It is also a season of gift-making, and musical instruments offer a choice of gifts which cannot be surpassed.

At the head of the list stands the piano, the most popular and most satisfying home instrument, second to which is the organ. Either brings into the home the possibilities of sweet music which every family reunion requires, and which at all times has a continuous refining tendency upon the home as well as the religious life, and exercises a powerful influence towards holding the family together.

More Modern Devices.

For homes where learning to play the piano has been neglected, modern invention has supplied the want of early training, and made home music possible. There is the piano player, capable of reproducing by mechanical means the most difficult music, and which can be operated by any one after a couple of hours' instruction. And there is that wonderful invention, the gramophone, which reproduces spoken words, vocal and instrumental music. This marvellous instrument brings into the home at very little cost the music of the great artists—vocal solos of the prima donas, productions of the great violinists, and the masterpieces of the world's famous orchestras and bands.

But the piano enables the performer to reproduce any and everything musical. A Christmas gift of a piano from the head of the household to the wife, will probably do more towards making her contented with her lot than any other thing money could buy. And a contented wife, to inspire a happy husband to produce for Canada's needs, is a necessity to the welfare of the country.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

Sleepy Time Story About the Days When Fairies Lived.

A MONSTER OF THE SWAMP.

Fierce Creature That Terrorized the Good People of a Village Long Ago. Brave Knights Fought Him In Vain. His Conqueror Rewarded.

Well, said Uncle Ben to Little Ned and Polly Ann, I am going to tell you about

THE RED DRAGON.

A long time ago when folks believed in fairies they talked a good deal about dragons.

Now, there lived in a marsh near a certain village a big red dragon.

The king offered prizes to any one who would kill it.

A great many brave knights of his army went out and came back with wonderful tales of how they had fought with the dragon and after wounding it had only given up the fight on account of being hurt by the monster.

Then the kind king would say, "Never mind; you'll have better luck the next time." And he would give them a valuable gift.

There was with the king a little page boy, who was a great butterfly hunter. The king's librarian had promised him a gold piece for every new butterfly he would bring him.

So when the king stopped one night at one of the castles in the neighborhood of the dragon the page boy slipped off with his net to hunt butterflies.

And of course he got lost and wandered into the swamp where the dragon lived, and the fierce dragon came rushing and roaring at him.

The little page boy looked around. He hadn't a thing with which to fight the dragon except his butterfly net. The net was tacked to a long stout stick, and when the dragon got near enough the boy raised it and hit the dragon a fearful whack on its fat sides.

"Wow!" shrieked the dragon, and with a puff it went up in the air just as a balloon does when you slash a hole in the bag. The fierce old dragon had been nothing but air and skin.

When he was sure it was quite dead the little page boy grabbed the empty dragon skin by its spiked tail and dragged it back to give to the king, of whom he was very fond.

He was the maddest king you ever heard of when he saw that dead dragon. He sent off at once for the knights who claimed to have fought it.

"You old humbugs!" cried the king. "There's the dragon you bragged about fighting. It wasn't a thing but skin and air. If you'd so much as touched it with the point of a sword it would have gone to pieces as it did when my brave little page boy struck it with his butterfly net."

Then the king made all the fibbing knights give the little page boy the gifts he had given them for fighting the dragon, and the little page boy was then so rich he bought a castle of his own.

The Donkey Party.

We had a donkey party.
My, but it was fun to see
His tails in many places,
Even hanging on a tree.

The boys and girls were funny,
For they tried so very hard
To pin the donkey's tail on
That they walked about the yard.

Some put his tail very high,
For they thought him big and tall.
Others pinned their tails so low,
For they thought him very small.

A Little Gardener.

Armed with his watering pot, this young flower grower is doing his best to keep his blossoms in bloom. It is quite heavy work for so small a lad, but he is brave and manly and is working to keep his charges bright and fresh. Perhaps, and it seems probable, he is helping mother.

GERMAN EFFICIENCY.

How Food Control Went Wrong in Bavaria.

The Bavarians do not have the high opinion of Prussian efficiency which is current in many less informed places. The Munich Post publishes, with some comment of its own, the following extraordinary instances of official muddling described in the Berlin Deutsche Tageszeitung:

"The Obernheim local authorities received from the central egg depot at Mannheim a truck load of about 2,000 eggs, accompanied by the statement that two eggs were allowed to every family, and that the price of the eggs was 12 cents each.

"In Obernheim, however, there was no lack of eggs, the local price for which was 5½ cents each, so the burgomaster wrote to the central authorities, 'We need no eggs.' By return of post there came the command from above, 'You must take the eggs, which are yours in accordance with the distribution plans.' To which the Obernheim authorities replied, 'We do not want them, and will not have them.'

"Another peremptory order was received the following day. 'You must take them.' Nevertheless, the eggs were not accepted; they remained in the truck, and are now poisoning the air all around — and in Berlin people are starving.

"The village of Klingenbach received orders to deliver 200 pounds of butter in the village of Gerdauen, a distance of about five miles. The butter was conveyed thither, but the village of Gerdauen refused to accept it, as there was no lack of butter. After a couple of hours' delay the butter was despatched to the town of Lynx, four miles further away. The burgomaster there declined to receive the consignment, as there was butter in plenty.

"Finally, the butter was taken to the prisoners' camp in the vicinity where Anammites, Senegal Negroes, and English and other Hottentots may now anoint themselves with it—and in Berlin people are starving, and cursing the farmers."

Imitations of "Courtesy."

Treating a customer like a rich uncle, so you may extract his coin, is not courtesy—that's foresight, remarks Drew's Imprint.

Offering a seat to the man who enters your office is not courtesy—that's duty.

Listening to the grumblings, growlings, and groanings of a bore without remonstrance is not courtesy—that's forebearance.

Offering a companion a cigar when you light one yourself is not courtesy—you'd be ill-bred if you didn't.

Helping a pretty girl across the street, holding her umbrella, carrying her poodle—none of these is courtesy. The first two are a pleasure, and the last is politeness.

Courtesy is doing that which nothing under the sun makes you do but human kindness. Courtesy springs from the heart; if the mind prompts the action there is a reason; if there be a reason, it is not courtesy; for courtesy has no reason. Courtesy is good-will and good-will is prompted by the heart full of love to be kind.

"Only the generous man is truly courteous—he gives freely without a thought of receiving anything in return. The generous man has developed kindness to such an extent that he considers everyone as good as himself—and treats others not as he should like to be treated (for generosity asks nothing) but as he ought to be treated.

Source of Poison Gas.

While carrying on botanical explorations in Venezuela last fall, says the Scientific American, Dr. J. N. Rose, Associate Curator of Plants in the Smithsonian Museum, secured some interesting specimens of sabadilla, a Venezuelan plant of the lily family, from the seeds of which are produced some of the asphyxiating and tear-producing gases used by the Germans in the war. These highly poisonous seeds have long been used in medicine for the production of cavandine or crystallized veratrie, of veratric acid, and of cabadailine, a heart stimulant, but, as in so many other cases, the German talent seems to have turned them to a less respectable use.

The dust from the seed in the field irritated the eyes, throat, and especially the nose to such an extent that the native laborers were obliged to wear masks. It has been reported that the Germans bought up the entire available supply of the seeds before the declaration of war. Both the seed and all preparations compounded from them are now, however, declared contraband.

Away With the Men!

"So you think the world would go on very successfully if there were no men?"

"I can't see why it shouldn't. Women have shown that they are capable of doing everything the men have pretended that they only were able to do. By the way, do you know of any man I could get to trim that big elm tree in the front yard? It seems to me some of the upper limbs ought to be cut off."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Uncle Sam's March King And Great Scotch Singer Aided Our Victory Loan

THE name of John Philip Sousa is known in every part of the world. He has become popular as "the march king," his swinging music being liked wherever the ear of man resounds to martial sounds. Sousa's Band has traveled in every part of the earth. When the United States entered the war, Sousa offered his services to his country. He was too old to become a fighting man, but he volunteered to take charge of Uncle Sam's naval bands. So it comes to pass that Naval Lieut. John Philip Sousa has given up an enormous income to receive the wage paid to a lieutenant in the American navy. He is now in charge of the band of the Great Lakes Naval Training Station of over 300 pieces.

This fact is made all the more interesting to Canadians because Sousa recently brought this great band to Ontario to take part in the Victory Loan Campaign at Windsor, and at the same time Harry Lauder, the Scotch comedian, was present to take part in the effort to recruit cash. At the head of the Windsor procession was a squad of returned Canadian soldiers. Just behind these strode Lieutenant Sousa and his "band of youth," 300 odd men, everyone of them a musician and a fighter. Then came Lauder's car, containing also Mayor Oscar R. Marx of Detroit, and a reception committee composed of Gordon McGregor, vice president of the Canadian Ford Motor Company, and Mayors C. R. Tuson of Windsor, E. W. Hoarse of Walkerville, O. H. Montreuil of Ford, E. H. Donnelly of Sandwich, and W. Woollatt of Ojibway. Thousands of school children on the streets sang the songs of America and France, as well as "The Maple Leaf."

JOHN PHILIP SOUSA

Lauder was repeatedly interrupted with cheers, and hundreds of children, grouped around the stage, called him "Harry"—and "Harry" smiled back at them and called them "Angels," and they screamed in delight.

"Oh, you Canadians, how I love and admire you," Lauder said. "You are among the kingly nations of the earth, and you have made it so yourselves by your sacrifices and your patriotism.

"I won't attempt to tell you what you have already done for your country, and for liberty, the grandest word in any language, because you know it all only too well, but may I say just this? You must continue to do as you have been doing. You must work on and on and on, and you must save and put your money into Victory Bonds—help your Government. You must do it, and do it now. To-morrow may be too late."

Sleepy Time Story About the Meeting of Two Animals.

AN EPISODE OF THE BEACH.

What Happened When an Inquisitive Four Footed Beast Came Upon a Curious Sea Creature—Battle In Which Both of the Contestants Suffered.

I think, said Uncle Ben to Little Ned and Polly Ann, that I shall tell you a story about

A PUSSYCAT.

I noticed today our cat Tabby is becoming somewhat of a hunter, and I hope she is not getting into naughty ways.

If our Tab takes to hunting let's hope she'll have the luck of Blackie, a big cat that lived by the seashore, where she could go out and pick up fish now and then.

Blackie did not mind wetting her paws when she was after fish.

One day as she was strolling along the beach she noticed a queer creature scuttling in front of her. Anything that moved interested Blackie. She darted after the little creature to see what it was. When she got closer she sniffed the air daintily.

"Why, it's a fish!" said Blackie to herself. And then Blackie was more interested than ever. Her mouth watered, as she thought perhaps she would get a meal.

The queer creature seemed to be covered with a shell, and it sidled along in a funny way that made Blackie laugh.

"If I had ten feet to walk on I guess I wouldn't walk sideways," Blackie sneered. "I'll stir that up a little."

Blackie raised a paw and patted the creature gently on one side. Then she patted it on the other, but not quite so gently. The queer fish stopped and raised its two front legs, that were armed with very sharp claws. Blackie's tail was switching playfully about. Quick as a wink the claws reached out for Blackie's tail and then closed on it.

Blackie gave a howl that could have been heard most a mile, and then she rolled over and tried to shake off the crab, for, of course, you know it was a crab.

Mr. Crab didn't care a snap for Blackie's claws. He wore a stout shell on his back, and the scratches never touched him. Neither did Blackie's teeth when she gave up scratching and tried biting. Indeed, Mr. Crab seemed to hang on tighter for every shake he got.

At last Blackie could stand no more, and, jumping up, she dashed home as fast as she could, hoping to get relief there.

Her folks killed the crab and at last got the claws out of Blackie's tail. Then she washed it with the tears in her eyes.

It was swollen for a long time, but at last it got better, but to this day the scar is on the tail, and Blackie wouldn't go near a crab for anything you could offer her.

Social Insurance.

The principles of social insurance, applied to all sorts of risks and hazards in which the community has a stake or shares a responsibility, have been gaining in favor the world over in recent years. On the contrary, the principles of pension legislation in all countries have been found wanting and experience everywhere is leading to its abandonment.

Thirty-five years ago Germany began to apply scientific business management to the relations of government and the problems of social welfare in dealing with the public relief of distress, sickness, industrial accidents, invalidity, old age and unemployment among wage-earners. Under the masterful leadership of Bismarck, in harmony with a new national spirit and a modern sense of social responsibility and solidarity, a strongly centralized and comprehensive system of state insurance was started. Within twenty-five years this system not only became the characteristic and dominant feature of a powerful national government, but also became incorporated in its essential principles by the governments of Great Britain, France, Italy, Russia, and practically every country of Europe into a new development of democracy, a new function of government, a new attitude of peoples in their conception of the possibilities of social organization.—Review of Reviews.

Brazil Gives Strength To Cause of the Allies Among Latin Republics

BRAZIL was the eighteenth nation to declare war on Germany. Her actual entry into the conflict, after much hesitation, has been hailed with wide satisfaction, not so much because of what she can do as a combatant—though that is by no means negligible—but rather for its moral effect and the example set to other South American countries.

Brazil's action was not hurried; she went in because she could no longer stay out, just as the United States did. And she speaks for the southern hemisphere as the United States speaks for the north. The New York Times said:

"Brazil is as pacific as we are, and was as reluctant to enter the war. The abstract question of the nature of the war was settled for Europe when we entered it. So, too, Brazil has settled the question of our disinterestedness and the accuracy in speaking for the American hemisphere. She enters the war, as we did, because she must. It is necessary for the salvation of freedom on the western continents."

The World noted in comment on Brazil's declaration that "one by one the former neutral nations in every quarter of the globe have ranged themselves against the common enemy. By universal verdict Prussianism has been sentenced to death."

One remarkable feature of Brazil's attitude is emphasized by The Philadelphia Inquirer, which said, in recording the plan to send a Brazilian commission to confer with the Washington authorities, that Brazil would ask for no loan from the United States, adding—

"This is as unexpected as it is agreeable. The hat has been handed Uncle Sam so often that he is getting used to it. If Brazil really needed money she could have it. South Americans feel assured that going into war will be the cause of a new awakening of public spirit in Brazil."

Brazil includes nearly half the territory and about half the population of South America. Her resources, though but partially developed, are enormous. In an interesting article by Admiral Bomfim published in The Philadelphia Ledger, it is asserted that while her efficient trained forces are now only about 150,000 men, she could raise a force of 1,785,000 for her army. But her contribution will rather be in food, lumber, and other supplies. The St. Louis Post Despatch summed it up under the caption, "Bully for Brazil," as follows:

"Brazil can do much toward pushing the war to a successful conclusion. With forests whose area is one-third that of Europe, she can supply timber to build ships, and wood to eke out the coal supply of the Allies. She can furnish rubber in abundance, many necessary drugs and dyes. She has ores and sulphur. Her cotton, coffee, and sugar production are already great and can be expanded. She can help feed the forces of democracy. Ranking second among the South American republics commercially, with an estimated population of 25,000,000, Brazil's accession to the Allied ranks will certainly have weight even with German statesmen who have hitherto been defiant."

Linking Two Countries.

Construction plans for linking the railways of Sweden and Finland have been drawn and it is expected that the connection will be established by the autumn of 1918. The bridge over the Ternea River, between Tornea and Haparanda, is to be a single track bridge, but in view of the fact that there is a difference of gauge between Swedish and Russian railways, two sets of rails will be laid on it, so that the bridge may be used by both Russian and Swedish rolling stock, though not simultaneously.

DISHES BLOWN FROM HANDS WHEN EXPLOSION CAME

Letter by Survivor Tells of Disaster At Halifax.

Mrs (Adjutant) McElhiney has received a letter from her sister-in-law, Mrs. John Newell, who, with her family passed through the recent terrible ordeal at Halifax without receiving injuries. Mrs. Newell says: All our windows were blown to bits and I don't know how we escaped being cut to pieces. Little Gordon and I were in the kitchen and I was washing dishes. The dishes were blown out of my hands. I ran to Gordon who was sitting on a chair and we were covered with glass, but did not get a scratch. Herbert who was on his way to school was whisked along the street ever so far but escaped unhurt. John was on Water street not far from the explosion and did not get a scratch. He ran all the way home thinking all of us were gone. On his way he passed many dead bodies and many injured persons who were bleeding to death. I sent the boys out to render first-aid and they had not been gone long when the call came for everybody to leave their homes and go into the country for fear of another explosion. It was thought that the magazine at the dockyard would blow up. Had it done so, all of us would have gone. But they flooded the magazine and we remained on the commons until all danger was past. I cannot describe the misery and suffering we have witnessed in Halifax. There are two thousand dead and many bodies not yet recovered. The streets were littered with the dead and dying. This is Sunday and everything is going on as during the week. There is not a church or hall of any description to hold meetings. This was to be our young people's day and the Commissioner was to be with us. But he has another mission."

Oliver Whiteside, aged 60, an employe of the Fleury Foundry, Aurora, died after getting up early and lighting the fire.

Sir George Foster Struck by Engine

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Dec. 15.—Suffering from injuries to his left shoulder, a scalp wound, and abrasions to his forehead and body, as a result of having been struck by an engine in the yards of the Union Station yesterday evening about 6 o'clock, Sir George E. Foster is confined to the Private Patients' Pavilion at the General Hospital. He is reported as improving.

N. F. Davidson, Norman Sommerville and other prominent men will address a Unionist meeting at Kitchener tonight, where Sir George Foster had been expected. It is confidently expected at Unionist headquarters here that the speakers will get a good hearing at Kitchener.

BOLSHEVIKI IN CONTROL AGAIN

Petrograd, Dec. 15.—The cities of Rostov, Nakhitchevan and Taganrog in the Cossacks territory are in the hands of the Bolsheviki troops according to a report issued by the official news bureau. Gen. Kaledines, the leader of the Cossacks, the announcement adds, has been arrested by the Bolsheviki who have invited the Mayor of Rostov to go to Novo Tcherkask, the Cossack capital, to discuss the suspension of military operations.

THE CHRISTMAS ENTERTAINMENT

It is always a problem for teachers, parents, societies, and parish-workers to solve at Christmastide, how to keep up the tradition of entertainments for the young, and the old too, which have come down from the days of the Mystery Plays, the Church Tableaux, and the mummers. It will be of real assistance to those responsible, to know of and send for specimens of "The All Canadian Entertainment Series," by Edith Lelean Groves (McClelland, Goodchild and Stewart, Toronto. 15c for Drills and Exercises, and 25c for plays.)

They are well designed to suit most needs, and can be made elaborate or elemental as the occasion requires. Here is a full list of them:

Plays.

Santa Claus and the Magic Carpet, or a Conspiracy Against Santa Claus. A Christmas Comedy: Britannia; The Wooing of Miss Canada; The War on the Western Front; The Key of Jack Canuck's Treasure House; The Making of Canada's Flag; A Canadian Fairy Tale.

Drills and Exercises.

Saluting the Canadian Flag; Fancy Flag Drill, Rule Britannia; Fancy Flag Drill, We'll Fight for the Grand Old Flag; Holly Drill: How the Fairies Chose Their Queen; Patriotic Scarf Drill; Grand March with Flags; Canada, Our Homeland.

Dame Goode's Christmas.

A sweet little tale comes in pamphlet size with a pretty wrapper, entitled "A Hillside Christmas," by Ethel Penman Hope, of a dear old grannie, with two sons, one strong, straight and good, the other frank and pleasant, but morally weak. Duty called so loudly to the elder to go to the war that she dare not keep him back, especially when the younger promised faithfully to keep away from the drink, and look after her.

But, when he was left alone the weak one stumbled, fell, his mother came to poverty, and one day he was brought home to her ill, and died. The brave old dame never let the soldier know of her grief. His little box of comforts she sent to him when there was nothing else in the house. Her heart was nearly broken, but her letters were always cheery. And when Christmas was dawning she was granted a dream of her son, sick and in hospital, but doing well, beside him a blessed Presence who murmured "Lo I am with you always!" The beauty of it was that the dream was true, though not complete, and a blessed if not a Merry Christmas came in an unexpected happy way.

Deer-Skin Money.

The skin of a valuable species of white deer which were in the Royal parks was at one time utilized as money in China. It is related that a certain Emperor, by name On Ti, was in want of money, and, calling his treasurer to him, gave him to understand that he must have funds. Among the princes and courtiers of China at that time it was customary when appearing before Royalty to cover their faces with a piece of skin. The treasurer took advantage of this, and a law was made forbidding the use of any other skin but that of the white deer from the Royal parks. Naturally princes and others were anxious to secure these skins, and of course they were sold for high prices, thus securing for On Ti the money he needed.

LARGE CROWD HAD FINE TIME AT GRANDPAS' PARTY

"Grandpa's Birthday Party," presented at George Street Methodist Church hall Friday night, delighted a capacity audience. Mr. McCarrell and Miss Dawson were grandpa and grandma, respectively. Mr. Parsons in the role of Hezekiah Bartholomew Livespark, and Miss Armstrong as Priscilla Livespark were exceptionally good.

Those taking part were: Miss Dorman, Mr. McCarrell, Maysie Armstrong, Mr. Parsons, Mrs. E. E. Harvey, Mrs. Thomas, Mrs. Foote, Mr. Thompson, Miss Buck, Dr. Middleton, Delbert Gardiner, Maxwell Parnall, Fern Johnston, Marjorie Ingall, Muriel Harvey, Thelma Darling, W. Throop, Miss Runnings, Miss Bennett, Mrs. Renwick, Mrs. Parsons, Mrs. Middleton, Miss Worth, Miss Fanning, Miss Smith, Mrs. Rehill, Miss Mather, Miss McKay, Mrs. Hicks, Mrs. Long, Mrs. Stevens, Mrs. Jenne, Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Armstrong, Mr. J. H. Renwick, Mr. Arthur Edmison, Mr. Walton, Mr. Dartnell, Dr. Fulford, Miss McKee.

Bernier Found Middle Passage

CAPTAIN JOSEPH BERNIER, the sixty-six-year-old veteran voyager, is safely back once more in Canada full of praise of Baffin's Land, and enthusiastic about the 40,000 miles of fishing rights which he says surround it. In addition, he tells of having discovered a "middle passage," which he found entirely free from ice.

His seventh and latest trip to the Arctic regions lasted altogether 446 days. He left Quebec on July 1, 1916, and returned Sept. 20th, with a valuable cargo of furs, which he had entirely disposed of before nightfall.

Captain Bernier was seen in the little deck house of his trim little ship "Guide," surrounded by friends glad to see him back again and listening to his yarns. The Guide is a short vessel of only 156 tons. She is double-plated and easily stands the ice pressure during the winter months. Her captain is a short, stout, sturdy French-Canadian, wearing a coarse blue jersey, with a close-cropped grey moustache, round face, brick red with much exposure, and bald head. He speaks excellent English, but with a slight French accent.

Captain Bernier said that after leaving last July he had heard that the Cluett party, who were searching for the McMillan expedition, were in bad straits at Parker Snow Bay in the north of Greenland, so he made his way there and arrived on August 27, 1916. There he could find neither vessel nor party. Four days of diligent search revealed that the others had been there because some coal oil, lead, and a number of furs were finally discovered.

At last Captain Bernier concluded that the Cluett party were probably on their way home, so he set sail for Pard's Inlet, Baffin's Land, where Captain Bernier has an estate of 1,200 acres of land with four houses and camps.

It was only after a voyage of incredible hardship, through encountering bad weather and outflowing ice, that Pard's Inlet was reached. Here the Bernier party spent all winter and summer, trading with the Esquimaux, hunting and fishing.

"We left my chief officer in charge," continued Captain Bernier, "and sailed for home on August 27, coming down by way of the new-found 'middle passage,' without meeting a piece of ice."

"Where is that middle passage?" asked his interviewer.

"Better for me not to mention," was the reply. "Why should I tell my secrets to anyone? It is sufficient to know that we arrived in the Straits of Belle Isle after sixteen days' voyage, having gone three days farther west than we had wintered. We were detained in the Straits by strong gales, but arrived here to-day, with all hands well."

Asked what Baffin's Land was like, and its possibilities, Captain Bernier described it as like the Yukon. "When people scratch the ground they will find what they need," he continued. "I found silver."

"Whereabouts?"

"I won't tell you, but the Government has got my samples."

The Esquimaux, Capt. Bernier believes, will become good Canadians. "They can be civilized," he contended, "if we send out people, priests, and ministers to them. The old people are hard to convert, but the young generation in thirty years will be just as good as the people here. We will have to tell them how to build houses and to provide for the future. Before we arrived some of them were starving for lack of proper tools.

"The Esquimaux had never heard of the war, but we had lots of magazines and illustrated papers with us, and they took much interest. We were able to give them an idea of the destruction and trouble that was going on."

In the mineral possibilities the captain has great hopes. Besides the silver he discovered, he found traces of copper and iron pyrites, which if analyzed, may be worth something. "There is plenty of coal," he declared. "I found many seams. Of course it would be scarcely worth carrying all that distance, but it should prove workable for those who live there. We have got the Esquimaux to use coal now instead of oil. We brought them stoves. They are very proud to know that they 'can burn the earth' now."

But it is the prospect of a successful fishing industry away up north about which Capt. Bernier seems most enthusiastic. Salmon and halibut abound, and there are many traces of cod.

"The whole area of the land I have annexed," he declared, "amounts to nearly 500,000 square miles. Asking only the three-mile limit round these you have 46,000 square miles of fishing rights. I noticed on the Newfoundland Banks that there was scarcely any. Yet you know how valuable fish is in Canada to-day."

Captain Bernier will probably go back next summer, when he will see again his chief officer, Wilfrid Caron, who is left alone among the Esquimaux to supply their wants and watch the traps.

"All You Need is a Horse."

Interesting are the trousers or tights of the poorest class of gauchos, who live in a very primitive state in the Southern Argentine pampas. When they need a pair of pants they kill an old mare and strip off the hide of the fore legs as one would draw off a glove. These are drawn, soft, and pliable, hairy side in, over feet and legs up to the hips, when they adjust themselves like tights. They are thus worn continuously, day and night, for weeks, until the owner feels the necessity of a new pair of pants. They are then cut loose, another old mare is killed, and the operation is repeated.

GERMAN PRINCE DURING WARTIME

Gross Picture Drawn of Prince Eitel Friedrich.

FACES CHARGE OF THEFT

This is the Kaiser's Son Who Has Won Most Distinction at the Front According to the German View — A French Journalist Tells Some Facts About Him.

ANDRE CHEVALIER, special correspondent of the Intransigeant at the French front, gives a few sidelights on the life of Prince Eitel Friedrich.

During his sojourn at Avricourt, in the Oise, the Kaiser's son resided at the chateau of Comte Balny d'Avricourt. In the moments when he was not hiding his ponderous form in a shellproof dugout communicating with the grounds of the chateau by a subterranean passage this "fat, red-faced man with a huge paunch consumed quantities of cabbage."

PRINCE EITEL FRIEDRICH

"He lived a quiet life," adds Mr. Chevalier, "and was troubled once only by a visit from his blustering father.

"In his solitary walks across the country the Prince's only companions were melancholy and a dog.

"Sometimes he would take a spade and stolidly turn the ground, perhaps the hope of finding buried treasure to add to the wagonloads of furniture he already had sent far from the dangers of bombardment.

"It was an atavism, no doubt, or mayhap a precautionary measure, for some months after, when the princely furniture mover left the chateau, it blew up, as if by mere chance, with what was allowed to remain there.

"This was the Prince's grateful method of paying his bill. Mr. Dubois, the proprietor of a chateau in the neighborhood of Compiegne, which was methodically pillaged by the Kaiser's son, has laid a formal charge of theft with the French authorities against Prince Eitel."

DISASTER WAS NOT ACCIDENT

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Montreal, Dec. 15.—The Star publishes the following today from its Ottawa correspondent: "The belief is growing in Nova Scotia that the disaster at Halifax was not accidental. So many demands have come to Ottawa for the internment of persons of alien nationality that Sir Percy Sherwood, commissioner of the Dominion police, has despatched a special officer to make the necessary investigation apart from that which is now proceeding to cause of the collision between the Mont Blanc and the Imo. The Government will exert every effort to elicit the facts and place the responsibility.

OFFICER WAITS FOR LAUNDRY

With the American Army in France, Dec. 15.—(By Associated Press)—A story of how German officers are surrendering is told by an American officer just returned from the British front where he had been undergoing instructions. One night recently a German officer crawled across no man's land to the British wire, raised his hands and cried, "Kamrade." British soldiers covered him with rifles whereupon the German said "Excuse, me if I lower my hands, I've got a package here." The surprised Britishers granted the request and the German dropped into the trench. In his hands he had a package of laundry. He said he had decided to surrender a week before but had waited until his laundry came back.

TAKING VOTE IN THE TRENCHES

Toronto, Dec. 15.—W. A. Willison, correspondent for the Canadian Press in Flanders, cabling last night said that 87 percent of the overseas soldiers vote in the Dominion elections had been polled. The returning officers took their ballot boxes right into the front line trenches and dressing stations and secured the votes of wounded and dying Canadians. In taking the vote one poll clerk was seriously wounded and a deputy returning officer slightly wounded while one gunner, voting beside his gun, was hit by shrapnel.

SAYS THAT IMO WAS AT FAULT

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Halifax, Dec. 15.—When the inquiry into the Mont Blanc Imo disaster was resumed before Mr. Justice Drysdale today the cross examination of First Officer Glokin of the Mont Blanc was continued. He gave as his impression that the Mont Blanc had followed the rules of navigation throughout the whole happening. He said that he was surprised at the signals given by the Imo on the morning of the disaster as he considered them contrary to the rules of navigation.

A Real Providence.

Mr. Younghusband reached home late for dinner.

"I got pinched for speeding on the way home," he explained rather sheepishly. "Have to appear tomorrow morning and get $10 or 15 days.

Mrs. Younghusband fervently clapped two blistered little hands. "What a providence!" she cried devoutly. "You must take the 15 days, John! The cook has just left!"

REV. J. R. WEBB'S SERMON ON THE EVE OF ELECTION

We, Like Pilate Have To Reach a Decision.

Speaking on the text Matthew 27-19, "While he was sitting on the judgment seat his wife sent unto him saying, Have thou nothing to do with this just man for I have suffered many things in a dream this day because of him." Rev. J. R. Webb, at Murray street Baptist Church last night said that Jesus had been before Caiaphas and had been spat upon and buffeted and treated more shamefully than tongue can describe. Now, he is before Pilate and Pilate's predicament is very much what ours will be tomorrow. A great injustice had been done, and a great decision had to be made. Out of the clear sky of August, 1914, came a bolt the like of which the world had never seen—since that the nations had seen nothing but the treason of Gethsemene and the insults of Palace. Germany, "red in tooth and claw" continues the ravages with which astonished civilization four years ago. Belgium has lost all but her soul. France has witnessed the repetition and the continuance of the violation of every military law. Treaties have been no more regarded than the falling feathers of the pigeon when in the grip of the hawk. The air has been filled with poisonous gasses, the heavens are dotted with death dealing Zeppelins, the seas are pregnant with the most ruthless engines of destruction that have ever been conceived by man.

Women have had an unwelcome maternity thrust upon them by a brutal soldiery, others have lost their lives and the lives of their unborn with one thrust of the bayonet. Little children will go through life without hands and in some cases without eyes because of the diabolical conceptions of the apostles of frightfulness. Secret systems have been devised by which the most hellish deeds have been done. Canada has not been inviolate. There are those who believe that the Halifax disaster was conceived on German soil though brought to birth on our waters. Our own land has given of her best and brightest manhood that the tide of develtry may be stemmed. The soil of France and Flanders is forever sacred because of its baptism in the blood of our dearest. Canada has done much and will do more.

"She has men to match her mountains,
She has men to match her plains
Men of action—men of vision,
Men with empire in their brains."

These are the days of astonishment and days of righteous wrath. A great injustice has been done and since Christ said that "doing it unto one of the least was doing it unto Him," we cannot escape the fact that He today lies smitten, scourged, and bleeding, and that in view of such a wrong.

We, like Pilate, have to reach a decision. Shall the one whose face has been slapped and who has been spat upon go to further suffering?

The Decision Is Pending.

Pilate could not put the responsibility on Herod or on the people, nor can we. Duty is a matter which every man must discover for himself but it is the "Stern daughter of the voice of God," and even though Pilate may please his neighbors and make friendship with both Ceasar and Herod, when he gets alone with his soul any violation of his conscience will bring an eternal sting.

As we value our peace of mind we must see to it that no matter how we may differ from each other it is the task of each tomorrow will be to decide what will be most effective in saving our own flesh and blood who defend us from further sufferings and death. From Canada's throne down there is granted this that politics are excluded from this election and that the one question to be decided is how we can best help in that which all desire the winning of the war.

Mr. Webb went on to show ways in which unexperienced voters may lose their votes, that the ballot had been adopted that secrecy should be assured and warned the people that in the local option campaigns women had lost their privilege by announcing their decision in the polling booth when asking for their ballot. He concluded his discourse by urging all to act on their own responsibility after looking not to men but to God for guidance.

The splendid hymn of Ebeneger Elliott "When wilt Thou save the people, Lord," was sung heartily by the congregation and the work of the choir was of the usual high order.

LATEST GERMAN PSALM OF HATE

"BURN, KILL, KILL, KILL; SUCH IS THE LIFE OF GLORY."

London, Dec. 17.—The following is the translation of a document found on a German prisoner in Italy. It is the latest version of Germany's psalm of hate, and apparently was widely distributed among the German invaders in the advance into Italy.

"Son of Germany in arms:

"This is our intoxication. Glory to the artillerymen of ours. The gun, the powerful invulnerable brother, calls thee. Was it not made to move the universe?

"O Rifleman of ours:

"Thou art the force which conquers even death; which no obstacle withstands. Wherever thou goest thou enterest; wherever thou enterest there is Germany.

"O, Cavalryman of ours:

"Engage and overthrow. A harvest of death awaits thee. Curb that winged hurricane—the will of thy horse. That cowardly flesh is made to fatten the fields which shall be thy sons.

"Son of Germany:

"The great hour has come. Life does not end, but surpasses itself, and is transformed without a pause. The life of the vanquished is absorbed by the victor; the slayer becomes owner of the life of his slain.

"See now how in the breast of thy sacred country is contained the life of the world. Do not stoop to feminine pity toward women and children. The son of the vanquished has been often the victor of tomorrow. What is the worth of victory if tomorrow we have the revenge? What kind of a father wouldst thou be if thou killest thine own enemy and left alive the enemy of thy son?

"Son of Germany in arms:

"Hurl down, strike with thunder, break in pieces.

"Rush forth, overthrow, transfix, devastate.

"Burn, kill, kill, kill.

"Such is the life of glory."

Signaller Payton Writes to Friends

INTERESTING DESCRIPTION OF LIFE OF SOLDIER BOYS IN ENGLAND.

Mrs. W. E. Payton has received the following letter from her nephew, E. V. Payton, who is taking a course in the Canadian School of Signalling in Seaford Sussex, England:

Dear Aunt Sarah:

I received your letter last week but we are so busy that I have not had time to answer it before. We have been getting two and three letters a day and no end of notes at night to write. The course is supposed to last five weeks, we have been here now over three weeks. It is better than Bramshott as I prefer study to drill. I seen Sid Martin yesterday for the first time since last fall.

The last letter I had from Herb he was in the camp, and ever since I landed here I have been looking for him. Yesterday I found the camp he was staying at but he had just left that morning. My luck every time.

I just missed going on draft by coming on this course. They have cleaned out the signal school at Bramshott except for a few casualties.

I don't know what the Canadian army would do if conscription had not passed for most of the reserve battalions are empty.

As you were saying in your letter the war drags on but though things are looking pretty dark I don't think that it will last much longer.

Fritz has made quite a show on the Italian front, but while we are supreme in the west we should worry.

One of our instructors in this school is a Salvationist. He has been bringing me War Crys. He knows his way around here and is quite interesting. He left yesterday to go on a special course so I guess I will not be seeing him again.

Tuesday. We just got news of our five mile advance today. That was pretty good, wasn't it, as far as we advanced in three months on the Somme.

I have put in for a transfer to the Divisional Signal Company and I think it is going through all right. It will mean going to France a little sooner, but it is a good job.

Well, I must close for the present I will write again next week as soon as we leave here.

Good-bye, from your loving nephew,

E. V. PAYTON.

The discharge depots for returned soldiers at Halifax and Quebec are to be done away with.

Twenty-one bodies, most of them beyond recognition, were recovered from the ruins at Halifax on Friday.

SCHOOL BOYS B. CLASS LED IN THE CANVASS

YOUNG CAMPAIGNERS AT Y. M. C. A. BRING IN NEW MEMBERS.

School Boys' "B" Class, with Don Carmichael, president, Douglas Young, vice-president, and Charlie Armstrong, mentor, led the Boys' Department in the boys' membership canvass that closed last week. A total of $220.50 was reported by the six classes in membership fees during the canvass, which is a very excellent showing. The winning group in this contest will be awarded a supper and a pennant on Saturday, Dec. 29th.

Another contest is on between the six classes the boys being marked for their attendance at gymnasium and Bible classes and general deportment in the building. The winning class in this contest will also be in on the supper on Dec. 29, and will in addition receive a sleigh-ride. School Boys' "B" Class is in the lead in this contest as well and if they continue in the lead until Christmas will also enjoy the sleigh-ride in addition to the supper and pennant which they have already won.

In view of the fact that many parents are considering Y. M. C. A. memberships as Christmas presents, the boys are urged to continue the work of securing members until Christmas as each member secured will be credited to the personal score of the boy securing same.

U.S. HAS BIG SHIPPING PROGRAM

New York, Dec. 17.—Contracts have been let by the Federal Shipping Board for 4,000 ships, with net dead weight carrying capacity of eight million tons, Raymond B. Stevens, Vice-Chairman of the board announced. He thought at least six million tons would be available next year.

SPECIAL LICENSE THROUGH U.S.

Ottawa, Dec. 17.—Canadian shippers and merchants are reminded by the export branch department of the Food Controller's office that the United States authorities will issue through their customs service a special license covering all "shipments from one point in Canada to another in Canada which may pass through the United States en route."

COAL QUESTION STILL SERIOUS

SHORTAGE OF FUEL IS FELT ON BOTH SIDES OF THE BORDER.

Toronto, Dec. 17.—The coal question in the city is serious and the City Hall is bombarded with complaints from citizens who are out of coal.

One woman who has no supply telephoned a dealer and was told that she could not get coal for two weeks.

Another man and woman had to leave their house for two nights and stop with friends because they had no coal.

One company reported that they had 400 urgent cases on their list.

Many complain that although they ordered coal several days ago it has not been delivered.

New York's Coal Famine.

New York, Dec. 17. With half of New York's coal yards empty and suffering increasing in the unheated homes of the poor, the fuel administrators exerted all their efforts to release thousands of tons of coal tied up at tidewater, or in snow-bound cars at sidings.

Cleveland Lacks Coal.

Cleveland, Dec. 17. One hundred thousand men were out of work and hundreds of Cleveland's largest manufacturing plants were shut down because of the coal shortage.

TWO LIGHTLESS NIGHTS.

U. S. Fuel Administrator Eliminates Unnecessary Illumination.

Washington, Dec. 17. Two "lightless nights" a week are ordered by the fuel administration. Hereafter Sunday and Thursday of every week will see the city whiteways and advertising signs darkened, only necessary street lights to be used, and only such lights as the law requires in offices and stores not open for business.

BRAN IN BAGS WILL COST MORE.

Ottawa, Dec. 17. It was stated at the office of the Food Controller today that the cost of bran and shorts in bags will be $6.30 per ton higher in each case than the fixed price in bulk.

REFERENDUM IS AN INSULT SAYS REV. R. B. GROBB

URGED PARISHIONERS TO VOTE TO KEEP CANADA IN THE WAR.

WHOLE WORLD IS WATCHING.

"A referendum is an insult to Canada," declared Rev. R. B. Grobb, in the course of his sermon at All Saints' Church Sunday morning, when the congregation was urged to forget the high cost of living, whatever failings the Food Controller might have, and politics, and in casting their vote on Monday think only of the one great question—that of Canada continuing in the war, and vote to bring about that end. Mr. Grobb continued his appeal at the evening service when he said the eyes of the world would be on Canada on election day.

CURRIE HASN'T RESIGNED.

Canadian Army Leader One of Best Generals in Service.

London, Dec. 17. There is a strong feeling of indignation here regarding rumors circulated in Canada that General Currie has resigned the position of commander of the corps. The C. A. P. has already published an official denial by the High Commissioner. Further, it is well known that the operations at Passchendaele were immensely successful and the commander-in-chief on that occasion has expressed his warm admiration of Currie. In view of the splendid work Currie has done, and the fact that he is recognized as one of the best generals at the front, these unfounded reports concerning his resignation provoke the suspicion that they are put forward with some ulterior object.

SWEEP THEIR OWN CELLS.

Former Russian Ministers Receive Lessons in Democracy.

Nearly all the ministers of the ex-Czar and many other of the principal agents of the old regime are at present confined in the ancient and obsolete fortress of Peter and Paul, which faces the Winter Palace across the Neva, and is one of the most picturesque features of the Russian capital. They occupy the same cells in the Trubetskoi Bastion in which the unsuccessful revolutionaries of the past were confined till the time came for them to mount the scaffold.

Here sit the Minister President Sturmer, the Minister of the Interior Protopopoff, the War Minister Sukhomlinoff, and his wife. Here, too, are the Minister of the Imperial Household, Count Fredericks, and Madame Vuirubova, the most trusted of the ladies-in-waiting and one of the most ardent devotees of Gregory Rasputin. Another inmate is the gendarmerie officer, Sobieschanski, popularly known as "The Hangman," to whom so many of the former occupants of the State prison were handed over for execution.

These distinguished prisoners, not so long ago all-powerful in Russia, are kept in strict seclusion, and with the exception of a short conversation with their nearest relatives once a week, in the presence of a legal official, are allowed to see no one, least of all one another.

While still Minister of Justice, M. Kerensky was asked at a meeting whether workmen's and soldiers' deputies might not visit the fortress to satisfy themselves that the enemies of freedom were being treated with becoming severity, but, with characteristic bluntness, he refused point blank, declaring that he was not going to allow the Trubetskoi Bastion to be "turned into a menagerie."

The Russian papers have, however, obtained ample details of the conditions under which the political prisoners of the new regime now live. Their cells measure 21 feet long by 11 feet broad and are comparatively high. Each is lighted by one heavily-barred, semi-circular window, built into the thick walls so near to the ceiling that it is impossible to see through it. The only furniture is an iron bedstead and a wooden table, both of which are firmly fastened to the walls. On the bed are a mattress and pillow, both stuffed with straw, and a coarse coverlet. The prisoners are not allowed to have any of their own effects. Even newspapers are denied to them. But they may smoke.

The prisoners are wakened at 7, when they receive boiling water with which to make tea, three-quarters of a pound of rye bread and half a pound of white. These form part of the regulation ration of the soldiers who guard them, and with whom, in respect to dietary, they are on equality. Then in turn they are given a broom, with which they must clean out their cells. During the morning they are allowed one by one to take brief exercise in the courtyard. At 12 dinner is served. It consists of cabbage soup and "kasha." The latter is an untranslatable word, which may mean boiled buckwheat, porridge, rice pudding, and many other things. There is tea again at 4, and a supper of "kasha" at 7.

Only on doctors' orders are any departures from these rules allowed. Thus the vice-director of the police department, Kafafoff, who is diabetic, receives a special diet, and Mme. Sukhomlinoff, whose health is indifferent, is also indulged somewhat in the matter of food. Mme. Vuirubova, both of whose legs were broken in a railway accident a couple of years ago, and who still uses crutches, is allowed a couple of mattresses, and is dispensed from clearing out her cell, while General Kommissaroff, who suffers from nose-bleeding, has an extra pillow. In all respects the regimen enforced is said to be that traditional to the Trubetskoi Bastion, except that the medical attention is much more solicitous.

One newspaper representative, at least, found his way into the corridor in which the cells open. That must have been before M. Kerensky laid down his rigid rule, but even then it was difficult enough to get access to the bastion. This visitor saw several of the prisoners through the little observation windows in their cell doors. Sukhomlinoff met his eyes with "a dull gaze." The ex-War Minister "made a painful impression." His figure was shrunken and his grey beard unkempt and dishevelled.

"Hangman" Sobieschanski lay on his back on the bed, hardly visible through a cloud of tobacco smoke. Sturmer sat on his bed, with his bent back turned toward the door. Protopopoff paced the cell from corner to corner, looking neither to right nor left and paying no heed to the stranger who stared at him. Anna Vuirubova sat quietly on the bed and crossed herself from time to time.

Three times a week the special commission which is dealing with these cases visits the prison for the examination of its inmates. For this purpose they are temporarily removed to another room.—London Daily Telegraph.

Decreased Pack of Salmon.

With the end of summer salmon on the Fraser River at an end it is certain there will be a big drop in the catch in that district, which in the past has provided nearly half the total pack of British Columbia. Between 80,000 and 90,000 cases is the estimate of the pack to date, according to the chief inspector of fisheries for British Columbia.

The run of spring salmon ends about August 25 and in ten days or so the fall run of sockeyes follows. This may add to the season's pack to some extent, but it is scarcely likely that more than 100,000 cases will be packed.

There used to be a close season from August 25 to September, but now fishing goes on until October 1 for sockeyes. The general close season starts on November 15.

In 1916 the Fraser River salmon pack amounted to 106,440 cases, and there is practically no hope that this year's figures will equal it.

This was the year of the "big run," and in the last similar year, 1913, there were 732,059 cases packed on the Fraser River. This was more than half of the total pack of 1,353,901 for the Province of British Columbia.

The salmon pack on the Fraser River for the past ten years has been 106,410 cases in 1916, 289,199 in 1915, 328,390 in 1914, 732,059 in 1913, 173,921 in 1912, 301,241 in 1911, 223,148 in 1910, 567,203 in 1909, 89,184 in 1908, and 163,116 cases in 1907.

The years 1917, 1913, and 1909 were "big run" years, the salmon coming in large numbers every four years; but the present season's pack is likely to be the smallest in a period of nine years.

In 1913 and 1909 the Fraser River pack was considerably more than half of the total.

According to a statement compiled by the British Columbia Salmon Canners' Association, the canneries of this Province have a total capacity of 8,592,000 cases. The best season's pack was 1,353,901 cases in 1913, when the Fraser River pack totaled 732,059 cases.

The last salmon pack was only 11.58 per cent. of the total capacity of the canneries.

Fraser River canneries have a capacity of 3,072,000 cases of salmon. The last pack was 3.46 per cent. of that capacity and the present pack will probably be little more than 3.2 per cent. of the capacity.

Over fishing and land slides in the Fraser River which prevented the salmon going upstream to spawn are the chief causes of the decrease in the pack.

VOTES FOR SOLDIERS.

Many Difficulties to Be Overcome in Federal Election.

Major Purney, Overseas Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, is making final arrangements in Ottawa before leaving for England. There he will take in hand the work of provision for taking the votes of all Canadian soldiers overseas in the coming elections. Presiding officers have to be chosen, ballot papers printed, and a score of details arranged in connection with the taking and counting of the overseas vote.

Difficulties in the allocation of the naval and military vote, both in Canada and overseas, have necessitated special provisions. The problem has been how to determine the constituency to which the vote shall go, in the event of the voter not designating any particular candidate by name.

The general rules on which the military vote will be taken are:

(1) If the elector can indicate the name of the electoral district in which he last continuously resided for at least four months of the twelve months preceding his enlistment or appointment, his vote goes to that electoral district.

(2) If he cannot name an electoral district, but can name a place within an electoral district at which he resided for the period mentioned, his vote will be applied to the electoral district in which the place is situated.

(3) If he cannot specify an electoral district or place of residence during the time indicated, but can specify with sufficient clearness an electoral district in which he has resided at any other time, his vote will go to the constituency specified.

(4) If, by reason of non-residence in Canada, or from any other reason, the elector is unable to indicate any particular constituency or place, then he may stipulate to which electoral district he wishes to have his vote applied.

Returned soldiers or other military or naval electors who, if they were on active service, would be entitled to vote at naval or military polls, may vote as civilians in Canada, even though their names are not on the voters' list. Production of the discharge certificate will be necessary in the case of a soldier or sailor, or equivalent documents in the case of an officer.

A further unusual feature will mark the coming elections. Each candidate, to secure military votes, must be "recognized" by the leader of his party. In the case of the Government party the recognition will be by the Prime Minister; in the case of the Opposition, by the leader of the Opposition. In the case of any independent or Labor party, by the recognized leader of such party. "recognition" must be made within five days after nomination day, and the names of "recognized" candidates must be published in The Canada Gazette. The Canada Gazette will thus indicate the precise party standing of every candidate.

Synopsis of Canadian Northwest Land Regulations

The sole head of a family or any male over 18 years old, who was at the commencement of the present war, and has since continued to be, a British subject or a subject of an allied or neutral country, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion Land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for District. Entry by proxy may be made on certain conditions. Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of land in each of three years.

In certain districts a homesteader may secure an adjoining quarter-section as pre-emption. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Reside six months in each of three years after earning homestead patent and cultivate 50 acres extra. May obtain pre-emption patent as soon as homestead patent on certain conditions.

A settler after obtaining homestead patent, if he cannot secure a pre-emption, may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

Holders of entries may count time of employment as farm laborers in Canada during 1917, as residence duties under certain conditions.

When Dominion Lands are advertised or posted for entry, returned soldiers who have served overseas and have been honorably discharged, receive one day priority in applying for entry at local Agent's Office (but not Sub-Agency). Discharge papers must be presented to Agent.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy Minister of the Interior.

PORT HOPE, LINDSAY AND PETES IN JUNIOR GROUP

The Peterborough juniors have been grouped with Lindsay and Port Hope, and Dick Butler of Lindsay is the convenor. The club representatives are billed to meet at Peterborough to draw up a schedule of games.

Kingston hockey club, Queen's University club and Belleville will form a group, and the lakeshore clubs, Oshawa, Whitby, Cobourg and Picton, have been placed together.

High Rollers Win Two From Printers

In a ten pin league fixture Thurs. night at the Water street alleys the High Rollers won two of the three games from the Printers.

The first game was a hard fought battle all the way, the High Rollers winning out by two pins. The High Rollers went to the bad in the second game and the Printers won by a good margin, but the High Rollers again came back and won the third game. The total pinage was: Printers, 2413; High Rollers, 2364.

Anderson, was high man for the Printers, with a 540 total, while Thomas topped the High Rollers with 514 for a three game total.

The scores were as follows:

High Rollers
Thomas	167	175	172—	514
Lush	170	117	179—	466
Kelly	190	158	134—	482

A Remarkable Ship.

The first Norwegian iron and concrete ship was recently launched at the Porsgrund Cement Works. The ship is built on an entirely new system, with the bottom upwards, in which extraordinary position the launching took place on a sort of underlying sledge, which glided out with the ship. When the water was reached the hull became detached from the sledge and gradually sank up to a certain point, than subsequently slowly righted itself.

The ship, which is of two hundred tons burden, was built in three weeks, but the next will only require about half that time, as the original frame will be used for each subsequent ship of the same size. The casting of the ship, when the frame is completed, will this time take only two days. It is intended to start the wholesale building of iron and concrete ships of two hundred, five hundred, and one thousand tons. A one-thousand-ton ship will be completed in six weeks.

The Larch in Labrador.

The soil and atmosphere are so cold and dry in Labrador that scarcely any vegetation thrives at all. The larch is a species of pine tree which is found in all northern countries, but its growth is so stunted in Labrador that a specimen found on the most southern part of that dreary land was but nine inches in height and the trunk was but three-eighths of an inch in diameter. A careful examination of the miniature tree revealed its age to be at least thirty-two years, for there were that number of ring growths shown in its small trunk. The very cold currents pouring down from the north and the fact that Labrador has less sunshine than Alaska, together with several inland climatic conditions make the summer seasons shorter and colder than are those of Alaska.

Inheritance Tax Argument

Inheritance taxes are very heavy. Unlike Fire hazard, they are not merely possible, they are absolutely certain.

They deplete your estate at once, and to your heirs represent a specific and definite loss of money.

In New York a $250,000 estate would pay a combined federal and state tax of about $12,000. If left to a friend or distant relative, about $22,000. The John Jacob Astor estate paid $3,150,000. J. P. Morgan has insured his life for $2,500,000 to cover a similar loss.

Thus the estate is provided promptly with the ready cash to pay this tax and other expenses without the need of hurriedly disposing of securities or other assets, perhaps at a loss, to meet such needs. The logic of the situation urges immediate action. Premium rates, however, low, advance with age, and so does the possibility of entering the physically impaired group and losing the opportunity to secure this protection.

Knowing that this loss is actually coming, it is simply a matter of ordinary business prudence to guard against it. The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada offer you a plan to do so at very low cost.

MR. Q. HOPE JONES

He Gives a Free Lecture, but Takes Up a Collection.

A PUBLIC DUTY OVERLOOKED.

Why Teach the People of Africa How to Eat Pie and the Chinese How to Eat Ice Cream and Deny a Stovepipe Hat to the Red Man?

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, , by Associated Literary Press.]

"LADIES and Gentlemen—It is needless for me to observe that this large and intelligent audience does me proud. It was advertised that this lecture would be free, and you found the doors wide open to you. I feel it a sort of duty, however, to take up a collection. Any money so contributed will be evenly divided. One-half will go toward erecting a tombstone over the grave of the father-in-law of Christopher Columbus, as soon as the same can be located, and the other half will be economically expended in paying my personal expenses from town to town. As I pass the hat I will call your attention to the fact that if Columbus hadn't been backed by his father-in-law he could never have set out on his voyage, and that the said father-in-law has never had a fair show in history. As I count up the proceeds of the collection, which amounts to $1.78, I wish to return thanks on behalf of Columbus and all his relations.

"YELLS FOR SCALPS."

"My subject is the American Indian, and the duty of the American white man toward him. I hope to make your duty plain to you, as I turn the light of my stereopticon on the canvas, and you behold the picture of the savage at home. Instead of sowing or reaping he is engaged in a war dance. Instead of broadening his mind he is clinging to old time traditions. As he dances he yells for scalps and hollers for gore.

"Who is to blame for this state of affairs? All of us. Had we followed the finger of duty thirty years ago the red man of today would have been wearing plug hats and high collars, and his thirst for gore would have been washed away in mock turtle soup and ice-cream. We see this savage engaged in a war dance, when he might just as well be employed in compiling a family almanac or running a cider mill.

"We lay aside the picture of the war dance and substitute another. My heart aches every time I exhibit it. You see the picture of a squaw standing in front of a wigwam. Years ago she was called Blue Bell and the young men of her tribe raved over her willowy form and fawn like glide. Had the hand of the white race been extended to her then she would have been ornamenting a drawing room. Instead of wearing an army blanket she would have draped and posed for a goddess before some great painter.

"No helping hand was extended and the Blue Bell with the willowy form was left to mature into a sawed off squaw, who smokes a pipe. I ask the red headed man on the end seat, third row, how he would like to be an Indian buck in old clothes, with nothing to do but lick his squaw in the morning, kick his dogs in the afternoon, and cuss his pappooses around after dark? I ask the woman with the frozen expression over there by the post how she would like to be a squaw in a wigwam. We have taught the people of Africa how to eat mince pie and we have taught the folks of China how to devour ice cream, but we have turned our backs on the Indians under our feet and had no concern in their welfare. I feel, to speak plainly on this matter, I feel to say to the fat man with the bald head and contented look that he has been derelict in his duty and ought to be ashamed of himself.

"My dear friends, I think I can detect looks of sympathy on the faces before me. I think I can see mental resolutions to do your duty in future. My feelings in the matter almost oblige me to announce that another collection will be taken up as a fitting close to the meeting, but prudence bids me not to overdo a good thing. In order to prevent a stampede, in which numbers of you might be killed or injured, the collection will be dispensed with, but as you depart for your homes think the matter over seriously and earnestly. Extend your hand and it won't take ten years before the Indian will eat with a fork, pull wires at a ward caucus and promote trusts and syndicates for the benefit of mankind."

ESCAPED FROM GERMANY.

Soldier Says That Huns Expect Peace by February.

Five Canadians recently reached London, having escaped from Germany. They are: 27088, C. F. H. McArthur, Toronto battalion; 132527, Corp. E. Cunningham, Montreal Highlanders; and 109477, W. L. Master; 109331, John Evans, and 1810, J. Watts, Mounted Rifles. Cunningham was captured in September last year on the Somme, McArthur in the second battle of Ypres. When seen by the Canadian Associated Press correspondent, Cunningham declared that Germany was on the verge of revolution. Conditions as regards food and clothing were terrible. He witnessed riots by soldiers and civilians at Dusseldorf, when two civilians were shot. The Germans expect an armistice by Christmas, and the end of the war in February. They imagine the conditions in England regarding food are as bad as with them.

Cunningham was captured when making a sortie, with sixteen others, ten yards from the enemy trenches. An officer and eleven men were killed and the remainder were taken prisoners, but all except Cunningham were killed on the way to the German rear by the British artillery. During a sortie he received a bayonet wound in the leg, and was taken before a German general, who showed him a book containing the records of the Canadian army in France. He pressed him for information concerning reinforcements. Next morning he was taken to German headquarters, into a dugout, 150 feet deep. Subsequently he was taken to Cambria. He was in a hospital there ten days. During this time the place was bombed by British airmen. He was three days without food in the journey to the prison camp at Dulmen, was inoculated four times, vaccinated six times, isolated for a month, then put on sinking pumps for wells. His food largely consisted of a kind of meal looking like paraffin. Here he met McArthur, and they arranged to escape together, and, with a South African soldier, speaking German, they lowered themselves from the barracks, walked to the station and asked for three tickets to a certain place, which were issued readily. They arrived safely and walked through the village, and rested till night in a small wood. Continuing the journey, they encountered first-line sentries, but crossed the frontier without a mishap. The British consul looked after them well.

As showing the shortage of soap in Germany, Cunningham says he sold a small tube of shaving soap for twenty marks. He paid ten and a half marks for a hat, two and a half for a collar, and sixty-five marks for a pair of boots of compressed paper.

To Keep From Losing Breath.

Where respiration is rhythmical there is no loss of breath in walking fast, running uphill or going upstairs. The method of preventing breathlessness consists in maintaining the rhythm and the speed of respiration. When the breathing is rhythmic the breathing keeps pace with the step. The outbreathing must be twice the length of the inbreathing, and not more than eighteen or twenty complete breath circuits must be made per minute.

BOWSER REFORMS

Wakes Up to a Realization of His Domestic Blessings.

ALAS, 'TIS A FICKLE MOOD!

He Forgets the Joys of His Happy Home and Heaps Coals of Fire Upon the Head of Mrs. B. When a Paltry Bill Crosses His Path.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, , by Associated Literary Press.]

MR. BOWSER was due at his house at 6 o'clock, and Mrs. Bowser was wondering what sort of a new fad he would bring with him, when he suddenly opened the door. As he didn't give the door a kick and a bang when he opened it, she knew that he hadn't had a row with the street car conductor en route. As he was humming a tune she knew that he hadn't found a clothespin or a shirt button on the steps, and would bring no charge of reckless extravagance against her.

"Ha! little woman, but here you are!" he exclaimed as he caught sight of her. "Dinner's all ready, of course? You never keep me waiting, and you always have something good. I never come home without patting myself on the back over my good luck. Everything gone all right with you today?"

It wasn't an extra good dinner. The butcher had sent a poor roast, and the cook had had trouble with the range, but as Mr. Bowser plied his knife and fork he complimented everything. He also complimented Mrs. Bowser on her personal appearance and the cook on her culinary skill, and yet Mrs. B. was uneasy. As dinner ended she almost hoped to hear him say he was going around to the club for an hour or two. He had no such idea in his head, however. As he reached the living room he lighted a cigar and dropped into a chair with the observation:

"I STAMPED AND SHOUTED."

A Home Worth Having.

"Well, this is home. This is the way for a man to live. A man who has a home like this ought to be kicked for complaining about anything. Did I leave you any shopping money this morning?"

"I—I think not," she replied.

"Then I must have forgotten it. I meant to have left you $20. Just put me in mind of it tomorrow, will you? By George, but how neat and cozy this room looks. We ought to have a little more light, though."

"I'm trying to keep the gas bills down, you know."

"Never you mind the gas bills this one," he said as he rose up and lighted all the burners. "You are naturally [illegible] but there's no need of stinginess. Just use all the gas you want to and don't scrimp on coal. Didn't I see you fixing up a dress the other evening?"

"I was altering it over in hopes to make it do," she explained.

"Well, throw it away and go down and get a new one. I want to see you well dressed, and there's no call to alter old garments. Go to the best dressmaker and have the latest style."

"You are awfully kind and good!" she murmured as she forgot the peril of the situation for a moment.

Mrs. Bowser Deserves It All.

"No thanks, please. You do deserve all I can do for you. If there's a better little wife in all this big world, I'd like to hear of her. The trouble is that I don't half appreciate you. Only the other day I was thinking things over and I realized to the fullest extent that but for your influence I should never have been the man I am. I've made blunders enough, heaven knows, but if it hadn't been for you I should have made hundreds more. Just think of the tomfool fads I have indulged in, will you?"

"They weren't so very foolish," she protested.

"You say that to let me down easy, but I realize how often I have made an ass of myself. Ah, there's the cat. Kitty, kitty, kitty!"

The cat came out from under the lounge and sprang to Mr. Bowser's knees, and he stroked her back and toyed with her ears and said:

"Just a cozy little family, aren't we? Do you remember that one night about two weeks ago we differed as how to spell the word 'wagon'? I said there were two 'g's' in it, and you said there was one. I want to ask your forgiveness. Of course you were right."

"There's nothing to forgive," replied Mrs. Bowser. "People are often mistaken about a word."

Humbly Seeks Forgiveness.

"But I got mad and called you an idiot. I wish some one had been at hand to kick me. About the winter coal bill—I said we had burned a ton a week and jumped up and down and bulldozed around, and it's a wonder you kept your temper as you did. Please forgive me for that."

"You thought you were right."

"Yes, but I made a fool of myself, as I had a hundred times before. Even if we had used a ton a week you couldn't help it. You don't make the weather. If there was ever a wife who looked after things around the house with a determination to help her husband it is you. I don't believe 2 cents' worth of stuff is wasted in a year."

"I try to do my best," she responded, but at the same time wishing that Jones or Brown would come in and interrupt the conversation.

"Do you remember the night I came home and found a clothespin on the doorstep?" continued Mr. Bowser, with evident enjoyment. "I busted into the hall and made as much fuss over that old clothespin as if it had been a diamond sunburst. I stamped around and shouted and bulldozed and spoiled the whole evening. Mrs. Bowser, why didn't you bristle up to me and tell me to shut right up or you'd leave? If you had hit me with a crowbar that night, it would have served me right. Have you—can you ever forgive me?"

"There was a strange man here this afternoon," she said, determined to break up the conversation at all hazards, "and I think he wanted to see you about land."

Asks For His Old Love Letters.

"Well, let him come when I'm home. I believe you told me long ago that you had saved all my old love letters. Suppose you get 'em down, and we'll read 'em over."

"I—I don't think I could find them tonight. Shall we run into Brown's for an hour?"

"I'm too comfortable to go out. Wasn't it funny about my trying that barefoot cure? When a man starts in to make a fool of himself the way I do every little while, somebody ought to take a club to him. If I bring a baseball bat home, will you whack me with it the first time I act like an idiot?"

Mrs. Bowser was about to make an excuse to leave the room when the cook came up with a bill. It was a balance of 31 cents owing the butcher. Mr. Bowser was smiling all over as she handed it to him, but no sooner had he glanced over it than a thunder cloud took the place of his smile, and he shouted:

"What's this? What's this? You've been running in debt again!"

"The butcher couldn't change a bill," explained Mrs. Bowser.

The Magic Spell Vanishes.

"Debts, debts, debts!" exclaimed Mr. Bowser as he flung the cat half way across the room and jumped up and swung his arms in the air. "Woman, haven't I warned you a million times about this reckless extravagance? If I gave you $1,000 a week to run this house on you'd still be in debt! Of all the extravagant, reckless spendthrifts I ever saw, you are the worst."

"But it wasn't running in debt. I had a bill, and he couldn't change it. I expected to pay it tomorrow."

"What's tomorrow got to do with it? I tell you not to run in debt, and you defy me. I'm looking at the principle of the thing. Mrs. Bowser, this is too much—too much!"

"You are getting excited over nothing," she replied. "We had to have meat, and the butcher couldn't change a $10 bill."

"Wreck, ruin and the poorhouse!" he groaned as he walked about. "It's no wonder I'm old and bent and gray before my time. Thousands of clothespins on the front steps, tons of broken dishes in the backyard—waste and extravagance everywhere! And you sit there and smile over it! I am about to retire to the library. I desire to arrange my business affairs and see if I've got 2 cents left. While I am doing so you can break up the chairs, smash the piano and kick holes in the carpet. Good night, madam!"

And when he had gone the cat sat beside Mrs. Bowser and looked up into her face with what one might think was sympathy.

Uses for Alcohol.

The familiar transparent soap owes its transparency to alcohol. The increasing demand for leather, and the inability of the market to meet this demand from natural sources, have led to the production of artificial substitutes for the material. These are possible through the use of alcohol. The same is to be said of the artificial silk that now finds a large and increasing sale. Alcohol is a practically indispensable servant in the varnish used on woodwork. It is used in preservatives, in disinfectants, deodorants, and shoe-polishes, in dyes and in lacquers, and in a long list of chemicals with more or less unfamiliar names. One of its present most important uses is in the manufacture of smokeless gunpowder and other explosives.

The Washing Mitt.

There is a convenience called the washing mitt. It is a little aluminum affair that is slipped over the hand, and on one side it is corrugated like a washboard. This is excellent for the washing of small and delicate articles.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Miss Eunice Curtis has returned from Queen's University to spend the vacation with her parents.

Mrs. Gerald Eaton and children are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Eaton, 430 Park street.

Mrs. H. S. MacDuffee, who has been visiting friends in Toronto, has returned to the city.

Mr. J. Wells Fraser, manager of the local branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia, has taken up residence at 558 Gilmour street. Mrs. Fraser and family have arrived from Niagara Falls, Ont., where they have been visiting since leaving their former home at St. Stephen, N. B.

Miss May McKim, nurse-in-training at Belleville, spent the week-end in the city the guest of her parents.

The tea and dansante in the Empress Hotel Saturday afternoon was a brilliant success, financially as well as socially. The Peter Robinson Chapter, I. O. D. E., is to be congratulated upon its untiring and splendid efforts for patriotic purposes. The proceeds on this occasion are to be devoted to the wives and dependents of the sailors. The function was in charge of a bevy of charming young ladies attired in true sailor fashion, and the table decorations were quite in harmony with the cause, the centre ornament being a ship of flowers flanked by two sailor dolls. The latter were raffled off to good advantage. The chapter is very much indebted to Mrs. A. W. Spence and Mr. Fitzgerald, who kindly provided the music for the dance. The young ladies in attendance were: Mrs. J. Wearing, Mrs. D Wainwright, Misses Gladys Mulholland, Irene Scott, Bessie Read, Ruth Robertson, Mayale Armstrong, Mabel Patterson, Flossie Mitchell, Helen MacLaren, Jessie Spence, Esme Aylmer, and Bessie Mather. Misses Mayale Armstrong and Phyllis Dawson delighted the company with acceptable vocal solos rendered in good voice.

Among those present were: Major and Mrs. Scott, Mrs. T. H. G. Denne, Mrs. Arthur Amys, Mrs. J. A. Aylmer, Miss Hatton, Misses Marjory and Nora Hatton, Miss Margaret Eastwood, Mr. and Mrs. Knight, Mr. Vamstone, Capt. Wilcomb, Lt. Meredith Haycke, Pte. Walter Perks, Mr. T. F. Matthews, Mr. and Mrs. Chris Graham, Miss Madge Graham, M. Nicholls, Mr. Payne, Mr. T. L. Fleming, Mr. R. O. Ross, Mr. Rhind, Mr. T. H. Hummel, Mrs. V. J. McElderry, Miss Grace Elston, Mrs. A. H. Stratton, Miss Robena Cummings, Miss Georgie Stevenson, Mrs. W. A. Sanderson, Mrs. John Birnie, Mrs. Birkes, Mrs. McLaren, Mr. Otto Gliddon.

Mr. Chris Graham has shown unlimited generosity and patriotism in allowing the Peter Robinson Chapter the use of his commodious dining-room and grill room for their bi-weekly teas and dances. The Chapter is also indebted to Mr. Frank Whitehouse for the splendid Nordheimer piano used on this occasion.

Rev. J. W. Woodside of Toronto, who preached anniversary sermons at Knox Church on Sunday, was a guest at the Empress.

Brigadier and Mrs. Morehen returned to Montreal this morning.

There will be no practice of the Conservatory Orchestra tonight.

TRADING WITH ENEMY.

Germans Are Getting Supplies From Russia.

Petrograd, Dec. 17.—The Germans already have begun to obtain fats and other sorely needed supplies from Russia, according to information reaching Petrograd today. It was announced that credit institutions here had been advised that trade had been resumed with the Germans at Minsk and other points near the northwestern front. New exchanges have been opened and Germans are exchanging metals and [illegible] for vegetables and fats, especially soap. The price of soap is 15 roubles a pound.

WINE IN FRANCE.

Crop of Grapes Was Very Large This Year.

Frenchmen are in no danger of going thirsty this year, but they will pay dearly for their favorite beverage unless the government can check speculation in wine.

The yield of grapes will be from 40 to 50 per cent. greater than that of last year; last year's crop was nearly fifty per cent. greater than that of 1915, yet wine costs twice as much as it did a year ago and three times as much as it did in 1914. Ordinary table wines then sold at the equivalent of eight cents a quart for red and ten cents for white, at retail. They bring twenty-five cents, respectively, to-day.

Requisitions for the army, lack of distributing facilities, scarcity of wine casks, bottles, and wine tank cars, insufficiency of help, high cost of fertilizers and chemicals, and the natural economic effect of war are given in the wine country as the reasons for the rise. Another reason is the purchase of "wine on the vine" and successive transfers of the crop from one speculator to another, even before the grape have ripened, the same system as adopted by speculators in coal importation licenses last winter.

This abnormal dealing has made ordinary wines relatively dearer than the fine wines. Burgundies, clarets, and good white wines, generally are abundant and have not increased excessively in price. They are not so much subject to speculation and they escape requisitions, but they suffer quite as much as ordinary grades, even more in some cases, from the insufficient supply of bottles and casks.

The Minister of Provisions proposes to either requisition the entire crop, annulling all speculative contracts, and supervise the distribution to the retail trade, or fix a maximum selling price at which common wines may be sold to the consumer.

The opinion of the wine country was thus expressed by a grower of the Gard: "They propose to limit the avails of the winegrowers' work but no one has ever talked about keeping down the profits of the merchants who sell us sulphate of copper and sulphur," said he. "The great danger in these projects for limiting selling prices or requisitioning at arbitrary figures is that winegrowers will simply abandon their vineyards; consequence, a scarcity of wine and higher prices yet."

The winegrowers' association proposes as a compromise that concessions be made to the state on the quantities of wine requisitioned for the army and that, in return, the state leave the wine market to adjust itself.

OBITUARY

MRS. C. W. DELACOUR.

The death occurred at 7 o'clock this morning in Nicholls Hospital of Florence Jane, wife of Clarence W. Delacour, 255 Princess street. Mrs. Delacour was aged 29, and had been ailing only a short time.

Surviving besides her husband and one daughter Violet, are her mother and three brothers, Ernest, of Peterborough, and two others in England.

The funeral will be held Wednesday at 2:30 to Little Lake Cemetery. Service at the late residence at 2 o'clock, conducted by Rev. Benj. Greatrix.

A PIONEER OF MONAGHAN IS DEAD AT TARA

WILLIAM DUNLOP, AGED 84, SPENT BOYHOOD DAYS AT DUNLOP'S CORNERS.

The death occurred this morning at Tara, near Owen Sound, of William Dunlop, a highly respected citizen of that place. He was the son of Mary and Robert Dunlop, and was born in Cobourg in 1833, when his parents came to Monaghan, being pioneer settlers in the township. The deceased spent his boyhood days in Monaghan at what is known as Dunlop's Corners. After his marriage he went west. His wife, who was Sydney McFalls, predeceased him ten years.

The late Mr. Dunlop was a Conservative in politics and a lifelong member of Tara Methodist church. His kind and loving disposition made for him many friends, and his Christian character made him noted.

There are left to mourn his demise one daughter, Mrs. Jas. Barber of Tara, two sisters, Mrs. Wm. Jackson of Cavan and Mrs. Robt. Graham of Otonabee, and two brothers, Darcy and Andrew Dunlop, of Peterborough.

Funeral arrangements later.

All who do not work and worship elsewhere are invited to make St. Andrew's their church home—and a base of supplies for spiritual strength to do the world's work.

Service in Memory of Halifax Dead

BRIGADIER MOREHEN HEARD AT SALVATION ARMY TEMPLE.

Notwithstanding the cold weather Saturday and Sunday, fairly good crowds greeted Brigadier and Mrs. Morehen, divisional officers of the Salvation Army from Montreal. Saturday night was spent at No. 2, Brownton, and was enjoyed by all present.

The three services yesterday at the Temple were splendid. In the afternoon service the Brigadier conducted a dedication ceremony, also an enrollment of recruits. The evening meeting took the form of a memorial service to the dead at Halifax, when a very devoted Salvation Army officer in the person of Mrs Ensign Cranwell lost her life, though her little nine-months-old babe was saved.

"VERY GOOD EDDIE."

The Genuine New York Co. Will Be Seen Here.

Never has any musical production scored such an unqualified success everywhere as belongs to the credit of "Very Good Eddie," which is coming to The Grand next Saturday, Dec. 22 for two performances. It played a year in New York, and the consensus of metropolitan opinion was summed up in the line from the Herald's review: "It is the gem of all musical comedies of a dozen years." In Chicago, where it ran five months the Daily News said of it, "the audience could not get enough of it." In Philadelphia, where it scored a four months run, the Ledger said, "Local playgoers have scarcely seen its equal in the musical comedy line." In Boston, where it stayed eighteen weeks, the American referred to it as "the musical comedy treat of many years," and the press of both Toronto and Montreal, where it recently appeared, was generous in its words of praise.

"Very Good Eddie" is coming here in all its glory of cast, production, chorus and orchestra, and the local playgoers are to see the "Number One" company, with the players who appeared in New York, Chicago, Toronto and Montreal.

If you have property for sale, a "For Sale" Ad. in The Review will sell it sure.

MONTREAL ELECTION BETTING.

Odds of 8 to 5 That Unionists Win.

Montreal, Dec. 17.—Little betting on the general elections has been noted here so far, although stock exchange houses are said to be holding large sums to place on the Unionist Government at odds of 2 to 1. A good sized bet at odds of 8 to 5 on the Unionists was made in the brokerage district Saturday.

ELECTION BULLETINS

For the convenience of those who cannot come down town this evening the Utilities Commission have arranged to send a lighting signal over their lighting system. At 8.30 p.m. if the Union is leading every electric house light in this city will go out once and come on again. If the Opposition is leading the lights will go out twice. The same signal will be given again at 10.30. If the result is entirely in doubt the lights will not go out.

The British Red Cross has donated $125,000 to the Halifax sufferers and the London Mansion House fund has reached $175,000.

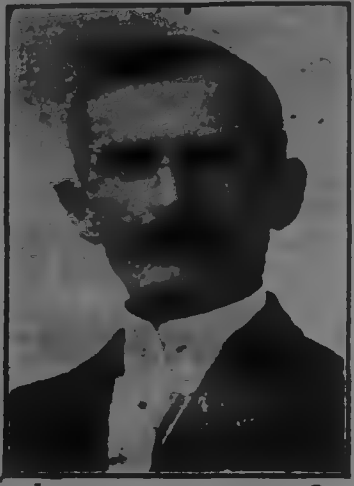
CANADA WILL FIGHT ON

J. H. BURNHAM BY OVER 2000---J. A. SEXSMITH BY 900



MR. J. A. SEXSMITH
The successful candidate in East Peterborough.

ALD. STRATTON FOR MAYORALTY

CHAIRMAN OF FINANCE COMMITTEE HAS DECLARED HIS INTENTIONS.

One of the interim announcements made on The Review's election screen last night was one to the effect that Ald. A. H. Stratton would be a candidate for mayor for 1918.

Ald. Stratton has been a member of the City Council for the past four years. He was first elected over Ald. Dobbin and two years ago was returned by acclamation. For the past three years he has been chairman of the Finance Committee, the most important committee of the Council. He has besides been on the board of works, the fire, water and light, the legal and reception, the railway and transportation committees almost continuously and has a thorough grasp of municipal affairs.

SEXSMITH GIVEN BIG MAJORITY

Unionist Candidate is Successful In E. Peterboro.

BY 900 VOTES

East Peterborough upheld Mr. J. A. Sexsmith and Union Government to the extent of giving a majority of 900 for Mr. Sexsmith against the opposition candidate Mr. W. H. Johnston. Mr. Sexsmith carried Asphodel, Belmont and Methuen, Burleigh and Anstruther, Chandos, Otonabee, Dummer, Havelock, Lakefield, Norwood, and with seven polls to be heard from he led by 900 votes. Six of these polls, it is expected, will increase his majority.

War Veterans Now Have Representative

The G. W. V. A. now has a representative in Parliament. Capt. Burnham, Unionist member-elect, is a member of the local branch of the order, and as such can handle any matters which the returned soldiers may lay before Parliament.

FRENCH PAPER SAYS QUEBEC MUST SUBMIT TO DRAFT ACT

Le Canada Blames the Result on Trusts and War Times--London Advertiser Believes Sir Wilfrid Will Now Help Government to Win The War.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Dec. 18.—As might be expected, almost the entire English-speaking press of Canada speaks editorially today of yesterday's election results as a great victory for justice and humanity.

The London Advertiser, which was the only Ontario newspaper supporting Laurier, says that while Sir Wilfrid has not achieved a victory, he will be found to strengthen the Government in every act calculated to win the war.

The Montreal Star says it is wrong to impute disloyalty to the mass of those who voted against Union, but it is a matter for deep regret that Quebec returned only three representatives of the Government and those not French-Canadians. It appeals for unity and a better understanding between British and French Canadians.

Le Canada, which supported Laurier, blames the trusts and "the iniquitous War Times Elections Act" for Laurier's defeat. It says that Quebec must submit to the Conscription Act now.

Corrected Returns.

Later results indicate the following corrections necessary in the noon summary: New Brunswick, Government 6, Opposition 5; British Columbia, Government 12, Opposition 1; Alberta, Government 10, Opposition 1, in doubt 1.

Total: Government, 137, Opposition, 93; in doubt, 1.

Government majority, 44.

In this summary, Truax, in South Bruce, and McCoig, in Kent, are counted with the Opposition. Both former Liberal members voted for the referendum amendment, and when it was defeated voted for the Military Service Act.

Sir Robert Pleased.

Ottawa, Dec. 18.—Sir Robert Borden in a statement today hailed yesterday's election raults as a great victory in a notable test of democracy.

He said it was not a partisan victory in any sense and all the leaders were responsible to the greatness of the appeal. He predicted a majority of 54 for the Government.

Unionists Gain One.

Toronto, Dec. 18. — Northumberland, N. B., has changed over to the Government column, electing Loggie with a majority of 60, which will be substantially increased by the soldiers' vote. This gives the Government seven in New Brunswick and the Opposition four, with a net Dominion Government majority of 46.

WEST PETERBORO HELPS CANADA KEEP HER PLEDGE BY BIG VOTE FOR UNION

A CARD FROM CAPT. BURNHAM

It is only fitting that the candidate of the Union Government should thank the loyal citizenship of his constituency for the hard work put in by it yesterday in behalf of the cause. It is the first time for many years that I have not been a Conservative. We have dropped our political (and religious) differences for the time being, and it is a fine thing that we have succeeded in doing it so well. Where all did so well, it is invidious to particularize, but I must thank those French-Canadians in Peterborough who voted in support of the cause. It required courage and devotion to duty that some others might well have imitated, but they were equal to it. I am sure the farmers and the women would resent it if I thanked them. But the humble workers and the drivers were so willing and patriotic that we must all acknowledge their work with gratitude and admiration.

J. H. BURNHAM,
Unionist Member.

PROHIBITION FOR UNITED STATES IN THREE YEARS

Congress Pass National "Dry" Law by a Vote of 282 To 128.

CONFIRMS BILL OF THE SENATE

W. J. Bryan Says That Entire Country Will Soon Be Dry.

Washington, Dec. 18.—The House of Representatives last night by a vote of 282 to 128 adopted the resolution proposing an amendment to the Federal constitution prohibiting liquor traffic in the nation. By this act the last legislative step necessary for a submission of the question to the States for their ratification or rejection was virtually completed. Inasmuch as the resolution, which passed the Senate last August, was slightly amended in the House, being liberalized in some particulars, the Senate must concur in the changes before the last legislative chapter is finished. This the Senate is expected to do before adjourning for the holiday recess, as Senator Sheppard will request unanimous consent to take up the amended resolution in the Senate today.

If the Senate concurs in the amendments made in the House the resolution will then be submitted to the State legislatures, and three-fourths of the Senate, or 36 in all, must adopt the proposed amendment to make it a part of the Federal constitution. Leaders of the prohibition forces jubilantly claimed victory before the State legislatures, and William Jennings Bryan who watched the House debate from the press gallery, speaking for the temperance advocates, predicted that the nation would be dry in three years and that the liquor question would not figure in the national election in 1920.

REEVE'S HOUSE DESTROYED BY MIDNIGHT FIRE

BLAZE IN H. G. FITZGERALD'S RESIDENCE AT LAKEFIELD STARTED IN ATTIC.

Lakefield, Dec. 18.—Fire at 11.15 last night destroyed the residence occupied by Reeve H. G. Fitzgerald. The greater part of the contents was saved. The fire originated in the attic and in a short time the upper portion of the dwelling was in flames.

James Simpson narrowly escaped serious injury when a chimney fell. He sustained cuts and bruises on the hand and arm when struck by falling bricks.

ALLIES ASKED TO TALK PEACE WITH GERMANS

Russians and Central Powers Begin Negotiations To End the War.

ALLIED DIPLOMATS APPROACHED

Armistice Is Settled and the Ministers Take Up the Wider Question.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Petrograd, Dec. 18.—The German and Austrian Foreign Ministers, Dr. Von Juehlmann and Count Czernin, have notified Leon Trotsky, the Bolsheviki Foreign Minister, they will arrive at Brest, Litovosk, Thursday to begin negotiations for a general European peace. The evening newspapers announce that Trotsky has notified the Allied Embassies that the armistice has reached definite results and that peace negotiations will begin and has asked them to participate or to state whether they wish peace or not.

Up to this evening the Embassies had not received the communication and an informal conference of the Allied diplomats is said to have reached no definite decision.

WILLIAM HAYS 94 YEARS OLD VOTED UNION

HELPED TO SWELL MAJORITY FOR MR. SEXSMITH AT DOWNER'S CORNERS.

Mr. J. A. Sexsmith, the Unionist candidate in East Peterborough, was given the fine majority of 43 at Downer's Corners in Otonabee, and one of the most enthusiastic supporters for Union was Mr. William Hays, who lives with Mr. George Carpenter near the Lift Lock.

Mr. Hays is in his 94th year. He felt very keenly the death of Corp. Bert Carpenter, for whom he had a very high regard and Mr. Hays was determined to use his vote to keep Canada in the war and thus do his bit to bring about the downfall of the war lords in Germany.

Unionist Candidate Has Majority of Over 2000 Votes.

After the story the lantern told on the screen on the Oriental building last night, there isn't much left to tell. In the popular endorsation of Union Government, West Peterborough played a prominent part by rolling up a majority of over 2000 for the Unionist candidate Capt. Burnham. Union carried the day by a good margin in every polling subdivision in the city, and in the country Mr. Hall's best record shon forth from Ennismore. At that the township gave Capt. Burnham more votes than he polled in the election six years ago. Cavendish and Galway have yet to be heard from but the majority will not be changed to any great extent.

As would be expected the two organizations did not get all their votes in the ballot boxes, and at some polling sub-divisions, electors lost the opportunity to vote by not getting to the polls before the stroke of five o'clock.

Mrs. Webb's Ballot Marked for Burnham

Mrs. Webb, the unfortunate lady who in the recent election campaign attained no little prominence due to the methods of Mr. Hall, was taken to the polls by the Unionists yesterday in one of the smartest automobiles in town. She had to be carried into the booth where she voted openly. That she is able to appreciate favors and to make returns for good treatment was demonstrated by her voting for Capt. Burnham. And by the way, Mrs. Webb's vote was not the only one lost by Mr. Hall through his little fleer in sensationalism.

SURPRISE FOLLOWED SURPRISE AS ELECTION RETURNS CAME IN

Hundreds Cheered Announcement on Review's Screen of Triumphs of Union Government—Mass Meeting in Grand Opera House.

It was a night of surprises. The first of these come when the earlier returns from the polling sub-divisions showed a two-to-one vote in favor of Capt. Burnham. These surprises grew as later figures more than bore out the former tallies and it was found that the Union candidate had carried every sub-division in the city with the exception of one in Ashburnham and that Peterborough had rolled up for the Union Government the magnificent majority of 1,938. Then the country districts began to report, and the story was repeated. There were gains at all corners of the riding. Smith, once a Liberal citadel, went for the Union Government, and North Monaghan piled up 291 on the same side of the account.

The first returns from East Peterborough came from Douro and showed 60 for Sexsmith and 50 for Johnston. This turnover convinced the watchers that the east riding, too, was for the Union Government.

The lantern slides of The Review were put in operation about 5:30, and the returns were flashed on the screen as fast as they were received up to 11:30, when the telegraph company shut down business for the night. Every available inch of space in The Review office was taken up, and both telephones were kept busy all evening. The crowd in front of the screen packed Hunter street from the office to George street, and in spite of the cold there were many in the throng who held their places as long as the lantern was in operation.

About 7 o'clock, when the result was no longer in doubt, Capt. Burnham announced a mass meeting in the Grand Opera House, and in a short time that building was packed to capacity the Women's Union Government League taking charge of the gathering, with the president, Mrs A. Stevenson, in the chair. Capt. Burnham, in a brief address, thanked the electors for the support that had been so generously extended to him, and complimented the ladies on the part they had so ably and effectively taken in the election.

Speeches were made by members of the League, including Mrs. W. R. Morris, Miss Pearse, Miss Rush, Mrs E. M. Gamey, and Mrs. J. T. (Col.) Mills, president of the woman's auxiliary of the Veteran's Association. Reeve Rye was called on, and asked to explain if he could just how North Monaghan had managed to do it. Mr. R. J. Soden declared that there was only one place on earth in which he would rather be at the moment than in Peterborough, and that was with the boys in the trenches.

Mrs. Morris told of how she had ventured into the precincts of Victoria Hall where the Hall faction were being treated to the returns, and of finding the place clouded with tobacco smoke.

"I believe," she said, "that we have put something in their pipes to smoke, something that they were not looking for."

The Returns Coming in.

The earliest returns from outside were received from Quebec, and just as expected that province went almost solidly for Laurier. Only three Unionists were reported elected during the entire evening out of sixty-two constituencies heard [illegible].

The defeat of Sir Wilfrid Laurier in Ottawa was one of the items of the evening's program that pleased the crowd. The announcement of the black eye which Ontario handed the Liberal chieftain was outdone, however, by the enthusiasm with which the crowd hailed the tidings of the election of Ballantyne in Montreal, and of Guthrie, Rowell and Pardee in Ontario.

CAPT. J. H. BURNHAM
The Victor in West Peterborough.

The Maritime Provinces broke practically even, and this had been reckoned on, but the West fulfilled all the hopes that had been placed upon it. The election of a solid Union delegation in Winnipeg prepared the way for what was to follow.

It was 11:30 when the telegraph service was shut off, and at that hour the result showed the Government with a majority of 40 seats, with 27 to hear from, with all the chances in favor of a large proportion of these going to the winners. At all events, it was plain that the defeat of the Government was impossible, and the crowd left for their homes satisfied that the Union had been sustained.

In Victoria Hall.

It was a quiet crowd that listened to the clarion-like tones of Mr. Jos. Wearing announce the returns in Victoria Hall. Perhaps the acoustics of that edifice have been marred by recent sinuous speeches. At all events it was with great reluctance that he announcement was made, after long delay, that the Government had a lead of more than five. The faithful hung to this number long after the proper record showed three times that lead. About 10:30 the Examiner announced a Government majority of 31, and let it go at that for the night.

Mrs. Fairweather Dies at Toronto

Mrs. Agnes Fairweather, a former esteemed resident of Peterborough, and the mother of Robert and James Fairweather, who conducted a hat and fur store at the corner of George and Simcoe streets for many years, died at her residence, 67 Queen's Park, Toronto, on Saturday. The funeral was held yesterday at Toronto.

The late Wm. Fairweather, her husband, conducted a drygoods business in Peterborough many years ago.

Inasmuch as the resolution, which passed the Senate last August, was slightly amended in the House, being liberalized in some particulars, the Senate must concur in the changes before the last legislative chapter is finished. This the Senate is expected to do before adjourning for the holiday recess, as Senator Shepperd will request unanimous consent to take up the amended resolution in the Senate today.

If the Senate concurs in the amendments made in the House the resolution will then be submitted to the State legislatures, and three-fourths of the Senate, or 36 in all, must adopt the proposed amendment to make it a part of the Federal constitution. Leaders of the prohibition forces jubilantly claimed victory before the State legislatures, and William Jennings Bryan who watched the House debate from the press gallery, speaking for the temperance advocates, predicted that the nation would be dry in three years and that the liquor question would not figure in the national election in 1920.

REEVE'S HOUSE DESTROYED BY MIDNIGHT FIRE

BLAZE IN H. G. FITZGERALD'S RESIDENCE AT LAKEFIELD STARTED IN ATTIC.

Lakefield, Dec. 18.—Fire at 11.15 last night destroyed the residence occupied by Reeve H. G. Fitzgerald. The greater part of the contents was saved. The fire originated in the attic and in a short time the upper portion of the dwelling was in flames.

James Simpson narrowly escaped serious injury when a chimney fell. He sustained cuts and bruises on the hand and arm when struck by falling bricks.

ALLIES ASKED TO TALK PEACE WITH GERMANS

Russians and Central Powers Begin Negotiations To End the War.

ALLIED DIPLOMATS APPROACHED

Armistice Is Settled and the Ministers Take Up the Wider Question.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Petrograd, Dec. 18.—The German and Austrian Foreign Ministers, Dr. Von Juehlmann and Count Czernin, have notified Leon Trotsky, the Bolsheviki Foreign Minister, they will arrive at Brest, Litovosk, Thursday to begin negotiations for a general European peace. The evening newspapers announce that Trotsky has notified the Allied Embassies that the armistice has reached definite results and that peace negotiations will begin and has asked them to participate or to state whether they wish peace or not.

Up to this evening the Embassies had not received the communication and an informal conference of the Allied diplomats is said to have reached no definite decision.

WILLIAM HAYS 94 YEARS OLD VOTED UNION

HELPED TO SWELL MAJORITY FOR MR. SEXSMITH AT DOWNER'S CORNERS.

Mr. J. A. Sexsmith, the Unionist candidate in East Peterborough, was given the fine majority of 43 at Downer's Corners in Otonabee, and one of the most enthusiastic supporters for Union was Mr. William Hays, who lives with Mr. George Carpenter near the Lift Lock.

Mr. Hays is in his 94th year. He felt very keenly the death of Corp. Bert Carpenter, for whom he had a very high regard and Mr. Hays was determined to use his vote to keep Canada in the war and thus do his bit to bring about the downfall of the war lords in Germany.

Unionist Candidate Has Majority of Over 2000 Votes.

After the story the lantern told on the screen on the Oriental building last night, there isn't much left to tell. In the popular endorsation of Union Government, West Peterborough played a prominent part by rolling up a majority of over 2000 for the Unionist candidate Capt. Burnham. Union carried the day by a good margin in every polling sub-division in the city, and in the country Mr. Hall's best record shon forth from Ennismore. At that the township gave Capt. Burnham more votes than he polled in the election six years ago. Cavendish and Galway have yet to be heard from but the majority will not be changed to any great extent.

As would be expected the two organizations did not get all their votes in the ballot boxes, and at some polling sub-divisions, electors lost the opportunity to vote by not getting to the polls before the stroke of five o'clock.

Mrs. Webb's Ballot Marked for Burnham

Mrs. Webb, the unfortunete lady who in the recent election campaign attained no little prominence due to the methods of Mr. Hall, was taken to the polls by the Unionists yesterday in one of the smartest automobiles in town. She had to be carried into the booth where she voted openly. That she is able to appreciate favors and to make returns for good treatment was demonstrated by her voting for Capt. Burnham. And by the way, Mrs. Webb's vote was not the only one lost by Mr. Hall through his little fleer in sensationalism.

SURPRISE FOLLOWED SURPRISE AS ELECTION RETURNS CAME IN

Hundreds Cheered Announcement on Review's Screen of Triumphs of Union Government—Mass Meeting in Grand Opera House.

It was a night of surprises. The first of these came when the earlier returns from the polling sub-divisions showed a two-to-one vote in favor of Capt. Burnham. These surprises grew as later figures more than bore out the former tallies and it was found that the Union candidate had carried every sub-division in the city with the exception of one in Ashburnham and that Peterborough had rolled up for the Union Government the magnificent majority of 1,938. Then the country districts began to report, and the story was repeated. There were gains at all corners of the riding. Smith, once a Liberal citadel, went for the Union Government, and North Monaghan piled up 291 on the same side of the account.

The first returns from East Peterborough came from Douro and showed 60 for Sexsmith and 50 for Johnston. This turnover convinced the watchers that the east riding, too, was for the Union Government.

The lantern slides of The Review were put in operation about 5:30, and the returns were flashed on the screen as fast as they were received up to 11:30, when the telegraph company shut down business for the night. Every available inch of space in The Review office was taken up, and both telephones were kept busy all evening. The crowd in front of the screen packed Hunter street from the office to George street, and in spite of the cold there were many in the throng who held their places as long as the lantern was in operation.

About 7 o'clock, when the result was no longer in doubt, Capt. Burnham announced a mass meeting in the Grand Opera House, and in a short time that building was packed to capacity the Women's Union Government League taking charge of the gathering, with the president, Mrs. A. Stevenson, in the chair. Capt. Burnham, in a brief address, thanked the electors for the support that had been so generously extended to him, and complimented the ladies on the part they had so ably and effectively taken in the election.

Speeches were made by members of the League, including Mrs. W. R. Morris, Miss Pearse, Miss Rush, Mrs. E. M. Gamey, and Mrs. J. T. (Col.) Mills, president of the woman's auxiliary of the Veteran's Association. Reeve Rye was called on, and asked to explain if he could just how North Monaghan had managed to do it. Mr. R. J. Soden declared that there was only one place on earth in which he would rather be at the moment than in Peterborough, and that was with the boys in the trenches.

Mrs. Morris told of how she had ventured into the precincts of Victoria Hall where the Hall faction were being treated to the returns, and of finding the place clouded with tobacco smoke.

"I believe," she said, "that we have put something in their pipes to smoke, something that they were not looking for."

The Returns Coming In.

The earliest returns from outside were received from Quebec, and just as expected that province went almost solidly for Laurier. Only three Unionists were reported elected during the entire evening out of sixty-two constituencies heard from.

The defeat of Sir Wilfrid Laurier in Ottawa was one of the items of the evening's program that pleased the crowd. The announcement of the black eye which Ontario handed the Liberal chieftain was outdone, however, by the enthusiasm with which the crowd hailed the tidings of the election of Ballantyne in Montreal, and of Guthrie, Rowell and Pardee in Ontario.

CAPT. J. H. BURNHAM
The Victor in West Peterborough.

The Maritime Provinces broke practically even, and this had been reckoned on, but the West fulfilled all the hopes that had been placed upon it. The election of a solid Union delegation in Winnipeg prepared the way for what was to follow.

It was 11:30 when the telegraph service was shut off, and at that hour the result showed the Government with a majority of 40 seats, with 27 to hear from, with all the chances in favor of a large proportion of these going to the winners. At all events, it was plain that the defeat of the Government was impossible, and the crowd left for their homes satisfied that the Union had been sustained.

In Victoria Hall.

It was a quiet crowd that listened to the clarion-like tones of Mr. Jos. Wearing announce the returns in Victoria Hall. Perhaps the acoustics of that edifice have been marred by recent sinuous speeches. At all events it was with great reluctance that he announcement was made, after long delay, that the Government had a lead of more than five. The faithful hung to this number long after the proper record showed three times that lead. About 10:30 the Examiner announced a Government majority of 31, and let it go at that for the night.

Mrs. Fairweather Dies at Toronto

Mrs. Agnes Fairweather, a former esteemed resident of Peterborough, and the mother of Robert and James Fairweather, who conducted a hat and fur store at the corner of George and Simcoe streets for many years, died at her residence, 67 Queen's Park, Toronto, on Saturday. The funeral was held yesterday at Toronto.

The late Wm. Fairweather, her husband, conducted a drygoods business in Peterborough many years ago.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, DECEMBER 18, 1917

THE RESULT IN WEST PETERBOROUGH.

WEST PETERBOROUGH has given the greatest majority in its history, and that, too, under peculiar circumstances. The Union candidate held no meetings outside of two, which were addressed by prominent members of the Government. There was none of the old-time electioneering methods resorted to by him. Capt. Burnham believed in the justice of his cause and relied upon the intelligence and patriotism of the electors. Several meetings were held under the auspices of the Women's League, but these were for the purpose of instructing the new voters in their duties.

The old style political campaign has had its day, as Mr. Hall has no doubt painful reason to believe. The people have passed the stage where they are pleased to be humbugged by clever political orators, hirelings in most cases who are in the business for the money it may bring them. There is no longer any charm in the art of exaggerating or in making black appear white. Mr. Hall is recognized as one of the most astute politicians in the riding, but his methods are out of date. He worked hard, but to no purpose. His organization was complete as it was possible to make it in the time at his disposal, and he resorted to every artifice that meant success in the old days.

And what has he to show for his labors? A humiliating defeat, and nothing more. If he went to all this trouble, if he spent his energies and his substance in a riot of politics with the hope of keeping his party alive and himself in line for future preferment, he has failed in both objects. He has driven the last nail in the coffin of the Liberal party in West Peterborough, and his prospects are buried with it. It's twenty-three for Mr. Hall, dating from yesterday.

In the old days above referred to, the politician who could swing the sledge-hammer of abuse or handle the javelin of vituperation was in favor. He went out with other atrocities that could be enumerated. Mr. Hall showed himself rather a past master of these outdated accomplishments, but all to no purpose. All the attacks he made on Sir Robert Borden did not, to all appearances, make him a single friend. His unwarranted onslaught on General Currie and the soldiers of Canada certainly did not make him many votes. The people of the riding were inclined to resent his bringing in professional orators from outside to aid and abet him in this style of campaign.

Mr. Hall made the mistake of his life when he sneered at the women of the city and their first venture in politics. Those same women organized and carried on a work which most surely figured in the undoing of Mr. Hall, as he no doubt realizes by this time. Dragging a purely personal matter into the contest and publishing a letter that had no bearing on the issue was another fatal blunder.

When the member for King's County in 1914 was convicted of grafting in the purchase of horses, Sir Robert Borden read him out of the party and drove him from Parliament. He went to that seat himself for re-election, and the people approved of his course, something they would not have done had half what Mr. Hall said about the Premier been true. Mr. Hall dragged the name of Sir Robert Borden through the mire of petty politics. The people of Canada gave their verdict yesterday.

All that Mr. Hall could say, all his imported aides could frame up in disparagement of the Ontario Liberals, did not prevent the success of these gentlemen. Guthrie, Rowell and Pardee triumphantly elected, Mr. Hall snowed under, is how the record stands today. Let his fate be a lesson to all aspiring politicians of the future. The people these days are developing a habit of thinking for themselves. All they want is the facts, and they can be trusted to form their own opinions.

As before said, there was little of the personal element in the contest of yesterday. The issue was supreme above the candidates. In any case Mr. Hall would have been defeated, but not so overwhelmingly routed if he had played the game with some regard to fairness. Capt. Burnham is the last man on earth to claim the victory of yesterday as a personal triumph. Gratified as he no doubt is over the result, it is safe to say that he is more pleased with the success of the cause with which he is identified than by anything the tremendous majority may mean to himself as an individual.

CANADA STANDS TRUE.

CANADA STANDS TRUE to its pledge, firm in its allegiance to the Empire. The Union Government has been carried into power on the crest of a wave of loyalty that has never before swept this country. The national honor has been maintained. The last cloud of suspicion has been dispelled. The people of this country emerge from the ordeal of a general election forced upon them without reason in war-time, with honor brighter than ever.

There is nothing of the old spirit of party triumph in the victory of yesterday. The cheers that went up from the multitude last night were inspired by something higher than the success of a political faction. The great principle at stake was the issue. The message conveyed in the return of every Union candidate was one of cheer to the men overseas.

For the first time in the history of the Dominion a non-partisan appeal was made to the voters at a general election and nobly have they responded. Party ties have been broken as they have never been sundered before and the election of yesterday marks the opening of a new era in the political life of the Dominion. Never again will one of the old-time elections be held in Canada, elections in which prejudice blinds the reason of the voters.

Premier Borden and the members of his Cabinet have received a new mandate from the English-speaking population of Canada. Their course lies clear ahead of them. They have been vested with authority to use the resources of the country to the utmost for the prosecution of the war. There is no longer any doubt as to how the majority in Canada feel with regard to conscription. There are to be no more slackers tolerated in the country. The last man is to be required to do his duty. No province need hope longer to shirk its share of the responsibility which rests upon it as a member of the Canadian Federation. If compulsion is required, if harsh measures are necessary to enforce the Military Service Act impartially and fairly, then the majority of the provinces are ready to stand behind the new Government while those steps are taken.

At the time of writing, the returns show that the Government has been given a majority of 40 seats, with 27 more to hear from. The result has exceeded all expectations, although it was carefully forecast. Quebec has, as anticipated, gone almost solid for Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Two members of the Cabinet have gone down in the crash, which fact shows the temper of the people as nothing else does. Ontario has more than offset the record made by Quebec, and the prospect now is that Sir Wilfrid Laurier will not have more than ten followers from this province. Sir Wilfrid had an overwhelming majority in East Quebec, but his decisive defeat in the Ottawa riding which he contested is one of the most significant and gratifying features of the election.

The West has done all that was expected of it, and more. Only three constituencies in British Columbia have been heard from and they are all for Union. If the entire thirteen seats are placed in the same column, no one who has watched the turnover in the West will be surprised.

It is probable that when the returns are all in, the Government will have a majority of fifty seats in Parliament, or three more than the majority secured by the Borden Administration in 1911. But these figures do not represent the entire strength of the new Government. The popular majority behind them is something never before attained by any political party in Canada. The majorities of most of the Union members elected run into the thousands.

And let it be recalled with increasing wonder, at this tremendous landslide, that there are yet nearly 300,000 soldiers to be heard from. And after the figures of yesterday, who can doubt what that verdict from overseas will be? And who is there who will wish that it might be otherwise?

KITCHENER TRUE TO FORM.

KITCHENER RAN true to form yesterday when it helped the constituency of which it forms a part to defeat the Unionist candidate and elect a straight Laurier disciple. Still, Kitchener has not been deprived of the honor of exerting a moral effect on the victory in Ontario yesterday. The tide never set in so strongly in favor of Union as it did dating from the night the Premier of the Dominion was refused a hearing in the rechristened city.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

NOW LET the Kaiser talk of peace.

• • • •

WONDER IF Sir Wilfrid will accept that as a referendum?

• • • •

THERE IS HARDLY even standing room in Ontario for Laurierism.

• • • •

AND NOW Uncle Sam will have more kind things than ever to say of Canada.

• • • •

HE IS THE SAME Rowell Peterborough wanted in 1914, only in a new setting.

• • • •

MR. GORDON evidently failed to deliver either the labor or the women's vote.

• • • •

LET THE WOMEN thank heaven that their husbands, sons and brothers overseas are not to be deserted.

• • • •

IT IS NOT HARD to imagine Mr. Hall and the Examiner severally or as a pair searching today for a convenient hole in the ground.

• • • •

MONEY MAY BE all-powerful, but even when it talks with forty thousand tongues from the columns of a newspaper it sometimes fails to win the election

• • • •

THERE IS NO DOUBT that one province votes as solidly one way as its sister does the other. The only question in dispute seems to be as to which is the aggressor.

• • • •

THERE IS only one person who feels worse today than the man who voted the Laurier ticket, and that is the fellow who recklessly backed up his vote with a bet.

• • • •

THE TUMULT and the shouting dies but there is yet to come the attempts of our contemporary and the London Advertiser to explain just how it happened. Worse luck.

• • • •

MR. JOSEPH WEARING was selected to preach the funeral sermon in Victoria Hall because of his splendid carrying voice, but a man with less vocal power could have broken the sad news more gently.

• • • •

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE for the abnormal majority in West Peterborough? Of course, it is immaterial to the public whether Mr. Hall and his journalistic backer assume it collectively or try to shift the blame the one upon the other.

• • • •

THE OLD LIBERAL party in West Peterborough may after long years recover from the jolt it got yesterday, but the man who converted the once proud organization into a laughing stock will never be forgiven.

• • • •

THE EXAMINER hired a hall to save the people from the cold but no artificial heat could counteract the chills that the reading of those election returns must have sent coursing through their veins.

• • • •

THE REVIEW KNEW there was not a building in the city large enough to hold the crowd that would want to hear the election returns, or it would have provided it. The throng that gathered around our screen needed space

THE WORK OF THE WOMEN.

THE WORK ACCOMPLISHED by the women of West Peterborough in the election yesterday was quietly performed, but was none the less effective. There was not a single mistake made in their campaign, and not one of their plans miscarried. They have demonstrated that they are not to be moved by the old style political orator. Even the suave Mr. G. N. Gordon failed to drive them into the Hall fold. But, conceding that the 1,700 women who had the vote in West Peterborough voted as a unit for the Government, Mr. Hall would still have been defeated if that vote had never been polled. Then there are the ballots of the soldiers, with and for whom the women voted, yet to be reckoned with.

SOME FEATURES OF THE ELECTION.

HAND THE WREATH to the little town of Verdun, in Manitoba. There are 516 voters in that place, and all but eleven of these voted for the Union Government. That beats the record of any voting sub-division in the West, and even Peterborough must acknowledge itself distanced.

Thirteen Union candidates elected in Manitoba and two constituencies still to be heard from. Evidently the people of that province are behind the soldier boys.

Not one of the Liberal members of the Cabinet from Ontario failed of election by a majority that ran over the thousand mark. Hugh Guthrie, the first Liberal to break with Laurier, and who is now Solicitor-General, goes back with a majority of 3,000 behind him. N. W. Rowell got just what he worked for, and richly deserves, when Durham elected him with more than twice the majority which it gave to the straight party candidate six years ago.

There was not a city in Ontario but gave an increased majority for the Government, and the country districts established a similar record for themselves.

COMPANY HOUSING OF EMPLOYES

The United States federal bureau of labor statistics has made an investigation of housing afforded by employers for their employes, the projects concerned dating back to 1831. A report on this was given at the last national housing conference by Leifur Magnusson, special agent for the bureau.

Mr. Magnusson found that employers undertake to house their workmen primarily because there is a dearth of houses; that they also declare company houses are an advantage, maintaining a steady supply of labor, attracting married men, while some declare that it is profitable to them; that employers do not house more than one-third of their employes; that the cotton mills of the south house the largest proportion of their labor supply; that, in general, the mining companies likewise house a relatively large proportion of their labor supply. Preference in the matter of housing is generally given to the higher paid skilled workmen.

Arranged according to the frequency with which they have been noted, the results of company housing were declared to be as follows: Secures a better class of workman, greater stability in the supply of labor, reduction in the number of floaters, better living conditions, greater loyalty from employes, more contented and more efficient workmen, better control of the labor situation, attracts married men, begets greater regularity of employment, a better house for less money for workmen, brings profit to the company, facilitates part time and serves to advertise the company and keep it favorably before the public. From the statement of results it is quite plain that housing is probably one of the most important factors in maintaining a steady supply of labor. That it is a factor in greatly reducing labor turnover, a problem which is now receiving a great deal of attention from employers, seems apparent.

As to the social significance of company housing, Mr. Magnusson declared that many employers frankly recognize that a social responsibility rests on them. Through their control of community streets, lights, public utilities, houses, recreational centers and the industry which supports the economic life of the community, Mr. Magnusson said, employers are in a position to control the character of the community. It was difficult to see, he thought, how this responsibility can be avoided in a mining town. The isolation of mining towns, the impermanence of many of them, the shifting character of the labor force, the absence of local self-government, all cumulate to throw the responsibility upon the employer.

Both success and failure have attended company housing. One reason for the latter, Mr. Magnusson discovered, was failure to study the type of house desired by workmen. In some instances, also, maintenance has been neglected even where good houses have originally been provided, and restrictions in the matter of boarders have been almost utterly disregarded. That, of course, tends toward failure.

It is evident that the government's study of the subject must be regarded as authoritative. It should prove of value in determining how best to supply a pressing need.

(By LEE PAPE.)

Pop was reeding up in the setting room yestidday, and me and my Cuzzin Artie and Puds Simkins was up there, and we started to play exemption bord, me and Artie being the exemption bord, and Puds being the one claiming exemption, wawking up to the setting room table ware me and Artie was setting, and saying, I wunt to be exempted, I better not join the army, I got a fearse weak hart and every time I breeth deep it stops beeting.

You go out and fite for your country and be carefil not to breethe deep, I sed.

Yes, sir, sed Puds. And he wawked out the setting room dore and wawked rite in agen, saying, Good morning, Id like to be exempted, I got a wife and 3 little babies to sipport.

Cant the babies go out and werk? sed Artie.

The oldest one is ony 6 weeks old, sed Puds.

Well they awt to be able to sew on buttons or sumthing, next case, sed Artie.

Yes, sir, sed Puds. And he wawked out and in agen, saying, Good afternoon, I don't think I awt to be a soldier, Im blind in both eyes and Im so deff I coodent heer the cannons, so I woodent be able to tell ware the battle was, and besides, theres 18 in our family and Im the ony one can werk, and if I had to go to war the rest wood all starve to deth and blame me for it.

Wich jest then pop quick put his paper down, saying, Hold, pardon, repreeve. This exemption bord is breaking my hart and you wood be doing a grate favor by taking this poor sole out in the street and giving him your decision.

Wich the exemption bord did, telling him he coodent have a exemption and then getting up a game of prisners base.

TODAY'S STORY

"I wonder if this fellow is really blind?—there is so much shamming even among our best beggars," mused Simon Simons, honorary president of the Economical Sports.

And he looked long at the black-spectacled mendicant who was sitting on the pavement, holding his tin cup out in front of him, and then resolved, "I'll just see for myself. As Epitetus so truly said 'the proof of the egg is in the heating.'"

And, walking past the beggar, he dropped a cent into his tin cup, at the same time, under cover of the rattle made by the penny, deftly removing a nickel.

"Thank you kindly, sir," said the beggar, as Simon Simons passed on.

"Perhaps he saw what I did and is only pretending he didn't," thought Simon Simons when he had got to the next corner. And to make sure, he retraced his steps, dropped the nickel in the cup, and took a dime out.

"May your shadow never grow less," said the beggar.

"Well, perhaps he's blind after all," mused Simon Simons. Still, to make doubly sure, he walked past once again, dropped the dime in and took out a quarter.

"May you live to be two hundred, sir," said the beggar

"He's really blind, all right," Simon Simons said to himself as he pursued the even tenor of his way.

"Whether the results of the elections suit us or not," he said, "the thing for us to do now is to all put our shoulders under the wheel and see this war through to a finish."

GOVERNMENT MAJORITY AT NOON TODAY, 48 WITH SEVEN RIDINGS TO HEAR FROM

Unionists Win 72 Out of The 82 Seats in Ontario---West Almost Solid For Union---Laurier Gets 62 of Quebec's 65 Ridings

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Dec. 18.—Election results received up to noon today by the Canadian Press, Limited, indicate that the Government will have a clear majority of 48 seats, with three in doubt, two of which had been previously credited to the Government, and one to the Opposition, and four seats in which the election is deferred. The following is a summary by the provinces:

	Govern-ment	Oppo-sition	In doubt	De-fer'd
Ontario	72	10	0	0
Quebec	3	62	0	0
Nova Scotia	5	9	0	2
N. Brunswick	7	4	0	0
B. Columbia	12	0	1	0
Manitoba	13	1	0	1
P. E. Island	0	4	0	0
Saskatchewan	16	0	0	0
Alberta	10	0	2	0
Total	138	90	3	4

The Canadian p[illegible] Union Government by a majo[illegible] that leaves no room for qu[illegible] their will to carry on the war to victory. The solid opposition of [illegible]—only three Union[illegible] ed in the whole province, and th[illegible] in English-speaking constituencies the vote of the French element [illegible] several Ontario ridings, [illegible] by the votes of all those whom [illegible] call of patriotism has left cold, are snowed under by the mass of the Conservatives and Liberals all over the country. Sir Robert Borden will [illegible] back to Ottawa with a [illegible] at least 51 members, which [illegible] increased when the four deferred elections are held.

Ontario did its share by returning Union supporters in all [illegible] ridings, and in at least two of these the men elected as Laurierites, [illegible] of Kent, and Duncan Ross, of West Middlesex, voted against their leader on conscription. But if Ontario did well, the West rallied to the standard of Unionism in a manner that was remarkable. West of the Great Lakes Sir Wilfrid Laurier won only two seats, Provencher in Manitoba and one in British Columbia. Saskatchewan returned 16 Unionists, Alberta 12, and British Columbia 10 or 11. The sweep was accompanied by tremendous majorities for the Unionist candidates. In the Western cities Laurier candidates fell thousands of votes short. Centre Winnipeg supported Union to the tune of a 13,000 majority, a record that, in view of the size of the constituencies compares well with North Toronto's 14,00 majority to Sir George Foster.

Only in the Maritime Provinces did Laurier candidates make anything like a showing. In Prince Edward Island they carried three seats and in Nova Scotia won eight, compared with six won by Unionists. The Nova Scotia final return will probably be an even break, since the two Halifax seats for which the election has been deferred are conceded to the Unionists. In New Brunswick the Unionists have a margin of two to three seats.

Quebec did all that Sir Wilfrid Laurier expected of it. In fact, the Unionists won a seat less than they expected, but the two English-speaking Ministers, Hon. J. C. Doherty and Hon. C. C. Ballantyne, got through, as did Sir Herbert Ames. Outside of Montreal, however, not a Unionist was elected, both Hon. Mr. Blondin and Hon. Albert Sevigny being defeated.

It was a significant fact that with one or two exceptions, the ridings that Laurier carried in Ontario had either a strong German or French element. After the organized insult to Sir Robert Borden at Kitchener it was evident where the pro-Grman element in North Waterloo stood and the big majority rolled up for Euler, the Laurier candidate, was no surprise. In South Perth also voters of German descent made their presence felt, and South Bruce, which was won by Ruben Truax, Laurier candidate, has two or three townships in which voters of German descent predominate. The loss of the Essex seats to Laurier candidates was a surprise. The seats won by the Laurier candidates in the Eastern townships were carried by the solidarity of the French-Canadian vote.

With one exception the endorsed candidates defeated independent Unionists, the exception being Brant, where Col. Harry Cockshutt, the soldier candidate, defeated John Harold, the Liberal-Unionist. An interesting win for Unionism was that of Evan Fraser over W. M. German in Welland. Mr. German supported conscription, but he was nevertheless a strong Laurier partisan. He was regarded as unbeatable, but he fell over 500 votes short.

The four deferred elections—two in Halifax, one in Nelson, Manitoba, and the other in the Yukon—will increase the majority by four, all being regarded as safe Government constituencies. The returns from British Columbia were indefinite, but it appeared that only one Laurierite had been elected.

In a number of constituencies the vote will be affected by the soldiers' ballots. This is the case chiefly in Ontario constituencies, where the successful supporters of Sir Wilfrid Laurier had small majorities in almost every case. The khaki vote will probably swing several of these to the Government side of the House.

One of the surprises of the election was the defeat of Sir Wilfrid in Ottawa, where Mr. A. E. Fripp won the seat from the Opposition leader by a safe majority. Of course Sir Wilfrid also has a seat in Quebec City, but he has usually carried several constituencies for his party in former contests. Hon. W. L. M. King was also among the slain, being defeated in North York by J. A. M. Armstrong by 557 votes.

Adam Model C-150—$203.44.

BUY! This Genuine
NEW EDISON
DIAMOND-DISC PHONOGRAPH
Before The Price Goes Up!

YOU can save enough, by purchasing your New Edison NOW, to secure a nice little record library. If you intend to get a phonograph by next summer, do so NOW and save this real money.

THE greatly increased cost of all materials has made it necessary to increase prices, but, while practically every leading Talking Machine Company, except Edison, has taken advantage of the big Christmas demand and increased their prices NOW, Edison, with the same consideration for the public that has marked his every move, is not increasing his prices until January 1st, 1918.

HE has done this for YOU, because his costs have increased as much, if not more, than the others who have already raised prices.

BUT, in addition to actnally saving money by purchasing your New Edison NOW, you bring to your home for Christmas the Priceless Gift of Music's Re-creation. In contrast to the metallic approximation of Talking Machines, the New Edison reproduces the human voice with such fidelity and accuracy that no human ear can detect a shade of difference between the living artists and the New Edison's Re-creation of their voices—or instrumental performances.

YOU will appreciate the great advancement in sound production the New Edison has accomplished just as soon as you hear it. Come to our store now, while there is still time to make the saving in price and secure your NEW EDISON for Christmas.

"I DON'T SEE HOW I STOOD IT," HE SAYS

STEVENSON SUFFERED SEVEN YEARS AND FELL OFF THIRTY POUNDS.

"I had fallen off thirty pounds or more and when I look back on the condition I was in before I took Tanlac I don't see how I stood it as long as I did," said George Stevenson of 174 Rhodes avenue, Toronto.

"My strength was all gone," he continued, "as a result of seven years suffering from stomach trouble, and some days I just felt like quitting work for good. I had no more appetite than if there wasn't such a thing and simply had to force down the little I did eat. In spite of the fact that I had to diet myself I always suffered from indigestion. My food seemed to form a lump in my stomach and at times the gas would crowd my heart so my breathing was difficult. I constantly had pains all through my sides and when I stooped down I would get so dizzy I would almost topple over. I was troubled with diarrhoea all the time and had reached the point where I honestly don't believe I could have worked but a few weeks longer. It seems to me I tried everything but with it all I got worse, and I had about lost faith in all medicines.

"I had read lots about Tanlac but had been disappointed with so many medicines I hesitated about trying it. But I was in so much misery I could hardly stand it and thinking there was a chance of Tanlac giving me some relief I finally bought a bottle. Well, I have certainly been surprised and have never had anything to gratify me more than what a few bottles of this medicine has done for me. Before finishing half of my first bottle, my appetite had picked up and I began to feel better in every way. My stomach trouble and indigestion have left me now, I have already regained eight pounds of my lost flesh and without going into further details, I'll just say I'm in the pink of condition—feeling great. It's a pleasure now for me to work and a pleasure to tell the people the cause of it. I don't like publicity but Tanlac has put me on my feet a well man when I was down and out and I feel that my statement might cause others to find relief."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. N. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co. Ltd.

FILLING OUT A CHECK.

It is a Good Rule Always to Write the Stub First.

In a big store a woman was paying with a check for some goods she had just bought, and she was carefully filling in the stub of her check book first. "Oh, don't stop for that!" urged her shopping companion, who was in a hurry. "You can do that when you get home."

Unmoved, the careful woman finished the stub with special care, then wrote the check, gave it to the salesman and said to her impatient friend: "Before I was married I took care of some of my father's accounts. The first time he ever asked me to fill out a set of blank checks for him so he could sign them he told me: 'One rule you must always observe—write the stub first. Make a vow to yourself, like unto the vow of Jephthah, that you will never write a check until the stub is filled. If for any reason you should fail later to write the check it would be a simple matter to cancel the stub, but if you write a check and leave the stub blank you open the door to a hundred chances of mistake. No one's memory can be trusted on that subject. Never try to trust yours. Let the law of "the stub first" be to you as the law of the Medes and the Persians.' I have always found it perfectly easy to follow that rule, and that is one reason I have a bank account today. My husband is never afraid I will make him any trouble with it."

Most Fortunate.

VOTING AT THE FRONT.

One Poll Clerk Wounded While Guarding Ballot Boxes.

CANADIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN THE FIELD, Dec. 18.—No less than 87 per cent. of the total vote of the Canadian corps had been polled by 8 o'clock Friday night. Some units have already polled one hundred per cent. of the ballots, while the general experience to date is that the number of men refusing to exercise the franchise is almost negligible in specific units, although the aggregate may be appreciable.

The election officers have taken their boxes with them on the tramways behind the lines, and have voted men as they worked. In the same way they have gone through the front-line trenches, giving men in the firing line their opportunity to exercise the franchise. One poll clerk has been seriously wounded, a presiding officer has been sent down to the base as a casualty, while one gunner voting beside his gun was hit by shrapnel.

Polling booths have been damaged by shell fire and by bombs, but there has been no serious interruption to the election work, and, above all, no interference with the actual war operations.

Tribunal on the Carpet.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 18.—As a result of a series of alleged irregularities, action has been taken to remove the members of St. Boniface Tribunal No. 71. Acting on order of the Department of Justice, E. R. Chapman, registrar for Manitoba, has made a long affidavit to show how this tribunal has disregarded instructions.

The members of the tribunals are Magistrate C. Henri Royal, of St. Boniface and ex-Ald. Jos. A. Cusson.

Unidentified Bodies Will Be Buried.

HALIFAX, Dec. 18.—Dr. W. D. Finn, the medical examiner, has issued a notice that all unidentified bodies at Chebucto mortuary not identified by Sunday night at 10 o'clock will be buried.

Sanitary conditions at the morgue are in perfect order and no danger of contagion exists.

[illegible]

While on the subject of food it is interesting that women lecturers have recently been engaged by the Norwegian Government to instruct housewives in the art of preparing seal flesh for the table. This, however, is by no means a new departure. At one time seal was regularly eaten by the Cornish folk, and even to-day the older inhabitants will tell you that it is by no means unpalatable. Stephen Hawker, the man who has done so much to immortalise Cornish scenery, tells a story of how when he and a brother cleric called at "The Ship," Boscastle, for dinner, the landlady said she had "Meat—meat and taties," but refused to give details of the joint. Hawker sat down to the dish and, as he says, found seal "wonderfully good."—Dundee Advertiser.

Straight Lines.

In skirts for general or sport wear, the straight lines are usually employed, says the Dry Goods Economist. Plaits are noted in some models, sometimes the entire skirt is plaited, sometimes plaits are used in cluster effect. Many novel ways of introducing plaits have been brought out.

Agitators Complicate The Difficult Problem Of British Rule in India

NOW that the British are trying to solve the problem of ruling India in a liberal, modern, and progressive manner, the efforts of certain agitators who have become rich as well as notorious by exploiting their views is extremely ill-timed. They are making it difficult for the English rulers to act, and handicapping even the best friends of India who want to see that country elevated to the position of an equal partner in the Empire, like Canada and Australia. The venerable figure of Mrs. Annie Besant, theosophist, orator, and politician, stands out prominently as a woman who seems determined to make herself a "martyr" (?) for the cause of home rule in India. It was recently announced in the British House of Commons that the Madras Government had offered to relax its prohibition of Mrs. Annie Besant, so far as it affected her theosophical and religious activities. Mrs. Besant declined the concession on the ground that it was impossible to separate her theosophical and political work.

Mrs. Besant was expelled from the presidency of Bombay last year for preaching revolt in India. Later she was forbidden by the Indian Government to participate in any meetings, deliver lectures or publish her writings in India. She and her associates were prohibited from residing in Madras city and were ordered to remain within certain areas.

MRS. ANNIE BESANT

The Government of India, the dispatches tell us, fearing her influence on Young India, through her burning eloquence when advocating Home Rule, "interned" her. Before she went she explained her political activities in the columns of her now-silenced daily, the Madras New India. After categorically denying "entering into or taking cognizance of any conspiracy, or holding communication with the enemy," she goes on to say:

"I know that some post-cards with my portrait, purporting to come from Germany and said to be seditious have been sent to friends. I have been told of them, but have not seen a copy. They may have been fabricated in Germany, but I have nothing to do with them."

Mrs. Besant explains that her political propaganda has been entirely loyal, and that she has been demanding nothing more than the concessions asked for by Indians belonging to the Indian National Congress and the Muslim League. These powerful bodies, composed of Indians of all races and creeds, declared, at the end of last year, that——

". . . . India must be lifted from the position of a dependency to that of an equal partner in the Empire. To that end they drafted a scheme of reforms, which proposed that the Legislative Councils should be much enlarged and elected on as broad a basis as possible, with a four-fifths majority of elected members, and that control of taxation and expenditure—the power of granting or refusing supply—should be placed in the hands of this Legislative Council, so as to subordinate the Executive to the Legislative Council."

The King's Beard.

An interesting story is told in connection with the Swedish actor, Ferrasi, who was called upon to take the part of Oscar I. in a play under that name, at Stockholm, Sweden. The actor was ordered by the director of the opera to make up with a full beard, but during one of the intermissions, he hunted up the director and told him that Oscar I. never wore such a beard. "What kind of a beard did he have then?"

To this Ferrasi replied "Moustache and goatee, like Napoleon III."

"How do you know that?"

The conclusive reply was offered, "From my postage stamp collection."

The change was made and at the second performance the public noticed with astonishment how King Oscar had altered the cut of his beard. To stamp collectors, it is hardly necessary to point out that Mr. Ferrasi secured his information by looking up the issue of Norway, 1856-7.

VALUE IN DEAD LETTERS.

The Loss and Trouble That Are Caused by Sheer Carelessness.

More than two and a quarter million dollars' worth of checks, drafts, money orders and other valuable papers were found in undelivered letters by the dead letter office during the last year, and practically all were restored to their owners.

The first assistant postmaster general announces that the dead letter division handled 10,8[illegible] letters and parcels during the year, a slight increase over the previous year. One-third of these letters and parcels, or 3,677,194, was delivered. 101,485 contained things of value without clew to their senders and were held for claimants, 7,010,436 had to be destroyed and 41,775 still are being investigated.

In addition to the valuable papers, with a face value of $2,306,110, found in undelivered letters, many contained stamps, and some currency was found loose in the mails.

The dead mail received by the dead letter division during the year contained 677,700 misdirected letters, 115,760 unaddressed letters, 228,700 letters held for postage, 440,200 letters written on hotel letter paper by persons unknown to the hotels and 104,700 letters bearing fictitious signatures.

LOST APPETITE, POOR BLOOD

C. E. Sapper says Dr. Cassell's Tablets Best Tonic Anyone Can Take for Weakness.

Sapper A. Hartley, Canadian Engineers (home address, 906, Trafalgar-street, London, Ont.), says:—"I used Dr. Cassell's Tablets when I was in the South African War, and finding benefit have taken them since whenever I felt run-down. In my opinion they are the best tonic anyone can take for loss of appetite, poorness of the blood, and general weakness of the system. I never fail to recommend them, and mean to have some with me always on active service."

YOUNG'S POINT.

Young's Point, Dec. 18 —(Special to The Review.)—The death occurred here of Miss Rose M. Scollard at the family residence, on Sunday, the 16th inst. The late Miss Scollard had been ailing the past year. She leaves to mourn her loss, her mother, and one brother, Captain Scollard, who have the sympathy of the community here.

We had quite a number of funerals here lately, there being six in the past five weeks.

Messrs. Thos. Northey and Wm Gillman of Lakefield are repairing the two lower gates of the locks here.

The department will take out the present lock and replace them with new ones.

The Sunday School Class of St. Aden's Church are holding an entertainment and tea, in aid of the church on Thursday evening, the 20th inst.

Mrs. Walter Young is visiting her daughter, Miss Agnes Young, who is in training at St. Michael's hospital, Toronto.

We are experiencing very cold weather the past two weeks. On Sunday morning some of the thermometers registered 30 below zero. The sleighing is very good at present, and the snow that fell on Thursday greatly improved the roads. Wood haulers are taking advantage of the sleighing and quite a number of loads are passing through here.

ARSON CHARGE BEFORE JUDGE HUYCKE'S COURT

Several Grand Jurors Fail to Answer To Names.

Death and illness, made several vacancies in the Grand Jury, at the opening of the county court and general sessions in the city council chamber, this morning, and in order to complete the jury, petit jurors were called upon to serve. Robert Harstone was chosen as foreman. There are four criminal cases on the docket, made up of charges of arson, bigamy, perjury and false pretences. Several civil cases were also to be heard.

In concluding his address to the jurors, Judge Huycke said it was eminently fitting to see the Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes hanging together in the chamber. If humanity and christianity was to be saved, it would be saved by the efforts of the two nations the flags represented. "May they be successful," said his honor. Judge Huycke referred to the fact of a United States battleship hearing the noise of the explosion at Halifax and fearing an enemy attack, rushed with all speed to give aid. When the real facts were learned, every man left the ship and took part in the rescue work.

The first case called that of Smith vs Dickson, will be heard at the next sittings. Since the charge was laid, the defendant died.

Judge Huycke granted a renewal of bail of $5000 for J. S. Knapman, on a charge of theft. The case was adjourned to the June sessions.

The case of Martha Ann Althouse in which arson is the charge was proceeded with.

The criminal charges are:

King vs. Frederick Oakes, bigamy.

King vs. Frederick Oakes, perjury.

King vs. Martha Ann Althouse, arson.

King vs. A. E. Stevens, false pretences.

USE MUCH WOOL EMBROIDERY

Paris Designers Place Unusual Designs on Almost Every Kind of Material, Even Chiffon.

Since the simple silhouette is an established fact, an opportunity has been given women to spend their time and energy upon the charming details of their costumes. In America we have been so busily engaged changing the cut of skirts and the width of sleeves that we had no spare moments to spend upon the little hand touches, the expert finishings, and the hemstitched edges. These seemingly insignificant niceties are really important, says a writer in the New York Times. In Paris they realized that ages ago and took advantage of the fact, sending us each season creations to excite envy because of their infinite attention to the little things that put their stamp of perfection upon the finished gown.

Wool embroidery, the Parisian edict is, shall be an important factor in the trimming of winter frocks. They are drawing woolen threads through it on silk and satin, on serge and velvet, and —yes—even on chiffon. And the patterns? They are no longer effects of a group of roses or a chain of daisies stamped laboriously upon the material and then worked over in tiny, close lying stitches. The artist takes a large-eyed needle and a strand of bright-colored wool and works out a design directly upon the gown, directly upon the spot where it will live until the whole creation has become passe.

Pockets to Go.

As to materials for the fall gowns the manufacturers claim that, just as designers for men have promised to reduce the amount of material used by the elimination of the large pockets, so designers for women will make the wool suits narrower and plainer for the same reason.

The pocket will undoubtedly go along with the other unnecessary appendages. The manufacturers are making the cotton back with wool filling for the same reason.

Well Informed.

"She knows all the tightwads in the community."

"That so? I suppose she has passed around a few subscription lists."

"No; but her husband passes the plate in church every Sunday."—Detroit Free Press.

At the Concert.

"Why did so many people yawn all at once just now?"

"Didn't you notice that the critic over there in the front row yawned first? Everybody else wants to show that he, too, is a musical sharp."—New York Post.

NEW CHANCELLOR FEARED FAMINE

How He Attracted Attention of the Kaiser.

A TOOL OF REACTIONARIES

Dr. Georg Michaelis Has Been for Many Years in the Imperial Service of Germany—He is a Typical Bureaucrat and Can not Be Expected to Aid Cause of Freedom.

DR. GEORG MICHAELIS, the German Chancellor, was the first Prussian official publicly to warn Germany of the peril of starvation. Four months ago he declared in a speech that famine might overtake Germany before the end of the present year.

The Chancellor is sixty years old. Since 1875, when he was eighteen years old, he has been in the service of the imperial government. His career is that of the typical Prussian bureaucrat. He lacks political individuality and force of character. If the Kaiser and the Crown Prince had aimed at the selection of a handy tool for their desperate political game they could not have chosen a better suited figure than Michaelis.

Dr. Michaelis began his climb in the Ministry of Justice. In 1885 he was sent to Tokio to become lecturer on law and political economy in the German Institute. In 1889 he again joined the staff of the Department of Justice, rising gradually from one office to another. In 1897 he became the chief director of the Department on Church and School Affairs. In 1902 he was Governor of Breslau. In 1905 he was decorated by the Kaiser for his faithful service. In 1909 he was appointed under secretary of the Prussian Ministry of Finance, in which capacity he served up to last February.

DR. GEORG MICHAELIS

At the beginning of the present year Dr. Michaelis created a sensation with an article he contributed to the Cologne Volks-Zeitung, in which he warned that peace would not solve immediately Germany's food difficulties. "We must expect," he wrote, "for a considerable time, perhaps for many years, further limitation of consumption and rationing as regards the most important foodstuffs. Germany, in the coming years of peace, will have recourse almost exclusively to such foodstuffs as are produced within her own borders. Tonnage will be very scarce, and the deterioration of the rate of exchange also will oblige Germany to import as little as possible.

"Thus, even after peace," concluded the Under Secretary, "it will be necessary to keep the belt pulled tight, and there must be further sharp rationing. The yearning cry, 'Give us peace! Give us more bread!' has no inner basis. Of this we must remain conscious, and not cry for peace on account of the scarcity from which we suffer."

This statement evidently gave Michaelis the post of Prussian food dictator, whose function is to co-operate with the imperial food dictator. A short while after he took control of the office, early last March, Dr. Michaelis came out with a speech which may have a great deal to do with his present appointment. He plainly warned Germany that there was grave danger of famine before the new harvest is gathered in.

"We have in the third year of the war discovered," said the food dictator, "that among all sections of the people the general feeling evidenced is not one of that endurance for which we had hoped. This is human nature, but it is highly deplorable, and may have most serious results.

"We are confronted with the thought of what would happen if this measure (rigid national rationing) also should fail and what grim starvation there would be if suddenly, during the closing of the economic year, we should find there was an insufficiency, and we could not hold out. The ensuing misery would be indescribable."

DOWN TO FIRST CAUSES.

There Is Often More Truth Than Fiction in Juvenile Philosophy.

"I LEARNED a new word today," said the first baby. "It appears to be connected, in some remote manner, with a person who apparently had something to do with us before we came into conscious existence."

"You're an awful bore," interrupted the second baby. "Out with that word."

"Mother."

"Mother! What did you say it meant?

"Well, mother, as I understand, is an unknown being who produced us."

"Oh, a force or a person?"

"That is precisely where I am undecided. There are moments when I believe in a personal mother; then again, a first cause."

"But even then, after you had settled that doctrinal point, you would come to another. Who made mother?"

The first baby reflected for a moment.

"Oh, well, that isn't fair," he exclaimed at last. "One must have a belief."

He leaned toward a large, empty, rectangular paper box cover and drew it toward him with his chubby fingers.

"Now, here," he said, "is an instance. In an idle moment I have been attempting to decipher the inscription upon this box. It is evidently the name of some unknown god."

"What do you make of it?"

"It reads D-r-e-s-s-m-a-k-e-r."

"Well," said the second baby, "go on."

"I was only going to remark," said the first baby, "that possibly, after all, mother is not a first cause. In the great scheme of things—who knows?—maybe she was created by—Dressmaker."—Life.

A Fatal Double Meaning.

"There seems to be coolness between you and Mrs. Brown."

"Yes, but I can't imagine what the trouble is."

"Have you said anything to her lately?"

"Why, she mentioned last week she was living just across the lake from me, and I told her I hoped she'd drop in some time, and she hasn't spoken since."—Delineator.

Worthy to Wear a Crown.

"Are you sure you love your neighbor as yourself?" asked St. Peter, who was cross examining the new arrival.

"Yes," answered the applicant for a golden crown. "For ten years he used my telephone to carry on his business and I never complained."

"Enter, my good man," said St. Peter, with much feeling.—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Army Aviation Service.

Significant, in view of the popular conception of flying as extreme daredevilitry, is the record of the United States army aviation service from Jan. 1 to Dec. 26, 1916. During that period 7,087 flights were made by military pilots. In all 3,357 hours were spent in the air, which means that more than nine hours each day of the year some soldier airman was aloft. The distance traveled amounted to approximately 251,775 miles, or slightly more than ten times the circumference of the earth. There was no fatality. Evidently these figures cannot be fairly compared with current railroad and motorcar statistics. Contrasts are not needed, however, to accent their import. Sane flying is not yet accident proof and possibly never will be, but neither is it extremely foolhardy.—Searle Hendee in Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Synopsis of Canadian Northwest Land Regulations

The sole head of a family or any male over 18 years old, who was at the commencement of the present war, and has since continued to be, a British subject or a subject of an allied or neutral country, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion Land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for District. Entry by proxy may be made on certain conditions. Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of land in each of three years.

In certain districts a homesteader may secure an adjoining quarter-section as pre-emption. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Reside six months in each of three years after earning homestead patent and cultivate 50 acres extra. May obtain pre-emption patent as soon as homestead patent on certain conditions.

A settler after obtaining homestead patent, if he cannot secure a pre-emption, may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

Holders of entries may count time of employment as farm laborers in Canada during 1917, as residence duties under certain conditions.

When Dominion Lands are advertised or posted for entry, returned soldiers who have served overseas and have been honorably discharged, receive one day priority in applying for entry at local Agent's Office (but not Sub-Agency). Discharge papers must be presented to Agent.

BOWSER AROUSED

This Time It's to the Need of Political Reform.

READY TO TAKE THE LEAD.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 12 by Associated Literary Press.]

THAT Mr. Bowser had something on his mind was plain enough to Mrs. Bowser the moment he entered the house, and all through the dinner hour she saw that he was anxious to communicate it, but she expressed no curiosity and held him off until they were seated for the evening. Then she carelessly inquired if he had discovered a new spring and summer tonic.

"I shall have callers this evening," he said as he smiled at her benignly, "and the result of the call may change our whole lives."

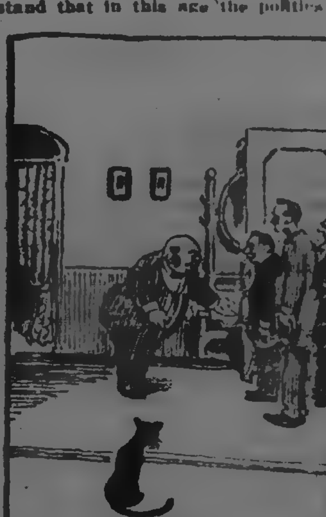
"What sort of callers?"

"Gentlemen, of course. There will be from three to five. Yes, this evening may be considered an epoch in our history."

"If there are any epochs going on I should like to know what they are. Hadn't you better explain matters?"

Mr. Bowser walked up and down for a few minutes with dignified tread, and the family cat, which had been sleeping on the lounge, opened her eyes in a lazy way and watched his movements. By and by he said:

"Mrs. Bowser, you are no politician, of course, but you may possibly understand that in this age the politics of this country is corrupt beyond comparison. What we want is a wave of reform."



RECEIVED THE COMMITTEE.

"And are you going to start to wave?" she sarcastically queried.

Mr. Bowser to Start Things In Motion.

"I—I am—that is, I probably am. The gentlemen are coming here this evening to talk about it. If in their judgment I am the proper person I shall have the honor of setting the wave in motion. I am for honest politics and a pure administration."

"I thought it was some such nonsense," she slowly replied. "On three or four occasions you have mixed in politics and made a donkey of yourself, but it seems you haven't got enough."

"There you are! That's you! If I had a plan to put clothing on the back of every savage on earth you'd oppose it. I was an ass to say anything to you about it!"

"Mr. Bowser, you have been voting for thirty years. Have you ever known honest reform in politics?"

"Of course I have!"

"Never! There is no such a thing. It's the same thing over and over again each year. If anybody has made you believe that you can bring about any change for the better they have taken you for a fool. Why, when they wanted you to run for alderman in this ward on a reform ticket they wanted a fund of $1,000 to buy up votes and pay saloon bills!"

"But this is different," he protested. "What is wanted is moral influence. Let twenty-five good men band together to purify politics and the movement will spread from state to state in a week. It isn't a question of money, but of character. I am simply to lend my influence to be one of the stepping stones, as it were."

"Well, you'll get stepped on fast enough! Your committee is ringing the doorbell, and I'll go upstairs. Don't get so excited over reform as to put a mortgage on the furniture."

The Committee Arrives.

Mr. Bowser received the committee. There were five of them. They were headed by an ex-alderman who had deliberately sacrificed a two dollar ticket to a boxing match in the interests of political reform. Even before all the gentlemen had taken their seats he whispered in Mr. Bowser's ear:

"Say, old man, if you want this movement to be a success you want to bring up decanter and glasses. The boys are expecting something at least seven years old."

Mr. Bowser turned pale, but said nothing in reply. Neither did he produce the antidote for dry cotton. When the committee were seated he looked them over and mentally rejoiced that Mrs. Bowser had not caught sight of them. Then he said:

"Gentlemen, as I was given to understand this thing this afternoon, the idea is reform in politics?"

"That's it!" chorused the five.

"We propose to start a wave of reform which shall roll from Maine to Texas!"

"We do."

"I am no politician, as I informed your delegate. I have never held a political office in my life. There have been years at a time when I have not even gone to the polls to vote."

"But you are an honest, respectable man and desire honest methods," said the ex-alderman.

"Yes; I can say that."

Facts and Figures.

"Then you are the man for us, and we'll figure a bit. You don't happen to have anything in the house to drink, eh?"

"I haven't."

"You ought to be prepared for the wave of reform, but we can all go out to a saloon after the business is done. I've got our ward ticket made out. You see, the boys want me for alderman again. I don't think any of em had reason to complain of me when I was in."

"Not much!" answered one of the group with great heartiness. "It was always a square divide."

"And what is my part in the campaign to be?" asked Mr. Bowser as he laid down the ticket.

"Speaking, sir," was the reply. "You can go about speaking and start the wave."

"And wave this crowd into office, I suppose?"

"That's it, and you'll find it a paying job too. Here are the figures."

"The figures about what?"

"The profits, sir. There are six of us, and I figure that there will be at least $20,000 to divide among us per year. You'll get your whack of that as straight as a string. Any campaign funds you advance are to be paid back out of the pot before it is divided. Is that plain?"

"I—I don't think so. We start in to reform?"

"We do."

"And we reform?"

"We do."

"And then—then what?"

"We divide the profits."

"But how do we make any profits?"

"Why, we crowd the other fellows out and get their places and their chances, don't we? A blind man can see that. Got your first speech ready?"

The Incident Is Closed.

Mr. Bowser had about twenty words to say in reply. They were words that lifted each member of the committee out of his chair and opened his eyes very wide. Then he headed the procession down the hall, and the cat brought up the rear. It was a solemn procession. There was a painful silence as each caller put on his hat. All were ready to go out when the ex-alderman said:

"Old man, you've thrown dis crowd down, but don't get giddy over it. We know how to get even!"

"Good night, sir—good night, sir!" stiffly replied Mr. Bowser as he closed the door with a bang.

He was standing in front of the mantel when Mrs. Bowser came downstairs and quietly asked:

"I thought I heard a roaring, booming sound down here, and I came down to see if the wave of reform had been set in motion."

Mr. Bowser glared at her, but made no reply.

"Or won't the wave start until you get your whack of aldermanic stealings?" she continued.

Mr. Bowser gasped and choked, but he could not get out a word, and as Mrs. Bowser returned to her room the cat followed her and left him to wonder how the bottom had dropped out.

OLDEST VOTER IN CANADA.

Mr. Joseph Mantell Turned Out to "Back Boys."

Toronto, Dec. 18.—Probably the oldest voter in Canada, Joseph Mantell, 49 Rainsford Road, arrived in his cutter at the poll early yesterday morning, and "plumped" his vote for Controller Tom Foster, the Unionist nominee for East York. Mr. Mantell is 107 years of age.

"I'm going to use my ballot to back up the boys at the front," said the old man, as he took the precious bit of paper in his hand, and marked his ballot for Union.

ENGINEER DEAD, FIREMAN DYING

Onion Chowder—

2 quarts boiling water
1 pint minced onion
1 quart potatoes cut in dice
1¼ teaspoons salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
3 tablespoons sweet dripping
1 tablespoon fine herbs

Cook the onion and dripping together for half an hour, but cook them slowly so that the onion will not brown. At the end of this time add the boiling water, potatoes, salt, and pepper and cook one hour longer, then add the fine herbs and serve.

Three of the fascinating sport girls in the famous musical comedy success, "Very Good, Eddie," at The Grand Saturday, matinee and night, December 22nd.

The scenic production of "Very Good, Eddie," the musical comedy success announced to appear at "The Grand" next Saturday, Dec. 22, for matinee and evening, is unusually elaborate. The first act shows the deck of a Hudson River boat on a summer afternoon, and the second act takes place in the quaint Rip Van Winkle Inn in the Catskills. This act was designed and executed under the personal direction of Elsie DeWolfe, famous interior decorator of New York and London. The same care has been shown in the selection and costuming of the swagger fashion chorus, which is such a fascinating feature of "Very Good, Eddie." The company that will be seen here is the "Number One" organization, coming direct from the Royal Alexandra, Toronto, and His Majesty's in Montreal. It hails direct from the Princess Theatre, New York, where it scored the biggest success of any musical comedy produced in a dozen years.

AN APPEAL BY THE RED CROSS SOCIETY, PETERBORO

To Every Woman Who is Interested in Our Sick and Wounded Soldiers.

The following telegram has been received by the secretary of the local society from headquarters: "Pneumonia jackets urgently needed in England. Will Peterborough make and ship immediately two hundred?" —Plumptree.

This is not a request that we can take our time in complying with. It is an extremely urgent appeal which must be answered in the affirmative without a moment's unnecessary delay.

This is the Christmas season, and though most of us find it very hard and difficult to exhibit the happy, cheerful spirit supposed to pertain to this season of the year, still we are trying. In spite of the terrible strain, and the intense anxiety of the present situation on the Western front, for the sake of the little ones to have a happy Christmas for them, "ere the sorrow comes with years."

In spite of the fact that this is a busy time with women generally, we put forth this appeal with every confidence that tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock will find the Red Cross workroom at the Library full to overflowing with earnest women making pneumonia jackets for the men who are "giving their greatest" for our sakes and for those who are to come after us. Our own Christmas will be happier and brighter if we answer this appeal enthusiastically so that in our hearts we may honestly feel that we "have done what we could."

Reading between the lines of this telegram, we see visions of thousands of our men sick and dying as the result of the tremendous attempt the Germans are going to make to break our lines on the Western front. Will the women of Peterborough who have never failed in any good work they have tried to do, come tomorrow in answer to this, the most urgent appeal made for a long time, so that the two hundred pneumonia jackets we are asked for may very speedily be on their way to where they are sorely needed? The heroes of this war are giving more than a few hours per week to their tragic task. What will we women of Peterborough give?

Specials at The Royal Tonight

The programme at the Royal tonight is of a specially "worth while" nature. It includes the great Vitagraph drama "Mary Jane's Pa," special Metro highest grade drama "Miss Robinson Crusoe," and the 16th episode of "The Great Secret" serial, and three side-splitting comedies. This means fifteen first run reels of high class motion pictures, showing all-star actors, at the popular price of 15c. You would pay elsewhere 25 to 50c for this show. Our matinees are always bargains; don't miss tomorrow's.

FORECASTING THE RESULT.

How R. J. Soden Foretold Election of Capt. Burnham.

Mr. R. J. Soden is now entitled to election as the official political forecaster of this riding. Six years ago he foretold the result of the Federal election to within two votes. When he figured on the Burnham-Hall contest he was listened to with considerable deference. He placed Capt. Burnham's majority at 2000 in the city and has thereby added to his reputation as a prophet. Any time where there is an election on, municipal contests included, and you are in doubt of the result, ask Mr. Soden.

TEN KILLED IN RAID ON LONDON

TRUE BILLS BY JURY; FRED OAKES ON TRIAL, CHARGED WITH BIGAMY

First Wife Testifies to First Marriage With Prisoner.

This afternoon the jury returned a verdict of guilty in the charge of bigamy against Frederick Oakes. Sentence was deferred.

Three true bills were returned by the Grand Jury before Judge Huycke this morning, indicting Frederick Oakes of Toronto on charges of bigamy and perjury and A. E. Stevens on a charge of obtaining money under false pretences.

The following jurors were called and the first twelve were sworn as the jury to hear the charge of bigamy against Oakes:

George Clark, Peterborough; John W. Hales, Peterborough; F. E. Pearson, Smith; W. H. Dawson, Peterborough; Michael Heffernan, Asphodel; Arthur Bolton, Peterborough; J. A. Lowes, Peterborough; Bruce Reid, Burleigh; Hugh Matthews, Douro; Alexander Guiry, Ennismore; Thomas Franks, Peterborough; John McDonald, Peterborough; John F. Dougherty, T. T. McConnell, Harold Darling, Fred Calder, Wesley Northey, Sam White, Hugh Cuthbertson, James Kyle.

Crown Attorney Hatton in addressing the jury said Oakes was married nine or ten years ago, to Ella May Shaw, and went through a form of marriage with Ida McClennan of Peterborough in September, 1916.

First Wife's Story.

The first wife of the prisoner said she lived at Mount Pleasant before marriage to Oakes at Lindsay. The date of the marriage, witness could not give. She knew the ceremony was performed in a parsonage and George Hudson and Maud Hudson were witnesses. Oakes got the marriage certificate and witness had seen it but had never read it. They lived at Bethany for five years. Two children were born, one when witness lived with her husband, and the other when they were separated.

Her husband was caretaker of the Presbyterian and the Methodist church at Bethany. After the separation, witness saw her husband at her father's place where she made her home. At that time, on the occasion of a picnic, the prisoner instead of taking her to Bethany, took her to his sisters home. On the following Tuesday, she returned to her father's house and had never lived with her husband. The prisoner sent Christmas cards to the children.

A year ago last summer witness heard of prisoner's second marriage but took no action.

MORE

Ella May McClennan swore that she was married to Oakes on September 4, 1916, at the rectory of St. Augustine's Church, Toronto, by Rev. F. J. Plummer. Her mother, sister and Thomas Cassels of Peterborough were witnesses. Some time after the ceremony witness was informed of the prisoner's first marriage and she was advised not to live with Oakes.

Police Chief Thompson testified as to a conversation with prisoner who admitted he was already married, when he went through a marriage ceremony with Ida McClennan. Oakes also said he knew he had done wrong. He knew his first wife was living and was living in Mount Pleasant.

G. N. Gordon, counsel for the prisoner, offered no defence, resting his case on the fact of the couple having not lived together for seven years.

Second Charge.

Oakes pleaded not guilty to the charge of perjury. The Crown alleges he made a false declaration, when in signing a marriage document he stated that he was an unmarried man, the fact being that he had a wife living

The jury was sworn as follows:

J. R. Goodfellow, R. Hickson, Geo. Cunningham, T. T. McConnell, John Dougherty, Sam White, Fred Lapp, Alfred Fallis, Wesley Northey, Stanley Harris, Adam Gardiner, Wm. Evans.

LIEUT. PERCY STOCK of the R. F. C., who has been granted Canadian leave, and is expected home the first of the year. Lieut. Stock was wounded in action.

TRAINMEN ASK WAGE INCREASE

SEVENTY-FIVE THOUSAND FIREMEN ARE VOTING ON THE QUESTION TODAY.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Chicago, Dec. 19. — Demands for wage increases of from ten to forty per cent. were submitted to 75,000 locomotive firemen on railroads in the United States for a vote today. The demands were drawn up by committees of the trainmen's brotherhoods. Instructions sent to the firemen say the vote is not on the question of a strike.

$790,89 FOR SERB. RELIEF ACKNOWLEDGED

W. H. DUNSFORD, LOCAL TREAS., RECEIVES LETTER FROM RELIEF COMMITTEE.

W. H. Dunsford, treasurer of the Serbian relief fund, has received the following letter from the Canadian Serbian Relief Committee, Toronto:

"I have very great pleasure in acknowledging your cheque for $790.89, which you sent me as a result of the circular appeal in Peterborough. It is a splendid response, and I will be glad if you will convey to the members of your committee the hearty thanks of the Canadian Serbian Relief Committee for the work they have done in bringing about such an excellent result. I note that you say expenses were met by the proceeds of a lecture by Miss Losanitch, so that this committee does not stand in your debt at all."

From One Election Right into Another

CANDIDATES FOR SEATS IN THE CITY COUNCIL BEGIN TO CROP UP.

There promises to be no aldermanic elections by acclamation this year, if half the candidates who are mentioned in the different wards offer their services to the people. Alderman Weir has a number of friends in Ashburnham who would like to see him spared the trouble of a contest, but he is not likely to fare any better in this regard than any member of the Council whose term expires. Mr. T. W. Oke is mentioned as a candidate for the nomination in the East Ward.

Alderman Duncan will be a candidate for mayor and this leaves a clear field for aspirants for his seat as representative from the West Ward There are a number of these, including Mr. C. H. Pennefather, Mr. C. W. Austin and Mr. M. J. Maher, the genial manager of Oak Hall.

Mr. J. J. Turner, now president of the Board of Trade, and Mr. E. F. Mason have been asked to stand for the Centre Ward to succeed Alderman Stratton, who will retire to enter the mayoralty race.

So far no one has been mentioned as a competitor for Alderman Saunders in the South Ward, and it may be that he will be sent back to the 1918 Council without opposition.

Mr. R. G. Sturgeon will oppose Alderman Langford in the North Ward, just as he did two years ago.

GEN. HAIG MAKES STAFF CHANGES

FIRST STEP OF THE KIND SINCE HE TOOK OVER THE COMMAND.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Dec. 19.—Field Marshal Haig, commander-in-chief of the British forces in France, the Times says it understands, is making important changes in his headquarters staff, which up to this time has virtually been unaltered since he took over the supreme command.

TEN KILLED AND SEVENTY HURT IN AERIAL RAID

Twenty Hun Airplanes in Fleet Which Flew Over London.

DRIVEN OFF BY HEAVY GUN FIRE

One Falls Into the Ocean and Another Into English Channel.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Dec. 19.—Ten persons were killed and seventy hurt in last night's air raid. Outside of London five persons were hurt. Full reports have not yet been received.

The bombing was severe, many bombs falling within the London interior districts and many also in the outlying districts.

An official announcement of the raid says:

"Hostile airplanes crossed the Essex and Kent coast about 6.15 o'clock and proceeded towards London. Some of the raiders reached the London district and dropped bombs. Bombs were also dropped in Kent and Essex.

"Reports of casualties and damage have not yet been received. Our guns and airplanes were both in action."

One Plane Brought Down.

One of the German airplanes which took part in last night's raid over England was brought down and another is believed to have been destroyed, the war office announces. From 15 to 20 raiders divided into six groups endeavored to reach London but only five succeeded in dropping bombs on the city. All British planes returned safely.

Dropped Into Channel.

There is reason to believe another raider dropped into the English Channel says the report. A British pilot fired two drums of ammunition into a raider as it was dropping bombs on London from a height of 13,000 feet. After the main attacks of the raiders ceased a single airplane flew over London at about 9 o'clock.

The raider definitely known to have been destroyed was hit by fire from anti craft guns and finally dropped into the sea off Kent. Two of the crew of three were captured, alive, by an armed trawler.

LOCAL BOY IN SELECTED DRAFT

WILFRED ADAMS TO QUALIFY FOR COMMISSION IN THE IMPERIAL ARMY.

In the list of names of the cadets from the University of Toronto overseas training company selected by Gen. Gwatkins, chief of the general staff, appears that of Wilfred Adams, Peterborough. It is not expected that his draft of 34 men will go overseas until after the New Year. They will train in England to qualify for commissions in the Imperial army.

Beginning December 1, all officers, N.C.O.'s and men belonging to the active militia on service in Canada will receive active service pay. This includes regimental pay, field pay, subsistence allowance, (if not quartered), and separation allowance, if married.

Orders issued state that this action is taken for the purpose of making the pay of all the men in this service more uniform.

Any man, by making a request, may have this rate paid him from October 1, at which date separation allowance was first granted to members of the active militia in Canada. Only members of the permanent force will receive this rate of pay, which will be paid out of the "Permanent Force Vote."

William McIlroy was appointed C. P. R passenger agent at Detroit.

FRANK OLIVER MEETS HIS WATERLOO IN EDMONTON

Sir Wilfrid's Man Friday in the West is Defeated by Over 900 Majority—Government Now 43 Seats Ahead.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Dec. 19. — As reports from the far-away polls of West Edmonton come in, it is evident that Hon. Frank Oliver, Sir Wilfrid Laurier's chief Western lieutenant, has had the fight of his life in his former constituency, which was regarded as practically safe for him. This morning the Unionist candidate, Brigadier-Gen. W. A. Griesbach, is leading by 900 majority with a few small polls to hear from. Battle River, Sask., is also still incomplete, although Blair, Unionist, is leading. Victoria, Alberta, is today conceded to the Opposition candidate, W. H. White. The Alberta standing today is: Government, 9; Opposition, 1; incomplete, 2.

This makes the summary for the Dominion to date: Government, 136, Opposition, 93; incomplete 2; deferred 4. Government majority, 43.

Of those included in the Opposition Messrs. McCoig, Truax and Duncan Ross, all of Ontario, have heretofore supported the Military Service Act.

DECISION TO MAKE CANVASS OF WHOLE CITY

STRONG MEN'S COMMITTEE TO HAVE CHARGE OF BUSINESS DISTRICT.

A well-attended meeting of the officers of the Great War Veterans, Ladies' Auxiliary, and representatives of the different churches and societies in the city was held last evening in the G. W. V. A. Club Rooms in the Barrie Building to consider ways and means of procuring the necessary funds for furnishing the new club rooms.

Mr. E. A. Peck kindly addressed the meeting, and it was finally decided to make a canvass of the city. A list of the captains appointed to take charge of the different districts will be announced in a day or two.

A business men's committee, consisting of Messrs. E. A. Peck, Reid Munro, J. J. Turner, Mayor Duffus, George A. Gillespie, M.P.P., G. N. Gordon, Ald. Duncan, C. H. Pennefather, and Frank Whitehouse, will look after the canvass in the business section, comprising the district between Water and Aylmer streets and between Brock and King streets. The same committee will also call upon the manufacturers of the city.

Mrs. Bartlett submitted the report of the Provisional Ladies' Committee in regard to the furnishings of the club rooms, particularly as to the interview with various local merchants.

It was moved by Mrs. Devey, seconded by Mrs. Bugg, that any woman who is interested in the welfare of the G.W.V.A. may become a member of the Ladies Auxiliary, but that the officers of the latter should be confined to the mothers, wives, sisters and daughters of men who have gone overseas.

The objective of the canvass by the Ladies' Auxiliary is $2,000, and it is hoped that there will be a ready response to the appeal. The cause is a worthy one, and the sum asked for is comparatively small, and should be quickly realised.

French Cruiser Sunk In Mediterranean

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Dec. 19.—The old French cruiser Chateau Renault, employed as a transport, was torpedoed and sunk in the Mediterranean on Dec. 14th, and the submarine which attacked her was later destroyed, was the official announcement by the French minister of marine. Ten of the crew were lost.

NO BILL IN ARSON CHARGE

The grand jury of the Sessions returned "no bill" in the charge of arson preferred against Mrs. Martha Ann Althouse, and the accused was discharged from custody. It was alleged that Mrs. Althouse set fire to her own home.

HUN ARMY STORM ITALIAN POSTS

BERLIN CLAIMS CAPTURE OF 2,000 PRISONERS IN ITALY.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, Dec. 19. — Austro-German forces yesterday stormed Italian positions on Monte Asolone and adjoining heights according to an official statement issued today by the German staff. More than 2000 soldiers were captured.

NO ACCOUNT AT THE BANK

A. E. STEVENS CHARGED WITH PASSING WORTHLESS CHEQUES.

Indicted on the charge of passing a worthless cheque for $10 at the Oak Hall store, A. E. Stevens pleaded not guilty at the sessions this afternoon. M. J. Maher, manager of the store, Edward Riley, a clerk, and C. C. Abbott, manager of the Bank of Montreal, gave evidence.

Stevens bought a pair of socks at 75 cents in the Oak Hall store and tendering to the clerk, a cheque for $10, was returned $9.25. At the bank, Mr. Maher found Stevens had no account.

The jury sworn: John R. Baskin, Hugh Matthews, Harold Darling, John Mahoney, Harold Archer, Hugh Cuthbertson, Frank Whitfield, J. O. Lowes, Fred Calder, W. J. Kirk, John McDonald.

MACKENZIE KING'S MOTHER IS DEAD AT OTTAWA.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Dec. 19.—The Star today carries an Ottawa despatch stating that Mrs. Isabella Grace Mackenzie King, wife of the late John King, K.C., and mother of Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, died at the family residence there yesterday, aged 75. The funeral will be held from St. Andrew's Church, Toronto, tomorrow.

THOMAS KELLY DEAD.

The death is announced of Thomas Kelly, a well-known character and for many years a resident of Bridgenorth.

BUCHANAN BY 1,820.

W. A. Buchanan, Unionist, formerly of Peterborough, now has a majority of 1,820 in Lethbridge riding with only twenty-eight small polls to hear from.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, DEC. 19, 1917

WHEN SATAN IS SICK.

WHEN THE DEVIL is physically unfit he always shows signs of repentance for the mischief he has wrought. Newspapers and private individuals with the same natural proclivities as his satanic majesty, even if they lack his influence for evil, act likewise under similar circumstances.

The election of Monday has put the Examiner out of sorts. Everything went against it, and now it has apparently been overwhelmed by a species of death-bed repentance. It pharisaically promises to do better in the future if forgiven this time and given another chance. Half-heartedly it promises to extend to the new Government the distinguished consideration of its moral support. Even while it does this it cannot restrain another sneer at the Union, which is manifested when it encloses that word in quotation marks. It never believed that there was union in that Government. It cannot bring itself to that point even now.

The Examiner makes a joke of itself and its advice when it counsels the people to stand behind the new Government. There is no necessity for such admonition. The people have already spoken, and the thousands who supported Capt. Burnham on Monday, ignoring the frenzied appeals of the Examiner to do otherwise, are not likely to pay any attention now to what it says. But our contemporary tries to forget its record, and now, mingling with the winners, shouts with the best of them.

Like the candidate it supported, the Examiner conducted a style of campaign that has long since passed out of date. Its popgun attacks on the Union candidate in this riding brought it neither votes nor honor. It assailed every member of the Government from the Premier down. The two socalled "flag-shooting" members of the Cabinet whom it singled out for special abuse, and who, it alleged, were kept in power to placate the disloyal element in Quebec, were the only men of the Government to be rejected in the election of Monday. If there had been any justification for what the Examiner said of them, these are the very men whom Quebec would have taken to its unpatriotic bosom.

Our contemporary has just come through the most disastrous campaign of its career. It has lost on every point. Any influence it may ever have had with the public as a political force has been lost. There is nothing that so befits it now as absolute silence. Deathbed repentances are no longer accepted even at their face value.

It need not worry over what that Government will do. It goes into power with such a mandate as no Canadian Government ever received from the people. It will have the courage that the Examiner deems so essential. It will live up to its program and in its policy will, we are satisfied, not be influenced by any of the misguided criticism that we are sure our partisan neighbor will direct against it on every opportunity.

THE WOMEN AND THE ELECTION.

A FEW DAYS BEFORE the election Mr. Hall realised that the fates were against ihm and that his defeat was inevitable. He blamed it all on the new voters, the women. He claimed that the dice had been loaded against him, that the Franchise Act was more than he could overcome.

The Franchise Act that Mr. Hall condemned did not affect the result in West Peterborough. He would have been defeated if not a single woman had voted. The new Act did not disfranchise any aliens to speak of in this riding. Leave the women and the aliens out of it altogether, and Mr. Hall would still have gone under with a majority of several hundred against him.

In his campaign he appealed to the civilians to elect him so that the soldiers' vote would not count. That vote is yet to be considered. Perhaps, when all these returns are in, the result to Mr. Hall will be more disastrous than ever, and his election deposit may go a-glimmering with his hopes for a seat in Parliament.

Mr. Hall made several grievous mistakes in his canvass for votes. One of the greatest of these was in the choice of his constituency. No man who advocated his principles had any chance to win in a riding outside of Quebec.

THE NEW GOVERNMENT.

NO GOVERNMENT in Canada has ever taken office under the same favorable auspices as surround the Union Administration that was sustained by the people on Monday. In the first place, the popular vote behind it is something never before heard of. The majorities of the members of the Cabinet run into the thousands. More election deposits have been lost by Liberal candidates in this election than were ever heard of before, deposits lost not by third party men or independents but by straight party candidates.

The new Government is composed of the best men to be found in the old political parties. In the campaign they were supported by the leading newspapers in the Dominion, no matter what their old line politics. Among the Ontario dailies the London Advertser and the Peterborough Examiner alone assailed the Union Government. Probably in both cases the inspiration was expediency rather than principle.

The press of Canada must, to be consistent, join in sustaining the Government which they helped to elect. A new era has dawned in Canada while the war lasts, at least. There will be less of this senseless partisan criticism of the men at the head of the nation's affairs. The responsibility for the conduct of the war and the management of every other public matter is now shared equally by the two old parties. The former political cleavage, the paper wall between factions, removed now, may never be restored. Politics, as Canada knew the science in days that are past, may be buried forever. In future the ambition of Canadians is more likely to be public-spirited citizens rather than partisans.

UNITED FOR SERVICE.

(Ottawa Citizen.)

It must be abundantly plain to Liberal leaders in Canada that there can be no trust reposed in the Liberal party until it is thoroughly purged of people who pose as Liberals in theory but not in practice. Canada is rapidly turning towards new and better political ideals. The verdict in favor of Union Government cannot for a moment be regarded as national approval of Conservative party politics. The strength of the Government is in the fact that Liberals have set aside party strife for the bigger cause of national service. The enfranchised women voters have united with the partyfree Liberals to give full backing to the Union Government pledged to stay with Great Britain and the Allies in the war.

The Union Government can now go forward with confidence to translate the will of the people into direct action. The task ahead is the heaviest ever imposed upon Canadian statesmen. The Government should be given the loyal support of the whole community in every measure designed to promote the more effective prosecution of the war by Canada in the league of nations.

MR. HALL'S LAST WORD.

MR. HALL, IN HIS post-election address to the people, still harps on that one string that he had in his campaign fiddle—the production of food.

So far as that plank was concerned, Mr. Hall's platform was all right. The necessity for greater production has always been recognized. He was perfectly safe while he stuck to that point, although he might have gone further and still run no risk of getting himself in wrong with the voters. It was when he started in to abuse the members of the Government, the new Liberal members especially, that he made his mistake. Had he restrained himself in this one particular it is only charitable to believe that, while he would have been defeated, he would not have had so close a shave in the matter of polling enough votes to save his deposit.

LISTEN TO THIS.

"A political alliance of a government and party with a disloyal and un-British element in Quebec has resulted in the imposition of separatist conditions, national disunity; and the alliance between a political party and a large part of our moral leaders, have sown the seeds of a less obvious, but none the less dangerous, disunity, that tend to disturb the popular ideals of reverence for the church and its pastoral agencies and the great moral influences they should represent."—The Examiner.

ISN'T THAT THE LIMIT? And to be printed, too, the very day after the election in which the people of Canada recorded such a verdict as they did. Any newspaper that, after the events of Monday, can still talk of an alliance between the Government and the disloyal element in Quebec or elsewhere is beyond hope.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

EVIDENTLY the voters of Canada are acquiring new habits.

• • • •

WHO CAN SAY NOW that the farmers as a class are opposed to conscription?

• • • •

AS SHOWING the high principles of the people, the election was worth all it cost.

• • • •

TWO KINDS OF PEACE to be avoided—peace by rumor and peace at any price.

• • • •

MR HALL IS surely convinced by this time that the farmers believe in patriotism first and profits afterward.

• • • •

NO ARMY CAN beat a dignified retreat any more than a man can preserve the same deportment while running to catch a street car.

• • • •

DON'T FORGET that Peterborough has over two thousand soldiers at the front and the votes of these are yet to be counted.

• • • •

THE VOTERS are not foolish enough to put four hundred millions of their money in a bank and then turn round and demolish the building.

• • • •

CAPT. BURNHAM was given a majority in Harvey. This is the first time in history that a Liberal candidate has failed to carry that township.

• • • •

IN ORDER TO SAVE his deposit the defeated candidate must poll half as many votes as his opponent. The count in West Peterborough is not yet complete.

• • • •

THERE IS PLENTY of water in the Otonabee River and buckets to be had anywhere for the asking. This should comfort our contemporary as it holds its throbbing temples.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

Just Selfishness.

(Buffalo Express.)

The French-Canadians have demonstrated a readiness to fight for the privilege of not fighting. They claim that it is democracy they are seeking in their opposition to conscription, but one Unionist speaker was right when he called it selfishness. There is free speech for Laurierites in Quebec, but a Unionist never can get a hearing.

WEEKLY REPORT OF CROPS

The following is a summary of weekly crop reports made by district representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

Where not already completed, thrashing is being pushed along vigorously. A considerable quantity of grain still remains to be separated on some farms.

Fall plowing has been at a standstill all week. The Peterborough representative estimates that only about 70 percent of the desired area has been turned under in the county.

The marketing of field products has not been brisk, as most of these are now being fed on the farm. In Brant oats were selling on the market at 80 cents a bushel, but at a farm sale 84 cents a bushel was paid. Hay continues in good demand at from $12 to $14 a ton. Potatoes are being marketed slowly.

Live Stock

Live stock, generally speaking, have been stabled earlier than for years. Happily there is a good supply of grain, straw, and most of the other fodders on hand, and the prospects for comfortable wintering of live stock are most assuring.

Shipments of all classes of live stock have been light during the week, and prices have stood around: stockers, 8c lb; beef cattle, 8c to 9c lb., and hogs, $16.75 per cwt.

Breeding sows are in very strong demand owing to what has been termed the campaign for greater hog production. Many old sows are being sold to be replaced by younger ones. The scarcity of suitable female pigs is more particularly noticeable in the dairy sections.

Milk production is falling off considerably; some dairymen are said to be disposing of more cows than is wise. Farmers in the London district are complaining that the cost of producing milk is now considerably greater than the price offered at the cheese factories, even allowing for the value of the whey returned for hog feeding.

Farm Labor.

The unrest among farmers caused by some of the decisions by military tribunals in rural sections is settling. The assurance of the Minister of Militia that genuine farm help will not be taken has given a new aspect to the rural labor question. This, however, is not going to meet the whole labor situation, as many farms will be without much-needed help even though no more of the occupants are taken for military purposes.

Wit and Wisdom

A South Dakota State senator recently gave a new illustration of that fine saying of an ancient philosopher: "Man was born for mutual assistance."

A customer entered the small town barber shop.

"How soon can you cut my hair?" he asked of the proprietor, who was seated in an easy chair, perusing the pages of a dime novel.

"Bill," said the barber, addressing his errand boy, "run over and tell the editor that I'd like my scissors if he's got done editin' the paper. Gentleman waitin for a haircut."

"Mike!"

"Phwat?"

"I was just thinkin'. After we got out of the trenches an' back home again how nice and peaceful that old boiler factory will sound to us."

"How do you like this futurist style of painting?"

"Don't like it. I see it has reached the theatre now. It was bad enough when you didn't know what the play was all about, but I call it the limit when you don't understand the scenery."

"Patience and perseverance will accomplish all things," was the favorite saying of an old farmer.

He had just made this remark in a train one day on the way to market when a pompous individual in the next seat turned to him and said:

"Nonsense, sir! I can tell you many things which neither patience nor perseverance can accomplish."

"Perhaps you can," said the farmer, "but I have never yet come across one thing."

"Well, then, I'll tell you one. Will patience and perseverance ever enable you to carry water in a sieve?"

"Certainly."

"I would like to know how."

"Simply by waiting patiently for the water to freeze."

"Terribly old-fashioned, isn't she?"

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne. "I actually believed that if she felt compelled to do fancy work she'd rather stitch 'God Bless Our Home' on cardboard than take a hand-painted banner out in the street and try to start a riot."

NEW ROUTE TO WESTERN CANADA PROVING POPULAR

Runs Through Famous Clay Belt of New Ontario and the Cobalt Mining District.

On your next trip to Western Canada why not travel over a new route, see the wonderful land opened up in Northern Ontario by the Transcontinental Railway and gain a glimpse of Temagami, and the Cobalt silver mining region.

You may use two famous trains on your journey without any added expense for railway fare as compared with any other route. The International Limited, will carry you to Toronto, where the "National" starts on its westbound flight. The "National" uses the rails of the Grand Trunk to North Bay, the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario (Provincial Government Line) to Cochrane, and the Canadian Government Railways to Winnipeg, where it links up with the Grand Trunk Pacific for all important points in Western Canada.

A pleasant daylight run to Toronto, an evening in the Queen City and the "National" is ready to carry you westward. The departure of the "National" from Toronto is at 9.00 p.m. on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. North Bay is reached next morning, and there opens for your admiration all the lakeland beauties of the territory served by the T. & N. O. line. These are followed by a wonderfuly interesting trip through the sparsely populated territory of New Ontario, giving the traveller an opportunity of inspecting this fertile region, including the famed clay belt where tens of thousands of settlers will make their homes in the future. The area of New Ontario is 330,000 square miles, fully four times the size of Old Ontario, and in addition to great expanses of good farming land, it has wonderful resources in timber, minerals, water power, fish and game.

The three railways have combined to make the passenger service over this new road the equal of that offered anywhere on the continent. The smooth, straight and level roadbed embodies all that has been learned in three quarters of a century of railroad building. The dining car service is unexcelled and the greatest travel comfort is assured. Full particulars from any Grand Trunk Ticket Agent, or C. E. Horning, District Passenger Agent, Toronto.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review: Wel, Mr. Editor, the election is over, and the ladies of your town did good work, but when it comes to holding forth as a speaker they are not in it for one moment with a lady I heard on the street car. I do not know who she was; I think she lives on Murray street, for she left the car there.

Two men were saying something about Mr. Burnham, I did not notice what, and she turned on them, and said Mr. Burnham was like the knights of old. He put on his armor for his King and offered his body as a target in defence of the British Empire. No man in the Dominion could put his finger on a black spot in his character. He cleaned up the Grit slime on the jag-ship of the Trent, and chased the pirates to their holes.

I can't tell you half she did say, but let me tell you right here, there is not a speaker on the Borden roll that can touch her.

If you know who she is, I would like to know her, too. I am sure by her dress and carriage she is British to the core.

This is not half she said. I could not catch it all. It was simply grand.

G.W.V.A. ARRANGE FOR THE CHILDREN'S ENTERTAINMENT

Santa Claus To The Front With Gifts.

The Great War Veterans' Association met in special session in the Barrie Building last night, and completed arrangements for entertaining the children of soldiers overseas on Saturday afternoon next, in the Salvation Army Temple.

The event is to take the nature of a Christmas treat, with a meal at two o'clock; then the following program:

Short address—Mr. G. N. Gordon.

Song—Miss Loder.

Trombone and cornet duet (by request) "Perfect Day"—Comrade Gilbert and Bandsman Wm. Forde.

Concertina solo—Comrade Loder.

Immitation selection — Comrade Cole.

Comic selection—Mrs. Barnes.

Song—Miss May Cole.

Here will follow a distribution of presents by Father Christmas, during which the Salvation Army Band will play selections. Every child will be remembered.

The members of the Wives and Mothers' Club have also kindly offered to assist in this entertainment.

Richard Hall & Son have generously contributed $10 worth of toys.

Furnishing New Rooms.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the G. W. V. A. was also present and discussed ways and means of collecting funds with which to suitably furnish the association's new club rooms in the Royal Bank building.

The Aero Club recommended to the Government the establishment of Canadian air service.

The women of Canada are asked to pay not more than 35 cents a pound for Christmas turkeys.

Major W. L. Grant made a notable address on his installation to the Principalship of Upper Canada College.

A Historian Dead.

By the recent death of William Dawson LeSueur, B.A., LL.D., F.R.S.C., our country lost one of its leading historians. He was a prolific writer on historical and intellectual subjects, and his works were characterized by freshness and originality, and will stand high among Canadian literature. Dr. LeSueur was born in Quebec in 1840, was educated at the Montreal High school, Ontario Law school, and graduated from the University of Toronto and Queen's University, Kingston. In 1856 he entered the Canadian civil service, in which his father also served, in the Postal Department, and was secretary from 1888 to 1902, when he retired.

One of his books he never published. This was a "Life of William Lyon Mackenzie." Commissioned to write this by a Toronto publishing house, before publication currency was given to the statement that it would create a sensation from the revelations it was supposed to give, and owing to the intervention, it has been said, of Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King and G. G. S. Lindsey, Toronto (Mrs. Lindsey being a descendant of the stormy petrel of the older times), the book was not issued.

Dr. LeSueur was honorable secretary of the Royal Society of Canada from 1908 to 1911 and then president. He held for a time the offices of vice-president of the Peace and Arbitration Society; the vice-presidency of the Canadian Society of Authors, and the presidency of the Ottawa Literary and Scientific Society.

Among his works the most important were: "Life of Frontenac," "A Defence of Modern Thought," "Evolution and the Positive Aspects of Modern Thought," "Partisan Politics," and "The Development of Responsible Government in Canada."

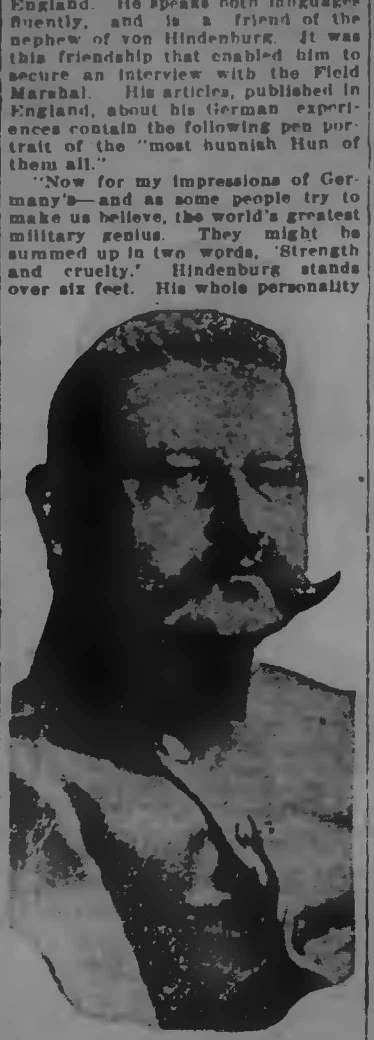
Filipino Embroidery Attractive.

As it becomes more and more difficult to obtain large supplies of French embroidery there is greater and greater chance of pushing embroidery from the Philippines. This embroidery is really very attractive. It is something like Japanese embroidery, but is superior, in the opinion of those who know both types well. More and more of it is found in the good shops and, therefore, it is an increasingly large feature in fashionable trousseaus and layettes. There have been suggestions that we might gather further inspiration from these Pacific islands in the way of models for women's blouses.

Face of von Hindenburg Is Unspeakably Cruel, Declares Dutch Writer

THERE is something about the picture of Field Marshal von Hindenburg that makes people who look at it shudder. Perhaps their feeling comes partly from the association of the name of this man with stories of the blackest cruelties ever recorded in the world. But the countenance is in itself a forbidding one, and a word picture given of von Hindenburg by the only neutral who has interviewed him since the commencement of the war indicates that the pictures do not libel him. J. B. de Beaufort is a Dutchman who received his education in Germany and England. He speaks both languages fluently, and is a friend of the nephew of von Hindenburg. It was this friendship that enabled him to secure an interview with the Field Marshal. His articles, published in England, about his German experiences contain the following pen portrait of the "most hunnish Hun of them all."

"Now for my impressions of Germany—and as some people try to make us believe, the world's greatest military genius. They might be summed up in two words, 'Strength and cruelty.' Hindenburg stands over six feet. His whole personality radiates strength: brute, animal strength. He was when I met him sixty nine years of age, and looked very much younger. His hair and moustache were still pepper and salt color. His face and forehead are deeply furrowed, which adds to his forbidding appearance. His nose and chin are prominent, but the most striking feature of the man's whole appearance are his eyes. They are steel-blue and very small, much too small for his head, which, in turn, is much to small compared with his large body. But what the eyes lacked in size they made up in intensity and penetrability. Until I met Hindenburg I always thought the eyes of the Mexican rebel Villa were the worst and most cruel I had ever seen. They were mild compared with those of Hindenburg. Never in all my life have I seen such hard, cruel, nay such utterly brutal eyes as those of Hindenburg. The moment I looked at him I believed every story of refined and unrefined cruelty I had ever heard about him. Frequently in conversation he closes his eyes, but even then it seemed as though their steel-like sharpness pierced the lids. He has big fat cushions of flesh under his eyes, which accentuate their smallness. When he closes his eyes, these cushions almost touch his bushy eyebrows and give his face a somewhat prehistoric appearance."



VON HINDENBURG

Millions Are Enslaved.

The Germans have forcibly enlisted the labor of about two million prisoners of war. Moreover, the official French report of April 12, 1917, concerning acts committed by the Germans in violation of international law, asserts that in the occupied territories deportation of workers has been a general measure. It has "applied to the entire able-bodied population of both sexes, from the ages of sixteen to sixty, excepting women with young children."

Now the Germans requisition labor from among 7,500,000 Belgians, 3,000,000 French, 4,500,000 Serbians, 5,000,000 Roumanians, 22,000,000 Poles, Authenians, and Lithuanians — a total of 42,000,000 slaves.

Let us see what sort of remuneration is made. Take the case of a young girl of Lille, twenty years old, who was forced to work for six months, harvesting and threshing wheat, and digging potatoes from six in the morning to twilight, receiving all the while the vilest food. For her six months of work she was given 9 francs, 45 centimes. The Germans, therefore have at their disposal a vast reservoir of labor, for which they pay next to nothing; moreover, the small amounts they do pay remain in Pan-Germany.

Paper From Sugar Cane.

From a mixture of sugar cane refuse and bamboo fibre a Trinidad planter has made paper equal in quality to the best wood pulp product.

ON THE YUKON.

Facts About One of North America's Greatest Rivers.

The Yukon is about 200 miles longer than the Mississippi, but it is 2,000 miles shorter than the Missouri Mississippi, measured from the Rocky Mountains in Montana, and from Itasca Lake in Minnesota. It is properly called one of the great rivers of North America, and it is as difficult to navigate as the most contrary of them. Like the Missouri and the Mississippi, south of their junction, it sometimes spreads over a vast expanse of country, but that is not conducive to traveling unless one is aboard a very light and very flat-bottomed craft. From Fort Selkirk, where the stream is formed by the junction of the Lewes and Pelly rivers, it flows north westward into Alaska, where it takes a generally south-west course, emptying, after meandering in a manner that would put the St. Johns of Florida to the blush, into the Behring Sea.

It used to be told of the early explorers of the Mississippi that, after entering the delta, they never knew how they got inside, and that, after passing through it to the Gulf, they never knew how they got outside. It was many years before the navigators fixed upon landmarks which enabled them to steer in anything like a straight course, and until that splendid engineer, Captain James B. Eads, came along with his jetties they were uncertain whether they would find a channel, or would ground on a sandbar.

The mariner regards the delta of the Yukon as hopeless. The stream, to begin with, empties great quantities of sediment, so that not only the passes, but sections of the sea beyond, are filled with the deposit. Only a few feet of water can be found for a long distance from the mouths of the twenty-six outlets. As a consequence of this condition, seagoing vessels are forced to transfer their freight to stern wheelers at St. Michael, seventy miles to the north, from which place there is navigation for larger craft to Dawson during the summer months. In the upper river, steamers ply between Dawson and White Horse, the terminus of the White Pass & Yukon Railroad, and navigation is continuous between White Horse and the mouth of the river.

The Yukon sprang suddenly into fame with the discovery of gold on Klondike Creek, one of its tributaries, and the town of Dawson, at the confluence of the "creek" and the Yukon River, and owes its existence to this discovery, is, to this day, the principal community of the region. The name of the Porcupine, Koyukuk, and Tanana rivers will recall memories of the days when thousands of adventures were "hitting the Yukon trail." Mining, whether for gold or for less precious metals, has now settled down to a regular business in the section; the days of lawlessness are past, and much of the romantic atmosphere that once hung around Alaska is gone; yet the Yukon River offers many inducements to the traveler and the explorer.

Roger Foster, who has recently made the journey up the Yukon, says that the primeval forests on the river banks have, in most places, no inhabitants save moose, caribou, bear, lynx, and other wild animals. "Some of them," he continues, "can be seen from the boat, upon the shores or swimming in the water. Here and there are a few Indian cabins, or the lodge of a wood chopper, who supplies the steamers with fuel, and a few mining camps, now almost empty." The country is still rough, but not inhospitable. The old Alaskans are a sturdy race, this witness testifies; intemperance among them is rare, which is not true of the canners of clams and salmon on the coast. The land is full of prospectors. "Winter after winter," Mr. Foster writes, "for fifteen years many of them have gone alone or with a single partner into the wilderness to search for mines. . . . After careful inquiry I could not find a single case where a prospector had retired with a fortune, or even a competency, as the result of his discovery."

It is confessed, by this and by other travelers in the far North-West, that there is a fascination about Alaskan life which, despite its privations, makes men loath to leave and eager to return. And, in passing, it may be said that, by reason of disturbed conditions elsewhere, more sightseers have been going into Alaska in the last two years than ever before, and a majority of them come back pleased with their experience.

PRAISE WAS EARNED.

Our Men Are Not Over-rated, Says Correspondent.

Why do soldiers from the overseas dominions get so much publicity?

Both by word of mouth and by letters in the newspapers Old Country people have been asking this question very persistently of late. Indeed, no small amount of resentment has been expressed in certain quarters that Canadian and Anzac deeds on the battlefield have been figuring much more conspicuously in the English public prints than do those of their English, Scotch, Irish, and Welsh brother-in-arms.

As a matter of fact Canadians are not in any way responsible for the flattering and frequent despatches from the front which relate Canadian prowess. These messages which constantly appear in flare lines on the front pages of the great London journals, telling how the Canadians took a village or smashed a counter-attack, are written by distinguished English war correspondents. And these men are trained writers, unprejudiced, experienced journalists who know to a nicety the news value of a story, and the relative importance of any operation on that terrible western front.

From personal knowledge of the front the correspondent of The Toronto Telegram assures people at home that everything related of the Canadians is well deserved. Without an iota of exaggeration it can be said that there are no better troops in the British army, not even excluding the brigade of Guards. And the Guards, always good pals of the Canadians, would be the first to admit it.

He has not infrequently heard Canadian officers deploring the prominence given to Canadians and the anonymity under which the brave regiments of the British isles were going through the war. "Many such Canadians have expressed deep regret, yes, a feeling of shame, that their British comrades' valor went thus unsung. Canadian privates, too, have often told me they felt mean at getting plaudits while battalions from the Motherland had fought on so gallantly with hardly a line of praise for them in the papers.

Assuredly a grave injustice has been suffered by British troops in this connection, but Old Country people, both in the homeland and in Canada, too, are very wrong in blaming the Canadian army administration or the Canadian correspondents —Stewart Lyon, the resident, or the Canadian correspondents in London, who occasionally visit the front. Their business is with the Canadians. Really the whole matter of who shall receive publicity in British papers rests with the English war correspondents at the front, with the military censor who passes their "copy," above all, with the heads of the British army.

From the very beginning it has been the policy of the War Office, from sound military motives, to strictly disallow all mention of individual units. In fact even the names of the various regiments, as Suffolks, Dorsets, East Kents, etc., of which there are innumerable battalions, were rigidly barred until lately.

The terms "British" or even "Scotch" or "Irish" in an army of millions conveyed little to the reader at home, and robbed a story of half its interest. The Canadians and Australians being a mere handful in comparison, lent themselves to a more individual description. Then, again, the interest of their arrival from overseas occasioned three years ago has by no means died out, and the public like to read about them and see their pictures. Else how is it that the London daily papers keep playing them up?

The profusion of Canadian War Records official films depicting, of course, Canadians at the front, in all the British newspaper and illustrated periodicals has doubtless, too, caused some feeling that invidious distinctions were being made. Why so many pictures of Canadians?

The enterprise of Lord Beaverbrook has been entirely responsible for these photographs. Wonderful pictures of the front, they rival anything that the War Office has yet done in this line. So the Canadian photos are gladly snapped up by the British papers and prominently displayed, a continuous succession of the finest advertising that Canada could possibly have.

Lately, in deference to repeated British protests, the War Office has permitted more mention of British units, and brave lads will have the satisfaction of seeing the names of their regiments at least held up to honor. Canadian boys don't want to benefit at the expense of their gallant kinsmen in these Isles. No one will be more pleased than they to see the Devons or the Lancs or the Gordons or the Guards, or whoever it may be, decked with the laurels they have so nobly won. But let the people at home remember that Canada's sons, both British-born and native-born, merit to the full that generous praise the British press has showered upon them.

TWO SPORTS CONTRASTED.

Professional Lacrosse Players Show to Advantage.

A correspondent of The New York Sun points out that only one professional baseball player from the major leagues has enlisted in the American army. The sole representative is "Hank" Gowdy, formerly catcher for the Boston team in the National League. Other players have been photographed in uniforms, probably hired for the purpose, but those eligible, it is said, have applied for exemption. One of the most noted members of the New York National League team is said to have been excused because one of his arms was shorter than the other, and maybe because both his feet were cold. It is not a creditable showing for professional baseball. The players in the big leagues, whatever slight physical defects they might have, are all highly-trained athletes, more able-bodied as a class than any other in the community. They are invariably well paid, some of them earning as much as $15,000 for five months' work. They are petted by the public, regarded as national heroes by the average school boy, and altogether rewarded and praised out of all proportion to their services to humanity.

Baseball is the national game of the United States. It is interesting to contrast this showing with that of lacrosse, the national sport of Canada. The strange reluctance of prominent professional baseball players in the United States to show themselves loyal Americans cannot fail to have a blighting effect upon the efforts of the Sammies overseas to introduce the game in England as a worthy rival to cricket. Here in Canada all our professional baseball is imported, but we have had professional lacrosse for some years, and though this sport has dwindled and was threatened with extinction before the war, it has produced several worthy representatives in men like Nick Carter, Art Long, and John Rowland, who have made the supreme sacrifice; Harry Murton, a prisoner in Germany; Jimmie Collins, Barber, Dr. Lachapelle, Joe Gorman, and Guy Smith, who won a decoration for the single-handed capture of a machine gun. To equal this record, professional baseball players in the United States will at least have to raise a battalion for service abroad.—The Mail and Empire.

Food Saved For the Soldiers

WHEN the food controller was appointed it was generally supposed that the action was in response to a growing demand that the prices of foodstuffs should be lowered. There was and is a general suspicion that these prices are being artificially controlled for the benefit of the middlemen, and it was argued that if private interests could regulate prices in their own behalf a Government official clothed with sufficient authority could regulate them in behalf of the masses of the people. It may be that Hon. Mr. Hanna will come to that phase of the problem before long, but it is important to bear in mind that it is not this phase of the question with which he is now dealing, and that the campaign urging housewives to save certain foods is contemplating only one thing— the conservation of these foods for the men at the front, and for the people of England, whose supplies may otherwise be insufficient.

The housewives of Canada are not urged to save food so that they may save money or reduce the prices of food, though there may be an indirect tendency in this direction. They are asked to save food so that our soldiers may eat it. If they have to rise from the table with appetites not wholly appeased they are asked to remember that their inconvenience or even discomfort is as nothing compared with what our armies are called upon to endure. Nor is very drastic action demanded. It has been estimated that if every household saved one pound of flour per head per week the surplus would be enough to ensure an ample supply for export. In the pledge cards which have been circulated, the food controller says that normal consumption of wheat must be reduced by 25 per cent. in order that Canada and the United States may be able to send to Great Britain and our Allies the 460,000,000 bushels that they require.

A similar reduction must be made in the consumption of beef and bacon. "The men in the trenches will go hungry if you fail them," warns Mr. Hanna, and surely no more ought to be said on this head. If bacon were only ten cents a pound and beef five cents a pound it would still be a vital necessity to conserve the supply, so without regard to the fact that prices are abnormally high, and without regard to the belief that profiteers are taking advantage of the needs of the people, the consumption of beef and bacon must be reduced. It is pointed out that there is no necessity for the people of Canada to go on short rations. They have plenty of substitutes for beef and bacon in other meats, fish, eggs, and fowl; and for white bread in cereals, whole wheat bread, which is recommended by Dr. Hastings, Toronto's Medical Health Officer, and in the hundred and one dishes that can be prepared from corn, rice, etc.

We are also advised to eat perishable products, and it was to promote their consumption that a ban was placed on the selling of canned vegetables some little time ago. In reply to the suggestion that the people at home should go on eating as before the war, while the soldiers be permitted to eat the substitutes, it is only necessary to say that the substitutes cannot be preserved or packed and shipped as readily as white flour, bacon, and beef. A soldier cannot be expected to get up in the morning and prepare a pan of Johnnycake, for instance. And while whole wheat bread may be more nourishing than the ordinary white bread, if the soldier prefers the white bread and there is not enough to go round, then the soldier must have first preference, and we folks at home ought to be willing to eat what he doesn't want.

The war has forced many economies upon the people of Canada, but even yet it is said that $50,000,000 worth of food goes into the garbage pails of the nation every year. To waste in these days is a crime, for the sufferer is not the person who wastes, but the person who may go hungry because of that waste. We must eat up the scraps. The old-fashioned doctrine of the clean plate must be preached again. Housewives who have entrusted the whole duty of buying and preparing the food to servants must recognize that they have a personal responsibility in the matter. The work of the women of Canada is of vital importance. They must do the saving; the men must do the financing and the fighting. They ought to remember that Britain is on food rations and is thriving on them, that every household from the King's down comes under the restrictions that have been found necessary if victory is to be assured. The women of Canada who have already shown such magnificent spirit, have it in their power to strike a blow for the Allied cause comparable to the blow their sons and brothers struck at Vimy Ridge.

A Young Heroine.

The story appears in The London Daily Mirror of Doris Spencer Walton, aged fifteen, the daughter of a missionary, who, mortally wounded in a recent air raid, turned to the two Canadian soldiers who took her in a cab to the hospital, and seeing the gold stripes on their sleeves, which indicated wounds received in action, said: "I must kiss you both because you have suffered."

Eskimo Language.

The Eskimo language is so polysynthetic, it is stated, that one word is able to express a whole sentence. Here is a specimen: Uotivou "The hairy side of the skin is getting loose."

INVENTORS KEPT BUSY.

Scientists Are Searching for Wartime Substitutes.

Talents of inventive persons in the warring European countries, especially the Central Powers, are being taxed to provide substitutes for the necessities that have become scarce. Not only in foodstuffs are makeshifts being turned out but in other lines the economic situation has forced the changes that were unthought of before the war began.

New departures in Germany include a long list of articles made of paper, some of which promise to outlast the war because they are serviceable and cheaper than things they have displaced. Paper yarn, at first used with other materials, is now used independently.

Paper tubes used for illuminating gas are said to stand an internal pressure three or four times as great as lead. Paper tubes for carrying oil have been found serviceable, being protected from the oil by artificial resin, another war time product. Paper pipes as small as 3-16 inch in diameter are in use. For carrying water they have not been found efficient, but experiments are being made to discover a method of waterproofing them.

A new fuel for crude oil engines is being turned out by the Germans by mixing crude oil with certain organic compounds. All the constituents are said to be combustible.

A magnetic hand that opens the doors of many industrial shops to soldiers who have returned from the front minus an arm is proving successful. The attachment to the arm or shoulder ends in a cup which encloses an electro-magnet. The electric circuit is opened or closed with the aid of the other hand or the chin. The hand can also be provided with fingers and a thumb, to be opened or closed separately.

Hungarian state railways are now lighting their cars with natural gas from wells near Torda, Hungary, a German invention having been resorted to for the compression process. The exploitation of the gas fields has been extensive and residences and manufactories in Torda are using the fuel. Plans are under way for piping the gas to Budapest, 300 miles distant.

Gas-driven motor omnibuses are now being used in England. A large gas bag on the roof of the bus holds a supply that carries the vehicle ten or fifteen miles. Buses run from London fifty miles out, stops being made at charging stations for new gas supplies. Gas pipes are extended to the main road at the charging stations, thus allowing the filling of the supply bags in a short time.

Germans have adopted a process for extracting the bitter elements from horse chestnuts, which are being made into meal and eaten by humans and live stock. Acorns are also being largely used for food in Germany. Scarcity of pins in Germany has compelled the use of thorns to a large extent by women.

Germany's food triumph is pea sausage, made of pea meal, bacon, and fat. A Berlin cook discovered a method of making pea meal proof against deterioration, and one of the sausages eight inches long is said to yield twelve plates of nutritious soup.

Bread containing 10 per cent. of potatoes mixed with Government regulation flour now turned out in England is said to be excellent. Bakers report that the loaves are perfectly fresh and moist forty-eight hours after baking.

A large central kitchen has been opened at Hammersmith, London, which has proved a boon to the working people in the district, especially to families faced with coal difficulties and the problems of getting a good midday meal for the children when the mother is at work. There are a central depot and distributing points, fifteen of the latter being contemplated. The food is cooked early and sent by automobile to the distributing points by 11.20. Each point has a capacity of 2,000 meals.

WHAT ADDS SNAP?

How to Give Your Outfit Chic Without Spending Much Money.

The best of coat suits will look unattractive if the collar is allowed to come in direct contact with the neck of the wearer. That is, there should be either a high light collar rising up inside of the coat collar or there should be a suitable light collar worn over the collar of the coat. The coat collar lying against the skin detracts from one's appearance, and, as one girl remarked, it makes the wearer look as though she hadn't finished dressing. Frequently the blouse collar can be thrown over the coat collar, but where this is not expedient one can embroider for herself a little collar of white pique. The collars of crepe de chine, washable satin or georgette are also satisfactory for this purpose.

Can you imagine the immaculate picture a girl in a dark blue suit with hat to match will make if she wears a crisp white collar on the coat and an equally crisp vest? Vests, you know, are very important accessories just now and are made of numerous materials. Linen, pongee, wide ribbons, suede and taffeta are among the favored fabrics employed for this role. As a rule, the vests are of contrasting color, but have touches of embroidery to introduce the color of the suit.

A bright flower worn with a dark suit or frock has a wonderful effect both on the suit and on the wearer. The psychological effect of colors on one's disposition is an interesting study. Not only do the cheerful colors affect the wearer, but they reflect cheerfulness in the minds of observers.

Our Coal Supply.

The coal production of Canada for 1916 was 14,365,000 short tons, as against 13,267,023 short tons in 1915. The main increase was from Alberta, being there about 1,000,000 tons. British Columbia shows an increase of about 500,000 tons, and Nova Scotia a decrease of practically the same amount.

Inheritance Tax Argument

Inheritance taxes are very heavy. Unlike Fire hazard, they are not merely possible, they are absolutely certain.

They deplete your estate at once, and to your heirs represent a specific and definite loss of money.

In New York a $250,000 estate would pay a combined federal and state tax of about $12,000. If left to a friend or distant relative, about $22,000. The John Jacob Astor estate paid $3,150,000. J. P. Morgan has insured his life for $2,500,000 to cover a similar loss

Thus the estate is provided promptly with the ready cash to pay this tax and other expenses without the need of hurriedly disposing of securities or other assets, perhaps at a loss, to meet such needs. The logic of the situation urges immediate action. Premium rates, however, low, advance with age, and so does the possibility of entering the physically impaired group and losing the opportunity to secure this protection.

Knowing that this loss is actually coming, it is simply a matter of ordinary business prudence to guard against it. The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada offer you a plan to do so at very low cost.

"PELTED WITH PELTRY" IS WOMEN'S DRESS THIS YEAR

Plenty of Fur on Femine Winter Attire—What the Women's Fashions Stand For.

Two important facts stand out in the fashions for winter which have just begun their career. The extraordinary display of peltry is one, and the juxta-position of different materials is the other.

The first fashion spells extravagance; the second stands for economy. It is the latter in which the great majority of women should be more interested, but with that delightful inconsistency which makes the sex charming they pay more attention to the extravagant fashion and allow it to absorb the better part of their thoughts on dress.

The last savage instinct to exist in a woman is her desire for pieces of fur to adorn her person. There was once a time when peltry belonged to winter and was needed for protection, and this excuse was used by every woman who could filch money from the housekeeping allowance to buy a bit of fur to go about her neck; but this flimsy excuse has faded into the background since it has been the fashion to be as prolific with fur in hot weather as in cold weather.

Much of the interest in clothes has been weakened, from an artistic point of view, by the refusal of women to regard the importance of dressing in a seasonable manner.

When summer had its clothes and winter produced those that belonged to itself, there was a sharp contrast in feminine apparel. The shops made money by it, the women were made comfortable about it, and they took to themselves something of the joyous changes of nature and presented the green leaf and the white snow as pleasing contrasts.

The appearance of a group of women on the street on a cool morning men on the street on a cool morning suggests that some dynamic force has been pelting them with pieces of fur in a hit and miss fashion.

There is no plan of action running through the scheme of dressing. Whenever a piece of fur has hit a frock there it remains. It may be on the head, the waist, the ankles or the back.

Unless one sees through observing eyes that find amusing episodes in the use of new fashions by women, one may not see this peculiar effect that a large number of women produce, spotted as they are by the hide of every animal that can be caught and killed. A cartoonist has called them "a human menagerie, while the occupants walking to and fro, clamoring loudly for what they want."

The effect of a menagerie would be better produced if women contented themselves with one garment of peltry and covered their figures with it from shoulders to ankles, but they have turned their attention to pieces of peltry that can be attached to the costume wherever there might have been a space.

There are swinging panels at the sides of skirts which are edged with fur; there are immense collars with wide, separate wristlets of fur used on blouses and coats; there are jackets which have fur peplums or a fur panel down the back; there are other coats that display waistcoats of peltry and, possibly, patch pockets which correspond with the hem on the skirt.

The milliners have made hats of fur in patchwork fashion. A turban of yellow will have brown spots on it; a flaring brim of sealskin will be attached to a crown of ermine which has a medallion of seal on top; a beehive hat of black velvet will have bands made from three kinds of fur running around the base of the crown to end in a lover's knot at the side.

The Blouse of the Hour.

The second fact of importance in fashion which was stated in the beginning of this story in the furtherance of economical ideas in dress by joining together whatever materials one likes to accomplish a suit or a frock.

In this one respect fashion has turned a somersault over the intervening decades between a fashion that was and a fashion that is. Those who were shrewd enough to foretell a scarcity of worsted materials in the world warned us that a season would soon break in which the uniform line of color and fabric from chin to ankle must be abandoned. That hour has approached more rapidly than even the prophets foretold. At the moment we were not aware that there is any exasperating need of such economy, but preparedness is the best way to face an approaching truth.

Therefore, the world of dressmakers has given women to understand that it is no longer necessary to have a coat that matches a skirt or a blouse that matches either, no matter for what occasion the costume is intended. Even for the most ceremonial hours, such as the opera, a dinner or a dance, there are black and colored velvet skirts with bodices that are as remote from the skirts as though they had been bodily lifted from another costume.

A TIME EXPOSURE.

I TURNED the family album's page
And noted with a smile
The efforts of a bygone age
At photographic style
There, peg topped, grandpa could be seen,
While grandma beamed, contented
To know her brand new crinoline
The latest thing invented

And there Aunt Mary's looks belied
Her gravity of dress
That great poke bonnet could not hide
Her youthful comeliness.
There, too, was father when a boy
And elsewhere in the series
A youthful cousin (Fauntleroy),
An uncle in Dundrearies.

And then before my scornful eye
A smirking youth appeared,
Flaunting a loose aesthetic tie
And embryonic beard
With laughter I began to shake,
Noting the watch chain weighty
And all the things that went to make
A "nut" in eighteen-eighty

I looked upon the other side,
Still tittering, to see
What branch the fellow occupied
Upon our family tree
A name was scrawled across the card
With flourishes in plenty,
And, lo, it was the present bard
Himself at five and twenty!

Easy.

Miss Curley kept a private school and one morning was interviewing a new pupil.

"What does your father do to earn his living?" the teacher asked of the little girl.

"Please, ma'am," was the prompt reply, "he doesn't live with us. My mother supports me."

"Well, then," asked the teacher, "how does your mother earn her living?"

"Why," replied the little girl in an artless manner, "she gets paid for staying away from father."—New York Times.

Slight Distinction.

Quickness in repartee has been credited to Paderewski. A gentleman once introduced the pianist to the champion polo player of England and added. "You are both leaders of your separate professions, though they are, of course, very different."

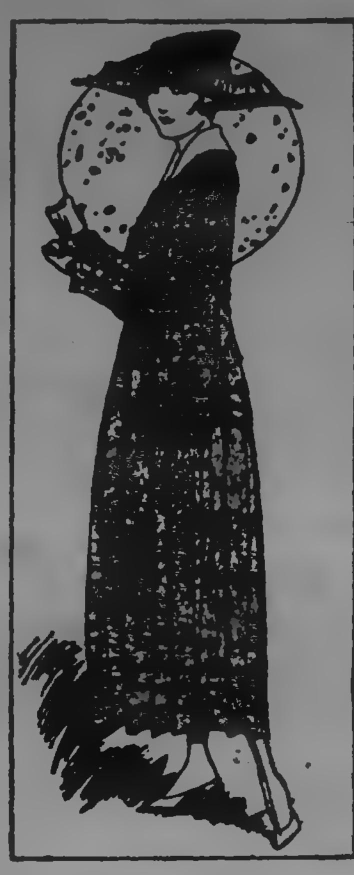
"Not so very different," quickly responded the great pianist. "My new friend is a dear soul who plays polo, whereas I am a dear Pole who plays solo."—Christian Register.

NOW SUIT FROCK

Close Relative of Coat Dress Introduced Last Year.

Satin and Velvet in Combination Shown in Many of Smartest Tailored Gowns for Fall.

The sketch illustrates a simple but extremely smart little suit dress made, preferably, of serge and with trimming of inch-wide flat braid. The skirt is plaited, but without flare. The upper part of the dress is cut with lengthened back section, so that a suit is closely simulated.



Newcomer in Field of Dress.

The garment is a near relative of the coat dress introduced last year, and which enjoyed a season of popularity. The coat dress in its most distinctive form was open from collar to edge of skirt hem, and designers claim that the dress suit has advantages over this because the garment slips over the head and has a very conservative skirt, whereas the coat dress that opened all the way down the front found many objectors on account of its tendency to flare open unattractively if a button dropped off or was left unfastened.

Suit dresses are shown that so closely resemble actual two-piece suits that it is difficult to distinguish them, and for fall and early winter wear these garments will undoubtedly be in favor.

If a dress of this type is to show up to the best possible advantage it must be well tailored and lined very much like a suit.

Satin and velvet in combination are shown in many of the smartest tailored frocks for fall. The skirt will usually be made of the satin, with tunic or overskirt and bodice of velvet cording. Sleeves may be of either fabric. Usually the bodice is high-necked and finished with a choker collar of fur.

Velvet and georgette are attractively combined in some of the loveliest afternoon dresses shown. The lower half of the skirt will be fashioned of velvet and the upper part of georgette with velvet bodice and georgette sleeves. The bodice that is cut surplice style continues to be featured.

FASHION ACCENTS THE CUFF

It Appears This Season Not Only on the Sleeve But on Skirt, Blouse and Glove.

A dress feature that fashion is accenting just now is the cuff. She has shifted its position on the sleeve. Instead of being at the wrist, its old accustomed place, we now see it at the elbow. Then, again, when it is used at the bottom of the sleeve, it is often so deep that it reaches to the elbow.

Skirts have cuffs, too, this season, says the Woman's Home Companion. Not a few of the smartest are finished with a cuff hem. The cuff, which turns up on the right side of the skirt, varies from six inches to three-fourths of a yard.

Eton jackets are finished with a cuff. The little jacket is turned back in cuff form two or three inches above the normal waistline.

The new gloves are keeping up with the style procession. They, too, have cuffs. Sometimes the cuff is in the form of a contrasting kid band, or the glove is in the gauntlet form with V-shaped insets of contrasting kid or suede.

As to Belts for Fall.

The belt may be arranged in a variety of ways on both afternoon and street dresses. For the long waisted style there is the wide, straight belt, the sash belt that loops and ties is favored for certain models, also a three yard long belt which encircles the waist and wraps once or twice about the hips, looping either front, back or side.

BIG DESIGNS IN CRETONNES

Tendency Is Toward Large Figures, Especially for Window Curtains and Chair Cushions.

There is, perhaps, no very distinctive thing about the new cretonnes and chintzes and printed linens—and, perhaps, that is just what gives them their characteristic charm. For among them can be found one to suit every sort of taste.

Perhaps the tendency is toward big designs—although there are charming small designs if you want them. But the big designs are more effective, it is safe to say, for window curtains and cushions in chairs—and nowadays yards and yards of cretonne are used for these purposes. Moreover, the bags that are made now are so huge that even large designs show well on them.

The bird has come to stay in cretonne, and he appears in more gorgeous plumage than ever this year. He is most often a parrot, perhaps because the parrot has such gaudy plumage by nature that unexaggerated it makes colorful cretonne. Sometimes he is some other sort of tropical bird, of gayly colored plumage. Occasionally he is an almost colorless bird of some sort—and in dull rose and gray-black he is quite as effective as the brilliant parrot.

Then, little figures, chiefly of Chinese and Japanese sort, appear on some of the new cretonnes. These are very attractive in some places, and are quite unattractive in others. In many of the smartest new bags they are used to distinct advantage. And sometimes they may be employed in hangings with very good effect.

HATS ARE OF MANY SHAPES

There Never Was a Time When There Was So Great a Variety as Is Found This Season.

There never was a time when hat shapes were so diversified as they are this season; in fact, there are so many varieties that it would be impossible for any type of woman to be hatted unbecomingly.

There are many shapes that tend to the Napoleon styles; novelty tricorns, models that show the influence of the Spanish and hats that are adaptations of the Breton.

The directoire and the marquis shapes come in for much attention, and shapes that are seemingly inspired by the Alpine. Poke mushrooms there are in plenty with their short backs and long fronts that coquettishly shade the eyes.

Then there's the hat with the irregular brim edge—sides that shoot out suddenly in points with the opposite brim much narrower and perhaps just describing a round edge. Then again the crowns are irregular—some show the four indentations that one associates with the soldier hat; then there is the Japanese crown that is highly peaked.

PRODUCES SLIM LINES.

The large woman with good cause has always considered surplus weight a detriment to her figure. Lately she has begun to change her opinion and think of excess avoirdupois in the light of an asset instead of a liability, for the new system of designing provides her with gowns that give the figure of generous proportions slim lines.

This evening gown, designed according to that new scientific method, produces the much-desired effect of slender lines. It is a pretty model trimmed with beading and cut to convert all excess avoirdupois to an aid in forming good lines.

YOUNG PRINCE WANTED FREEDOM

Rebelled Against Conventions of Russian Court.

SLAVE TO CIRCUMSTANCES

Grand Duke Michael Desired to Be a Democrat, but Being the Brother of the Late Czar He Was Caught in the Web of Intrigue That Pulled Down Romanoffs.

THERE is one man in Russia who has undoubtedly always regarded being born in a royal family as a misfortune. The Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch, the only brother of the late Czar, Nicholas Romanoff, found early in life that being born to the purple was not by any means an unmixed blessing. He seems to have been from his youth a democrat by instinct. He did not desire to follow the conventions laid down for royalty in his country, and he early began to feel that his English cousins, the sons and daughters of the late King Edward and Queen Alexandra, were much more happily placed than himself. It was foreordained for the handsome young Russian that his marriage would be arranged to suit the plans of the Russian Government. That did not please him, and the story of how he was finally exiled from Petrograd because he was determined to marry as his heart dictated is one of the romances of modern Europe. His natural inclinations took him to England, where life had the artistic surroundings that he could find in Moscow and Petrograd, but where he could also enjoy freedom. Some writers also credit him with being very much interested in the experiment of democracy on this continent. He is said to have studied the history of North America very closely, and that he had adopted many of the customs and manners of the Americans as well as the English people. Of course, the Grand Duke Michael never ceased to love his country, and he used his influence when welcomed back to the court of his brother, Nicholas II., to offset the pro-German intriguing of the Czarina. He was always an antagonist of the Teutonic forces and the reactionary tendencies of the Russian Government. It is said that he and the Grand Duke Nicholas, uncle of the Czar, warned that weak and vacillating monarch of what was going to happen to his country if he did not change the course of the treacherous government. It was because of the well known liberal ideas of the Grand Duke Michael that he was offered the crown when the successful revolution occurred last March. He refused to become Czar, and declared that he would use all his influence in bringing about a modern form of government in the suffering country. It is one of the tragedies of the war that the Grand Duke Michael, on account of his connection with the royal family, has recently fallen under suspicion, and is charged with being connected with one of the numerous plots against the Government. Intrigues and counter-intrigues are so sure to follow a change of government like that which took place in Russia that it is almost impossible for a man, no matter how high-minded and sincere, to escape doing something suspicious. The outside world is hoping that the Grand Duke Michael will come through the next few troubled years unscathed.

GRAND DUKE MICHAEL

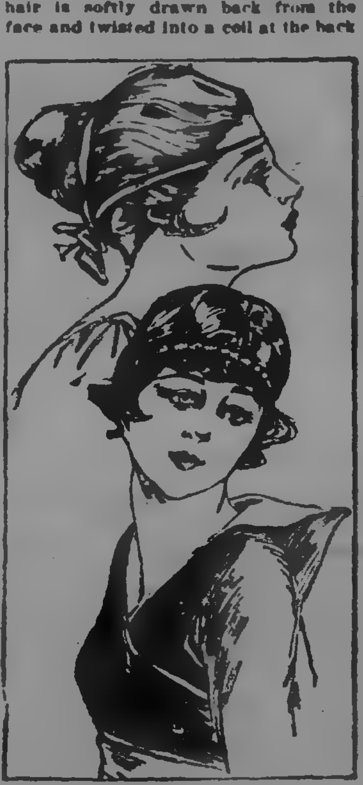
IN CLASSIC LINES

New Parisian Coiffures Modeled After Famous Greek Statues.

Artificial Waves Out of Favor and Hairdressers Are Trying to Give Natural Effects.

Two of the newest headdresses for girls are shown in the accompanying sketch. The profile head shows the classic outline which is so much in favor with the Parisians. The unwaved hair is softly drawn back from the face and twisted into a coil at the back of the head, after the manner of so many of the famous Greek statues, writes Idalia de Villiers, a Paris correspondent.



New Coiffures for Girls.

Then a long length of gold galon edged with black is passed round the forehead, then round the chignon, with a bow tied underneath the latter. Anyone with regular features could adopt this headdress with much benefit, but pretty girls with small and uncertain noses would do better to copy the second style which shows a narrow bandeau of multicolored beads drawn round hair dressed in Julia James fashion.

In this latter headdress the hair is cut in a fringe across the forehead and loose curls over the ears. Artificial waves have completely gone out of favor and all our best hairdressers are trying to give natural effects, even when making use of the waving tongs. Kiss curls over the ears are still in favor and straight fringes are worn by every second smart one one meets.

Our Unexplored Country.

A very common impression held even by Canadians is that there is little Canadian territory left to explore except on the Arctic islands. But as far back as 1890 Dr. George Dawson had calculated that there were then about 1,000,000 square miles of unexplored territory in Canada, about 600,000 square miles in Western Canada, the rest lying in the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec.

Mr. Charles Camsell, of the Geological Survey of Canada, has quite recently revised Dr. Dawson's estimate, reaching for Western Canada the figures of about 642,000 square miles, while the unexplored area of Northern Quebec is represented by 59,000 square miles.

The total area of Canada is reckoned at 3,729,665 square miles, of which 520,800 square miles are embraced in the islands of the Arctic ocean. The unexplored area (Camsell figures) of 901,000 square miles represents almost 25 per cent. of the total area of the country.

HELLO! Is that you, m'love?

Uh-huh, this is snooky

Yes, I just reached the office. Thought I would phone to find out if your headache still bothered you, dearie.

What! The baby standing straight up on her feet?

Gee, that's fine! How far did she walk? Yes! Alone?

Wonderful child, sweetie! She's growing to be more like you every day too. Why, I really believe in another week the little treasure will be able to converse with us. Lift her up to the phone, dearie.

'Lo! Is 'at Da Da's 'ittle uky-ukyookims? Is 'ittle darlin' behavin' when Da Da's 'way? Div Da Da 'ittle tiss like a dood ittle dirlie.

Hello? Yes, dearie. What, she's crying? Oh, I hope there's nothing seriously wrong. Shout? I did not shout at the child.

How can I help it if she has a nervous temperament, lovie? You know we are all subject to things of that nature.

Inherited from whom?

No, I didn't say she inherited it from you.

What did I say?

Why, I only remarked—or rather I thought it was real complimentary to say—that she resembled you the most.

Quarrel? No, I'm not starting a quarrel.

Now, m'love, be reasonable; I—

No! No! Certainly, I—

ITALY'S WASPS OF SEA KEEP ENEMY FROM VENICE

Austrian Battleship Destroyed By Motor Boat

With the French Army in Italy, Dec. 19.—Italy's defence of Venice has proved the fighting qualities of the motor boat.

Propelled by powerful engines and capable of almost incredible speed, armed with torpedo tubes or light guns, the new type of naval fighting craft has done much to help the Italians keep back the Teutonic invasion.

It was one of these fast motor boats, according to reports today, which recently passed the barriers of the Venetian Gulf, cruised out across the Adriatic, slipped through the mine fields at the Gulf of Trieste, entered the harbor, blew up the Austrian battleship Wein— and got safely away. There have been numerous other instances where these little wasps of the sea have harassed the enemy dreadnoughts and cruisers.

Their great speed makes them extremely difficult to hit and their torpedo sting is just as deadly as that of a super-submarine.

The motor boats, every one around Venice firmly believes, will keep the Queen City of the seas beyond range of the enemy's guns. The more religious of the inhabitants of islands of the Venetian gulf have an additional reason for confidence. It is that the Island of Durano, on which is the church of St. Martin, holds the body of Saint Barbara, patron saint of Venice.

Coupled with the present assault on the Asiago plateau, and the drive around Monte Crappa, the battle now raging along the northern lagoons of the Gulf of Venice constitutes the Austro-German's third simultaneous effort to crumple up the Piave front.

WASH YOUR FACE AT NIGHT

This Is Advice of Expert Who Declares That It Is the First Law of Beauty.

The first law of beauty is not to leave powder on the face over night, to say nothing of rouge. It is enough to ruin the most beautiful skin eventually, and its effect on a complexion, which had no real claims to beauty, is nothing short of disastrous, declares a beauty expert. Powder is usually put on over a coating of cold cream to make it stick. This paste, left on all night, clogs the pores. The skin habituated to this treatment is pasty and sallow, without life, and usually the pores are enlarged from the deposits of powder.

It seems so simple to slip into bed at once when you are tired and it seems hard to take the time and energy to give your face a good cleaning. But really it is worth the effort, for by staying up ten minutes more to wash out all vestige of cosmetics you will keep your skin lovely.

The nightly cleaning should be the most important and the most thorough of all. If it is properly done, all that will be necessary in the morning will be the cold sponge off. At night, however, all the dust and dirt of the day has settled on the face, besides the cold cream and powder, and it needs a good scrubbing to get it off.

Italian Pig-iron.

The Italian output of pig-iron in 1916 is returned at 454,923 tons, as against 372,909 tons in 1915 and 424,099 tons in 1913. The imports last year were 303,333 tons, as against 240,366 tons in 1915 and 221,689 tons in 1913. The output of pig-iron and the home consumption thus reached record figures.

KEENE

(Special Correspondence.)

Keene, Dec. 19.—The news of the death of Mr. Thomas Mollisson of congestion of the lungs on Tuesday morning of last week came as a great shock to his many friends. The late Mr. Mollisson was ill only a week. He leaves to mourn his loss a loving wife and six children, the eldest son, John, being employed by the Bank of Montreal at Peterborough. Mrs. Mollison has the sympathy of the entire community in her bereavement.

The funeral was held from the Presbyterian Church on Thursday afternoon last at 2.30 o'clock. Rev McEachern officiating, assisted by Rev. L. S. Wiglet. The pall bearers were Messrs. John Comrie, Robert Adamson, Harry Stewart, Harry Short, John Wrenwick, John Comrie.

Mr. S. Clarke of the Keene branch of the Bank of Toronto spent the week-end with friends at Cobourg.

The managers of the Keene curling and skating rink expect to have the ice ready for the season's skating by Christmas.

Mr. Harold Roche of Peterborough visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. Roche a few days last week.

Mrs. (Rev.) McEachern returned on Saturday last from Toronto where she had been visiting friends.

Mrs. William R. Wedlock was shopping at Peterborough on Tuesday.

Mr. Stanley Braden left last Tuesday for Toronto where he expects to spend the next three months.

The W. M. S. of the Methodist Church held their regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs R. N. Johnston Monday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock. A splendid Christmas programme was prepared for the occasion. A donation of 16 gems of fruit was made by the members of the Society to be shipped to the Deaconess home at Toronto which this society helps to support.

Misses Lem and Evlyn Shaver were in Peterborough on Wednesday of last week.

The council held their last meeting for the year on Saturday last.

Mr. Michael Kenneally was in Peterborough Tuesday on business.

A Christmas tree and entertainment will be given by the members of the Methodist Sunday School on Monday evening, Dec. 24, to which every one is cordially invited, the programme to commence promptly at 8 o'clock.

A ball will be given on Friday evening of this week by several of the young men of the village for patriotic purposes.

We are pleased to report that Mr. Russel Renwick and sister, Miss Ella who have been very ill with typhoid fever, are improving nicely.

Mrs. Bertha Wilson, who has been spending the past week at Toronto, returned home on Monday.

Miss Gertrude Roche was shopping at Peterborough on Tuesday.

Moved by Bell and Henry that a special meeting be held at May's school on Thursday, December 20, at 8 p.m.

Rooting Out Christianity

A NEW objective of the Pan-German propaganda is revealed by a well known German publicist. Writing in The Suddeutsche Konservative Korrespondenz, of Karlsruhe, of which he is publisher and editor-in-chief, Adam Roder gives it as his opinion that the Pan-German aim to wipe out Christianity in Germany and establish a peculiar, made in-Germany religion. He accuses the Pan-Germanists of bitter hatred of "Semitic Christianity," and quotes from their writings to prove his contention. Then he arrives at this conclusion:

"The Pan German view of the world is consciously aimed at the rooting out of the Christian religion and the system of ethics derived from it. A German religion is to arise, linked to the belief in Wotan of our ancestors, which, in turn, is to be so 'refined' by the results of the modern theory of races and the teachings of the Darwinian theory of evolution that what remains will be atheism, framed in high-sounding phrases. The German people, as the noblest and most favored of all races, as the highest manifestation of humanity, will have become its own god.

"Christianity will be done away with according to the ideas of Neitzsche as the great weakening and enervating influence. The only great person is he who has power and uses it. Sin, redemption, repentance, the greatest and most profound things that human thought tries to fathom, do not exist for this company of heartless bullies, whose members, with monocles in their left eyes and rattling sabres in their right hands, challenge the world in order to place the German heel upon its neck in 'ancient Roman fashion.'

Some light may be thrown upon this movement by the open confession of theism made by Count Bernstorff just before his departure from our shores. The Christian Evangelist (St. Louis) refers to his quoted words as exhibiting a symptom of modern Germany. As a contrast to the not remote past it recalls that the late Ambassador's father "was a deeply religious man, and one of the prominent evangelical leaders of the Germany of the last generation—the Germany that so many people love and reverence and believe in." He is said to have once been at the head of the World's Evangelical Alliance. Continuing, The Christian Evangelist observes:

"But this Germany gave up spirituality for materialism through influences that may be distinctly traced, and the result is the present-day Germany, whose leadership is lodged in such men as Count Bernstorff, the recent ambassador.

"That way may be judged from some of his utterances given in an interview to a New York daily as he was about to leave America. His relations to God and religion are described as follows:

"'And now what is his attitude to the mysteries? What does Count Bernstorff think of religion and the future of humanity? He professes himself a cynic and unbeliever.

"'"I know this world, he says, "and don't trouble about any other."

"'He frankly dislikes churches and doubts whether their influence is good. When I asked him whether he had been brought up a Puritan he burst into a great laugh.

"'"In any case I've got over it completely," he cried. "I think the man a fool who denies himself any good thing in this life, unless for health's sake or some dominant reason."

"'But he believes in humanity, in the slow development of man in time, and hopes that our growth is toward the good and the beautiful. But it is only a hope, and soon dismissed as vague, for his mind is also given to practical things. He does not lose himself willingly in transcendental imaginings. He professes to be a student of history. "History is the Bible of diplomats," he says.

"'"I think man should do what is right, but I am very lenient, especially toward sins of the flesh when the temptation is great and the results unimportant."'

"One almost blushes as he reads this and knows that it is a stain so deep the tears of no recording angel can blot it out. Tears there are—tears of men and angels—but this kind can only be overcome by the crash and ruin of its own house, whose ruin has been surely effected by these latter-day Samsons made mad by their own mephitic materialism.

Hastings, Dec. 19.—The Epworth League of the Methodist Church has purchased an honor roll in memory of the boys who are serving overseas, on which the following names are recorded: Harry Scriver, Percy Scriver, Ralph McQuade, Albert Sherwin, Elmer Tapping, Herman McMillen, Percy Killenbeck, Benjamin Baxter, Ernest Camm, Alex Joanston James Clarke, George Free, Ernest G. Stevenson, Neil Scriver, R. K. Runnels, Roy R. Richardson, Dr. T. B. Edmison, Russel Scriver, Albert W. Scriver, Sydney Sharpe, Leslie A. Gould, Hugh McArthur, Henry Stone, Carl Hetherington, Lem. Wood, Edwin Longmuir.

We are sorry to learn of serious illness in the case of Mrs. Thomas Lynch, of Asphodel. Nurse O'Brien of Peterborough is in charge.

The annual bazaar of the English Church was held recently, at which a good sum was realized.

A well attended political meeting was held in the town hall Wednesday evening of last week which was addressed by Messrs. S. Dudley and Clarke.

Rev. Mr. Washington of Roseneath occupied the pulpit of the Methodist church on Sunday evening, preaching in the interest of education. Subscriptions were taken in aid of the colleges.

Rev. Isaac Snell was in Roseneath doing similar work on that charge.

Monday, election day, was unusually busy around the polling divisions, and much interest was manifested.

Nurse Price of Peterborough is in charge of the case of Mrs. Alex Fleming, who is suffering from pneumonia. We are pleased to note improvement in this case.

The Misses McGuire have moved their household effects from the rooms over the Union Bank to the next block east.

Mrs. Golden and daughter, of Saskatchewan are guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. Tyler.

The severe weather of the past few days is being followed by a much more pleasant temperature.

Mr. E. Buck of Norwood was in town on Sunday.

Mrs. S. Merrill of Campbellford spent the week-end with her sister, Mrs. Victor German.

Mr. and Mrs John Londerville, of Peterborough, spent Monday in the village.

Mrs. Pulfer and child, of Taggart, Sask., are visiting the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. Tyler.

THE RED RASH OF DYSPEPSIA

Stomach Trouble May Ruin a Most Beautiful Complexion. Prevent Such Disaster With Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

"It Isn't Extreme Care That Preserves My Beauty. It is a Good Stomach Kept Sound by Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets."

Hundreds of otherwise pretty girls have a regular stomach face. Little pimples break out. Then bigger ones all the result of undigested food in a weak digestive system. If these girls would take a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet after meals the pimples would go away, the skin would be clearer, and the pinched haggard expression would give way to smiles. It isn't what you eat nor the quantity, it is the ability of the digestive organs to turn food into pure blood. When food lays in the stomach and sours, ferments, becomes gassy, causes rumblings and belching, there is trouble ahead unless Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are relied upon. Get a 50-cent box today at any druggist and avoid spoiling your complexion.

ONE CENT A DAY CLUB.

The contributions to the One Cent a Day Club of the Ashburnham Patriotic League for the month of November amounted to five thousand five hundred and twenty-eight (5,528) cents, making a total to date of $1,657.01.—Mrs. G. L. Hay.

Nurse O'Brien of Peterborough is on duty with Mrs. Thos. Lynch, who is suffering from a severe attack of pleurisy.

Nightly practice is going on in connection with the annual Christmas entertainment of the Methodist church Sunday school.

We are sorry to record the death of a much-respected resident of Percy in the person of Mr. Russel Warner, who had been ill for some months from paralysis. To the bereaved widow and family universal sympathy is extended.

GEORGE MACK and THEODORA WARFIELD singing "Babes in the Woods," in the famous musical comedy, "Very Good, Eddie." The inserts are Denman Maley and Florence Earle, principal members of this company.

A feast of bright comedy, tuneful music, bright dancing numbers and the prettiest chorus ever assembled are promised in "Very Good, Eddie," which comes to "The Grand" next Saturday, Dec. 22, for two performances. Much has been heard of this musical success during its run of an entire year in New York and its recent six months' stay in Chicago. Its musical gems have been sung and played here for months, and have been among the most poular dance selections. But the rendition of the music by the people who first made them popular, with the [illegible] orchestra and the chorus accompaniment, is sure to be a revelation. Toronto and Montreal were just as enthusiastic in their praise of this show as were New York and Chicago, and this will be one of only four other Canadian cities that will have an opportunity to see this big Broadway success with its original metropolitan cast and production. The company will include such experts of comedy song and dance as Denman Maley, Georgie Mack, Harry Myers, Florence Earle, Helen Raymond, Theodora Warfield, Lavinia Winn, Harry Linkey, Jean DeBriac, Elaine Ford, Ralph O'Brien and the famous swagger fashion chorus.

TAPS IN THE ARMY

Story of the Bugle Call, "Lights Out," Now In Use.

WAS FIRST SOUNDED IN 1862.

General Butterfield Composed the Melodious Strain, Which Quickly Supplanted the Old and Unmusical West Point Signal.

In a book of personal letters and memorials printed for circulation among his friends Oliver W. Norton, a veteran of the war between the states, who at the beginning of his military career was brigade bugler to General Daniel Butterfield's command, included a bit of historical information that is of too wide an interest to be allowed to remain in such comparative obscurity, says the Youth's Companion.

General Butterfield had ability as a musician in addition to his ability as an army organizer. He especially delighted in the invention of bugle calls.

Perhaps the most interesting as well as the most beautiful of these calls is taps, which, according to the authoritative story of the general's bugler, came into existence in the following manner:

In the month of July, 1862, the Army of the Potomac rested in camp at Harrison's Landing, a point on the James river in Virginia. It was immediately after the seven days of fighting before Richmond. The losses had been heavy, and the army was recruiting its strength after the long struggle.

Day and night the long, winding valley and the hills on either side echoed to the bugle calls that marked the rhythm of the camp life. The scene was more of peace than war in spite of military duties and trappings. The many vacant places in the ranks, to which the new army had not yet become accustomed, and the sobering sense of a long impending struggle that was born of the early reverses from which they had just suffered put the soldiers at the close of each day into a state of meditation not untouched with sadness.

The old order of "lights out," which had been inherited from the earliest West Point memories, sounded a discordant and unsuitable note to the sensitive musical ear of the general.

He immediately began turning over in his mind such musical phrases as seemed to him to convey the suggestion of the peace and quiet of the camp—of rest after labor. Perhaps the spirit of the hour in which that immortal musical phrase was born might be more perfectly expressed as a sense of pause, something related to the words of Shelley:

All is deep silence, like the fearful calm
That slumbers in the storm's portentous pause.

Having settled upon a combination of notes that seemed to him to be in tune with the sentiment of a sleeping camp of soldiers, he summoned his bugler, Norton, and began to teach him the new call, whistling the notes over many times and correcting their time and phrasing. At last, satisfied with the result, he jotted the notes down with a pencil on the back of an old envelope.

That same night Butterfield's own brigade was the first to listen to the lingering refrain of the new call, and the next morning the buglers of other camps near by—for its music had carried far among the hills—began to inquire as to its meaning and to ask permission to learn it. Wherever it was heard it arrested immediate attention and lingered in the memory. It passed from army corps to army corps with great rapidity and was finally substituted by general orders for the old "lights out" call and printed in the army regulations.

Its use in the military burial service both by veterans of the war and by the United States regular army has added greatly to the tenderness of its associations. There are few musical phrases in the world held in deeper reverence. Its sounding today will hush the noisiest and most boisterous throng.

General Daniel Butterfield was born in Utica, N. Y., Oct. 31, 1831. He was graduated from Union college in 1849 and joined the Seventy-first regiment of New York in 1851. In 1860 he had risen to the rank of colonel of the Twelfth regiment, which he led to Washington in April, 1861.

For his efficiency as an organizer he was rapidly promoted and took part in many of the most important engagements of the war. His brigade was one of the most famous of the Army of the Potomac, and his personal bravery endeared him to his own soldiers. After the war his organizing powers were frequently called into requisition for great public parades and exhibitions. He died at Cold Spring, N. Y., July 17, 1901.

After the war Oliver Norton lived in Chicago, where he was one of the pioneers in the tin plate industry.

Poison Ivy.

Folk who are interested in gardening are often troubled with poison ivy. They will be glad to know that sour milk mixed with a great deal of salt will, if it is applied with soft cloths, relieve the pain and draw out the poison. A solution of very hot water which has been poured over bluestone will also draw out and kill the poison. Bluestone, however, is a poison and should be kept away from children.

Are French Heels Going?

There is no doubt of the fact that French heels are doomed for street wear, but this does not mean that they will not still be worn indoors. French heels were never really intended for walking, and the wonder is that women of good sense and good taste have for so long been willing to follow the vogue for high-heeled walking shoes. The French-heeled shoe undoubtedly gained popularity because of the short skirt, and many persons have predicted that the sensible walking shoe would not return to favor until the short skirt had passed out of fashion. But as indications point now skirts are still to be moderately short, and at the same time women are to wear sensible heels.

Synopsis of Canadian Northwest Land Regulations

The sole head of a family or any male over 18 years old, who was at the commencement of the present war, and has since continued to be, a British subject or a subject of an allied or neutral country, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion Land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for District. Entry by proxy may be made on certain conditions. Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of land in each of three years.

In certain districts a homesteader may secure an adjoining quarter-section as pre-emption. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Reside six months in each of three years after earning homestead patent and cultivate 50 acres extra. May obtain pre-emption patent as soon as homestead patent on certain conditions.

A settler after obtaining homestead patent, if he cannot secure a pre-emption, may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

Holders of entries may count time of employment as farm laborers in Canada during 1917, as residence duties under certain conditions.

When Dominion Lands are advertised or posted for entry, returned soldiers who have served overseas and have been honorably discharged, receive one day priority in applying for entry at local Agent's Office (but not Sub-Agency). Discharge papers must be presented to Agent.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy Minister of the Interior.

THE VERDICT.

(Vancouver Sun.)

"The verdict is in favor of conscription. Without doubt it will be patriotically, if not cheerfully, accepted. Sir Wilfrid Laurier will bow to the will of the majority and will advise the inhabitants of Quebec to do likewise."

WINTER SPORTS FOR THOSE WHO SEEK THE SUNNY SOUTH

Golf the Favorite Pastime but there is Tennis Fishing, Bathing and Motoring Besides—Where "Hikers" are at Home.

Rest being the chief purpose of a vacation, the South offers it in all forms, from the gentle rock, rock rock on the hotel piazza to the more strenuous pursuit of the wild bear and wilder tarpon. Between these extremes are golf tennis, surf bathing, motoring, boating, riding, tramping and the like.

Golf is the favorite sport of the southern resorts. Most of the large hotels have courses of their own. Cities that seek winter visitors maintain links, and there are numerous clubs. Golf may be found at Atlantic Coast resorts from Norfolk to Havana, and inland as far as California. The output of "literature" from these places is astonishing. The expert who wants to pick a good golf course as well as a good climate and good hotel can get full particulars by writing for them.

Winter Tennis Tournaments.

Tennis courts are as thick as potato patches. Winter tournaments are held at Palm Beach and at other points.

Surf bathing is a staple sport all along the coast. South of Charleston and for the whole length of the Gulf Coast a dip in the seas is practicable at any time of the winter. Seaside resorts are far more numerous than mountain, and the hotels along the coast have been located with a particular view to beach frontage.

Other water sports are followed with zest especially yachting and motorboating. Races are held at many points. The motorboat races in the long lagoon back of Palm Beach are one of the season's events at that rendezvous. Pleasure trips to the West Indies Panama and South America may begin at Atlantic or Gulf ports. Such jaunts, however, will be fewer this year than usual, owing to the war demand for shipping and to the busy U-boats.

Fish Longing To Be Caught.

Fish all over the gulf are longing to be caught. Pensacola is the centre of a fisherman's paradise. Boats ply between the city and the fishing places. Among them is Camp Walton, 40 miles distant from Pensacola and from a railroad. Red fish, speckled trout and sea trout fill the waters and the fighting tarpon gives many a good battle. It is half a day's voyage by motorboat from Pensacola to the deep sea fishing grounds.

Duck, quail and wild turkey may be shot along the coast or a few miles back. Not far inland one sees deer; deeper in the woods are bear. Fox hunting is popular at many resorts. About Aiken, S. C., are many red and grey fox and riding to the hounds is one of the gayest sports of the winter.

Motoring Develops Good Roads.

The development of motor cars and competition for winter patronage has done much to advance the building of good roads throughout the South. Owners of automobiles may reach almost any section nowadays overland if they wish. Hard rock roads have been constructed through much of Florida even down to the point of the peninsula and along the gulf shore are beautiful white shell roads.

Bridle paths wind all through the mountains, and horseback rides occupy many a delightful hour. A great many hotels have stables of their own. Some visitors who make a long sojourn take their own animals. Polo contests have become popular at some of the fashionable places, and are expected to have greater vogue this year with the presence of so many army officers. New Orleans, Hot Springs, Havana and other cities have horse racing every winter.

"Hikers" can find plenty to do. The more rugged peaks of the Alleghenies will test the endurance of any but the hardened mountain climbers. The Ozarks are less precipitous, but scarcely less beautiful. Those who go farther west may, of course, tackle the Rockies.

HIGH ROLLERS WIN TWO FROM DE LAVAL FIVE

At the Water street alleys Monday night the High Rollers and the De Laval met in a ten pin league fixture.

The match was a hard fought battle from start to finish and was witnessed by a number of bowling enthusiasts.

The High Rollers won the first and third games, while the De Laval won the second game.

The total pinnage was: High Rollers 2373, De Laval 2358.

Solomon, for the High Rollers, was high man for three games, with a 515 total. W. Fitzgerald was high man for the De Laval with 496 for a total.

Hard spares were made by Barrette, for De Laval and Thomas, for the High Rollers.

The scores:

De Laval

W. Fitzgerald	168	167	161—	486
Byers	158	166	143—	467
Barrette	144	136	170—	450
A. Fitzgerald	133	197	138—	468
Carter	138	159	179—	477
	741	825	791	2358

High Rollers

Thomas	158	133	133—	424
Lush	138	158	181—	477
Kelly	135	180	165—	480
Laplante	155	172	160—	477
Solomon	181	169	165—	515
	767	812	794	2373

SPORT DOINGS HERE AND THERE

John B. Miller, of Kearny, N.J., captain of the St. Louis Cardinals since 1914, has enlisted in the U.S. Marine Corps. Miller was among the candidates named to succeed Miller Huggins as manager of the Cards.

Football enacted a toll of twelve victims during the 1917 football season. The number is six less than in 1916, and four less than two years ago.

The Chicago Cubs have obtained Pitcher Joe Boehling from the Cleveland club via the waiver route. Boehling was slated for the Leafs last season, but asked Manager Fohl for another chance.

Catcher "Bill" Killifer, who was sold last week to the Chicago Cubs, threatens to quit baseball. Manager Mitchell of the Cubs is hopeful that the catcher will change his mind.

Major John C. Anderson, of Victoria, who enlisted with the 19th Alberta Dragoons early in the war as a private, was given his commission on the field, and awarded the Military Cross, has been killed in action.

Fred Waghorne is certainly the hard flower. He blossoms forth as a referee as regularly as the winter comes around. He has "farewelled" as often as Adelina Patti, but is as often dragged out of retirement. The Preparatory College junior group have again named Mr. Waghorne as one of the referees for the group, and the veteran is just as pleased to act as they are to have him. The grandpa of the O. H. A. referees certainly likes to jingle the bell over the little thorough sportsmen who play in this group. He makes them behave all the way from gong-to-gong.—Toronto Star.

C. G. E. WON TWO FROM CENTRALS

Last night in a ten pin league match the C. G. E. team won two of three games from the Centrals. The C. G. E.'s best spasm was in the first game when an 823 total was rolled. The Centrals best spasm was an 808 count for third game.

Weber and Dawson were the leaders for the Centrals, each rolling over the 500 mark as did Fielder and Mills for the C. G. E.

The scores were:

C. G. E.

Early	128	155	192—	475
Mills	200	152	159—	509
Sommerville	166	149	171—	486

Dawson	189	165	157—	511
	766	781	808	2355

Tomorrow night — Printers vs. West Ends.

Great interest is being taken on the ten pin alleys as this is "Turkey week." A good Xmas dinner is in store for the bowler making highest single score up to 11 o'clock tonight. Mr. Shook is the high man so far, with a 213 score. From Thursday until Saturday night the bowler making the highest total for 3 consecutive games of 10-pins also carries home a big fat Xmas dinner.

Prizes for Bowling At Yeotes' Alleys

Five valuable prizes will be given away at Yeotes Bros. bowling alleys on George street for the three highest consecutive scores in any one game, one prize only to each player. This contest begins Wednesday, Dec. 19 and will close Christmas night. Every one has a chance to win a prize.

John Wilson, aged 85, a retired farmer living alone near Hensall, was burned to death when his house was destroyed, owing to his putting coal oil on his fuel.

If You Were a Man

What would you want for yourself this Christmas?

A bit more pleasure, peace of mind, a crowded hour of happiness—or what?

And how would you get them?

Ask any man—your brother, father, uncle—they'll all tell you: "Give him some GOOD cigars, say, ARABELA."

Any tobacconist, round any corner, will tell you that ARABELA Cigars are good, very good. Most likely he will add, "The very best at the price."

Two generations of men have found solace and happiness in ARABELA Cigars, and, as Charlie says, "40 years of test would surely bring any bad points to the surface."

Quality has done it—quality and experience in blending the best of Havana tobaccos.

You can buy boxes of 10, 25 or 50 cigars, with the assurance that they will smoke mild, mellow and fragrant—and earn gratitude.

Our word and reputation on it!

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

LOWES—CAREW.

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. R. Carew, Pleasant Valley, Emily, when the marriage was solemnized of their eldest daughter, Margaret Elizabeth, to Parmenio Alvin Lowes, both of Emily. At 6 o'clock as the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, rendered by the skillful hand of Miss Ella Switzer, sounded through the house, the bridal party entered the parlor. Rev. C. M. Carew, pastor of Jarvis street Baptist Church, Toronto, uncle of the bride, performed the ceremony.

The bride looked charming in a costume of white silk crepe de chene and Georgette crape over white silk, and was assisted by Miss Lillian Lowes, sister of the groom, who was prettily attired in a dress of pale pink silk, with white satin trimmings. Mr. Calvert Carew, brother o fthe bride, attended the groom.

After congratulations, the guests, who numbered about sixty, repaired to the dining-room, which was decorated for the occasion, and partook of a sumptuous wedding dinner. Many and costly were the presents received, showing the high esteem in which the young couple are held by their numerous friends.

The bride's going-away suit was of green serge trimmed with black silk braid and buttons, and large black picture hat to match.

Mr. and Mrs. Lowes left for their new home, "Fair Bank," Emily.

Miss Florence Jackson, Cobourg, is the guest of Mrs. G. J. Browne, Antrim street.

Miss Lumsden, who has been visiting friends in the city, has returned to Norwood.

Lt.-Col. Charles Ackerman, is the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Ackerman, Dalhousie street.

Mrs. West, Ottawa, is the guest of her father, Mr. Moore, Rubidge street.

Mrs. Ernest Clarkson, who has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Lundy, left yesterday for Chicago.

Miss Laura Kelly, formerly of Norwood, is spending the day with her sister, Mrs. James Lynch, previous to her going to France with a number of American nurses from New York City.

Mrs. Crawford of Brockville is the guest of Mr and Mrs. R. M. Hamilton, Auburn.

Miss Coulthard of Toronto is visiting Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Coulthard, McDonnel street.

Mrs. R. N. Merritt of Napanee is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Knight for Christmas.

The Red Cross work room at the Public Library will be open Thursday afternoon to all workers willing to help in making two hundred pneumonia jackets which the local society have been asked to ship overseas at once.

Harold Samuel Noble and Miss Myrtle Evelyn Wright, both of Durham, were united in marriage by Rev. Robt. Pogue at St. Paul's manse at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Trinity Church W. M. S. will hold their monthly meeting tomorrow at the residence of Mrs. M. A. Morrison.

PRESENTATION TO MISS GRANT

BY GIRLS OF DOMESTIC SHIPPING ROOM AT BONNER-WORTH.

The girls of the domestic shipping room of the Bonner-Worth Co. paid a surprise visit to the home of Miss A. Grant, Park street, last night, and presented her with a dozen silver tea spoons. An address was read by Miss Clarice Dicke, and the presentation was made by Miss Flossie Sanders. The address follows:

Dear Adeline—

We have gathered here tonight to express to you our regret that you are leaving us. We wish you a long and happy married life and would ask you to accept this slight token of our appreciation and of the esteem in which you are held by us.

(Signed.)

C. Dicke, E. Wells, M. Walsh, A. Tinsworth, H. Bartlett, E. Sanders, F. Sanders, A. Penrose.

Miss Grant, though taken by surprise, made a suitable reply.

Russians Are Cleanly.

How religiously the pre-revolution routine maintains in Russia to-day is stated by a writer in Pearson's Weekly, who thus describes the institution of bathing there:

"Please may I go to have a bath?" my Russian servant used to say to me every Saturday afternoon, and off he would go with his clean linen bound up in a handkerchief to the great city baths, say, perhaps, for a couple of hours, and return shining with cleanliness. Every one, even in the tiniest village, must have a steam bath. Admission to the cheapest part is a penny farthing, while in the great towns there are luxurious establishments frequented by the rich.

"Where a village consists of twenty cottages there will be found twenty bathhouses installed. Each of these contains a stove that heats the great stoves placed above it. This stove is lit on bath nights, and when the stoves are sufficiently heated buckets of water are thrown over them, filling the place with steam.

"The bather then lies on a bench, and after soaping himself ends his wash in ice-cold water.

"There is a strange custom connected with the bath, which has given rise to the proverb, 'What is health to the Russian is death to the German'—that is, they frequently rush straight from a suffocatingly hot bath inside a huge earthenware oven, and, naked and steaming, roll themselves contentedly and luxuriantly in the snow."

ENGLISH PEERESS NOW A COLONEL

Work Done by Women Volunteer Reserve Force.

HELPS BEHIND THE LINES

The Beautiful Marchioness of Londonderry, Wife of One of the Richest of the British Peers, Has Been Taking an Active Part in the Form of Wartime Effort.

THE beautiful Marchioness of Londonderry has risen to the rank of colonel in England's Woman Volunteer Reserve Force. Here in Canada a good deal of fun was made of the Women's Home Guards when they were first organized, though some of the Western cities have done such good work with their Woman Volunteer Reserve Forces that members of them are to go overseas shortly. The British women have been trained to do work behind the lines. Short of actual fighting there are very few things that the Volunteer Reservists do not train themselves to do. They are taught signalling, motor dispatching, and camp cooking. They can drive motor transports, repair aeroplanes, and also repair clothes, work as military telegraph or telephone operators—in short, do many things that release men for service in the trenches. The Marchioness of Londonderry has been one of the very active workers in this force. She is the wife of one of the richest of the English peers and is ranked among the most beautiful of the British aristocrats. In peace times she was also known as the author of several books. Now, however, she has become a soldier, and has done such good work that she holds the rank of colonel. It is little wonder that the people of England are standing almost amazed at what the women are accomplishing. They are no longer just domestic drudges, but have become active and vital citizens of the Empire.

MARCHIONESS OF LONDONDERRY

SO LONG LETTY IS HIGH CLASS MUSICAL SHOW

ONE OF THE PREMIER ATTRACTIONS OF THEATRICAL SEASON.

"So Long, Letty," lived up to the recommendation given to the musical comedy by the Grand Opera House management. The company is comparatively new on the Canadian circuits, but Mr Turner having reliable information that the company presented a high-class attraction, recommended it to local theatregoers. This policy will be carried out only when it is known authoritatively that the attraction is of a high standard.

So Long Letty proved to be one of the most delightful theatrical offerings of the season. If any company can lay claim to a beauty chorus, the So Long Letty organization is in the front ranks. Another point in favor is the orchestra, which having the advantage of playing a score replete with catchy musical numbers, does it's work so well that encores are the order. The orchestral part of the entertainment in the Grand Opera House last night won instant popularity and drew generous and continued applause.

The spotlight reveals a domestic tale of woe in which there are two ill-matched couples, who enter into an agreement to "swoop," both mates and domiciles. It takes some time for the fun to get started, but once underway the comedy is brisk and without let-up. Miss Gladys Lockwood as Letty, Marguerite Gale as Grace and Jack Pollard and Robert Cavanaugh as the two husbands, are responsible for the fun, with Letty leading the way.

Miss Lockwood sings "They Go Wild Over Me," in fine style.

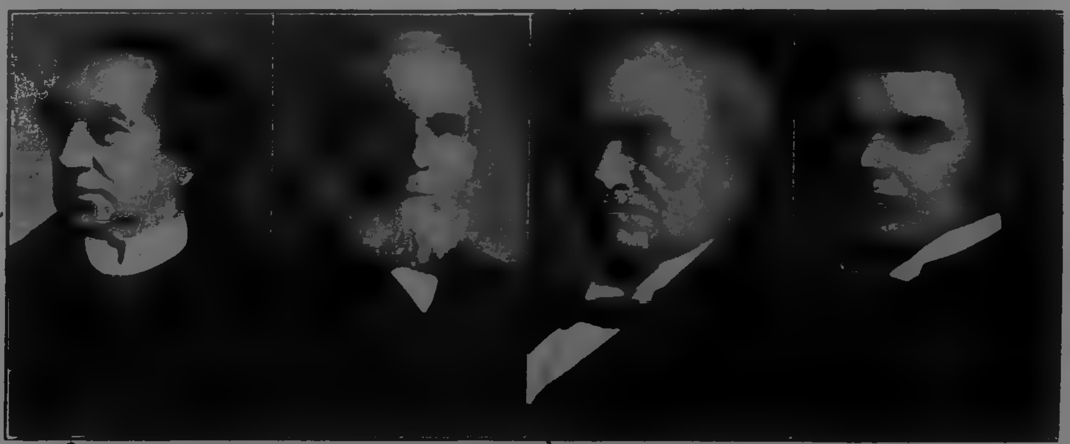
Fifty Years of Confederation

UNDER ordinary circumstances the jubilee of the Dominion of Canada would have been looked forward to and its celebration prepared for at least a year in advance. But Canada and the rest of the world have been living under conditions the like of which are not recorded in history. For over three years the greatest war the world has known has been raging, and in it Canada has taken and is taking no small part. She has sent hundreds of thousands of her sons to the scenes of conflict, and the entire world has watched and lauded their splendid achievements on the field of battle. And there have been anxiety and mourning in many a Canadian home for many months past; but the loss of so many splendid Canadian lives has not in the least lessened the determination of the people to "see the thing through," in order that posterity might enjoy continued liberty and a lasting peace. Such are the circumstances under which Canada found herself in this year of jubilee, and explains why the observance of the important event was not more than perfunctory, even that portion of it which may be termed official.

THE GOVERNORS-GENERAL OF THE DOMINION OF CANADA—Left to right: The Right Hon. Viscount Monck, K.C.M.G., 1867-1868; the Right Hon. Lord Lisgar (Sir John Young), G.C.M.G., 1868-1872; the Right Hon. the Earl (afterwards Marquess) of Dufferin and Ava, K.P., K.C.B., G.C.M.G., 1872-1878; the Right Hon. the Marquess of Lorne (afterwards 9th Duke of Argyll) K.T., G.C.M.G., P.C., 1878-1883; the Most Hon. the Marquess of Lansdowne, G.C.M.G., 1883-1888.

THE GOVERNORS-GENERAL OF THE DOMINION OF CANADA—Left to right: The Right Hon. Lord Stanley of Preston (afterwards 16th Earl of Derby) G.C.B., 1888-1893; the Right Hon. the Earl of Aberdeen (now the Marquess of Aberdeen and Temair) K.T., G.C.M.G., 1893-1898; the Right Hon. the Earl of Minto, G.C.M.G., 1893-1904; the Right Hon. Earl Grey, G.C.MG., 1904-1911; Field Marshal H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, K.G., 1911-1916.

But the fiftieth anniversary of the Dominion is none the less significant because the public mind was so filled with weightier matters that it was permitted to pass in so matter-of-course a manner. It recalls the Upper and Lower Canada of a half-century ago and causes Canadians to give thought to what they have accomplished in those fifty years—the establisment of a new British nation on the North American continent, its stupendous growth and prosperity.



THE PRIME MINISTERS OF THE DOMINION OF CANADA—Left to right: The Right Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald, G.C.B., July, 1867, to November 6, 1873, and October 17, 1878, to June 6, 1891; Hon. Alexander Mackenzie, November 7, 1873, to October 16, 1878; Hon. John J. C. Abbot, K.C.M.G., June 16, 1891, to December 5, 1892; Hon. Sir John S. D. Thompson, K.C.M.G., December 5, 1892, to December 12, 1894.

The birth of Confederation was not the achievement of one man, but of a number of Canadian statesmen of the middle of the last century—such men as John A. Macdonald, George Brown, Cartier, Tache and others, with the cooperation of Tupper Tilley and leading men of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. For some years prior to 1867 neither political party in Canada was able to secure a working majority in Parliament and deadlock reigned at the capital. Macdonald and Brown, leaders of the Conservative and Reform party respectively, seemed powerless. Not only were these two statesmen political opponents, but there is reason to believe they were well-nigh personal foes. At least it is no secret that they were not on "speaking terms" for some time. Both, however, realized the gravity of the situation, and in looking about for a remedy both decided that Confederation was the one solution. But their strained personal relations for some time prevented the two leaders getting together. It is an interesting fact that it was the then member for London, John Carling, who made it known to Macdonald, then in power, that if he (Macdonald) adopted Confederation as a policy the Reform leader would support him. It is recorded that in 1858, a year after he became Premier of Upper Canada, Macdonald came out as an advocate of Confederation, while in 1859 Brown strongly urged the union of what he termed "all the nations of British North America." But it was not until 1864 that the two leaders got together on the question, and it fell to Brown's lot to be appointed chairman of a commission to advance the Confederation cause The opposition to the project was very strong, but with inflexible determination the two leaders surmounted all difficulties, and on July 1st, 1867, they had the satisfaction of witnessing the birth of the new Dominion.

Both Brown and Macdonald were true patriots, both consistently stood for the British connection, but the fact that Macdonald held office the greater part of the time until his death, while Brown never reached the premiership, has caused many to consider him the more clever political tactician of the two. However that may be, we must agree with the writer who declared that George Brown was no agitator or demagogue, but a man of common sense, with a sober will to attain the useful, the practical and needful. He took his stand against open, palpable wrongs, against the tyranny which violated men's roofs and the intolerance which vexed their consciences. His leading principle was to reconcile progress with preservation, change with stability, the alteration of incidents with the maintenance of essentials.

Of greatest importance, however, is the Dominion's wonderful progress since Confederation. From a few scattered provinces in 1867 Canada now includes the whole of British North America, with the exception of Newfoundland; she has grown into nationhood, and is now invited to a seat at the Imperial council table as a power in the Empire.

A brief glance at Canada's development during the last fifty years will not be out of place here.

A census taken at the time of Confederation showed the Dominion to possess a population of 3,371,594; to-day the inhabitants total about 8,000,000, almost 2,000,000 people having come to this country to live during the ten years prior to the war. Canada's population is about evenly divided between urban and rural, notwithstanding the fact that the increase in rural population during that period was only 17.16, while the increase in urban population was 62.25.

The broad development in railway construction was one of the chief agents in bringing about Canada's population increase during the last half of the Confederation period. At Confederation our railway mileage was but 2,278. To-day we can boast of 35,582 miles of railway, stretching from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the United States boundary line to the Peace River district. In the half-century three great transcontinental railway systems have been constructed, the gross annual earnings of which are in excess of $200,000,000. To-day Canada's percentage of railway mileage per capita of population is greater than that of any other country in the world.

As an agricultural country Canada has established her right to first rank among the nations of the world. With field crops last year of a total value of $700,000,000 she stands among the leading grain producing countries. Her agricultural exports have grown from $12,871,055 in 1867 to close on to $250,000,000 in 1916. The PRIME MINISTERS OF THE DOMINION OF CANADA—Left to right: Hon. Sir Mackenzie Bowell, K.C.M.G., December 21, 1894, to April 27, 1896; Hon. Sir Charles Tupper, Bart., May 1, 1896, to July 8, 1896; Right Hon. Sir Wilfred Laurier, G.C.M.G., July 11, 1896, to October 6, 1911; Right Hon. Sir Robert Laird Borden, G.C.M.G., October 10, 1911 (still holds office).

The Spirit of Christmas

WILL O' THE WISP has crept into the house and cast a spell over it. We do not know when or how he came, but he is certainly here. At first there was just a suspicion of something about—a little thrill, a spark of gaiety in the air, a sense of delicious witchery touching the most humdrum things. And how did he manage to slip in? Perhaps the garden gate was left ajar, and up the silent paths he came, the moonlight helping him to see his way. The woods were cold and snow-bound and no living creature answered his call for life and love, so he hastened his steps elsewhere. Or, he may have crept into the house with the North Wind, where it lifted a window sash. The diamonds of frost on the panes would catch his eye. Softly, like a thief, a quaint elfish figure, he was in—like a flash!

Some time, we laugh and say that we, ourselves, have opened the door wide to him, that we know him well and are prepared for his coming. But we look over our shoulder when we hint at this, to see if the children are listening, for it is a secret. That he rules the house, this little sprite, we all know well, and in truth we give in to his moods, and sway to the music he plays, with gladsome hearts.

With the boys and girls, there are sudden bursts of laughter since he came, a whirl of gaiety, and they want to dance, dance, dance! There are mysterious comings and goings, and whispered conferences, and signs, which mean nothing at all unless you happen to know. There is a hurried hiding away of treasures—odd shaped parcels in soft paper and tied with ribbon, instead of plain string! There are many places where it is not discreet to look. You must shut your eyes tight and pretend not to see, or else it isn't fair, you know. They invade the kitchen with him at their heels, and he helps them stir the pudding and pour wine in the sauce. They steal into the pantry to view the goodies placed carefully there. Plum cakes are bursting with raisins, and toppling over with cherries and nuts, as trimmings. Jolly looking mince pies there are, all in a row and the punch bowl is filled to the brim. Through a chink in the door he sees the arrival of Cook, but in no hilarious mood! He gives the alarm, and out into the hall they troop, to gather around the fire. The long yellow-red flames twist and leap in fantastic form, and there is such merriment and frolic! Across the hearth he skips, the gay little imp, and to the sound of the crackling logs, he sets the time of his music. When the midnight bells ring out, would you believe it, they still are dancing, dancing, dancing!

Up to the nursery the children are in bed and properly asleep. This has been accomplished with difficulties, reluctance and questions. Was the chimney really large enough? It would be a pity indeed if the Dear Old Fellow got all sooty and black coming down. They wondered, too, if their stockings were their biggest, fattest ones? They would measure, anyhow, just once more. For a Noah's Ark, with all those animals, is really a bulky thing, you know. And what about changing the elephant "wish" for a soldier's sword? That was a nice long slim one they had seen. It would fit in easily anywhere. Then there was the fireman's set, and the box of blocks and the bank which rang a bell when you dropped your money in. It rang for even a penny, they said. These things would not pack down well, they feared. Counting all in, those stockings would be a tight fit!

Then some one said they meant to stay awake and see what really happened. They had been told, well—never mind what—but they knew. But this was received coldly, by others, who were more old-fashioned and clung to first ideas. Besides, things had happened to children given to over curiosity. You had only to look it up in books to find that this was true. There were the stories, too, you had been told by your mother. The little boy who would eat pickles to see what they were like—and the Vain Princess who leaned over the pond too far to see if she was pretty. To put an end to it, Nurse finally turned out the light and said it was all over and done with—the talking she meant. And so, when the spirit of dreams creeps into the room perhaps ten minutes after, you would have thought he had lived there always, so quiet it is. There is a sound of even breathing, and outside the tapping of a bare branch against the window-pane. You see him moving about easily—the moon has sent in patches of white light over the carpet and walls. He leans over their beds and they smile up at him in their sleep. They are listening for his music and they nod their heads when he sings their favorite nursery rhyme.

And in the morning, just at the break of day! What about then? Well, that is best told by the accompanying picture.

RAILWAY BUILDERS IN DOMINION
HAVE OPENED UP NEW EMPIRE

Chateau Laurier, Grand Trunk Central Station, Ottawa, Ontario.

THE Dominion of Canada, with its mighty scenic wonders and vast areas of arable lands, where the poet seems to hear:

> "The tread of pioneers,
> Of nations yet to be:
> The first low wash of waves, where soon
> Shall roll a human sea"

owes much of its development to the railways. During the first half of the 19th Century, Canada made no real progress commensurate with the wealth of the country in natural resources and scenic beauty. Then came the railroad builders pushing their highways of steel through the vast territories as yet only sparsely peopled. The railway has been indeed the handmaiden of the farmer, of the lumberman, of the merchant, of the manufacturer, and—more particularly in latter years—of the tourist. It has produced a new system of education enabling our people to obtain, through the medium of travel, a fresh realization of the beauties of the world they live in, has taught them to know their native land, and nation to know nation. It has brought the great cities of the United States to within a day's journey of the Canadian centres of population and has opened up the Dominion's wonderful lakeland and her great mountain territory to travellers from the United States.

When the railway development of Canada is spoken of, the services rendered by the Grand Trunk must be alluded to. This was the pioneer road of the Dominion, and year by year it has extended its lines to open up new playgrounds and new industrial and agricultural territories. It has introduced to tens of thousands of tourists the great Canadian resort districts, such as Muskoka Lakes, the Algonquin Park of Ontario, Temagami, Lake of Bays, and, in the Rockies, Jasper National Park and the Mount Robson region. It has made "The Highlands of Ontario" known to vacation seekers in every state of the Union. It early realized the magnificent asset which Canada possesses in the scenic territories. The first step taken by the railroad in its campaign for popularizing the Canadian resorts was to encourage in every way the building of first-class summer hotels, as the fate of every resort is decided in the long run by the quality of accommodation and service offered. These efforts have been uniformly successful, and to-day the Grand Trunk resorts are widely known for the excellence of their hotels. Nor has the railway left all this work to private enterprise. It has constructed a chain of magnificent hotels on its transcontinental route, setting a new high standard for the hotels of the continent. In the Algonquin Park of Ontario, a region wild and unspoiled and starred with no less than a thousand lakes, it has provided log cabin hotel enterprises, back from the beaten paths of travel, that have appealed strongly to the holiday-maker who wishes to be away from the crowd and near to nature.

With the building up of the resort districts there has been a steady addition to train service. The Grand Trunk is an international line, and this made possible the arrangement of through express trains from the principal United States centres direct to the Canadian playgrounds. It abolished the wait at the wayside station for the connecting train, which was a feature of summer vacation travel not many years ago, and the business man and his wife now leave Pittsburg, Buffalo or Chicago, and within the space of a single day are encamped on the shore of some northern lake or installed in comfortable quarters in hotel or cottage. And the traveller enjoys en route his parlor, library and dining facilities. The up-building of the resort territories is one of the features of modern Canada. Whereas a few years ago the most beautiful of the Dominion's lakes, with their fragrant woodlands and balsam scented breezes, were inaccessible, they are to-day fringed with fine modern summer homes. Splendid golf links have been laid out, and every device provided to meet the wants of the discriminating. Under the influence of this railway progress large tracts of country possessing much scenic charm have been set aside as national parks. Canada has not restricted her national park area to the far west and the Rockies and has to-day in Temagami, and in Algonquin Park, two great resorts which are readily reached by the multitudes of people who can appreciate them most. The railways have led to the discovery of Canada from an American standpoint, and the marvels long hidden away are to-day the magnets which are attracting an ever-increasing flow of traffic across the boundary line.

In commenting upon railway progress in the Dominion, it is interesting to recall that the citizens of London, Ontario, were among the first in Canada to realize the importance of railroad communication. In 1834, two years before the opening of the little line (now part of the Grand Trunk) between St. Johns, Quebec, and Laprairie, opposite Montreal, which was the first railroad in Canada, railroad enterprises were engaging attention in both London and Hamilton. An Act was passed by the Canadian Legislature in 1834 to incorporate the London and Gore Railway Company. Among the sponsors were Allan Napier (afterwards Sir Allan) McNab, George J. Goodhue, Edward Allan Talbot and seventy others, a number of whom were prominent public men in those days. Power was taken in the Charter to construct a "single or double track, wooden or iron railroad," from London to Burlington Bay, and also to the "navigable waters" of the river Thames and Lake Huron, and "to employ thereon either the force of steam or the power of animals, or any mechanical or other power." The capital was fixed at $400,000, and in the event of the continuation to Lake Huron, the capital might be doubled. The time for the completion of the road was limited to twelve years.

Nothing was done under the powers granted by this Act. In 1854, when it was about to lapse, an Act was passed reviving the Act of 1834, with amendments. One of these amendments was to change the name to "The Great Western Railway Company." Power was taken to build the line to some point on the Niagara River; the capital was increased to $6,000,000.

The first sod was turned at London in 1847 and on the 22nd of December, 1853, London celebrated the opening of the section of the line from that city to Hamilton, the section from Hamilton to Niagara Falls being ready a few weeks before that date, and the third section to the Niagara River opened in 1855. It is related that the whole country was invited to rejoice with the Forest City, and the celebrations continued for two days. At the banquet Mayor Dickson paid a tribute to the men who had put forward every effort in spite of great difficulties to secure the completion of the road. The Great Western became part of the Grand Trunk Railway System in 1882. In the Province of Ontario alone that Company now has three thousand miles of railroad. No railroad in the world operates such a great mileage of continuous double track as does the Grand Trunk, the main arteries of the System being recorded by experts as unsurpassed examples of the railroad builder's art. Every mile of track is laid with eighty or one hundred-pound rails; gravel ballast makes the roadbed solid, gradients are small—all making for the maximum of safety and comfort.

census of 1911 shows that more than one-half of Canada's invested capital, which totalled $8,365,000,000, was in farm lands, stock and machinery. The same census placed the number of farm holdings at upwards of 700,000—an increase of 30 per cent. during the last ten years. About $39 per acre is the estimated average value of farm land, improved and unimproved.

Agriculture, however, though Canada's greatest asset, is not the only line of product in which there has been development. In 1867 Canada looked to the British and other outside markets for the greater part of the manufactured goods she required. Now she annually exports upwards of a billion dollars' worth of her own manufactured products and has the trade balance in her favor. During the year ended September 30, 1916, Canada's total trade increased from $935,000,000 in the previous year to $1,738,000,000—an increase of over 90 per cent. in one year, or nearly three times the total trade in 1867. No less than three hundred different varieties of manufactories are at present flourishing in the Dominion, giving employment to two-fifths of the population. Food products lead in value among Canada's manufactures, with timber and lumber second and textiles third. Canada's greatest industrial development was in the ten-year period 1900-10, the percentage of increases being:—Capital 179 per cent.; wages 120 per cent.; materials, 109 per cent., and products 142 per cent.

His Excellency the Duke of Devonshire, K.G., present Governor-General of Canada.

Her Excellency the Duchess of Devonshire, wife of the Governor-General of Canada.

Canada's mineral resources are far from being fully developed, but what progress has been made along that line is highly gratifying. In Confederation days her mineral production was about $10,000,000 annually; it has grown to $150,000,000. Since 1866 the total mineral production has been $1,784,000,000. But it is believed that only the fringe of the mineral resources has been touched, that the real development is yet to come. Canada now produces more than 80 per cent. of the world's nickel supply. Ontario boasts of three gold mines which, in point of production, rank among the first ten mines of the world. Of late an energetic spirit has taken place in the production of silver. During 1915 the production of copper increased about 72 per cent. over previous years and last year brought even a larger production. Of other metals, including, zinc and iron, there have been large increases in production each year for the past decade.

Pacific, in addition to 220,000 square miles of fresh water that produces valuable fish in large quantity. The total value of Canadian fisheries during the Confederation period is nearly a billion dollars.

Canadian bank records reveal the real financial progress of the Dominion. During the half-century the paid-up bank capital has grown from $30,289,048 to $114,134,182, while bank deposits have increased from $37,678,571 to $1,303,527,634. This is exclusive of post office savings deposits, which have increased from $204,589 to $40,008,417. The bank clearings in 1916 reached the total of $10,500,000,000. In 1915 the Canadian people added more than $100,000,000 to their bank deposits, and last year increased the total $200,000,000 more—the increase for one year being over five times as much as the total bank deposits in 1867.

Canada's response to the demands of the Empire in the great war shows how close is the Imperial tie. Canadians have subscribed $200,000,000 to war loans and have extended credit to the mother country to the extent of $250,000,000. Millions of dollars' worth of war munitions have been turned out by Canadian factories. A vast Canadian army of considerably over 400,000 men has been raised by the voluntary process, and the Canadian government is paying upwards of $2,000,000 per month in separation allowance to soldiers' dependents, the Canadian patriotic fund in addition distributing $13,500,000 annually.

Great as has been the development during the first fifty years of Confederation there is every reason to look for far greater growth and progress during the years to come after the war ends.

The Dominion of Canada stands as a mounment to the Fathers of Confederation, all of whom have passed to their reward. and whose most extravagant predictions have been more than fulfilled.

In the fifty years the Dominion of Canada has had eleven governors-general, namely Viscount Monck, Lord Lisgar, The Earl of Dufferin, the Marquis of Lorne, the Marquis of Lansdowne, Lord Stanley of Preston, the Earl of Aberdeen, the Earl of Minto, the Earl Grey, Field Marshal H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught, and the present governor-general, the Duke of Devonshire. These statesmen and diplomats have served the Empire in other spheres of usefulness.

THE WIVES OF THE GOVERNORS-GENERAL OF CANADA—Left to right: Lady Stanley of Preston (now Dowager Duchess of Derby); the Countess of Aberdeen (now Marchioness of Aberdeen and Temair); the Countess of Minto, the Countess Grey, H.R.H. the Duchess of Connaught.

Canada's wonderful forest wealth is another of her great assets. The official record for 1916 places the value of our forest products at $172,880,000 for that year, but government officials declare Canada has only begun development in this line. The records show average yearly cuts of close on four billion feet of lumber for 1913, '14 and '15. Ontario and Quebec each produced upwards of a billion feet yearly, with New Brunswick and British Columbia totalling 600,000,000 feet each. The government of British Columbia estimates that the forests of that province contain 400,000,000,000 feet of merchantable lumber; allowing a billion feet a year as a heavy cut the Pacific province could carry on in their industry for four hundred years. On top of this is the provincial government estimate that the natural growth of the British Columbia forests is upwards of a billion feet per annum. It is therefore reasonable to classify the timber wealth of British Columbia as inexhaustible. Connected with the Canadian forests is the pulp industry. Seven years ago no more than 38 per cent. of the pulpwood cut here was manufactured in Canada. Five years later the proportion was nearly 60 per cent. of the cut, a further increase of at least 10 per cent. being estimated for last year. The total exports of paper, pulp and pulpwood and other manufactures of wood for 1915-'16 was nearly $38,000,000. Since the war began Canada has supplied almost the entire paper pulp needs of the United States.

An increase from $6,500,000 in 1867 to nearly $36,000,000 in 1916 gives an idea of the extent to which the fishery industry has been developed since Confederation. In the same period our fish exports have increased from $3,300,000 to $22,500,000. Canada's fishing waters cover 5,000 miles on the Atlantic and 7,000 on the

WIVES OF CANADIAN PREMIERS
Baroness Macdonald of Earnscliffe

WIVES OF CANADIAN PREMIERS—Lady Laurier

The present is the twelfth Parliament of the Dominion, and there have been nine ministries, the following being the Prime Ministers in proper order:—Sir John Macdonald, Hon. Alex. Mackenzie, Sir John Macdonald, Hon. J. J. C. Abbott, Sir John Thompson, Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Sir Charles Tupper, Bart., Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Sir Robert Borden. The two last-named and Sir Mackenzie Bowell are the sole survivors of the list.

Not only did the last of the Fathers of Confederation pass away on the death of Sir Charles Tupper, but nearly all the men prominent in affairs at that time, but not included among the "fathers," have gone to their reward. The passing of the men who made Canadian history before and after Confederation has been a loss to the nation; but in the fifty years there have grown up other statesmen, who are now making history—men many of whose names will go down to posterity as nation builders. Great have been the results of the efforts of these men, and it is the hope of all Canadians that in the days to come, the days of reconstruction after the war, they will be proven equal to the stupendous task which will be theirs. Great as has been Canada's progress during the half century that has just passed, still greater, all Canadians are convinced, will be its advancement in the next fifty years. That advancement, however, will depend on the wisdom and statecraft of the men having in charge the administration of the nation's affairs. It is a safe prediction, we think, that the Canadians who celebrate the centenary of Confederation will be the people of a nation of between fifty and one hunderd million population. For this twentieth century is Canada's century.

The Canadian Red Cross

NEXT in importance to the work of Canada's soldiers in the great war has been that of the Canadian Red Cross. This, indeed, is the women of Canada's part in the war, and a great part it is. The organization has made it possible for the wives and daughters of the Dominion to show that they can do more than shed tears over the horrors of war, that they can do things, big things, and do them well. Without the Red Cross those horrors would be far, far worse than they are, and the lot of the soldier would be no better than it was in the dark ages. The world honors the noble women of the Red Cross, which had given the sex a new and higher status. In the Red Cross woman has placed herself beyond all question the equal of man; hers is no longer the weaker sex, but one that in a great emergency proves itself strong and true.

To give in detail all that has been accomplished by the Canadian Red Cross since the outbreak of war would require pages of space; it is proposed here to refer briefly to some of its activities.

To begin with, then, it has created an organization of seven provincial and nearly eight hundred local branches of the society, donated to the relief of the sick and wounded soldiers by contributing money and supplies in aid of the Canadian Army Medical Corps, by the establishment of additional hospitals and the supply of much needed food and comforts to the patients and to the prisoners of war, besides many other purposes.

In addition to its own branches the Canadian Red Cross has enlisted the sympathy and help of several thousand auxiliary societies, which, although not enrolled as Red Cross branches, have greatly assisted the society in providing what was needed for its purposes and made the Red Cross the channel of their generous gifts.

By the judicious conduct of its affairs and the total absence of all salaried officers the society has been able to devote ninety-seven cents of every dollar of revenue to the purposes for which its money has been collected, and this has gained the confidence of the general public of Canada. The management of the society's affairs is vested in a central council, which deputes its powers, when not in session, to an executive committee of twelve of its members. Affairs of the Canadian Red Cross overseas are conducted by a commissioner in London and an assistant commissioner in France, with the assistance of a war committee of three members who are prominent Canadians holding high positions in England. This war committee meets generally once a week, and with the commissioner in consultation, directs the affairs overseas and forwards recommendations to the executive in Canada for its consideration or adoption.

The activities of the head office overseas are numerous, not the least among them being the information bureau, which came into operation in February, 1915, immediately after the severe casualties at Ypres. Its duties are to follow up the wounded and sick Canadian soldier from the place where the pay and record office reports of him and in his devious wanderings from hospital to hospital either in France or Great Britain, or in both countries, and to keep in touch with him so that reliable information is obtained weekly of his condition and to communicate the same to his relatives in Canada or elsewhere. The system in practice to carry this out is a perfect one, the work being done by a large body of voluntary workers on behalf of the society both in Great Britain and France, and has been from its inception under the direction of Lady Drummond.

The parcels section of the information department was started for the express purpose of sending parcels of Red Cross comforts to individual Canadian soldiers who were scattered throughout the hospitals of Great Britain. A large staff of voluntary workers is engaged in this work.

The prisoners of war department is an outgrowth of the information department and is associated with it, having been established in May, 1915. The Canadian Red Cross, in accordance with the terms of The Hague convention of 1907, has undertaken the duty of sending parcels to Canadian prisoners either with or without the assistance of contributions of money from friends or relatives. A staff of voluntary lady workers is employed by the department, and to give an idea of the extent of the work accomplished it may be stated that in one month (May, 1915) some three hundred prisoners received food and clothing through this agency. Since then the number of prisoners has gradually increased and now totals some twenty-five hundred Canadians, including civilians. The size and value of the parcels sent have steadily increased owing to information received as to the increased hardships the prisoners were undergoing, and in addition the number of parcels sent has been increased. In December, 1916, new regulations were issued by the war office with regard to the despatch of parcels, which made the Canadian Red Cross the only association authorized to send parcels to Canadian prisoners of war. The association readily accepted this duty and now sends every fortnight three parcels, valued at $2.50 each and each weighing ten pounds, to every prisoner of war, whether his friends do or do not contribute to their cost. In addition the society sends thirteen pounds of bread per prisoner fortnightly, and half a pound of tobacco or two hundred cigarettes, besides clothing, every six months. The approximate cost of the articles now supplied to Canadian prisoners of war is about half a million dollars per annum. The ladies of this department also distribute local Canadian newspapers to the patients in hospitals according to their places of residence, so that they might get news from their own homes in Canada. As many as eighty bags of newspapers have been received by mail at one time.

The part undertaken by the Canadian society is to guarantee the cost of supplying each man with food and clothing, together with the actual work of registering their names and addresses, which are so often changed, to be responsible as censors that the contents of parcels are in accordance with the regulations, and, until the postal regulations of Canada were brought into line with those of Great Britain, to receive open, censor, repack and despatch all private parcels sent by friends to prisoners of war in Germany. An idea of the work this imposes upon the staff may be gained when it is stated that at Christmas time about five hundred sacks were suddenly sent the society by the general post office and shortly afterwards an additional five hundred sacks were received. The society has incurred very heavy responsibilities in regard to the war prisoners, but has met them in a businesslike and patriotic way. It is worthy of note, too, that it is only through the Canadian Red Cross that the intercourse of friends with the prisoners is continued, and that the lives of the latter may depend upon the generous support of the public given to the society.

The depot at Moore Barracks, Shorncliffe, established by the Canadian Red Cross, is a highly creditable enterprise. The object of this is to be able to facilitate distribution to a large number of hospitals in that district. It supplies about eighty hospitals with comforts on requisitions made by the officers commanding, and the enormous work done in this way has fully justified the establishment of the depot. Under the same management a rest room for soldiers in transit between hospitals and camps was erected last year at which men may await transportation and at the same time receive light refreshment before starting upon their journeys. This has proved most valuable and to be greatly conducive to the health of the men.

The Canadian Red Cross gladly accepted the offer of Major Astor of the loan of his estate, Cliveden, at Taplow, for hospital purposes. A hospital was soon built, now known as the Duchess of Connaught Canadian Red Cross Hospital, to accommodate nine hundred patients, the building being taken over in 1915. Since then considerable additions have been made to render this hospital thoroughly efficient. The Peake hotel at Bexton has also been taken over by the society as a hospital for special cases and convalescents. This hospital, which has a capacity of about three hundred beds, has proved itself very beneficial, the three hundred beds being in use nearly all the time. His Majesty the King, learning that still greater accommodation was necessary for the ever-increasing number of sick and wounded, offered his estate at Bushey Park to the Canadian Red Cross, and it is now in use as a hospital.

The headquarters of the society's assistant commissioner in France have been established at Boulogne as being the most convenient port for the reception of the necessary supplies sent over from England. There a large depot and storehouse have been established from which the general distribution of its supplies is made to the several depots established throughout northern France. In Paris, owing to the liberality of the French Government, four buildings have been erected by it and handed over to the Canadian Red Cross Society as storehouses, and assistance has been given also by the French authorities in the conveyance and distribution of the supplies sent from England. Here an officer of the Red Cross attends to the buildings and supplies and distributes to some eight hundred French hospitals the goods at his disposal. Nearly all the principal Canadian hospitals in France have received help from the Red Cross recreation rooms and verandahs for chest cases, and many depots have been established at various points, some immediately behind the firing line. The necessity for the establishment of recreation rooms has been more than fully proved by their conversion into additional hospital accommodation in times when the hospitals could no longer accommodate the number of wounded men pouring into them after important operations at the front. In those cases in which the Canadian Red Cross has been unable to meet the necessities of Canadian medical units in the field, as in Gallipoli and Salonica, their duty has been generously met by the British Red Cross through its commissioner in the East. Under an arrangement with the British society's headquarters all supplies so given are reimbursed from the Canadian society's stores in London.

From the annual report of the society it is seen that the Canadian Red Cross has contributed largely to the necessities of our Allies, both in money and supplies. To this cause the sum of $323,750 has been contributed, either to the Allies' Red Cross funds or to other general purposes. The moneys expended in the erection of recreation rooms and other buildings have been very considerable, more than $25,000 having been laid out in this direction.

The cash donations received by the society from January to May, 1917, amounted to $667,053.32, Ontario being the largest contributor among the provinces, having $228,928.24 to its credit. Saskatchewan comes second, with $125,589.26. A conservative estimate, based on careful calculation, places the value of all the stores contributed to the Canadian Red Cross at at least ten million dollars—all for the relief of the sick and wounded.

This is only a glimpse of the hospital and other work which the Canadian Red Cross has been and is carrying on for our brave soldiers, but it should prove sufficient to demonstrate that the society is fully alive to the nature and extent of its responsibilities.

CHRISTMAS TIME

Christmas time! That man must be a misanthrope, indeed, in whose breast something like a jovial feeling is not roused—in whose mind some pleasant associations are not awakened—by the recurrence of Christmas. There are people who will tell you that Christmas * * * * serves to remind them of reduced circumstances and straitened incomes—of the feasts they once bestowed on hollow friends, and of the cold looks that meet them now, in adversity and misfortune. Never heed such dismal reminiscences. There are few men who have lived long enough in the world, who cannot call up such thoughts any day in the year. Then do not select the merriest of the three hundred and sixty-five for your doleful recollections, but draw your chair nearer the blazing fire—fill the glass and send round the song—and if your room be smaller than it was a dozen years ago, or if your glass be filled with reeking punch instead of sparkling wine, put a good face on the matter. Look on the merry faces of your children (if you have any) as they sit round the fire. One little seat may be empty; one slight form that gladdened the father's heart, and roused the mother's pride to look upon, may not be there. Dwell not upon the past; think not that one short year ago the fair child now resolving into dust, sat before you, with the bloom of health upon its cheek, and the gayety of infancy in its joyous eye. Reflect upon your present blessings—of which every man has many—not on your past misfortunes, of which all men have some.—Charles Dickens.

SANTA'S GIFTS

THE GIFT that is seen and enjoyed only on Christmas day, and then put away out of sight because it has no daily use, is soon forgotten, but the gift that goes at once into constant use is the one that is most fully appreciated.

¶ Dr. Fowler's best suggestion is a pair of his guaranteed gold eye-glass mounts, fitted with his celebrated "Peblo" Lenses. Secure them now for presentation, and the correct lenses to suit your friends' eyes will be fitted after Christmas. This is the gift of gifts, that will be used all the time, and make things look brighter all the year round for the recipient.

READING GLASSES

¶ This very popular gift line for elderly people is very limited in supply. When the present stock is gone, no more are procurable for an indefinite time. Persons desiring a good reading glass for a gift can get them while Dr. Fowler's present stock lasts at very reasonable prices.

The Christmas Story Ever New

MANY in far off English towns and villages have listened on Christmas Eve to the strains of the quaint old carol sung by the "waits" who walked through the ancient narrow streets singing their festive greeting to those who peeped from behind window curtains or who came joyously to the door the better to hear the refrain or return the generous greeting.

But a carol grander and older by twenty centuries is heard not alone in England, but in every land and clime into which ambassadors of Christianity have penetrated, a song first sung by the angels, and since repeated and reiterated o'er and o'er

You who know the story, you heard it over and over again, first when a little child. Or you may have learned the story from the Book of Books, or from the paintings of Raphael, or Murillo or others of the master painters, for even they could find no grander inspiration than that fulfilled in the promise "A little child shall lead them."

What is the Christmas story so old, and yet so new, which to the world has been represented in so many different ways?

Listen and we shall hear it, for it bears repetition, and shall until the end of time, and in this year of the world's greatest travail the heart of humanity calls out in its anguish, and nowhere can it find an answer that satisfies, save in the touch of the outstretched hands of the wee Babe of Bethlehem.

Night brooded over the Galillean hills, and the purple skies were dark save where the stars gleamed steadily over the expectant earth, lighting up the folds in which lay the mother sheep protecting their lambs and the shepherds wrapped in their skins and wiling away the hours of their long watch by playing plaintively upon their pipes. But suddenly the shepherds were conscious of some celestial happenings which to them were altogether unaccountable, and this was strange for these silent watchers of the hills were scientists of nature's own training. They knew the stars and their constellations, and could tell the portends of the sky with as much accuracy as the astronomer of to-day who reads the signs by the aid of wonderful telescopes, and the suggestions that have come down from the sages of all ages. But the sight that the skies above the little town of Bethlehem unfolded to the wondering eyes of the keepers of flocks was something seen never before nor since.

And suddenly an angel stood beside the Shepherds and told them not to fear, because he had tidings that would fill them and the whole world with great joy for "Behold this day is born to you a Saviour who is Christ the Lord." And then, as the shepherds gazed upward this is what they saw. The curtains of the night had swung back and where held in place by the watching stars, and in the opening appeared a host of white-winged spirits which floated about in a cloud of celestial brightness, and the background showed a sea of angel faces illuminated and joyous, and from them came a song, the most triumphant of the ages: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace and good will to men." Filled with faith the shepherds arose and went out to seek the new-born Babe, the one whom they had been expecting as the Messiah, whose advent they had known was at hand, and to whose lowly stable they were guided by the star in the east which stopped over the poor place in which the King of Heaven and Earth had taken refuge, and whereas had been foretold he was found wrapped in swaddling clothes and laid in a manger.

Such is the simple and beautiful story. And because of the great things that followed, and the salvation that had come to earth, the Christian world for the generations since have kept Christmas as their greatest festival. But, as so often happens, the passage of time has to many almost obliterated the meaning of the day. Customs have been introduced which, in the beginning, were meant to be mere expressions of the joy of the occasion, and which are still practiced while their meaning is almost forgotten. The custom of giving gifts, Christmas-boxes, for example, has degenerated in many instances into a vulgar rivalry as to who shall present the most expensive gift. The day itself has become in some homes a continuous session of eating and drinking.

Still there is always enough leven to make the season a time of infinite joy. There are the home-comings of friends who have been separated perhaps for years; there are the family-reunions which are among the happiest of earthly joys; there are the stories told about the hearth, and the laugh and joke under the mistletoe, the table set with the best family china, and the good cheer which has room for the one less fortunate than ourselves. There are the great trees with Santa Claus at the top handing out his gifts to young and old, and particularly to the tots of the home, for this is particularly their time, the real festival of the children.

There are also the wonderful trees which in modern times are erected in big cities, and around which great choirs gather singing carols throughout the entire Christmas season, and the myriad lights which twentieth century science allows us to place so plentifully, peep out upon the poor children of the slums who have learned to look for their coming, like the realization of fairy stories which they have somewhere read or dreamed about. Business men, too, look upon the brilliantly lighted emblem, and somehow an electric current passes from the tree to them, and once again they are children, and the spirit of the season is with them.

And most of all at midnight of the festival millions are gathered together in beautiful temples, where once again the carols first sung by the angels are repeated, and the evergreens that festoon the pillars of great cathedrals, and the lights that shine bright from ancient sanctuaries, tell loudly that faith is not dead, and that Christmas lives as fresh to-day as when the first Christmas salutation fell upon the watching shepherds on Galillean Hills.

GERMANY AND AUSTRIA WILL SUBMIT PEACE PROPOSALS TO ALL THE ENTENTE NATIONS

Representatives of Central Powers Make That Announcement at Preliminary Peace Conference in Petrograd.

RUSSIA ASKED TO TAKE SAME STEPS

Christmas Season May Bring Hope of Early Close of War---Russian Capital In State of Siege.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Petrograd, Dec. 20.—According to press reports, Russia has been informed by the Central Powers that they intend to make peace proposals to the Allies.

This report is published in the Evening Post, which says the representatives of the Central Powers, at the first preliminary peace conference with the Russians held yesterday, announced that their governments intended on principle to put the question of peace before all the powers, and that they had asked their allies to do likewise. Russia was requested to take similar steps. It is stated that the Russians are endeavoring by all mean to sound the Allies.

SIEGE PROCLAIMED IN PETROGRAD.

A state of siege has been proclaimed in Petrograd by the Bolsheviki Government. Disorders in the capital, due it is said to the looting of wine cellars and shops, made necessary the proclamation of a state of siege. The Ukranian Rada and the Bolsheviki Government in Petrograd have been at odds since the successful revolution of the Maximalists early in November. The ultimatum referred to probably is a demand made by the Bolsheviki that the Rada permit troops to go through Ukraine to aid in putting down the Kaledines revolt.

COSSACKS SEIZE RAILWAY TOWN.

Orenburg Cossacks opposing the Bolsheviki Government have occupied Tohelisbinks, a junction on the trans-Siberian railroad.

THE UKRAINE TURN DOWN ULTIMATUM.

The Rada, the governing body of the Ukraine, has sent a negative answer to the ultimatum of the Council of the People's Commissaries, the Bolsheviki Government. This means stiff resistance to the Bolsheviki Government.

BIGAMIST SENTENCED TO JAIL FOR FOUR MONTHS, HARD LABOR

Oakes is Warned Not To Return To Second Wife.

Frederick Oakes, whom a jury found guilty of bigamy, and made a recommendation to mercy, was sentenced to serve four months in jail at hard labor, by Judge Huycke this morning.

"I'm going to give you a short sentence," said his honor, but when you come out free, you must not go back to the woman you call your second wife. If you do, you'll find the police after you. You are free to go to your first wife, which I prefer you would do."

After Oake's counsel, Mr. G. N. Gordon had pleaded before his honor for a lenient sentence, Oakes told the judge he would like to get a chance to look after his mother.

"But your mother is in a Home and is being wall cared for," his honor replied.

"If I don't make payments on my house, I'll lose it," added the prisoner to which Judge Huycke said "you should have thought of that before."

The prisoner's lawful wife, and the woman of his second choice, were not in court this morning.

The charge of perjury against Oakes was dismissed.

The steamship Mundale of the Munson Line, about the safety of which there has been some anxiety, has arrived at an Atlantic port.

HON W. J. HANNA.

The Food Controller, has warned western fishermen who are said to be holding 300,000 pounds of whitefish on ice, refusing to market it at the price he named, that unless the fish is marketed he will seize and sell it at not above the price fixed.

TAX RATE HIGHER YET.

That the tax rate for 1918 in Brantford would be higher than this year, when it was 27½ mills, the highest on record, is the warning issued by City Treasurer A. K. Bunnell in his annual financial review.

BORDEN CABLES HUGHES.

Wishes Australia May Succeed in Present Campaign.

Ottawa, Dec. 20.—Sir Robert Borden has sent a cablegram to Premier Hughes of Australia, in which, after telling him the result of the elections, he goes on: "The démocracy of Canada has magnificently sustained the highest test of its courage, vision and endurance. Canada has watched Australia's magnificent effort with deepest admiration, and we send warmest wishes for every success in the splendid campaign now being carried on in your country to provide reinforcements for the heroic Australian forces whose wonderful achievements in the cause of liberty and civilization have brought world-wide honor and distinction to your great common-wealth."

NOT GUILTY THE VERDICT

Finding of Jury in Charge Against A. E. Stevens.

It took the jury two hours to reach a verdict of "not guilty" in the charge of false pretences against A. E. Stevens, at the general sessions yesterday. The prisoner was discharged by Judge Huycke.

The defence evidence was to the effect that John Revoy, brother-in-law of the prisoner, deposited $15 to the credit of Stevens in the Bank of Montreal to cover a debt and had the cheque reached the bank in the usual time, on Monday or Tuesday there would have been sufficient money to redeem the cheque for $10, which Stevens cashed at the Oak Hall store on a Saturday, not then having an account at the bank.

After Edward Riley, clerk in the store cashed the cheque, the manager, Mr. M. J. Maher, learned of its presence, and, calling at the Bank of Montreal, found that the cheque was worthless. Stevens' act in presenting the cheque at the store and Mr. Maher's inquiry at the bank, transpired when the bank was closed for business. Immediately Mr. Maher found the circumstances to be suspicious, he informed the police and Stevens was placed under arrest.

His honor in his charge to the jury said they had to decide whether or not Stevens acted in good faith, and whether or not the act of Revoy in depositing money in the bank was done in an effort to get Stevens out of his trouble.

Crown Attorney Hatton had argued that Revoy could have handed the money to Stevens, instead of banking it.

SIX RETURNED SOLDIERS RECEIVED AT G.T.R. DEPOT

Pte. Dunford Says Money is Needed at Halifax—Pte J. Dunn Dies of Wounds —Pte. A. A. Huffman Ill.

Pte. Fred Dunford, Ptes. Wood and Cole of Peterborough, Ptes. Ponton and Walker of Norwood and Pte. Davidson of Havelock, arrived in the city last evening, and were received at the G. T. R. station by Ald. A. H. Stratton and Ald. G. H. Duncan. The six soldiers were invalided home from overseas after service at the front.

Pte. Dunford, who went away with the 93rd battalion, saw four months service in the trenches. Rheumatism put him out of action and brought about his return home.

He said the need for men at the front was great, and that reinforcements were needed if only to give the veterans a rest.

The liner bringing the party of Canadians to Canada docked at Halifax two days after the explosion which wrecked a large portion of the city. "If there are any persons who have money to give away, they can send it to Halifax, as it will all be needed," Pte Dunford said.

Mayor Duffus today received a telegram from Kingston that Pte. J. Holloway of Peterborough left Kingston at 1.40 enroute to Peterborough.

Two Casualties.

Gunner A. A. Huffman, son of Mr. C. L. Huffman, 526 Sherbrooke street, is officially reported ill. Gunner Huffman enlisted in the 52nd battery.

Pte. J. Dunn, of Peterborough, previously reported wounded, is now listed among the dead, he having succumbed to his wounds.

HERO OF YPRES PARALYZED BY SHRAPNEL, DIES IN HOSPITAL

Belleville, Dec. 20.—Gunner Thos. Yateman, of the 34th Battery, died in Belleville Hospital yesterday as a result of wounds received in the battle of Ypres, fought in April, 1915, when the Canadians saved the situation.

"Tommy" Yateman, as he was best known, was struck in the neck by a piece of flying shrapnel which peretrated the back bone and approached the spinal cord. The result was paralysis, which extended over almost his whole body. After treatment in France, he was taken to England. He surprised his attendants by his vitality and at times it looked as if he might recover. The best surgeons of England dealt with his case. Efforts to move the piece of steel by massaging were made and electricity was also employed in treatment but without avail. Finally about fifteen months ago he was sent to Canada. The Military unit here and friends gave him an appropriate welcome. He was taken to Belleville hospital for treatment. Strange to say, his good spirits never deserted him. As a last resodt he was sent to Toronto, but nothing could be done to help him. Recently he was returned to Belleville Hospital.

BRITAIN GAINS ON GERMANS IN SUB WARFARE

Losses Are Decreasing, While Shipbuilding Increases Steadily.

LAST WEEK'S DISASTERS DROP

Allies Appoint a Council To Make Fair Division of Tonnage.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Dec. 20.—Speaking in the House of Commons today David Lloyd George, British Prime Minister, said that the margin of losses at sea was narrowing. The sinkings by submarines, he declared, was decreasing while shipbuilding was increasing.

Slight Loss in Imports.

The Premier said the sinking of submarines was increasing. Although the merchant tonnage was down by twenty percent, he added, the loss had been only six percent of imports over that of last year.

Regarding the military situation Mr. Lloyd George said it was idle to pretend that hopes formed had been realized. This disappointment he attributed to the Russian collapse.

Losses Last Week.

Fourteen British merchantmen of more than 1,600 tons and three under that tonnage were sunk by mine or submarine during the past week, according to the Admiralty statement. One fishing vessel also was sunk. The shipping losses by mine or submarine in the past week are slightly under those of the previous week, when fourteen vessels of more than 1,600 tons and seven under that tonnage were destroyed.

One French Ship Sunk.

Paris, Dec. 20.—The losses to French shipping by mine or submarine for the week ending December 15 were exceedingly light. Only one vessel under 1,600 tons was sunk, and none over 1,600 tons. One ship was attacked, but escaped. No fishing craft was sunk.

Maritime Co-operation.

Paris, Dec. 20.—Close co-operation in utilizing the means of maritime transport has been realized by the Allies, says an official note issued here today. It was announced previously that the Allies had decided to create an organization for the co-ordination of maritime activities and today's statement says that a council has been created consisting of representatives of the United States, France, Great Britain and Italy. This council will draw up schedules for the division of tonnage in accordance with the needs of each country for food supplies and war purposes. A Board will be erected in each country to decide on the utilization of the tonnage placed at the disposal of that nation.

VETERANS ARE HURRIED HOME

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Dec. 20.—The Associated Press today carried the following: A special train left an Atlantic port today for Canada carrying 1200 invalided Canadian soldiers who arrived here yesterday on a British ship. With military precision they were transferred from the vessel to the railroad depot and their only complaint was that they were not permitted to visit the city here.

Dugald Brown, formerly sheriff of Elgin County for 25 years, has died at St. Thomas, aged 83 years.

"UNSIGHTLY WOODEN FENCE" LINGERS IN PRESENTMENT

Grand Jury Smile as Recommendation is Repeated.

"We recommend that the unsightly wooden fence adjoining the court house be removed."

This recommendation embodied in the Grand Jury's presentment to Judge Huycke this morning caused smiles among the jury. His honor could not refrain from smiling. Even the learned Crown Attorney smiled.

"I hope your recommendation will receive more consideration than was given the same recommendation by other juries," said his honor in reply, having in mind, possibly, the fact that similar recommendations had been included in presentments year after year, without action having been taken.

The Grand Jury referred to his honor's significant words in reference to the fact of the Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes being found hanging side by side in the chamber.

Excellent Hospitals.

All the hospitals and charitable institutions were found to be in excellent order. At the Isolation Hospital, there were seven cases of scarlet fever and two diphtheria cases. Nicholls Hospital and St. Joseph's Hospital "are a credit to the city."

Of the nine occupants at the jail all were males. One should be removed to an asylum. The work of restoring the court house was noted with pleasure.

His honor in dismissing the jury, wished them the compliments of the season. Robert Harstone was foreman of the jury.

TRADES COUNCIL DELEGATES HEAR MAYORALTY CANDIDATES

Alderman Stratton and Duncan Address Working Men Last Night on Civic Questions—An Interesting Interchange of Ideas —Labor and the Coming Election.

The two mayoralty candidates who have already announced their intention appeared before the Trades and Labor Council last night to give an outline of the prospective platforms on which they will appeal to the electors. Aldermen Stratton and Duncan were both on hand, by invitation of President Hartley, and both addressed the delegates. By special request Alderman Stratton went fully into the financial situation in the city, a subject upon which he is able to speak with authority after holding the position of chairman of the finance committee, the most important of the Council, for the past three years.

Alderman Stratton explained all the intricacies of civic finance, including the matter of debentures. He showed what charges were fixed and had to be met yearly, and the aldermen had really no control over any but a small portion of the expenditures, a little less than 23 per cent., to be exact. As the head of the finance committee he had always tried to keep down the expenditures and to give the ratepayers full value for every dollar paid out. He called attention to the fact that this city stands high in the list of Canadian municipalities as a manufacturing centre, and that of the 23 cities in Ontario, Peterborough's taxes per head of population is the third lowest. A comparative statement of the tax rates for the years 1912 and 1917, showing the amount and percentage of increase was also submitted.

Praise for Peterborough.

Ald Stratton, praising the city's manufactures, said that it was the duty not only of the Council but of every person interested in the welfare of the city to strive to get industries to locate here. In this way the population can be increased, help obtained to pay the taxes and the burden of municipal government be reduced to the lowest point. No opportunity should be lost to let the outside world know of our splendid railway facilities, of the many fine locations for factories, and best of all, the high class of labor.

Ald. Stratton, speaking as an employer of labor, said that one advantage of dealing with organised workmen was that it was possible to estimate the outlay for wages when the union schedule was in force for a given number of years.

At the close of his address the delegates thanked Ald. Stratton for the information which he had imparted, and asked a number of questions, all of which were fully discussed.

Ald. Duncan Speaks.

Ald. Duncan, in a brief address, dealt with the high level bridge, estimated to cost $260,000, the London street bridge, to cost $20,000, the outfall sewer and the sewage disposal plant. He believes that all expenses, wherever possible, be avoided while the war is in progress. The Provincial Board of Health is urging the completion of the disposal plant, but he believes they will not insist upon its completion while the country is at war.

Ald. Duncan is in favor of the general vote plan, instead of the

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 20, 1917

ALD. STRATTON AT THE TRADES COUNCIL.

AFTER ALD. STRATTON had addressed the members of the Trades and Labor Council last night on the financial affairs of the city, several interesting points were raised by delegates who asked him questions. One of the delegates, who has a penchant for getting at the heart of every question, was ready with a query that proved something of a poser.

"How is it," he asked, "that, while the population of the city has increased only four and a half per cent., the tax rate and the general expenses of civic government have advanced out of all proportion to that figure?"

Here is opened a new chapter in political economy. What is the answer? No one certainly can give it offhand any more than he can explain just why all living expenses have increased. The delegate in question, any delegate to the Trades Council for that matter, may have no more in his family than he had five years ago, and yet his household expenses have at least doubled in that time. His income, too, has increased, but perhaps not in the same proportion. After all, a city is only a large family, subject to all the vicissitudes of a household due to the fluctuation in values. If it costs more to live in Peterborough than it did a decade ago, it is worth the extra outlay. There are improvements to show for the expense.

* * * *

Ald. Stratton assured another delegate that the City Council had nothing to do with the removal of the Metal Products Company from this city, even though they induced the firm to locate here by giving them a fixed assessment for three years. That delegate made a suggestion that is worth more than a passing consideration. He said that when a firm is induced to locate here, the city is obligated to carry out its end of the bargain, but that there is nothing to compel the company to remain here even while the agreement is in effect. He believes that something in the nature of a bond should be exacted from every bonused industry to force it to live up to its contract.

* * * * *

The bonus system may be an evil, as so many claim. It is certain, however, that while it is universally accepted by Canadian municipalities, the city that ignores it has no chance to acquire new industries. The system will prevail until all cities and towns agree to abolish it and to put all manufacturers on the same footing as the merchant or dealer who receives nothing in the way of inducements to open up a business.

* * * * *

The Labor men of the city believe in municipal control of the police force. As one delegate pointed out last night, the mayor of the city is a mere figurehead on the Police Commission. They believe that the police force is larger than the needs of the city demand. Ald. Stratton has always stood for economy in this as in every other department of the city government.

* * * * *

The Review has always advocated the use of electricity for heating and cooking purposes as the only solution of the fuel problem. There are thousands of tons of white coal going to waste every year at the very portals of the city. Why, then, worry about the supply of fuel than can be obtained only from American mines? This is a matter that rests with the Utilities Commission, but the Mayor of the city backed up by the aldermen, can exert an influence in this matter.

THE RECENTLY CONVERTED.

WORDS THAT SAVOR of hypocrisy continue to drop from the lips of our shifty contemporary over on George street. Here is a late sample: "The returned soldier who has done his work and comes home broken or invalided deserves our sympathy."

He certainly does, and the returned soldier has received unmistakable assurance that he will get this sympathy in substantial form. But it is only a few days since the Examiner was straining every energy to turn the Canadian soldiers, horse, foot and artillery, the soldiers overseas and the soldiers at home, the soldiers' orphans, widows and dependents, over to the tender mercies of the Philistines.

Our contemporary's conversion, even if genuine, is of too recent date to warrant it in preaching to those who have stood firm in the faith for years. As we said yesterday, nothing will so become it now as absolute silence while it wears the sackcloth of the penitent and sits humbly in the ashes of regret for the mistakes it made during the campaign.

AN ARMISTICE IN POLITICS.

THE PEOPLE of the American republic, too, are beginning, as a result of the war, to regard the political field from a different angle. They have never been as set in their partisan ways as have the people of Canada, but they realize now that there is still room for improvement.

The next Congressional election in the United States will be held in November of next year. An agitation to sink anything like party politics has already been started. The Review has received a circular letter from a member of a patriotic organization in Pittsburgh, Thomas J. Howells, of the Commission on Training Camps, in which the burial of the hatchet is urged. It takes the ground that every congressman and senator who voted to sustain President Wilson in declaring war on the Central Powers—and they were practically unanimous—should be re-elected next year by acclamation. Nothing, it is contended, would equal the moral effect of such a step in convincing the enemy that the American people are in earnest and united.

"These congressmen," says Mr. Howells, "forgot that they were Republicans, Democrats, Progressives, or members of any other political parties when President Wilson asked them to do their part in upholding the honor of the nation. Why should not the people forget for a time that they themselves are Republicans, Democrats, Progressives, Socialists, or Prohibitionists, and join next year in re-electing these men? Such a united national note of confidence will serve as notice to the nations of the world—our allies as well as our enemies—that the citizens of this great republic stand as one man behind the President and our accredited representatives at Washington in the prosecution of the struggle to a glorious end."

That shows the true national spirit. Mr. Howells' words ring with patriotism. Canada might have elected every Unionist without a contest. However, even that course would have been little if any better than piling up for them those splendid majorities. At all events, Canada has spoken in a tone sure to discomfit the enemies of humanity and the Empire. All that the United States can do is to go this country one better and spare itself the discord of an election which can have only one result.

HOME RULE FOR CITIES.

ONE POINT that was brought out at the meeting of the Trades Council last night, when the two candidates for the mayoralty addressed the delegates, was that any city has really very little to say about the management of its own affairs. The City Council, for example, has control over only a small percentage of the yearly expenses. The aldermen cannot even regulate the assessment. The official whom they appoint and whose salary they are required to pay, takes his instructions not from them but from the provincial authorities. The municipality has no control over the Police Commission, nothing to do with the management of the police force, except pay the bills as they fall due. There are certain charges fixed by the Legislature that must be met.

The aldermen are popularly supposed to represent the people. To a great extent this is a delusion. They are rather merely agents to carry out the orders issued from Toronto.

American cities that operate under special charters which give them the right to absolute self-government appear to get along fairly well without outside direction. If home rule is good for nations and provinces or states the same principle should be observed in the management of municipalities. No body of men, be they civic or other legislators, should be held responsible when they simply carry out the mandate of authorities higher up.

A CHANCE FOR REAL UNION.

QUEBEC DID NOT elect a single French-Canadian member who is eligible for a seat in the Cabinet. The two ministers of that nationality have been defeated. The two English-speaking members of the Cabinet were elected in English-speaking constituencies.

There is a suggestion that Sir Wilfrid Laurier be given a place in the Cabinet. Premier Borden, who designed the Union Government, is big enough to make such an offer. Let the people of Canada unite in the hope that Sir Wilfrid will be big enough to accept it. Nothing would so tend to heal the unfortunate breach between the two races.

It is hard to see how Sir Wilfrid Laurier can refuse. He declined to enter the Coalition Government because conscription was to be made part of its policy without an appeal to the people. That appeal has been made, and the answer is impossible of misconstruction.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

KEEP THE PATRIOTIC spirit burning as well as the home fires.

• • • •

ALL THE WARS that can be waged will never make this part of the world safe for the slacker.

• • • •

THE SIGN on Mr. Hall's committee room is permitted to remain, probably as the epitaph of the party.

• • • • •

THE MODEST CONVERT does not assume to preach to those older in the faith until his own standing has been assured.

• • • •

A GOOD RESOLUTION for 1918 will be to resolve to make no attempt in the future to resurrect the old brand of party politics.

• • • •

"IT IS ONLY a question of keeping cool," says Von Tirpitz. Then a certain section of Canada, alone and unaided, should win the war in a walk.

• • • •

WHEN GERMANY keeps its agreements the world will begin to have some faith even in the post-election promises of a discomfitted and defeated press.

• • • •

THERE WERE too many would-be Daniels trying to interpret that handwriting on the wall. When the people got together to solve it there was no mistake.

• • • •

THE MAN who posed in public as a Unionist and in private marked his ballot to suit himself has the better of his party organ, whose record stands out in cold type to condemn it.

• • • •

PERHAPS AFTER ALL the Examiner is entitled to some credit for the victory by the very fury of its attacks on the Union Government. Kitchener turned the tide by the same line of procedure.

• • • •

THERE IS TALK of a place in the Union Cabinet for Sir Wilfrid Laurier, which recalls the adage about some men achieving greatness while others have it thrust upon them, as coals of fire are sometimes heaped on the sinner's head.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

A National Rebuke.

(Ottawa Citizen)

The verdict in fvaor of the Union cause is also a national rebuke to unscrupulous party oppertunists, who tried to use the Liberal party to gain office, at this time when men of conscience are prepared to make sacrifices in politics for the sake of united national service in the war.

SOME MOTHERS OF HEROES

The mother of Private Gresham does laundry for a living. She is the mother of a patriot.

James B. Gresham was one of the first three men of the United States to die in France in the fight to save civilisation from the Hun.

James B. Gresham was a boy of the people. He was a true democrat and he died to prove it.

Private Gresham, like Private Enright and Private Hay, went to fight for the right. He went of his own free will, a simple boy of simple birth, because he saw the meaning of freedom and justice and the liberty of nations. He died facing the enemy.

Let us think of Gresham, like Hay and Enright, as looking into the Prussian guns with brave, true eyes, with hearts of fire and courage of steel, and sacrificing their lives without fear or regret.

Back of James B. Gresham stand his mother doing laundry for a living, facing the world with the same democratic courage that she gave her son.

The mother of James B. Gresham was willing to wash clothes rather than feebly demand of her son that he stay at home from France to take care of her.

In her honest purpose, in the example she set her son, the mother of Private Gresham has revealed the secret of his bravery, his daring, his patriotism and his fervor for self-sacrifice.

The mother of Private Gresham is a true patriot because she mothered a man who took of her moral fibre and went forth, when his country needed him, to make his fight and die bravely for liberty, equality and fraternity.

And when that monument is erected in France to Greshamn, Enright and Hay, the first three of the U. S. to die on French soil, it will be none the less a monument to the mothers who bore sons of such mettle.

HYPNOTISM IN HOSPITALS

(By H. Addington Bruce.)

Hypnotism, as a result of certain war developments, has once more become a subject of really vital interest to medical men.

From France, from Petrograd and from Berlin comes word that through hypnotism recovery from wounds has been promoted, shock following operations has been reduced and victims of shell shock have sometimes been miraculously restored to health.

"You can stand upright, you can walk, you will be perfectly well," says the hypnotist to the helpless, bewildered, paralyzed sufferer from shell shock.

And, behold, it has happened that his hypnotized patients have promptly verified his words.

Or, again, coming to a cot where a wounded man is in agony, the hypnotist assures him:

"You will no longer feel pain. You will be able to sleep. You are falling asleep now. You sleep, you sleep, you sleep."

In case after case, according to authentic medical testimony, a deep sleep actually results, giving nature a chance to set in motion her healing processes.

"Almost all soldiers can be hypnotized," states a Russian doctor, Podiapolsky. "I have found only about 2 per cent quite refractory." He demands:

"Why give chloroform to subjects who at a word drop in an artificial deep-slumber, which can be counted upon in about 17 per cent of cases?"

Not Russian soldiers only, but also wounded Teutons and Italians have been hypnotized by Podiapolsky. He has found all nationalities pretty much alike as regards susceptibility to hypnotism.

This, clearly, is a matter deserving of thorough examination by our own military medical men.

If, as the European experts claim, hypnotism is a pain killer of prime importance, its extensive use would seem to be well warranted. In any event, physicians cannot afford to refuse to look into its possibilities as an aid in the treatment of injuries and disease.

Out of the war, indeed, may come a definite, full understanding of the nature of hypnotism.

We today know more, far more, about hypnotism than we did fifty or twenty-five or even ten years ago. But its essential character still is veiled in mystery.

Until this veil is drawn aside hypnotism must remain chiefly a medical and psychological curiosity. To draw the veil aside there is needed investigation more precise, more patient and more exhaustive than has yet been made.

The facts reported from the military hospitals certainly suggest that the time for such investigation has arrived.

LITTLE BENNY'S NOTEBOOK

(By Lee Pape.)

Pop took a segar out of his vest pockit, and looked at it and put it back agen, saying to ma, Mothir, last year you tried to get me to make a New Year's resolution to give up smoaking, dident you?

Wy, I bleeve I did, sed ma.

You bleeve you did, thats a hot one, wy you made my life mizzerble for 2 weeks, sed pop.

Wot nonsents, sed ma.

I thawt it was nonsents last year, but like other grate men I have changed my mind, sed pop, my deer, it will give you grate plezzure to know that I am going to make a New Years resolution to cut the acquaintance of the vile weed, and wats more Ive got haff a mind to begin rite now.

Goodnise, Willyum, the ideer, sed ma.

You seem as pleased as a man with a tooth ake, sed pop.

Why, Willyum, serteny Im pleased, Im delighted, sed ma.

In the best sercles it is considered polite to smile when you are pleased and laff outrite when you are delighted, sed pop.

Well, Willyum, to tell you the truth, sed ma, I reely wish you woodent start jest yet, because the truth is, Ive bawt you a hole box of segars for Krissmas, sed ma.

Take them back, sed pop.

But you have no ideer wat a bargin they were, sed ma.

Well Ill be hanged, well Ill be switched, she cares more for a bargin box of segars than she does for her own husbind's helth. Well Im another, well I give up, sed pop. And he smoaked 3 segars right after each other looking mad as the doose.

The Fort William City Council last night voted $3,500 to the Halifax Relief Fund, in addition to the $1,500 already sent.

Wit and Wisdom

A Clever Answer.

Andrew Carnegie was once asked which he considered to be the most important factor in industry — labor, capital or brains? The canny Scot replied with a merry twinkle in his eye: "Which is the most important leg of a three-legged stool?"

Why Her Mind Failed.

Doctor—This is a very sad case, sir, very sad indeed. I much regret to tell you that your wife's mind is gone—completely gone.

Peck—I'm not one bit surprised. She's been giving me a piece of it every day for the past fifteen years.

The Power of Suggestion.

Mrs. Jones rushed into her neighbor's and asked if she might use the telephone.

"What's the matter?" asked the neighbor.

"I want to send for the doctor for my husband," panted Mrs. Jones.

"What's up with him?"

"He tells me he has got hepatitis, dyspepsia, rheumatism, enteritis, gastritis, appendicitis, nephritis and cerebro-spinal-meningitis!"

"Where did he get all that?"

"Why, a man induced him to buy a medical dictionary and he's just begun reading it!"

Gloomy Outlook.

The Brigadier—Now, Captain Wilson, suppose you found your company cut off from the rest of the battalion, hopelessly outnumbered and surrounded on every side, what would you do?

Captain Wilson—By Jove, sir, you are a pessimist!

Might Be Partly True.

"They say your husband squeezes his employes."

"Well, I don't know, but I have my suspicions about that blonde typewriter."

ROYAL YEAST

Has been Canada's favorite yeast for over a quarter of a century. Bread baked with Royal Yeast will keep fresh and moist longer than that made with any other, so that a full week's supply can easily be made at one baking, and the last loaf will be just as good as the first.

To Get Your

NEW EDISON

"The Phonograph with a Soul,"

For Christmas Before the Price Advances

In about one week all New Edison Phonographs will advance in price. You can save as much as $25 by purchasing NOW. This is an ACTUAL saving of CASH. Practise thrift by selecting your instrument AT ONCE.

OVER and above every other singular advantage, selecting The NEW EDISON this Christmas means saving money. While practically every leading Talking Machine Company has taken advantage of the heavy Christmas demand to increase their prices, The NEW EDISON will not be increased until January 1st, 1918.

The general increases are fair and necessary in view of the greatly increased cost of all materials, but it is his decision to delay the inevitable increases as long as possible—at least until everyone has had an opportunity of getting an Edison for Christmas—that again distinguishes Thomas A. Edison's consistent policy of considering the public first.

And that is not all. In addition to saving money by purchasing this wonderful instrument, The New Edison, NOW, through it you bring to your home the priceless gift of "Music's Re-creation." This, indeed, is greater than any price advantage. It is the most wonderful invention of the world's most wonderful inventor.

Come to our store today, while there is still time to obtain all the singular advantages of The NEW EDISON before the price advances.

CURIOSITY IN CHILDREN NOT REGARDED AS FAULT

Asking Questions is the Only Means the Child Has of Acquiring Knowledge and it Should be Encouraged.

"How shall I cure my child of curiosity?" a woman asked me the other day. "Such an inquisitive, investigating child I never saw. I can't have her prying into everything. How can I break her of it?"

"Just as you would break a fish of swimming or a bird of singing."

"How do you cure a fish of swimming?"

"Kill it. You might as well."

"Do you mean that curiosity is a good thing? A natural thing?"

"Certainly I do. I would as soon put out a child's eyes, or stop up its ears or cut off its fingers, as try to discourage its curiosity. It ought rather to be encouraged and wisely directed."

Try to imagine yourself placed in a totally new and strange environment, where most of the objects were far above the level of your eyes, or hidden from you or out of your reach. Imagine, too, that in order to know how to behave, how to get the good out of your surroundings, how to get along generally, it was necessary for you to understand the purposes of things and actions about you; that you were unable to read the printed books and newspapers and signs that told the natives the why and how of things; that those natives were of age and intelligence superior to yourself and that the only ways in which you could learn the things you needed to know were either to ask endless questions or to reach up and handle things and try experiments for yourself.

Now, imagine also that in that strange environment the natives regarded your questions as a nuisance, snatched away from you everything that looked interesting and worth finding out about, punished you for trying to make discoveries on your own account and yet at the same time expected you to act as if you had always lived there and knew the values and relations and ownership of things and all the reasons for the ways and customs of the place! Absurd, isn't it? And yet that is exactly the way in which thousands of grown up people act toward the little folks who have been dragged into the world without being asked whether they wanted to come and who are trying as best they can to understand things and people in the place in which they find themselves.

You have seen a kitten in a new room, sniffing about the corners and the furniture; she wants to know what sort of a place it is, whether it is a safe place for kittens to remain in, whether she'd better not run right away from there. Or, if she is to stay, she wants to understand all the ins and outs of it. It is the animal's instinctive effort to discover the attractions and uses and dangers of its environment.

There is something of the same sort in your little child's curiosity about the things amid which it finds itself. But there is in the child, we may assume, something more—something higher—an intellectual hunger, a desire to come into acquaintance with all the wonders and mysteries of the life about it. It is the beginning of education. Surely you don't suppose that a child's education was a matter of books and school teaching? That is the least and most superficial of it. Who are you that you should take the responsibility of checking the inquiry of your child, or anybody's child, about the world? Have you entirely forgotten your own childhood? Or did some lazy or officious person smother your inquisitiveness so that now you are too stupid to see what it is that your own child is doing? There are plenty of such people, but I didn't think it of you.

One student of child nature says somewhat ponderously that "curiosity leads to objective knowledge, but is also a stimulus to the acquisition of subjective knowledge by imitation."

"Why does that big boy do so and so?" asks the small boy, seeing the larger boy, whom he hugely admires because he is larger, doing some as yet inexplicable thing.

You explain, and he forthwith tries to do it himself. So he learns the reason, the process, and the results, and you don't have to explain that again. The knowledge, at first acquired objectively, has become subjective.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

Sleepy Time Story About Some Interesting Insects.

SET TRAPS FOR THE UNWARY

How One of These Creatures Caught a Prize That He Was Very Pleased to Get Rid Of—What Happens When the Clouds Pour Down Rain.

Well, said Uncle Ben to Little Ned and Polly Ann, I am going to tell you about WEBS IN THE GRASS.

This morning while I was walking in the field I saw in the grass the tents of a bold robber band.

I thought I heard Mrs. Fly say as she flew by me: "There are those spider webs stretched out on the grass. Well, the spiders won't catch me this time. It was very kind of Fairy Dew drop to sprinkle the webs with drops of water so that we may see them and keep out of trouble."

But as it got warmer the drops were drunk up by the hot sun and went sailing up into the sky to make clouds. Then unless you had sharp eyes and looked closely you could not see the lacey tents, which were, after all, traps in which the sly spider hoped to catch dinner, breakfast and tea.

One spider caught a little brown skipper butterfly. As soon as he felt the web shake from the struggles of the insect up he darted through his funnel shaped stairway and pounced upon the butterfly.

Once a big brown wasp came buzzing across the garden and in flying too near the ground struck a spider's web.

The minute the spider saw what he had caught he was so frightened he was most ready to run downstairs again, but he feared for his precious web. It had taken a whole hour to spin it.

So the spider hurried to the edge of the web and began cutting away the threads that held the prisoner.

In a minute the wasp was free and dropped to the grass. Soon he was able to fly away, and then the spider came out of his hole and mended the broken web.

But the little dewdrops that had gone up to the sky and joined the nice big clouds must have told tales, for after awhile the clouds rolled over the sky till the sun was hidden, and a host of big raindrops came pattering to the ground.

They battered at the spider webs till they were torn to bits, and the spiders crawled away into holes under stones or in the ground, waiting for the rain to stop.

And, of course, there was no supper for the spiders and no breakfast the next day for it kept right on raining.

But as tomorrow promises to be a sunshiny day perhaps you may notice whether they have set their traps again in the grass.

SOME CLEVER PLACE CARDS

Patriotic Idea Can Be Carried Out by Use of Bits of Khaki, Navy Wool and White Duck.

It is the successful hostess who recognizes the artistic and conversational possibility of the place card. As a means of stimulating table talk really novel place cards will do it as nothing else will, declares a writer in the Washington Post. Designing and making one's own place cards is good sport. Cunning little things can be made from bits of khaki, navy wool and white duck. Wee soldiers and sailors might be cut out of cardboard mounted on stands, and dressed in their respective "stuffs." A bit of glue is quite the only thing necessary for the dressing. The little hat, suit and even the leggings can be made realistic.

Other realistically patriotic cards can be made from plain white bristol board by "tacking" on wee tin sabers, wooden guns, miniature tents and even a whole company of tin soldiers standing upright. Then, too, little silk flags might be draped on the cards with artistic effect.

Another charming thing to do with place cards is to press flowers and paste somewhere on the card.

An Odd Incident of the War

THE story of the capture of nearly a company of German troops who were trapped in the Dragons' Cave, near the famous Chemin des Dames, when the French troops stormed and carried the German position along that historic road, was told to the Associated Press correspondent the other day by Father Py, a Franciscan priest, who, with a doctor, brought the prisoners into the French near lines. Father Py was acting as stretcher bearer to one of the most celebrated regiments of the French army, the One Hundred and Fifty-second Infantry.

The Dragons Cave is near the farm of Hurtebise, or what was a farm, for it has now become nothing but a heap of bricks, mud, and splintered timbers.

He is a small man, is Father Py, who when the war broke out was engaged on missionary work in Brazil. The call of his country brought him back to France, and although he is a native of the South of France he volunteered for service in the ambulance section of the One Hundred and Fifty-second, a regiment from the Vosges. He explained to the correspondent how on the day of the battle he had been detailed to go out and tend to the wounded, but not to advance beyond a certain trench, which was very near the most advanced French line. When he got there he found no one. The French soldiers had gone forward with one bound right in the track of the curtain fire put up by the artillery and had reached the German trenches on the other side of the crest, out of sight with miraculously slight losses. The priest and a companion looked about in search for wounded but could find none. Then, thinking under the circumstances they were justified in disobeying orders, they climbed over the top of the trench and went further forward.

A little farther on they saw a German running about with his clothes aflame and uttering cries for help, at the same time pointing behind him to a hole in the ground where two other men were gesticulating. The priest went on, thinking to find some more wounded men—perhaps men of his own regiment—but soon he saw they were Germans. At once he raised his crucifix in the air in the belief it would protect him, and he continued to advance.

On arriving at the entrance to what he had believed was a dug-out he found the hole went far into the side of the crest. He entered the Dragons Cave still holding his crucifix before him and shouting "Catholic!" Inside he found the hole spread out in all directions and that it was full of armed German soldiers. Four of five of them were officers, and, under the impression some of them at least would understand French, he called out in that language that he was a Catholic priest and that if there were any German wounded there he was prepared to administer the rites of the Church.

One of the officers spoke to him, asking what he was doing there and what was going on outside. He informed him the French had made a long advance over their heads and had crossed the crest and that they had better lay down their arms, for they would either be killed or taken prisoners in any event.

The officers then held a discussion among themselves, at the end of which one of them with tears streaming down his face said he supposed they must resign themselves to their fate, but they could only surrender to an officer.

Father Py scribbed on a piece of paper a note to one of the French captains, which was handed to his companion who had remained outside the cave.

While the note was being carried to the French officer, a German doctor in the cave showed the priest the resting place of several German wounded. Among them was a Jesuit priest who was serving in the German army as a soldier, with whom the French priest spoke in Latin. To the other wounded Germans Father Py gave the consolations of the Church.

Afterwards and while awaiting the return of his messenger with the French officer, Father Py advised the German officers to disarm their men in order to avoid any possibility of misunderstanding. He himself superintended the operation, telling each soldier to discard every weapon he possessed, but that they might retain small pocket knives.

A little later, just when the process of disarmament was being completed a French officer or rather a doctor appeared at the mouth of the cave and the German officers surrendered their swords and revolvers to him.

Then began the exit of the prisoners through the narrow entrance and they were all marched through a communication trench back to French regimental headquarters with an escort composed only of the priest, his stretcher-bearing comrade and the French doctor. They were almost a company, and their arrival caused considerable surprise at headquarters.

The little priest, who always was a favorite in the regiment, with which he participates in all the hardships of fighting and in constant exposure to wounds and death, is now quite a hero. He never leaves the men to go on leave, and did not even go to Paris when a detachment of the regiment went there to receive the decoration of the knotted cord in the colors of the military medal which has been conferred on it for having been five times mentioned in general army orders for bravery. The One Hundred and Fifty-second is the only regiment in the French army besides the Foreign Legion which has won this honor.

"FUR SET" FILLS BIG NEED

All of the fair sex who look at huge fur coats, fur neck pieces and muffs and despair at their not being able to purchase such expensive articles, are in for a great surprise, and a pleasing one. The latest designed "fur pieces" are altogether just as pretty, perhaps not as warm, but very few women wear furs for the warmth they give, and their cost is negligible in comparison with the cost of the real thing. The set shown in the picture is made of Ispahan ribbon trimmed at the edges and with bands of fur running through. The stole, muff, hat, and even the purse are made of the same materials in the same way.

Millinery Notes.

Black, rose and brown are three popular favorites, and one of the three may be worn with almost every shade.

Moire silk vies with velvet in pleasing the public, and it is so soft and pliable that it fits in very well with the styles of the day.

As for shapes, take your choice. Broad brims and narrow ones, high crowns and square crowns, and crowns that are round as a full moon, all appear in hat land.

And it matters not at all which one you wear. Only be sure that it suits the contour of your face.

The Mighty Gorilla.

The most perilous job that anyone can undertake in the jungle is the capture of a full-grown girilla. It is said that no gorilla has ever been captured alive after he was full grown. He would be a bold man who would attempt such a feat. Gorillas fear nothing. Even when mortally wounded they show an agility, strength, and ferocity which is astonishing. A famous traveller once stated that it would take 150 men to hold down a gorilla with any degree of safety.

On the other hand, all other apes are pathetically easy to capture. The usual method is for a trapper to seat himself where he is certain to be observed by these creatures and pertend to drink from a bottle of crude spirits. When he is sure that he has been observed, he leaves the bottle and goes away.

The moment his back is turned the monkeys rush to appease their curiosity concerning the contents of the bottle. They like the taste of the spirits, and quarrel among themselves for it till the bottle has been emptied. They are soon overcome by the intoxicant, and the trapper returns and gathers them up.—Tit-Bits.

BOARD OF WORKS CLEARS BUSINESS ON 1917 SLATE

But J. E. Emmerson's Claim Again Sent to City Engineer.

The City's Board of Works met last night, and cleared the slate of odds and ends of business. A few problems were left for next year's board to wrestle with.

The board's financial statement showed that by the year's end this department will have an overdraft of about $1000. Up to November 30th the year's expenditures were $21957.81 as against an appropriation of $22,300, and it is estimated that in the neighborhood of $800 will be needed with which to "carry on" until December 31st. One item which caused the board's overdraft was the flooring of Hunter street bridge, the estimated cost of which at the beginning of the year had been charged against debentures whereas allowance should have been made for it in the Board of Works' appropriation.

An Old Claim.

Mr. J. E. Emmerson's claim for refund of his expenditure on relieving a blockage in the sewer connection with his house on Park street went again to the City Engineer for further enquiry into circumstances connected with the incident. Mr. Emmerson claims that the trouble arose through faulty work at the street line for which the city is responsible, but Engineer Parsons reports bad judgment used in connecting up with the house by whoever owned this property at the time connection was made.

No Refund Allowed.

Miss Griffith's claim for a refund of taxes for sidewalk plankage at her property, corner of Antrim and Aylmer streets, was not allowed, the engineer reporting against the request. This assessment had previously been confirmed by the Court of Revision.

May Acquire Olive Ave.

Residents adjacent to Olive avenue, a 24 foot by-way between north of Perry and west of George streets, which is private property, are anxious that the city acquire the land, in which event the corporation would be justified in doing road work thereon. This went to the City Solicitor for an opinion as to the legality of such a course.

There were present Chairman Ald. Weir, Mayor Duffus, Aldermen Taylor, Worth, Langford, Saunders and Dobbin.

FIRMS AT KINMOUNT MAKE ANOTHER START IN NEW PREMISES.

Kinmount, Dec. 20.—The recent fire has cleared out the best part of the village of Kinmount. However, nothing daunted, the victims of the fire have now got fairly well going again. Dr. E. A. White has erected a fine temporary shop on the old stand. Doherty Bros. have bought the Dettman hotel and have already started business.

Ed. Wellstood has started up again in the old Mansfield block. A. Moore occupies the old Farmers' Bank rooms, while George Train, postmaster, is located in the town hall.

TURKEYS AT 32 CENTS.

The farmers around Wingham are bringing in their fowl, which, although very plentiful, still keeps to a good mark, turkeys bringing thirty-two cents a pound, geese about twenty-two cents, and other fowl in proportion.

Mrs. Wm. Higgs and Master Alfred have returned after a pleasant visit at her home in Frankfort.

Died, at Mount Pleasant, Friday, Dec. 14, Margaret Thexton, beloved wife of Joseph Bland, aged 82 years. The funeral took place from the family residence to Emily Presbyterian cemetery on Sunday, the 16th.

The Children's Shelter, Port Hope, would be pleased to receive money or gifts from the people of Durham and Northumberland for the children's Christmas.

Letter from Gunner J. D. Hetherington, 33rd Battery, 9th Bgde., France.

Dear Mother and Father:

I have received your parcel with the underwear, and they were fine. Today has been a lovely day, and I thought I would drop you a few lines. We are in some spot here, and our casualties have been light so far, but are beginning to grow. Our major was wounded, also four others in our sub. killed and wounded. One of our officers and a signaller went over with the infantry and took several prisoners. Coming back they were wounded, and some of the captured Huns were blown up with their own shell fire. In the loss of our major we have lost a father, for he looked after us, and has saved our lives possibly when we did not know it. He was a nice, pleasant man, would always speak to us, and never looked for any salute.

The cursed Hun is not beaten yet, but I hope the time will soon come when we can pay him back in his own coin. I think the Germans are making their last effort before the U. S. troops get over here. However, the advance the Allies have made is wonderful. I hope the Americans come over with the intention of bombing the daylight out of him.

My, what a good time we had in that town I was telling you about where we had a room and everything nice. The weather up to the present has been good.

Your loving son, DUN.

Returned Soldiers Welcomed Home.

Tuesday night, Dec. 8, a large number of the citizens of Cavan and Millbrook met in the town hall, where a reception was held for a number of returned soldiers, namely: Sergt. Geo. Dawson, Pte. Lawrence Fallis, Pte. J. Whitfield, Pte. Howard Fallis and Pte. Curtis. Reeve A. J. Henderson acted as chairman. He called upon Mr. W. S. Given to read the following addresses to the boys, and the citizens' band rendered a number of selections during the evening:

To Lawrence Sidney Fallis,
5th Canadian A. M. C.:

We meet here today for the purpose of giving you a hearty welcome home, and to honor you as a young Canadian patriot who went bravely forth from home and friends in this vicinity to take your part in the great struggle for freedom.

As a member of that corps whose humane task it is to preserve the health and life of our men at the front, you have faithfully and fearlessly done your duty.

Your friends and fellow citizens very heartily congratulate you on your safe return to your country and kindred, and as the festive season is drawing near we unite in wishing both you and yours a very happy Christmas and New Year.

A. J. Henderson, Reeve,
Harold Baptie, Dep. Reeve.
W. E. Ball,
G. F. Clarke,
J. L. McCamus,
Councillors.

Millbrook, Dec. 18, 1917.

To Pte. Joshua Whitfield,
136th Battalion, C.E.F.:

Your many friends of Cavan and Millbrook are gathered here to give you a hearty welcome home.

We have followed your career since you enlisted, and we are satisfied that you have not only brought honor on your township by your splendid courage under most trying conditions, but you have made for yourself the title of "One of Canada's Heroes."

We are all proud of your gallantry while at the front, and are pleased that a kind Providence has permitted your safe return to your home and loved ones.

You have the satisfaction of a clear conscience, having done your duty faithfully and well. We wish you God-speed and extend most hearty greetings at this Yuletide season, and that you will have a long and prosperous life is the sincere wish of all.

Signed on behalf of the citizens of Cavan,

A. J. Henderson, Reeve,
Harold Baptie, Dep. Reeve.
W. E. Ball,
G. F. Clarke,
J. L. McCamus,
Councillors.

Millbrook, Dec. 18, 1917.

To Pte. John Howard Fallis,
136 Batt., C.E.F.

The municipality of Cavan Township, including many other warm friends, desire at this time to present to you some tangible token of their esteem with a few words expressing their admiration of your evident devotion to our King and Empire in voluntarily giving yourself to defend, to the utmost, the interests of both in this great war, while it was neither your privilege nor honor to reach the goal for which you enlisted.

We respect you for the cheerful way you accepted the call of duty, and followed it until forced, by physical disabilities, to return to your home. We honor you the more for submitting to Surgeon's care, and suffering wounds, in order that you might be the more fit for military service. We regret exceedingly that your recovery was not complete, and deeply sympathize with you in the disability under which you now suffer. We would place your name in the splendid list of our nation's heroes. Your intentions were noble, your sacrifice was cheerfully made, and your discharge was honorably obtained. We hope that time and a kind Providence may see you recovered in strength.

Signed on behalf of the citizens of Cavan,

A. J. Henderson, Reeve; Harold Baptie, Dep. Reeve; W. E. Ball, G. F. Clarke, J. F. McCamus, Councillors.

Millbrook, Dec. 18, 1917.

To Pte. Arthur Curtis,
21st Batt., C.E.F.

The municipality of Cavan and many admiring friends of the village of Millbrook, have gathered to present this message of appreciation of your heroic services to the Empire in the great war. You nobly enlisted in a splendid battalion early in the war, did faithful, hard work in the trenches, until the poisoned gas of our unscrupulous and treacherous foe, at St. Eloi added to the suffering induced by hardship in the trenches, forced you out of the struggle and into the hospital. After months of suffering your health in part recovered, you returned to us a hero broken in health, but undaunted and cheerful in spirit.

You belong to that splendid body of British born, who heard the call of the Empire and true to the blood of your race rallied nobly to her defence. Your deeds prove that the spirit of chivalry still lives and that protection to the weak and justice and honor among nations, will not die as long as Britain lives.

We welcome you back and wish you a complete recovery to health, and for the further success and happiness of yourself and family.

Signed on behalf of the citizens of Cavan,

A. J. Henderson, Reeve; Harold Baptie, Dep. Reeve; W. E. Ball, G. F. Clarke, J. L. McCamus, Councillors.

Millbrook, Dec. 18, 1917.

After the addresses the heroes replied, thanking the citizens of Cavan for their appreciation of their services.

The chairman then called upon Revs. McConnachie, Clarke, Dr. Lee, Canon Allen and W. H. Higgs, who gave splendid addresses.

MAJORITY IN ONTARIO IS TREBLE THAT OF 1911

Returns Analyzed in the 82 Ridings in the Province—Unionists Are 175,000 Ahead of Liberals.

The popular civilian majority for Union Government and conscription in Ontario is, at the very least, 175,000. In 61 of the 82 ridings, there were contests in which the lines were strictly drawn between Laurierites and Unionists. In these, the Unionist majorities total 137,500. This is a conservative figure so far as conscription is concerned, for many Laurier candidates said they were conscriptionists and thus got a share of the conscriptionist vote. As a Government majority, however, it stands.

In five ridings both candidates were Unionists, and in another a Unionist was elected by acclamation. If the gross vote polled by all these candidates were counted, it would swell the total enormously, but it is perhaps fairer to treat these seats as Unionist acclamation and assign a round figure of 2,500 votes to each. In some of them, as a matter of fact, the winning Unionist had a majority of as high as 1,500. The seats in question are North Grey, West Hastings, North Oxford, Welland, South Toronto, and Glengarry, and at 2,500 votes a piece, they may be said to add 10,000 to the popular majority of the Government.

Four Special Cases.

There are four other seats in which there were mixed contests, and these have been dealt with as follows:

York E., Unionist and Soldier over Laborite	8,649
Brant, Unionist and Soldier over Laurierite	2,495
Hamilton W., Unionist and Soldier over Laborite ...	6,843
Parkdale, Unionist and Soldier over Laurierite	13,490
	31,477

It is fair to assume that McCoig and Truax will both support Union Government, both having voted for conscription in the House and neither having accepted Laurier's endorsation. This adds 1,977 to the total, and the net result, after subtracting the Laurierite majorities, works out as follows:

Government Majorities.
61 straight Laurier defeats	137,500
6 ridings no Laurierite	15,000
4 mixed contests	31,477
McCoig and Truax	1,977
Total	185,954
Laurierite Majorities.
9 Laurierite wins	10,889
Popular majority	175,065

The Conservative majority in Ontario in 1911 was 60,000.

CHRISTMAS JOLLITY.

Lots of jolly music will be wanted for Christmas home festivities. Be sure you have some good songs and dances for your Victrola. Call at the Victrola Parlors of Ye Olde Firme of Heintzman & Co. Ltd. FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

GET THIS FOR THE ELDERLY FRIEND

Your father, mother or other elderly friend that you want to please particularly is wearing old style glasses, perhaps. They would appreciate nothing better than a new pair of gold mounts, guaranteed by Dr. Fowler and fitted with the correct "PEBLO" Lenses after Christmas. The cost is quite moderate.

Reading glasses are practically off the market, but Dr. Fowler still has a few good ones at before-the-war prices. They make a good gift.

ward system, of the extension of the street car line, and of the principle of municipal ownership.

The delegates passed a hearty vote of thanks to the two speakers, who at the close of the several addresses answered all questions that were submitted to them. The delegates were of the opinion that the relations between them and the City Council would be improved if such visits as that of last night were more frequent.

After the aldermen retired the delegates discussed the coming municipal election and the advisability of putting up aldermanic labor candidates. T. J. Stenton was urged to enter the race against Ald. Langford but his ambitions do not lead him in that direction.

One thing is certain—the retiring aldermen who voted against submitting the ward system question to the electors and who offer themselves for re-election need not bank on the support of Labor electors.

The Council will hold a special meeting Friday evening to discuss this question further.

A unanimous vote of thanks was tendered the local papers for the reports of the proceedings published from time to time.

WEST HOLDS BALANCE.

88 Unionists, 88 Laurierites Elected in East.

The extent to which the West holds the balance of power in the new Parliament may be seen by the election returns for the four Western Provinces, and those for the remaining five Provinces are added up separately. At present, not counting the doubtful or deferred seats, Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island have elected between them an equal number of Unionists and Laurierites, 88 of each.

The totals for the four Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, and British Columbia are 51 Unionists and 13 Laurierites, so that it is on the West alone at present that the Union depends for its majority. The dependency will be decreased by the soldiers' vote.

No Infantry Actions.

Paris, Dec. 20. — (Official.) — There were moderate artillery actions along the whole front last night but no infantry actions.

British Casualties 17,976.

London, Dec 20. British casualties reported in the week ending today totalled 17,976 officers and men, as follows: officers killed or died of wounds, 331; men, 3,181.

Officers wounded or missing, 1,039. men, 13,425.

Plenty of Binder Twine Next Year

CANADIAN AND UNITED STATES AUTHORITIES REACH AN AGREEMENT.

Ottawa, Dec. 20.—An ample supply of binder twine for Canadian requirements next year at reasonable prices has been assured, as the result of an agreement reached between the U. S. Food Administration and the Mexican sisal growers of Yucatan. Information to this effect was received at the office of the Food Controller. The growers were holding out for a high price, but under the arrangement just consummated the entire crop has been secured at a slight advance over last year's price. Co-operation of Canada and the United States in controlling food exports from this continent was one of the factors which made it possible to secure the sisal supply at reasonable terms.

ALL SURPLUS BOUGHT.

Flour and Oatmeal from Canadian Plants Purchased by Allies.

Calgary, Dec. 20.—It is learned that the purchasing representatives of the allied governments have arranged to take all the surplus flour and oatmeal manufactured by the mills of Canada and that already every mill in the Dominion is working to capacity and will continue to do so until the war is over.

Sir Wilfrid Staggered By Reports of Election.

Sudbury, Dec 19.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier and party passed through Sudbury at 7 o'clock last night. When asked in his private car if he had anything to say through the press to the people of Ontario, he replied: "I have nothing to say," and immediately inquired the latest election returns. When informed that the opposition had only one seat west of the great lakes, Sir Wilfrid exclaimed: "Incredible, what report is that?"

BIG SCHEME TO HELP VETERANS

WORK AND MARKET PROVIDED FOR THEM IN NORTH ONTARIO.

1,740 square miles of land to be cleared.

$1,000,000 pulp and paper plant to be established, employing 200 hands.

Market created for produce raised by returned soldiers on New Ontario farms.

Estimated, $4,500,000 or $5,000,000 additional revenue for the Province of Ontario.

Toronto, Dec. 20. These are features of a big new scheme, details of which were made public yesterday by the Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines for Ontario, when the tender of Messrs. Mundy & Stewart, Toronto, was accepted with respect to the Kapuskasing River pulp and timber limit.

Near Soldiers' Colony.

An interesting feature is that the new pulp and paper plant will be located near the returned soldiers' settlement at Kapuskasing, so that not only will it be the means of establishing a market for the farm produce the soldiers will raise, but if the soldiers desire employment in the winter months, when things are quiet on the farm, they will be able to secure it in the pulp and paper mill.

WAS HOSPITAL NEIGHBOR TO LT. H. ROGERS

PTE. R. RICHERD LAY ON THE BATTLEFIELD FOR SIXTY HOURS.

TOOK BONE FROM SHIN AND SAVED LEFT ARM.

Mr. R. B. Rogers has as his guest today, Pte. R. Rickerd of Belleville, who when fighting with the 4th C. M. R. at Sanctuary Wood sustained a shrapnel wound in the left arm, and after lying on the field of battle for sixty hours, was picked up by the Germans and sent to hospital fifteen miles beyond the scene of battle. The wounded officer in the bed next to the one occupied by Pte. Rickerd, was Lieut. Harry Rogers. He was shot through the lung, during the same battle, and the position of the bullet made its extraction possible by the doctor simply using a sharp instrument on the flesh, thus releasing the bullet, which Lieut. Rogers now has in his possession.

Arm Hung in Shreds.

Pte. Rickerd was hit in the left arm by shrapnel, the injury being so serious that his arm hung like so many shreds. He was given good attention in the German hospital and after being sent to Switzerland underwent an operation at the hands of a Swiss surgeon, who took a piece of bone from the patient's shin and, placing it in position in the broken bone of the injured arm, made it possible for the young soldier to retain the use of the limb. The bones were brought together by inserting a silver plate.

Pte. Rickerd was one of a large party of Imperials and Canadians who were expatriated, and the former after reaching London came to Canada and home. While in London, Pte. Rickerd saw several air raids. He says the raids while hard on the villians are not to be compared with a heavy bombardment at the front.

Allies Reach Objectives.

The hospital in Germany in which he was treated, was not a great distance from the objectives of Allied air raids. Pte. Rickerd was never informed of the extent or the damage done in these raids, but many German sailors were brought to the hospitals suffering from wounds they received in the bombardments of German bases.

At Switzerland the treatment given to the wounded was very fine. Pte. Rickerd stayed at the hotel, where Lieut. Fred Hubbs was stopping. The latter who before enlisting published the Hastings Star, published a paper in the Swiss town.

Y.M.C.A. NOTES

A special meeting for boys will be held at the Y.M.C.A. building on Sunday afternoon at 4.15 o'clock in charge of Mr. Harold Copp and a program appropriate to the Christmas season will be carried out. This is the first meeting of the season to which the younger boys have been invited, and, as the program will be of special interest to them, every boy from ten to eighteen years of age is cordially invited. The Y.M.C.A. building is now open each Sunday evening from eight to ten o'clock in response to the request of a large number of our senior members. It is the intention of the Association to conduct a program each Sunday evening of special interest to the older fellows. Next Sunday evening, directly after the church services, Joseph Wearing, Esq., will deliver a most interesting address appropriate to the holidays. Every man and older boy is invited to attend.

The Y.M.C.A. building is now having an attendance of about five hundred per day. The dormitories have been filled with scarcely an overnight vacancy during 1917. 1200 games were bowled on the alleys and over 2500 games played on the senior billard tables during November. No record is kept of the games played by the boys in their department, but, if the games of all kinds were taken into consideration, the nnmber would aggregate considerably more than 5000 for the month of November.

$3800 Outstanding.

The problem before the Finance Committee is the collection of $3800 still outstanding in subscriptions. The Committee hopes that the subscribers will further aid the Association by making their payments at the Association office, as it is very difficult for the Directors to make collections by means of personal calls.

Attendances Large.

The last regular meeting of the Board of Directors for the year was held on Tuesday evening, December 18th. Reports of the employed staff and Committee Chairman showed the activities of the Association and finances to be in a very satisfactory condition. The Directors were pleased to note that the Bible Classes and religious meetings of the Association have an aggregate weekly attendance of considerably over two hundred. The aggregate weekly attendance at all gymnasium classes is about three hundred and seventy-five being probably the largest attendance at the gymnasium during the history of the local Association.

A WESTERN POET.

Robert J. C. Stead is the Man Who Wrote "Kitchener."

A new poet has come out of the West. Robert J. C. Stead became known first when his fine verse "Kitchener," published immediately after the death of the great British general, went the rounds of the Empire. Mr. Stead has now published a volume of his verse, to which he has given the title "Kitchener and Other Poems." Although Robert Stead was born in Ontario, he must be regarded as a Westerner, having spent practically all his life in the Province of Alberta, and his home is now in Calgary. It should be noted at once, however, that this poet has not considered it necessary to adopt poetic forms that are popularly considered appropriate to new and virile sections of the country. He has not written the flowing verse calculated to win for him the title "The Kipling of the Prairies," that certain persons would have hastened to bestow upon him. Most of his poems are in conventional forms. He has not followed any of the modern schools, nor broken the old rules of rayme and metre in any particular. It cannot be said that his ideas are new. In fact, most of his subjects are patriotic and do not differ greatly in thought from hundreds of pieces of this nature. It is in his striking use of rhetorical phrases that Mr. Stead rises at times distinctly above the level of Canada's many minor poets, who have written about the war.

"Kitchener" has splendor and dignity, which makes one pronounce it an inspiration. It ranks among the finest bits of verse ever written by a Canadian, and it shows all Mr. Stead's gifts at the very best.

Weep, waves of England! Nobler clay
  Was ne'er to nobler grave consigned;
The wild waves weep with us to-day,
  Who mourn a nation's master-mind.

We hoped an honored age for him,
  And ashes laid with England's great;
And rapturous music, and the dim
  Deep hush that veils our Tomb of State.

But this is better. Let him sleep
  Where sleep the men who made us free;
For England's heart is in the deep,
  And England's glory is the sea.

One only vow above his bier,
  One only oath beside his bed:
We swear our flag shall shield him here
  Until the sea gives up its dead!

Leap, waves of England! Boastful be,
  And fling defiance in the blast;
For earth is envious of the sea,
  Which shelters England's dead at last.

Migration of Caribou.

From Dawson, Yukon Territory, comes news of the migration of caribou. Great herds are, it is said, ranging across the country in the vicinity of Forty Mile River, and at various other points. The total number of animals moving southward in search of food is estimated at 1,000,000 head. It is characteristic of the time that the migration would hardly have been known outside of Yukon Territory, had it not been necessary to explain officially that occupancy of the roads by the caribou interfered with the carriage of the mails.

FARMER "FEELING FINE THESE DAYS"

PAINS IN THE BACK ALMOST "BENT HIM DOUBLE," BEFORE TAKING TANLAC.

"I'm feeling simply fine these days but before I began taking this Tanlac I was just in misery nearly all the time," said Henry Walker, of Puslinch, R. R. No. 3, Hamilton, recently. Mr. Walker is a well-to-do farmer and one of the best known and respected men living in this vicinity.

"My kidneys have been bothering me off and on for several years," continued Mr. Walker, "and the pains in my back almost bent me double. My stomach was in a bad fix and I had come to where I couldn't eat without suffering afterwards. I had no appetite and just had to force down the little I did eat. I was so run-down and played out that I never felt like doing much on the farm and the least little job of work would tire me completely out. One day I met my friend, Bill Cairns, and I had such an awful pain in my back that I was all stooped over. When I told him what the trouble was he told me to go and get Tanlac, saying he had taken it and that he was feeling years younger.

"So, I bought a bottle on his sayso and now I'm feeling fine myself. Why, my appetite is better than it has been in a long time and the folks at home sometimes express the fear that I might hurt myself by eating too much. But, I just tell them not to be uneasy, my stomach feels alright, and as I have been denied the pleasure of eating for so long I want to make up for lost time. I haven't been taking Tanlac very long and I'm going to keep on taking it, but I haven't had any of those doublingup pains since I started on it. My kidneys don't bother me any more, my strength is rapidly coming back and I'm getting to where I can put in a good day's work and feel none the worse from it. Yes, sir, Tanlac has made me feel fine and it's a pleasure to recommend it to other people."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co. Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co. Ltd.

SIGNIFICANT ANSWERS.

(Prince Albert Herald.)

"Two significant answers were given in no uncertain manner by the people of Canada in yesterday's election. One was to the insolent challenge thrown down by French-speaking Quebec; the other was that Canada is in the war to the end."

Isn't This True?

When you "feel mean" — dull, tired, nervous, bad digestion, no appetite—

Don't you find out, afterwards, that your bowels were not acting freely and naturally?

Due, of course, to a liver gone on a strike.

Take two or three pills—once. After that, only one, until your're all right.

HONEST ABE, U. S. N.

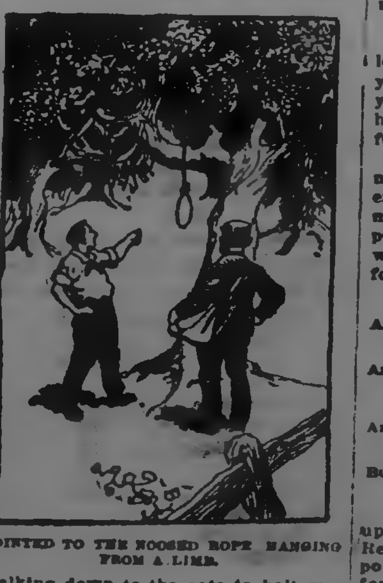
Finds It Hard Work to Bring Muse to the Front.

BLAMES IT ON HOT WEATHER

Writes a Poem For a Determined Young Man While Being Fanned With a Burdock Leaf—Also Helps Farmer Sell Out of His Misery.

I STARTED out on my route the other morning with the weather boiling hot, and I hadn't driven half a mile when I realized that it was going to be the hardest kind of work to bring the muse to the front should any of my patrons want anything in the poetic line. I found it a gigantic effort to even recall the rhymes in "Mary's Little Lamb," to say nothing of working up something original. I don't wish to discourage other poets, but I believe that no one, unless driven to it, should attempt a poem with the thermometer marking above 70 degrees. Poetry should be able to stand the sun and not melt and run into itself like butter.

I had got down as far as Uncle Steve Thompson's place when he came walking down to the gate to halt me. I knew from the looks of him what he wanted, and I called out:



POINTED TO THE NOOSED ROPE HANGING FROM A LIMB.

"No use, Uncle Steve. I'm going to drop it until we get a northwest wind again."

"Abe, the old woman fell downstairs last night and broke her nose, and she's calling for one of your poems on to it," he said.

"She's got to wait. Anything I'd write today would make her nose worse. It might even throw her into a fever. Tell her that my heart is right, but perspiration and poetry won't mix."

And at the very next farm Mrs. Johnston waved me to stop to say:

"Abe, you once promised that if anything ever happened to us you'd write a poem on it, and now something has happened."

"Don't tell me that your husband has had a sunstroke!"

"No, not quite that."

"Or that your boy Jim has cut his feet off while hoeing corn."

"Well, no."

"Then—then"—

"You know that mulley cow of ours? She got hold of something yesterday that poisoned her, and"—

"And died, and be hanged to her! Not a poem, Mrs. Johnston; not a verse or a line. Great Scott, but am I to become a grease spot to help future generations remember that your mulley cow once lived? Stifle your grief until the 1st of November."

A Poet's First Duty.

I know that her feelings were hurt, and it may be weeks before she forgives me, but a poet owes something to himself as well as to others. His first duty is to live through the hot summer and come out right end up in the fall. At Farmer Hope's it was different. The farmer and his wife had gone to town, leaving the son Bill at home alone. Instead of being on the hustle in the cornfield he was sitting on the fence waiting for me. He had his head in his hands and looked to be a sick young man. When I helloed him he beckoned me to follow him to the orchard. I did so, and he pointed to a noosed rope hanging from a limb and said:

"Abe, I must have some poetry or my neck goes into that noose."

"Gee, Bill, but it's roasting hot!"

"Makes no difference. I've been in love with Sarah Jane Gregg for two years, and she's turned me down. If you won't write something to melt her heart, then it's goodby to the world for me."

I knew Bill for a determined young man, and I knew his father and mother for good people, and so I doused my head in water from the kitchen pump and had the young man fan me with a burdock leaf while I wrote as follows:

In the gloaming I sit,
And the shadows they flit,
And my thoughts are of Sarah Jane Gregg.
There's a tear in my eye,
And my soul gives a sigh,
And the rheumatis comes to my leg.

When the moonlight is here,
With the whippoorwill's cheer,
And the skeeter is humming so gay,
Then I try for to sing
Of most any old thing,
But the singing it gives me away.

Making a New Army.

One of the candidates who went up for examination for the Officers' Reserve Training Corps recently was poring over a manual of instruction for officers. He was trying to memorize the proper units and equipments called for in a division of the Canadian Army. He studied until his head ached, and then laid aside the volume in disgust. "I don't see what the Canadian Army needs with this division business, anyhow," he grumbled. "What it needs is multiplication and addition."

Corrupting Judges.

In the olden days judges were forbidden to wear gloves on the Bench for fear of bribes being dropped into them. Hence the custom of presenting a judge with a pair of white gloves when he has no cases to try.

OMEMEE

(Special Correspondence.)

Omemee, Dec. 18. — Mrs. Jack Coulter of Toronto returned home last week after an extended visit with her friend, Mrs. Ernest MacPherson.

Miss Mabel Boyd was a visitor to Peterborough on Saturday.

Miss Ida Burgess was a visitor to Lindsay on Thursday.

Mrs. J. J. H. Fee returned home last week after a lengthy visit with her sister, Mrs. (Dr.) Cook, in Sudbury.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Mulligan, of Peterborough, spent the week-end with Mr. R. J. Mulligan. Mr. G. W. Mulligan rendered several beautiful solos at the anniversary services held in the Methodist church on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Clarke of Lindsay spent the week-end in the village.

Miss C. Adams of Lindsay was a week-end visitor to Omemee and was the guest of her uncle, Mr. R. J. Mulligan.

Mrs. (Dr.) Cook and daughter of Sudbury are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Grandy.

Miss Jewett was a visitor to Lindsay on Saturday.

The attendance at the meeting held in the interests of the Liberal candidate, Mr. Geo. Isaac, on Friday night in the Farmers' club rooms was not very large, owing to counter attractions.

The Women's Institute Christmas meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Thos. Stewart Thursday of last week, with a good attendance. The meeting was commenced with the opening ode, followed by roll call. Miss McQuade delighted those present with a charming Christmas reading, after which the president, Mrs. Magee, gave a report of the annual convention held in Toronto the week of Nov. 21st. During the afternoon the ladies exchanged ideas for Christmas giving, and a number of band-made gifts were on exhibition. The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

The report of the annual Women's Institute convention, as given by Mrs. Magee, will appear in a later issue.

Miss Helen James of Toronto is spending the Christmas vacation under the parental roof.

Mr. Dewey Stinson of Toronto is home for the holiday.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Parsons were visitors to Lindsay on Tuesday.

Zeppelins Bombed Antwerp.

During a trip through the hostile lines from Brussels to Antwerp in August, 1914, Hugh Gibson, first secretary of the American Legation in Brussels at that time, was requested by the Queen to inspect the damage done by a zeppelin raid on Antwerp the night before. Mr. Gibson tells of the incident in the World's Work:

"I did not want to do this, but there was no getting out of it under the circumstances.

"We drove first to the Place du Poids Publique and went into one of the houses which had been partially wrecked by one of the smaller bombs. Everything in the place had been left as it was until the police magistrate could make his examination and report. We climbed to the first floor and I shall never forget the horrible sight that awaited us. A poor policeman and his wife had been blown to fragments, and the pieces were all over the walls and ceiling. Blood was everywhere. Other details are too terrible even to think of. I could not stand any more than this one room. There were others which Inglebleck (the King's secretary) wanted to show me, but I could not think of it. And this was only one of a number of houses where peaceful men and women had been so brutally killed while they slept.

"And where is the military advantage? If the bombs were dropped near the fortifications it would be easy to understand, but in this instance it is hard to explain upon any ground except the hope of terrifying the population to the point where they will demand that the Government surrender the town and the fortifications. Judging from the temper they were in yesterday at Antwerp they are more likely to demand that the place be held at all costs rather than risk falling under the rule of a conqueror brutal enough to murder innocent people in their beds."

"Bodyless" Beer.

The Small Arms Tavern at Enfield, England, which has been acquired and reconstructed by the Central Liquor Control Board, was opened recently.

At this public house, which is used by hundreds of munition workers, a good dinner can now be bought for a shilling. The menu includes chicken, beef, mutton, stewed steak, or pork, at 3d per portion.

Among those at the opening was the Duke of Connaught, who tasted the Government beer, which he described as "all arms and legs."

Lord D'Abernon, the chairman of the Central Liquor Control Board, said the new scheme of controlled public houses was a great success.

Cured His RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 5-D Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

Synopsis of Canadian Northwest Land Regulations

The sole head of a family or any male over 18 years old, who was at the commencement of the present war, and has since continues to be, a British subject or a subject of an allied or neutral country, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion Land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for District. Entry by proxy may be made on certain conditions. Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of land in each of three years.

In certain districts a homesteader may secure an adjoining quarter-section as pre-emption. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Reside six months in each of three years after earning homestead patent and cultivate 50 acres extra. May obtain pre-emption patent as soon as homestead patent on certain conditions.

A settler after obtaining homestead patent, if he cannot secure a pre-emption, may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

Holders of entries may count time of employment as farm laborers in Canada during 1917, as residence duties under certain conditions.

When Dominion Lands are advertised or posted for entry, returned soldiers who have served overseas and have been honorably discharged, receive one day priority in applying for entry at local Agent's Office (but not Sub-Agency). Discharge papers must be presented to Agent.

FRANK GOTCH IS LAID AWAY

THE SCHOOL OF HIS BOYHOOD DAYS WAS CLOSED AS A TRIBUTE.

Humboldt, Iowa, Dec. 20.—Humboldt turned from its normal tasks yesterday to place in Union cemetery here the body of Frank A. Gotch, the man whose wrestling fame brought public attention to this little city.

Business paused and the school Gotch attended as a boy remained closed as the city and countryside joined in tribute to the retired world's champion wrestler, who died at his home here last Sunday, after a protracted illness. The Masonic Order had charge of the services.

Canada's Effort Appreciated.

History holds no parallel to the record being made by Canada. Far removed from the present scene of conflict, self-sustaining, not dependent upon Great Britain, under no necessity of contributing a single soldier or a dollar to the cause of the Allies, she has voluntarily poured forth a wealth of treasure, while her sturdy sons have of their own volition formed an army comparable in numbers to the forces of great nations, and of a quality never surpassed. The chagrin felt by Germany on account of Britain entering the war, and expressed in hatred, has found peculiar vent against Canada. The strongest forces that could be mustered have been hurled against the Canadians. Orders often went out to "take no Canadian prisoners." Every devilish device in the whole category of outlawed and inhuman German practices has been employed against them. But they have withstood the fiercest attacks any soldiers were ever subjected to, and have repeatedly stormed and conquered apparently impregnable positions, over the most resolute defenses. They are a mighty power in a mighty war.

The glory of France can never be dimmed. But France is waging a defensive fight, for her very life. Italy fights for territorial gains, and fights well. Britain's fight was and is semi-defensive. Russia fights against the danger of immediate loss of her national unity and freedom. Canada fights for an ideal: for humanity. She might easily have ridden to high commercial and industrial prosperity, on the tide of opportunity, and achieved national greatness, by ignoring the call of justice and civilization, and selfishly leaving her mother country to her fate. Canada's action is a tribute to Great Britain which should be treasured as the brightest jewel in her collection. Canada's example will shine through all history. Hats off and hands extended to "Our Lady of the Snows."

GERMAN COBBLER,

Hans Follows Advice, but It Doesn't Help Business.

IS TOLD TO BE SOCIABLE.

But He Carries It Too Far and Meets Up With Unhappy Consequences. Whereupon His Mentor Sees That There Are Times When Silence Is Golden.

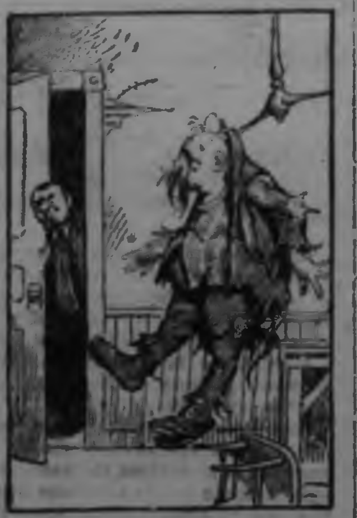
When I makes oop my mind to come to America an oldt man says to me:

"Hans, you vhill need advice for a long time oafer there. Der Americans vhas a queer lot. Notting vhas two times alike mit dem."

I belief I know all about it until I get oafer here und open my shop. Den I find out dot I vhas almost a fool. Bargains und honesty doan count. I put a lift on a heel for 20 cents, but I am afraid all der time dot I go by der poor house. One day vhen I vhas awful hard oop I goes by dot little tailor und tells him peesness vhas awful poor mit me, und he says:



"IN TWO MINITS I VHAS WRECKED."

"Hans, somethings vhas wrong mit you. Look at my shop, und see how prosperous she vhas. Purty soon I vhas a rich man."

"Vhell, I like to find oudt vhat vhas wrong," I says.

"Maype I can tell you. If I vhas a customer in your shop, how vould you speak to me?"

"I should say it vhas feefteen cents for a cement patch on your shoe."

"Und no more?"

"Vhell, maybe I says be vhas a hot day."

"Ah, I see. You doan' make some customers feel at home. You vhas cold and distant. Hans, you [illegible] deeferent."

Und he [illegible] he do oop his [illegible] der [illegible] found the [illegible] a per pupil [illegible]

[illegible] oop. As he comes in der door I holds out my hand und says:

"I vhas glad to see you. Take a seat. How vhas der wife und children? You vhas looking ash bright ash a young man of twenty."

"Look here, cobbler," says der doctor, "vhas it your beesness about my wife and children und how I look?"

Und he goes avhay to some other cobbler shop mit his shoes.

Der second caller vhas a man who looks very solemn, und he wants a cement patch. I shake hands mit him und says:

"You vhas welcome. It vhas a fine day, und it vhas good to see you looking so happy."

"Vhas you talking to me?" he asks.

"I vhas. Sit down and be at home."

"Und did you say I look happy?"

"I neffer see anybody look so smiling."

"Den you vhas a liar! I vhas an undertaker for seventeen years, und I neffer smile. It vhas my peesness not to smile."

Der next who comes vhas a womans. I bows to her, shakes hands und says:

"Be sure I vhas glad to meet you. You vhas looking troubled dis morning. Maype it vhas sickness in der family, or your husband vhas out all night. I sympathize mit you."

Dot womans goes avhay mit a slam of der door, und purty soon a big man mit a red face comes in und yells at me:

"Cobbler, vhat der defils you mean by speaking dis vhay to my wife?"

"I like to make her welcome," I says.

"Welcome, welcome! Do you haf to welcome some folks to a cobbler shop?"

"Und if she vhas in troubles I like to show my feelings und help her out."

"Oh, you would! Vhell, I shall gif you some troubles of your own!"

Und dot man he kicks oafer my bench und throws me about. In two minutes I vhas wrecked. He says to me vhen he goes out dot if I speaks to his wife some more he vhill break all der bones in my body.

I goes by the tailor und says:

"Vhell, you see how she vhas."

"Did you welcome der peoples?"

"I did."

"Vhell, I see how it vhas. I vhas a tailor, und you vhas a cobbler. If a man comes in here to get a coat cleaned he expects to be welcomed und sympathized mit. If a man comes into a cobbler shop he expects you to shut oop und say nottings. Hans, it vhas der vhay in America. You better say you vhas run oafer by a street car!"

Slavery in Ontario.

Citizens of Ontario should know that this province, then Upper Canada, was the first British country to abolish slavery—the second in all the world—Denmark preceding Upper Canada by a few months. The Upper Canadian legislation was in 1793, the second year of Upper Canada's existence as a separate colony.

It may be of interest to know that the last of those who had been slaves in Canada lived till 1871, dying in Cornwall, Ont., in that year. He had been the servant of Robert I. D. Gray—the first Solicitor-General of Upper Canada—who was drowned Oct. 7, 1804, when the Government schooner "Speedy" was lost with all hands, passengers, and crew, in Lake Ontario, having been last seen off (the present) Lakeport. With Gray were drowned Mr. Justice Cochran, Angus Macdonell (a member of the York bar), the High Constable of York (Toronto), an Indian, Ogetonicut, charged with the murder on an island in Lake Scugog, of a white man, interpreters, and witnesses. They were bound for the little assize town on Presqu'Isle Point, called Newcastle, now quite disappeared, where the Indian was to be tried for murder.

Gray, by his will made his body servant, John Baker, free, and left certain land for his support. Baker entered the service of Mr. (afterwards Chief Justice) Powell; it is said every time he got drunk he enlisted. Powell, after buying his discharge several times, warned him that he would not do it again. In vain—the lure of the uniform was too strong for poor Baker; he got drunk again, enlisted again, and this time for good. He is said to have taken part in the Battle of Waterloo. However that may be, he lived some half a century in Cornwall, known by everybody, and died in 1871, not far from a hundred years old.

REAPED RICH HARVEST

STAR-READERS BEGUILE THE VANCOUVER INVESTORS

Promised to Find Rich Mines, and Secured Fortune From Credulous Public—Many People Still Have Faith in Astrologers Who Are Serving Terms in the Penitentiary at New Westminster

Because of the breaking down of the faith of one Thomas J. Dunstone, Harry Musclow and James Alexander Muir are to-day inmates of the New Westminster Penitentiary for terms of five and three years respectively, and a rude awakening has come to a few of the hundreds of trusting investors who placed their money in a scheme the audacity of which has never been surpassed since the days of the famous South Sea Bubble.

By imposing on the credulity of hundreds of dupes, Musclow, the leading figure in the deal, has collected anywhere from $65,000 to $175,000, in sums ranging from $1.50 to $5,000, on the promise that claims in three fabulously rich gold-bearing creeks, "somewhere in British Columbia," would be allotted the investors. Absolute faith in Musclow, and a belief in the ancient pseudo science of astrology, were essential to the contract, which, to date, has been decidedly one-sided, for no one, except Musclow and Muir, has the remotest knowledge of the whereabouts of the claims, which have not yet been legally staked.

At the trial of Musclow and Muir, amazing revelations of child-like belief in astrology and the occult sciences were made by many witnesses, and the unbounded faith of the investors was remarkable. Though it is now over two and a half years since Musclow commenced selling claims, which were to be limited in number, though he broke his promises times without number, though he has been under arrest for the past six months, still his friends stand loyally by him, and even now, with their leader in the penitentiary, they are trying to induce their friends to buy into the close corporation that is some day to share in unbounded wealth, at such time as planetary influences become favorable. The high priest Musclow alone knows just when this will be, and as "a man in chains cannot lead the world," a delay of at least some years is assured.

According to Musclow, who is deeply versed in astrology and astronomy, the earth had been under the domination of Pisces for 2,140 years, until January 1, 1914, when the world entered under the aegis of the beneficent Aquarius, and embarked on a cycle of "friendship, hope, and wishes." Thereupon, Musclow conceived the idea of doing good to a few of his fellow men, who would show they were worthy of sharing in great wealth by implicitly trusting him with such sums as they could spare, and leaving all details in his hands without question. To properly impress the credulous, Musclow asserted that he was the man whose coming has been predicted in Revelations, and this was accepted as gospel by many. This profane claim was however outdistanced by that of one of Musclow's agents, who solemnly declared he had the power to raise the dead, though he had never used it.

In giving receipts for moneys received for shares in the gold bearing creeks, Musclow promised that the purchaser would be taken to the place within thirty days, weather permitting, but even after many weary months had passed, and no one had made the journey to the astrological El Dorado, no explanation of the delay was given. Implicit faith was necessary. Resentment or hostility would break the charm; all would be well in good time.

At the trial it was explained that the words "thirty days" were used "in a mercurial sense," Mercury being the god of writing and documents. Astrologically, it meant that purchasers would be taken to their claims "after a journey," or after a period of time, but this was not explained to even Musclow's nearest associates until the preliminary hearing at the police court some months ago. The explanation of the delay created much satisfaction among the planetary investors when it became known.

[illegible] it was impossible for Musclow to lead a party to the claims until Saturn passed out of the sign of Cancer, and entered into Leo, which evolution took place three weeks after Musclow was arrested on a charge laid by Mr. Dunstone, for which Mr. Dunstone is now bitterly disliked by a majority of his former associates.

So far as is known, Dunstone contributed the largest single amount when he turned over $5,000 in cash to Musclow, after having been in Vancouver only a few weeks. Dunstone is an Englishman who made a modest fortune in Australia by buying second hand false teeth, and was returning home for his health when he felt the combined influence of the planets and of Musclow and Muir. In his evidence he said that he believed Musclow had hypnotized him; in any case he had been under a spell until he bought books and so released himself from "influences." He spent about $20 for books on astrology, clairvoyancy, second sight, thought reading, hypnotism, mesmerism, phrenology, etc. He so far benefited that he once tried, by sitting in a dark room and "concentrating," to put one of Musclow's agents under hypnotic influence, but only succeeded in getting a headache. Once while Dunstone was under the spell in Musclow's office, he thought he saw a streak of light shoot out at him from under the door, but it turned out to be only a pet white rat Musclow kept there for some occult purpose.

Dunstone's $5,000 came after Musclow had been trying for several weeks to get someone to put up a large sum. Several mining men were interviewed, and the riches of the creeks described. One man told the astrologer that with so much gold in such an easy place, he needed no capital for development. A second man roundly abused Musclow and told him he should be in jail, while a third "just laughed right out loud."

Mr. A. M. Brown, one of the investors, was of strong faith for over two years, during which time he constantly kept his grip packed for the trip into the hills to the fabulously rich claims. But Musclow's influence did not affect Mrs. Brown to the same extent, "for she was born with a caul on her head," she told the court. They hold a $175 interest in the claims.

The persons who still retain implicit faith in Musclow include a number prominent in the business life of Vancouver, as well as others in humbler walks of life, for the astrologer broker sought and found believers in all quarters. During the sitting of the assizes the following self-denying ordinance was put in as evidence in favor of the accused:

"Dear Harry Musclow: The presence of militant opposition to your work has prompted us to review our relationship to yourself, established in fact and deed that relationship which already exists in heart. Here are the contracts you made with us. May God strengthen your good right arm."

The letter is signed by twenty of the 150 who still believe.

Muir, the minor defendant, went into the witness box and submitted to cross-examination, but Musclow contented with making an unsworn statement from the dock. Muir, in his evidence, said that Musclow had once taken him to the famous creeks and there he had picked up a nugget worth $40 or $50, but, on Musclow's instructions, he had replaced the nugget on the ground, as the planetary time was not propitious for taking away any of the gold. Muir, after much urging from Mr. Justice Murphy, volunteered to give the location of the claims if Musclow gave him permission, but Musclow declined. They feared that a stampede would follow, and the men who had showed their faith in the planets would be defrauded of the gains which are rightfully theirs.

In his unsworn statement Musclow, surrounded by books dealing with astronomical lore, maps of the heavens, globes, etc., said he exonerated Muir, who had been merely his agent. He would yet produce the gold, but not until he was free. He explained the movements of the celestial bodies, pointing out each one on the ecliptic. "People," he said, "are all under the influence of the planets. Pisces rules the feet of men, and is also the sign of discord. Leo, the sign of the sun, rules the metals, including gold. Mercury rules the mind. This is how I arrived at the computation of $100 per share: Saturn is the lowest planet. He has two rings around him. These I multiplied by Saturn's number and by ten, and that made 100. . . . I did not make astrological laws, but I am going to follow them. After this has blown over our people will believe in astrology. The people's confidence will not be violated by me, not though I may have to spend a few years in prison for my silence. When I am ready I will put them on the creeks where the gold is."

But the jury, after due deliberation, brought in a verdict of guilty against both defendants, and, at the close of the assizes, they were sentenced.

LAMPSHADE BAG IS NOVELTY

When Properly Constructed It Can Be Made to Look as Though It Came From the Orient.

Bags have come to be important accessories of dress. Nowadays a woman has as many bags as a man has pockets; but, of course, she is privileged to carry but one bag at a time. The creative ability has surely been overworked by some persons, according to the variety of the bags seen on the market. There is scarcely a shape, a material, a design or a combination of colors that has not been brought into service.

The novel thing of the moment is the lampshade bag. This, as its name implies, is made of a lampshade, the wicker variety. The shade, of course, is inverted, the narrower end forming the bottom of the bag. The inside of the shade is lined with silk of any color one prefers—the handsome figured silks are very good for the purpose. Allow sufficient silk to form a deep bag. If the shade is not very deep the silk can make up for what the shade lacks in depth. Finish the top with a hem and through it run cords to form the handle. Weight the ends of the cords with bead tassels and put one of the tassels at the bottom of the bag. The result will be a bag that looks as though it came from the Orient.

Ottawa, Dec. 20.—A big increase in Canada's trade is reported by the Department of Customs today. During November the total export and import trade was 268 millions which was 82 millions more than the same month last year. Trade reports for the year today also show big increases all round.

Bibulous Paid And Two Women

In this morning's police court the driver of a taxicab was fined $10 for refusing to give information to a police officer when called to give an account of himself and a quartet of passengers he conveyed in his taxicab.

According to the police, the occupants of the taxi were two men and two women. The men were intoxicated. They were passengers in the motor car last Saturday night and again on Sunday night.

The driver, when questioned by Sergt. Reid, said he did not know the names of the passengers. They left his taxi on Albert street, and walked along one of the side streets.

The police are determined to investigate every case that would lead to the suspicion that automobiles and taxicabs are being used for purposes other than legitimate travel.

35 CENTS FOR TURKEY.

A resolution offered by Dr. Augusta Stowe-Gullen that the members of the Toronto local council of women do not purchase turkeys for more than 35c a pound was carried with enthusiasm. Last year this same resolution caused a slump in turkeys in Toronto markets. This means that nine thousand women will refuse to pay more than 35c a pound for Christmas turkey this year.

NEW SACRIFICE DEMANDED OF THE BRITISH

Lloyd George Does Some Plain Speaking in House of Commons.

MEN ARE NEEDED FOR THE ARMY

Campaign Has Not Achieved the Expectations of the War Office.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Dec. 20.—Speaking in the House of Commons today, Premier Lloyd George, after referring to the Italian reverses, said it would be necessary for Great Britain to make greater sacrifices to strengthen its armies in the coming year. The need would arise to increase the nation's man power by taking some men now exempted.

The Premier's speech was delivered when the adjournment for the holidays was moved in the House of Commons. He dealt first with the problem of food. Owing to the efforts of the food controller an improvement was visible in the circumstances which had caused so much anxiety in the last few days.

Russia's Failure.

The Premier said that if the Russian army had fulfilled the expectations of its generals, by this time the pride of the German military power would have been completely humbled. On the whole, continued the Premier, the British campaign had not achieved the expectations formed, but he declared there had been military successes in Palestine which would have a permanent effect on the history of the world. Jerusalem, he stated, never would be restored to the Turks. The Premier said that the losses in shipping had been lighter by 100,000 tons than he had anticipated in his August estimate.

Six Million Men In Battle Line

GERMANY HAS 154 DIVISIONS ON THE WESTERN FRONT.

Washington, Dec. 20.—Germany's strength on the Franco-British front is placed in official despatches received here at 154 divisions, or within one division of the great force massed there last July when the German military effort against France was at its maximum.

Withdrawals from Russia and drafts upon the younger classes of reserves have enabled the kaiser not only to make up the enormous losses suffered in bloody battles with the allies, but to replace the men sent to aid the Austrians in their invasion of Italy. Winter therefore finds the Germans with armies facing the allies in France very equal to the largest ever before, with advertisement of a great offensive, which may presage another peace proposal.

The allies however, are understood to maintain a considerable superiority in numbers on the French front.

Take things as they come, but remember, there are some things it will pay you to go after.

HEAVY GUNS IN PLAY ON FRENCH FRONT GERMANY HAS REJECTED RUSS PEACE TERMS?

QUEBEC WILLING TO DROP OUT OF CONFEDERATION

If the Province is an Obstacle to Union and Progress.

Debate in House

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Quebec, Dec. 21.—The willingness of the Province of Quebec to retire from the Confederation of Canadian provinces is expressed in a resolution introduced in the Quebec Legislature today by J. N. Francoeur, member for Lotbiniere. "Quebec is willing to retire," says the resolution, "if in the opinion of the other provinces, it is an obstacle to the union, progress and development of Canada." The resolution will be debated January 8th.

EXPLAINS HIGH PRICE OF WOOL

ENORMOUS INCREASE IN USE OF WOOLEN GOODS, DUE TO THE WAR.

Mr. T. C. Elliott has received from R. Walker & Sons, the famous woolen goods manufacturers of Scotland, a letter which explains why that class of garments is so high in price.

Since the beginning of the war the British Government has insisted that the men in the trenches shall be dressed in woolen garments. Before the war the average number of articles of hosier required by the British War Office was 1,308,973 a year. That number has now reached 52,765,616.

The same increase has been noted in other articles of clothing. Before the war the British army used 165,650 blankets. Since August, 1914, the number used is 11,708,433.

A MERRY CHRISTMAS AND HAPPY NEW YEAR

The ladies of the Nurse's Supervision Committee of the Peterborough Health Association wish to extend the season's greetings to the City Council and citizens of Peterborough and to express their thanks for the kindly assistance given them during the year which is drawing to a close. Notwithstanding the many claims of the war, the barrel of meal has not wasted nor the cruse of oil failed and we have been enabled to supply the usual nourishment and medicine to our tubercular and other patients. Even with fresh eggs soaring at seventy cents a dozen we have so far supplied them when necessary to every patient. For this and other mercies we are very grateful and are pleased to report a decided improvement in the condition of most of the patients visited by our district nurse. We also wish to thank the city physicians for their advice and assistance especially Drs. Neal and Cameron, who have freely given so much time and assistance to the committee. We are looking forward to meeting a large number of our friends at our annual At Home to be held at the Empress Hotel on Friday afternoon and evening, Dec. 28th. The proceeds this year of the At Home is to be devoted to paying for a little girl with club feet who is being treated with great success at the Sick Children's Hospital, Toronto. This child's father has been fighting in France and for this reason the child has a double claim on our practical sympathy. Please watch Saturday's papers for details of the At Home and keep the date open, as we are anxious to meet our many friends again this year.

HORTICULTURAL BODY RE-ELECT ALL OFFICERS

BULK OF BUSINESS LEFT OVER FOR THE MEETING IN JANUARY.

All officers and directors of the Horticultural Society were re-elected at the annual meeting of the society in the city committee room last night. President Walter Stocker presented his report and the financial statement was presented by the secretary, Mr. C. H. Williamson.

The attendance was small, and for that reason it was decided to take no definite steps for next year, until the next meeting, which will be held early in January.

The secretary was instructed to acknowledge the donation of a silver cup by Mr. Fred. Adams, Toronto.

SPOKE ON THE ROAD PROBLEM

COUNTY CLERK ELLIOTT LED IN DISCUSSION HELD BY FARMERS.

County Clerk E. M. Elliott led in the discussion on the farmers' road question at the meeting of the United Farmers in Toronto yesterday.

"Ninety per cent. of the traffic on leading rural highways in our county is urban and only ten per cent. rural," said Mr. Elliott. "Yet rural sections pay sixty per cent. of the cost of construction and eighty per cent. of the cost of maintenance under a county road scheme. It is said that farm values are increased by good roads, but this applies in our county to only one-tenth of the farms. For this reason urban centres should bear more of the cost of leading roads than they do now."

Mr. A. A. Powers, Reeve of Clarke township, in speaking of the eastern extension of the Provincial highway, said that thirty per cent. of the cost in that case was to be borne by local municipalities and seventy per cent. by the Province. "The share of the Province will," Mr. Powers said, "be charged to capital account, and auto license fees, received by the Province, will meet the carrying charges. The share of the municipalities will have to be met out of general taxation. That road is in such excellent shape today, before being taken over by the Province, that I have been able to haul double the load over that I could haul over the ordinary roads of the township. Yet that road is to be rebuilt, at an enormous expense, for the benefit of auto traffic. It is a burning shame to levy thirty per cent. of the cost in such case on the townships. If motorists want a special class of roads for themselves, they should be compelled to pay for the same."

H. BOURASSA FINDS VICTORY SIGNIFICANT

Approves War Policy of The Union Government.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Montreal, Dec. 21.—In Le Devoir today Henri Bourassa says the victory of the Government is real and significant, and would have been secured "without the audacious act preceding the election." It proves, he says, that the majority in English-speaking Canada wants to keep the Unionist Cabinet in power, and approves on the whole its war policy. Stating that the more turbulent element in the Unionist party wants to drive the Government to measures of reprisal against Quebec, Bourassa says he likes to believe that the more solid heads of the Cabinet, Messrs. Borden and Doherty, will not allow themselves to be carried along by the hot-heads of the party.

STORMY SCENE WHEN SISTERS MET IN HOUSE

BATTLE OF SLAPS AND ANGRY WORDS IS HEARD IN THE POLICE COURT.

"She slapped my face and pounded my head against the wall, and when out on the street she called out that she'd kill me," was the startling charge made by a woman against another of her sex, in the police court this morning.

The counter charge by the defendant was this: "She slapped me on the face and called me a liar."

Magistrate tried to get at the bottom of the trouble but had to adjourn the case till tomorrow morning, to bring an eye-witness of the fracas to court.

It all happened yesterday morning in a home on Bethune street. The complainant in the case, while on a hunt for fuel, stopped at the home of a friend. Her sister-in-law also called and for some reason not fully explained in court this morning, hostilities broke out.

The Military Medal has been awarded Bombardier Frank Nickle of London.

Distilleries And Cellars Are Raided.

15 KILLED

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Petrograd, Thursday.—Incessant fighting has occurred in many parts of Petrograd in connection with efforts to check drunkenness and prevent the raiding of wine cellars. A mob raided one distillery, where fifteen soldiers drank themselves to death. Fifteen persons were killed and wounded when an armored motor car attacked the distillery, which was set on fire. The fire department was prevented from extinguishing the blaze by rowdies, and many persons were burned before the situation was brought under control. The streets are running with wine in many sections where soldiers are pumping the wine out of cellars to prevent disorder.

SUCCESSFUL PUPILS OF SEPARATE SCHOOLS WIN REWARD OF THEIR STUDY

Dean McColl Presents Scholarships and Prizes.

Rev. Dean McColl was chairman, and also presented the certificates, diplomas, scholarships and prizes at the commencement exercises of the separate schools which were carried out last night in St. Alphonsus Lyceum. His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, Rev. Father Phelan and Rev. J. J. O'Brien were present, and each congratulated the pupils on their splendid success.

Occasion was taken to comment on the performance of Bertie Giroux, the 12-year-old son of Mr. G. H. Giroux. This bright pupil won Mr. Jas. Lynch's prize of $5 by attaining the highest standing at the Entrance examination. He not only headed all the pupils in the city, but led in the county also. It is not improbable that he was first in the Province. Master Giroux also won the Cleveland bicycle presented by Mr. C. K. Banks as a prize to the pupil taking the highest standing in the city in the Entrance examination. Furthermore he was the winner of a gold watch presented by Capt. J. H. Burnham as a prize for the pupil with the highest standing in the whole county. The latter prize was presented to him at the commencement exercises of the Collegiate Institute. Mr. Banks made the presentation of the bicycle last night and in doing so said that Master Giroux should be a very proud boy, when in a city the size of Peterborough with so many pupils, he had come out at the head of all. Mr Banks said he would make the bicycle prize an annual one.

Miss Marion Hayes, who won Bishop O'Brien's scholarship of $15 by taking second place at the Normal Entrance, and Matriculation Examination was the valedictorian. Her speech was marked by the use of choice language and by good delivery.

A debate on the subject, "Resolved that school days are the happiest in our Lives," brought out some good arguments on the question, the affirmative being taken by V. Killoran, winner of Bishop O'Brien's scholarship of $20, and F. Malane. The negative speakers were V. O'Brien and F. Shannon.

"For speakers so young they have all done exceptionally well," said Dean McColl in congratulating the debaters.

Pupils of the Separate Schools and the Convent contributed musical numbers and drills. The boys of St. Peter's school had a neat number. Each carried a flag and as they went through a drill, patriotic songs were sung, the National Anthem concluding the performance. Another pretty number, the finale of the program, was a tableau entitled "Peace on Earth." Miss M. O'Connell had charge of the program.

Miss Antoinette Shevlin read the list of successful pupils.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, DECEMBER 21, 1917

POLITICS IN THE PULPIT.

SEVERAL PASTORS in the local churches preached what were regarded as political sermons, and no offence, so far as heard from, was given to any member of the congregations. The ministers confined themselves to general discussion. A former pastor of a local church, now located a London, gave specific directions to his people, and the result was trouble. Some of the congregation walked out of the edifice in high dudgeon, and two others so far forgot hemselves as to engage in a physical encounter while the service was in progress. It was really all a question of method and of pastoral judgment.

Surely any preacher is entitled to teach his flock the duty of citizenship. There is no higher duty imposed on mankind than the exercise of the franchise. The people who challenge the right of the minister to make any reference to political topics are generally men or women who are not clear as to their own affiliation. They would so circumscribe the prerogatives of the pastor as to make him merely an exponent of a system of dry and antiquated theology. So long as he deals only with the transgressors of Bible days and leaves the sins and sinners of the present day alone, he is perfectly safe with the class of people we have in mind. To reprove the man or woman who belongs to the church and risk driving them out of the congregation is another matter.

The preacher should not be deprived of any of the rights of a citizen on account of his calling. Certainly he has the same right to discuss public questions in private or in public as that possessed by any man. He has the same right to do this as the professional speaker himself has, and the chances are that his very freedom from partisan prejudice will give his opinions more weight.

To concede this right to the preacher does not necessarily imply ecclesiastical dictation. No discreet preacher, any more than a practical politician, who understands his business and human nature, will, figuratively speaking, take a fellow man by the throat and insist that he vote for a particular candidate or a party. He can state the facts as they appear to him and leave the rest to the intelligence of his hearers. There is a vast difference between coercion and persuasion, a difference in principle and in the results. Advising a man to follow a certain course is more apt to effect the object in view than to insist that he do as he is ordered.

Few of the Bible characters were without their faults. They were much the same as the human race of the day. The evils of the present time, however, are what really affect the social status of the people. To avoid carefully any reference to contemporary evil-doers may be safe, but it hardly makes for improvement.

A good deal depends on whose political ox is gored by the outspoken preacher. When the London pastor was in this city he took a prominent part in the provincial election of 1914. The same paper that commended him highly then was horrified that he should talk politics now. In the first case he was on the side of the newspaper. Last Sunday he was at odds with the same journal. Hence approval in one case and a scarifying criticism in the other.

RUSSIA AND HER ALLIES.

RUSSIA INSISTS, according to the despatches, that no German troops be shifted from the Eastern to the Western front, pending the negotiations for peace. This may not prevent the object in view, as Germany is unlikely to live up to any such agreement, but it at least shows that Russia has some sense of honor. The new government, even if disposed to end the war so far as Russia is concerned, is not inclined to play into the hands of the enemy by giving him any advantage over the Russians' former allies.

The Entente nations have not yet lost faith in the Russians. The new republic has not given up the struggle yet by any means. There is still hope that the Russians will come back, although that nation's dallying with the war problem has a tendency to prolong the war by inspiring the Central Powers with a new incentive to continue.

WILL HISTORY REPEAT ITSELF?

BEFORE THE ELECTION of last Monday there were fiery spirits in Quebec who declared from the rostrum and through the press that if the English-speaking population won at the polls, Quebec would have no alternative but to break away from the Confederation and set up for herself. That election went against Quebec, and hot heads in that province are repeating their threats to disrupt the nation.

The leaders in the Southern States in 1860 declared that if Lincoln carried the country the South would secede. Lincoln won by an overwhelming majority and the Southern confederacy was as good as its word.

The North disputed the right of the South to desert the Union. The legal aspect of the question was never satisfactorily disposed of. It is as much in doubt today as it ever was. All the Civil War demonstrated was that no state or states could leave the Union so long as the rest of the country was strong enough to crush them into submission. Might prevailed in the bloody contest that followed the action of the South.

The lesson of the American Civil War should not be lost upon any member of a confederation that finds itself afflicted with the independence germ. It has been decided that no province in the Canadian Federation can withdraw from the association except with the consent of all of the others. The terms of the B. N. A. Act bind all together hard and fast. If Quebec is unduly ambitious, a foreknowledge of the obstacles ahead should have its effect.

THE DUTY OF THE CHURCH.

(St. Thomas Times.)

PROTESTANT MINISTERS of all denominations will agree with Rev. Father West that politics should be kept out of the pulpit, that is, of course, giving politics its secondary meaning as concerning the affairs and fortunes of political parties. Various aspects of politics in its higher sense as the science and art of Government and the duties of citizens towards the State are perfectly proper subjects for the church to deal with, and we have never heard any serious objection raised to the discussion from the pulpit of political questions that involve the ethical side of national life. Prohibition, for example, was freely advocated by ministers of all the churches, including the Catholic.

In the case of the electoral campaign that closed on Monday, the great question at issue did not touch party politics. It was national in its character and import, it involved a decision of the utmost moment to the Dominion and the future position of the Dominion in the world. Every Sunday from the countless churches in the allied nations ascend prayers for victory in this war, which concerns the foundation and fabric of Christian civilization in the world. The question before the people of Canada concerned the war and the duty of the nation to itself, to the Empire, and to its allies. The churches would have failed in their duty had they remained silent in a crisis so momentous.

It will stand to the everlasting credit of the chief Protestant churches of Canada that they did not hesitate to speak with no uncertain voice in support of the Union Government, representing as it did and does both the political parties in the Dominion. The huge majorities piled up for the Union cause in Ontario and the Western Provinces showed unmistakably that the vast majority of their citizens recognized that the election was not a contest between political parties, but a national decision on a matter of duty and moral obligation. That was the issue on which the churches spoke and on which they were justified in pronouncing. The course they followed has been stamped with the approval of the people, who are the last and final arbiters.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

Laurier's Assurance.

(Toronto Telegram)

Laurierism had the racial and religious impudence to ask its followers in the recruiting provinces to prefer the ambitions of a venerable politician to the safety of their own husbands, sons and brothers.

The Difference.

(Toronto News.)

In Toronto, male voters gallantly stood aside while the women voted. In Montreal, gangs of roughs blocked the entrances to the polls in order that the female relatives of soldiers might not be able to cast their ballots.

Soldiers' Vote Not Needed.

(Toronto Star.)

The 250,000 votes of the soldiers who are overseas are not required to determine the result. That vote, when it comes, will confirm and emphasize the expressed purpose of the Canadian people to stand fast in this war, as a British people should, until the security of a free world is established.

Sir Wilfrid Today.

(London Advertiser)

Union government finds the country in a more or less receptive mood, under circumstances when a true verdict could not be recorded. Sir Robert Borden has made his future and his fate. Let him face his problems. Are the statesmen of Great Britain not crying out to Canada for unity? Will the Borden policy of conscription produce the men required as reinforcements? The need is for men. The country is behind the Government in an adequate and determined war policy. When the shouting has died away union government will be faced with the most tremendous responsibility that ever came to a Canadian parliament. Sir Wilfrid Laurier will be found to strengthen the hand of the Government in every act calculated to win the war. He is a greater figure today than he has been at any time since he first entered the Canadian Parliament to serve the whole people.

LABOR PROBLEMS IN WAR TIME

When the war broke out England was on the verge of a labor conflict. But on the day after the great war was declared the heads of some of the big unions went to London and declared a truce. They promised not to strike until Germany made peace. Later the understanding between capital and labor was embodied in the so called treasury agreement, and, with certain modifications, was enacted into law in the munitions act.

The munitions act is founded on a bargain. The first difficulty the British government faced was a great shortage of shells and other munitions. There never has been a time, Sir Stephenson Kent said, when the requirements of the army have not risen above the advance estimates. And the shortage of material, combined with raising an army, immediately created a shortage of labor.

Prewar union customs stood in the way of remedying that shortage. Skilled men, in order to protect themselves, had refused to allow the introduction of machine processes which would permit the use of lower paid work[illegible] who did not require so long a tr[illegible]. And, in order to protect the[illegible] of the unions, the labor leader[illegible] had established the closed shop in many plants, so that women and nonunion men could not be brought in.

Prewar customs of employers also threatened disaster. The enormous increase of the demand over the supply of their products enabled them to charge higher prices and gather in big profits, thus hampering the government, raising the cost of living and causing labor trouble. And they also began to entice men from each other's plants by offering higher wages, thus interrupting production, increasing costs, and often leading the scanty supply of skilled men where they were least needed.

The munitions act got the workers and the employers together and eliminated both abuses. It first insured fairness by placing all plants doing necessary war work under the control of the minister of munitions. He could do anything he pleased in the management of these plants. The British flag was raised over them, as a symbol of their national character. The government said to the unions: "You, for your part, agree not to strike. You will let us change processes and bring in all the women and unskilled nonunion laborers that are necessary. If you want higher wages, you will talk it over with us, and accept whatever decision is reached. As a basis for wages, let us begin with the scales now in force in the various districts."

The government then went on to say: "We, for our part, guarantee that all rights of the unions will be restored after the war. We will, furthermore, limit the employer's profits. He may have an average of what he made for the three years before the war, but we will take 86 per cent of anything more than that. We will also limit prices. And three times a year we will look into the cost of living, and grant bonuses to the employes to meet any increases." Of course no profit was guaranteed to the owner, and in some cases no profit is being made.

This bargain has worked excellently. Five hundred disputes are settled to every one that comes to a strike. And strikes almost invariably collapse quickly, not so much because the government has drastic legal power against those who foment them, as because public opinion, in the face of such a fair arrangement, will not tolerate them in the time of national necessity.

TODAY'S STORY

"I can't imagine why you hang around the grocery store all the time, instead of spending your leisure hours at home," said Billingsley. "You have a comfortable home, yet you're seldom there. I don't want to be mistaken for a member of the Buttinski family, but I have known you all your life, and take an interest."

"I suppose I'm a total loss from your point of view," replied Jimalong, "but the truth is that I'm not comfortable at home. It may not seem sportsmanlike to criticize my wife, but if you are to understand the situation, here's the truth.

"If she'd sit with me by the fireside at home and read helpful books or play checkers or discuss the income tax, you'd never see me away from that humble abode. But she's so blamed industrious there's no peace around her. She hardly ever sits down. One cheap chair would last her a thousand years.

"The trouble with people who are frantically industrious is that they simply can't stand it to see their loved ones take it easy. My wife's that way.

"Several old friends like yourself have been hinting to me that I ought to be ashamed of myself for staying away from home so much, and the other day I made up my mind to turn over a new leaf. I'd spend my evenings by the lamp in our vine covered cottage, even if it cost a leg.

"I took home a fascinating volume and when I had eaten my frugal meal sat down to have a good time. My wife came into the room with a broom and began brushing imaginary cobwebs from the ceiling with it. There hasn't been a cobweb on our ceiling since we moved into the house, for my wife manicures it about three times a day. I begged her to let up and give me a chance to read, and she said I was just like all other base, brutal men. My own comfort was all I considered. The house might go to ruin and decay and I wouldn't care.

"Finally she put away the broom and I thought maybe she'd settle down and help me take it easy. But she happened to look out the window and she saw that it was snowing. Then she remembered that some clothes were hanging on the line, and they'd have to be brought in or they'd be ruined. Of course the blamed rags wouldn't be injured staying out all night, but I had to chase out and bring them into the house.

"Then she remembered that various articles were scattered around the yard, and if they weren't brought in they'd be covered eight feet deep and we wouldn't see them again until spring. So I pushed my weary frame around gathering them up, while she held a lantern. This done, she predicted that there would be a big thaw next day, and the cistern wasn't in shape to hold the water. It must be fixed right away.

"It was here that I rebelled, and I ask you, as man to man, if any human husband could stand this sort of thing every evening of his life."

"I doubt it," admitted Billingsley.

LITTLE BENNY'S NOTEBOOK

(By Lee Pape.)

I bawt my Krissmas presents yestidday, being a glass thing to put ashes in for pop wich hes got 2 allreddy ony theyre not glass, and 6 hankerchiff with all diffrent initials on for ma, and a box of mulasses candy for my sister Gladdis, being my favorite kind. And I took them home under my overcoat and started to hunt for a good place to hide them, thinking on top of the medicine chest awt to be a good place.

And I went up in the bathroom and started to climb up on the bathtub to reetch the top of the medicine chest, wich jest then ma came running in, saying, Benny, wat on erth are you doing up there?

Nuthing, jest standing heer, I sed.

I never herd of such a thing, sed ma. And she quick reetched up and took 2 packidges off of the top of the medicine chest and went out with them, me thinking, Gosh, I gess it woodent of bin a good place after all.

And I went downstairs to put them underneeth a lot of things under the seat of the hallrack, wich jest as I was going to who came in but pop, saying, What's the ideer of all this munkeying erround? And he reetched in and took out 3 packidges from under a lot of books and things and went upstairs with them, me thinking, O well, I gess Ill put them way back under the setting room sofer. And I went up and Gladdis was setting there reeding, and I kepp my presents under my coat and started to wait till she went out, and aftir a wile she sed, Youre serteny ackting sispiciously erround heer, Benny Potts. And wat did she do but get up and reetch under the sofer and pull a long packidge out and walk out of the room with it.

Heck, I thawt. And I went down the seller and put them in a corner of the coal bin and dumped 2 shuvvelfulls of coal on top of them, and now every time pop goes down to fix the furnace I follo him to see which side of the coal bin he takes the coal from.

He (in khaki)—I love the smell of powder!

She—Do you really? And don't you think the violet is the best?

"Actually, the story I brought home yesterday made my wife speechless."

"Quick—tell it to me, so I can repeat it to mine."

Mrs. Blunderby said the other day that she understood our soldiers were "pretty nearly all marbleized." This should make them hard fighters.

Clerk (in small town hotel)—Will you have a pitcher of water sent to your room, sir?

Colonel Bluegrass—Water? What for? Ain't there any fire escapes?

Aunt—Do you know you are playing with two very naughty little boys, Johnny?

—Johnny—Yes, auntie.

Aunt—You do. I'm surprised. Why don't you play with good little boys?

Johnny—Because their mothers won't let them.

The railway chairman was explaining his reorganization of the staff and came to Spriggs. The chief shareholder gasped: "Spriggs! What on earth can he do? Why, he is so deaf that he can't hear thunder. What post have you given him?"

"I think you will agree," returned the chairman, stiffly, "that the directors understand their business thoroughly. Mr. Spriggs will attend each day and hear all complaints from passengers."

"Edgar."

"Yes, mother?"

"What are you children doing there?"

"We're playing Royalty. I'm a Knight of the Garter, and Edwin is Saturday."

"Saturday? That's a strange name for Royalty."

"It's just a nickname on account of his title."

"What is his title?"

"Knight of the Bath."

WOMEN'S TRENCH.

We used to think fresh eggs and sugar,
And plain honest milk from the cow,
Were the common and natural items
Of every day's menu, 'somehow.

We used to regard beef and bacon
And bread, made of wheat—brown or white—
As things that you had on your table
At morning, at noon and at night.

But these (and the coal that we cooked with)
Have climbed up a pedestal high,
And we've scarcely a bowing acquaintance
As humbly mere mortals crawl by.

We may have all the fruit cake we fancy,
The fish fairly swim to our door;
Of poultry we're told we may eat till
We simply don't want any more.

But the beef and the bacon and wheat are Recruited to help win the fight.
The sugar and milk are both needed
To nourish the children aright.
Well, we can't all go marching to battle,
But we have a big job here to do,
And the woman who shirks in retrenching
Is a slacker—let's hope it's not you.

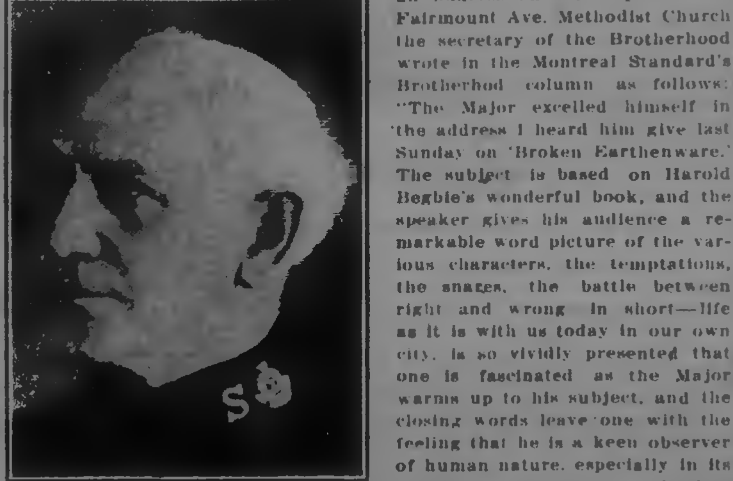
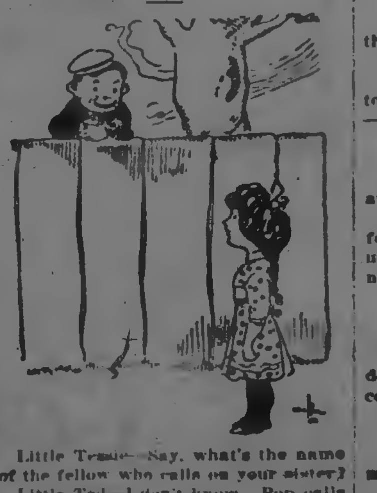
MAJOR SOUTHALL WILL GIVE HIS ADDRESS ON BROKEN EARTHENWARE



After hearing Major Southall give an address on this topic at the Fairmount Ave. Methodist Church the secretary of the Brotherhood wrote in the Montreal Standard's Brotherhod column as follows: "The Major excelled himself in the address I heard him give last Sunday on 'Broken Earthenware.' The subject is based on Harold Begbie's wonderful book, and the speaker gives his audience a remarkable word picture of the various characters, the temptations, the snares, the battle between right and wrong in short—life as it is with us today in our own city, is so vividly presented that one is fascinated as the Major warms up to his subject, and the closing words leave one with the feeling that he is a keen observer of human nature, especially in its unfortunate conditions. 'Broken Earthenware' is a theme that strongly appeals to the writer, as to others, and the effect upon the audience after listening to this address might be summed up as intensely interesting, wonderfully inspiring, beautifully humanizing."

Major Southall will spend the week-end here and will lecture on "Broken Earthenware," by Harold Begbie, at the Temple, Simcoe street, on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. A number of prominent citizens have been invited and will support the chairman, Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P.

DIDN'T LIKE HIM.



Little Tessie—Say, what's the name of the fellow who calls on your sister?

Little Ted—I don't know. Pop calls him something different every time he comes.

Cause for Anxiety.

"How now, Geraldine?"

"I am investigating the conditions that surround poor working girls."

"Their lot is often trying."

"Indeed it is. Why, half of them go to work without chaperons, Clarice."—The Lamb.

Two Sizes Too Large.

Bix—You lost your head completely at the banquet last night.

Dix—That accounts for it, then. I felt sure the head I got on me this morning wasn't mine.—Boston Evening Transcript.

For Sure.

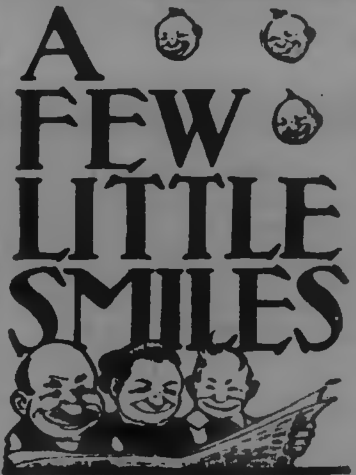
"Is he lazy?"

"He is. He'll go into a revolving door and then wait for somebody to come along and turn it around."

Mean of Him.

Wifey—You used to want to hold my hand before we were married.

Hubby—I'd like to now, but it would keep you from your housework, dear.



A FEW LITTLE SMILES

Common Weakness.

"What have we here?"

"A group of savants have met to discuss the foibles of the human race."

"Well! Well! Incidentally, they are showing themselves not much above the common herd."

"What do you mean?"

"They dropped everything to pose for a newspaper photographer."

Politics as She Is Did.

Political Leader—How does Bump stand?

Henchman—All right, I guess. He belongs to the same political party as we do.

Political Leader—Confound it! That's no sign. Is he with us or against us?—Puck.

Hitting Back.

Wifey—If a man loves his wife as much as she loves him he will stop wasting his money on cigars if she asks him.

Hubby—Yes, but if the wife loves him as much as she ought to love a man who loves her enough to stop if she asks him, she won't ask him.

Great Expectations.

"Great things are expected from him."

"So?"

"Yes. Any number of men expect that some day he will pay back the money he has borrowed."—Detroit Free Press.

An Explanation.

"I wonder what the author meant who talked about silence that speaks."

"I guess he meant that you don't hear when deaf-and-dumb people talk."

Saving Time.

"You seem to agree with everything a man says to you."

"Yes. I learned that trick a long while ago. It saves a lot of time."

AN AMATEUR.

"There," he said, pulling his shirt-sleeves over his brawny arms and surveying the clothes post which had taken him the best part of the Saturday afternoon to fix in the garden; "that's as firm as a rock. Even the combined forces of the elements cannot bring it down."

Later in the day he found the pole on the ground.

"Did you do this?" he roared to his eight-year-old son.

"No, father," was the answer; "a sparrow perched on it. I saw it myself."—London Tit-Bits.

Theatrical Prospects.

We were talking with a theatrical manager the other day about the next season's bookings. "Are you going to give the public what it wants?" asked we.

"Well," quoth he, "we may get some pretty poor stuff, but we're not going to do that bad!"—Akron Times.

Handbag Is Held by Its Weight.

A handbag that holds itself to its wearer's wrist by means of its own weight has been invented by a New York man. The leather handle is fitted with two metal slides on one end of which is a roller. These slides are fitted to the handle straps and are connected by a short piece of leather of the same width as the handle.

When the handle is slipped over the arm the metal slides are pulled up by the weight of the bag so that the handle fits close around the wrist and it is then impossible for the handle to slide over the hand.

BELPED WITH CANTEEN.

Canadian Woman Became Popular With Londoners.

She was a Canadian who had no desire to make her stay in England a burden to the country. So she tackled the largest canteen in London and set about switching her training in dollars and cents to grasp shillings and pence. And, being Canadian, she quickly picked it up. Also, being Canadian and thus unsaddled with the rules and regulations, the constitution and by-laws, of class, she made many friends among the munitioners.

They were a kindly lot, those munitioners, many of them old men and many very young for factory life. To their own people, serving them from behind the counter beside the Canadian, they never presumed to speak beyond the exigencies of the canteen business. An English workingman never speaks to his fellow-countryman superior until he is spoken to. But they soon found that English rules did not apply with the Canadian.

And so they were always on the watch to help her—to carry her water and milk pails, to pull obstacles from her way as she passed through the yards, to ease her duties in the many ways that readily present themselves to a class that has always been the servant. And a distinct rivalry sprang up in these services.

Leaving the booth one day for hot water in one of the shops, several old men waddled up to take her pail. She showed them it was empty, but the first to reach her persisted. The second, with fertile ingenuity, made a place for himself at her other side. "I'll go along with you, miss, he explained, ignoring his fellow-workman on the other side. "It isn't nice for a lady to go through all these furnaces." And as he left her at the booth again, the other old chap toddling along on the other side with the filled pail, he raised his cap. "I hopes you'll be back again, miss," he said. But the making of dates was not part of her work.

There was always dearth of copper change, for the purchases were small and always in odd pence or halfpennies. But the difficulty was solved by the men collecting from the stores all the pennies they could get. The lunches that were carried from the booth had to be wrapped in paper, and the supply often ran short. One day a grouchy old munitioner complained that there was no paper. Whereupon one standing near scurried away and returned with an armful. "I won't give them a chance to get cross with you, miss," he said.

Another time a group of boys was working hard in the shadow of a shop all through the dinner hour. Presently one lad detached himself and came to the booth. "D'ye need any papers to-day?" he inquired anxiously. When she assured him that they were always needed, he beckoned to the group and in a long file they came, each with a pile of paper in his arms cut to the proper size. "We're going to do it every day for you," the boy promised.

Here and there were those with relatives or friends in Canada or the United States. To most of them it was all "America," And they would stand about, munching slowly at their food, to hear the "American" accent so strange to their ears. One day an old fellow, having surreptitiously scrubbed his dirty face with a dirtier handkerchief, opened conversation.

"They tells me you're Canadian, miss. Well, well! I never talked to one before. . . . We all 'ave our peculiarities, don't we? When I go up north they says: 'Aha, you're Cockney.'" He wiped his face once more and grinned at his preliminary conversational success. "I 'ave a brother out there in North Dakota."

"But that's in the United States," corrected the Canadian.

He puzzled over that a moment. Then: "But you're from America?" Seeing something in her expression that promised further mystification, he hastily closed the conversation and fled. "Good-bye, miss. I'm glad I met you."

Now and then an old man opened up to her something of his history. In a moment of confidence he told her why, at his age, he was still working. And it was a real joke to him.

"Me an' my missus 'ad some money left us. So we bought a poultry farm down Eastbourne way. Goin' to make a heap o' money, we was." He chuckled as he swallowed his third cup of tea.

"How did it pay?" inquired the Canadian.

"Miss," he warned solemnly, "if you want to lose money go poultry farmin'. You see, we didn't know nothin' about it, an' we bought on the north-east side of a hill. And the chickens got cold, an' the cows got cold. We might a' been rich if we'd bought on the south-west," He wiped his lips and chuckled again. "O' course, it wasn't so bad as if we'd made that money. . . . Good-bye, miss. It's nice 'avin' a jaw with you."

When the Canadian came to leave the men held a fete about her booth —a silent affair in which they merely spent a lot of money and said nothing. The day was a record one for receipts. Those many thousands of men had gathered to express their appreciation of the Canadian method of treating the workingman.—By Lacey Amy.

GERMANS SHOW WEAKNESS.

Whines for Peace Indicate That They Face Ruin.

We see by German persistence in air raids on England's unfortified towns, in spite of the clear fact that he must know he is thereby merely or mainly destroying our civilian population, that he has made a false estimate of British racial psychology. In his official announcements he continues to ascribe his aerial assaults to military aims, but that is a subterfuge that will not deceive the belligerent nations. It is doubtful if it will deceive the neutral nations, for whom, as well as for the better part of the German peoples themselves, it is plainly intended.

Why should we be afraid of plain speech? Germany, as a nation, is a liar on this subject as on all others. From her thrice-convicted Kaiser to her bloodthirsty professors, who preach the doctrine of sacrifice from their heroic armchairs, she has lied about the objects of her air raids as she has lied about every act of her war. The world has made up its mind that her word is worthless, and history will not waste one hour in examining the platitudinous piety of her long procession of falsehoods. But in this matter of air raid attack there is evidence already that she is growing tired of her own lies, and is making ready to brazen out the brutal truth. Several of her pulpit and hearth-rug warriors are now busily propounding in the German magazines the right to make war on the civilian populations of enemy countries. This is the old doctrine of "frightfulness," disowned at the beginning of hostilities but now burnished afresh in the time of utmost need.

Germany knows she is beaten. She has been beaten on the field since the first days of the battle of the Marne. She also knows she is beaten in the market, and is therefore a ruined country. Her pleas for the "reconciliation of the peoples" (her only hope of economic life in the future) have fallen on deaf ears. Her geographical position shuts her in from the sea—the first medium of national prosperity in days of dense populations and the dependence of nations on each other. Annexations and indemnities, even if she could achieve them would not retrieve the bankruptcy which the nations of the world could impose on her at any moment by vowing, severally, individually, that they will deal with her no more. A conquering nation may impose treaties on a conquered government, but it cannot compel the people to trade with them. Therefore, Germany is running amuck as the general enemy of mankind, in the frantic hope that by terrifying the peoples into peace she may end this war and make them shrink from the danger of provoking another one.

But there lies Germany's greatest blunder. She is judging us, physically and morally, by the standards which apply to herself. The German nervous system is a bad one, liable to panic and collapse from shock and overstrain. Our British nervous system is not so liable. We will make peace when we will—not under threats and intimidation. But the nation which has misunderstood us has thereby revealed its own weakness.—Hall Caine in interview in Lloyd's Magazine.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

GET THIS FOR THE ELDERLY FRIEND

Your father, mother or other elderly friend that you want to please particularly is wearing old style glasses, perhaps. They would appreciate nothing better than a new pair of gold mounts, guaranteed by Dr. Fowler and fitted with the correct "PEBLO" Lenses after Christmas. The cost is quite moderate.

Reading glasses are practically off the market, but Dr. Fowler still has a few good ones at before-the-war prices. They make a good gift.

Office Boy—He might. There's been nobody in today but his wife and a bill collector.

Starved.

Blackton—A poor fellow came to me this morning and said he was starving. I sent him to a restaurant, told him to get a good meal and I'd pay for it.

Johnson—Did he get it?

Blackton—Yes—six glasses of beer and three cigars.

An Undiscovered Best.

"Are you getting well paid for your work?"

"No. That's why I'm not doing my best work. Seems to me nobody ever is willing to pay enough to find out just how good I can be."

KAISER OUTLINES NEW CHRISTMAS PEACE TERMS

Alsace-Lorraine to Settle Our Fate by Vote and England to Pay for Loss of German Colonies.

Washington, Dec. 21.—What purports to be an outline of the Kaiser's much-advertised Christmas peace terms, has reached here through the same neutral diplomatic channels which earlier in the week received information to support intimations from abroad that a new peace offer was coming.

In the main the terms as described, follow the lines of those said to have been written by German Foreign Minister Von Kuehlmann last summer. At that time they were denounced as having been written purely for political purposes.

The so-called terms, which must be appraised only at their face value are said to include the following:

To leave the disposition of Alsace-Lorraine to a plebiscite of the inhabitants.

England to pay Germany for her lost African colonies, and the money to be for the re-habilitation of Belgium, Serbia, Roumania and northern France.

Russian Provinces bordering the Baltic, the Black Sea and Prussia, to become independent under a German plan.

Austria to Hold String.

Poland to be called an independent state under Austrian suzerainty.

Disarmament, freedom of the seas and commerce to be left to the peace conference.

Roumania, Serbia and Montenegro to retain their original boundaries with the right of access to the sea being granted to Serbia.

Turkey to remain intact.

Whether such a proposal of terms is merely another step in the German propaganda to impress the public mind that the allies are responsible for a continuance of the war, or whether it is really a feeler for peace, is a question for consideration of the Governments concerned.

At first glance some are inclined to regard them as the Kaiser's much advertised Christmas peace terms, probably designed in large part to keep the German people under the illusion that they are fighting a really defensive war against foes who insist on the dismemberment of their country

Has Designs in Russia.

There is a very decided impression in competent quarters, however, that Germany, having gained great advantages in Russia, might think it to her advantage to yield to allied demands in many other directions which in the estimate of her own statesmen would strike a balance. This is one of the reasons why some close observers believe an offer of peace coming at this time probably has more real intentions of peace behind it than the previous ones. No one here believes Germany's best terms would be put on the table at the first offering, and those inclined to this view think a proposal of peace now is at least an attempt to start a discussion of terms.

From what may be gained of the war aims of the allied Governments as expressed by their statesman and by President Wilson, such an offering of terms as outlined in the foregoing could not be considered as the basis of a satisfactory peace, although it might contain some of the elements.

WAR CHANGES RITUAL.

Thanksgiving to Supplant Fall of Jerusalem Observance.

New York, Dec. 21.—Dr. Joseph Silverman, speaking before a large congregation at the Temple Emanu-El, Fifth avenue and Forty-third street, said it was gratifying to know that the world war eventually would have a purifying effect.

He added the interesting idea that the solemn Jewish observance for the fall of Jerusalem, which he called the melancholy note in the Jewish ritual, now would be abandoned, in view of the retaking of the city by the British, and that a ceremony of praise and thanksgiving would be substituted.

KAISER OUTLINES NEW CHRISTMAS PEACE TERMS

Alsace-Lorraine to Settle Our Fate by Vote and England to Pay for Loss of German Colonies.

Washington, Dec. 21.—What purports to be an outline of the Kaiser's much-advertised Christmas peace terms, has reached here through the same neutral diplomatic channels which earlier in the week received information to support intimations from abroad that a new peace offer was coming.

In the main the terms as described, follow the lines of those said to have been written by German Foreign Minister Von Kuehlmann last summer. At that time they were denounced as having been written purely for political purposes.

The so-called terms, which must be appraised only at their face value are said to include the following:

To leave the disposition of Alsace-Lorraine to a plebiscite of the inhabitants.

England to pay Germany for her lost African colonies, and the money to be for the re-habilitation of Belgium, Serbia, Roumania and northern France.

Russian Provinces bordering the Baltic, the Black Sea and Prussia, to become independent under a German plan.

Austria to Hold String.

Poland to be called an independent state under Austrian suzerainty.

Disarmament, freedom of the seas and commerce to be left to the peace conference.

Roumania, Serbia and Montenegro to retain their original boundaries with the right of access to the sea being granted to Serbia.

Turkey to remain intact.

Whether such a proposal of terms is merely another step in the German propaganda to impress the public mind that the allies are responsible for a continuance of the war, or whether it is really a feeler for peace, is a question for consideration of the Governments concerned.

At first glance some are inclined to regard them as the Kaiser's much advertised Christmas peace terms, probably designed in large part to keep the German people under the illusion that they are fighting a really defensive war against foes who insist on the dismemberment of their country

Hun Designs in Russia.

There is a very decided impression in competent quarters, however, that Germany, having gained great advantages in Russia, might think it to her advantage to yield to allied demands in many other directions which in the estimate of her own statesmen would strike a balance. This is one of the reasons why some close observers believe an offer of peace coming at this time probably has more real intentions of peace behind it than the previous ones. No one here believes Germany's best terms would be put on the table at the first offering, and those inclined to this view think a proposal of peace now is at least an attempt to start a discussion of terms.

From what may be gained of the war aims of the allied Governments as expressed by their statesmen and by President Wilson, such an offering of terms as outlined in the foregoing could not be considered as the basis of a satisfactory peace, although it might contain some of the elements.

WAR CHANGES RITUAL.

Thanksgiving to Supplant Fall of Jerusalem Observance.

New York, Dec. 21.—Dr. Joseph Silverman, speaking before a large congregation at the Temple Emanu-El, Fifth avenue and Forty-third street, said it was gratifying to know that the world war eventually would have a purifying effect.

He added the interesting idea that the solemn Jewish observance for the fall of Jerusalem, which he called the melancholy note in the Jewish ritual, now would be abandoned, in view of the retaking of the city by the British, and that a ceremony of praise and thanksgiving would be substituted.

CHRISTMAS DINNER FOR WAR TIME

There was never a time in the history of Canada when the people needed to be so careful in their buying and never a time when food was so precious. The relationship between food and money is abnormal. Food today seems more precious than money. But there is a choice even in food. To those who can afford to have turkey or chicken for their Christmas dinner, we say by all means have turkey or chicken! These cannot be shipped overseas, as every foot of cargo space is needed for foods which are of more vital importance.

In a Christmas dinner the experienced housewife knows that good cooking and wise choice can make an acceptable meal, even if the accustomed articles may not appear this year on our table. In the face of the need at the front, and of the world shortage of food which Canada must help to overcome, it would seem to be not only in bad taste, but distinctly unpatriotic to load our tables with food, as has been the custom in other years.

Fruit candies should take the place of beet and cane sugar confections, as far as is possible. Turkish delight, marshmallows and vegetable creams with mashed potato forming the basis of the candy, are wholesome and delicious.

Icing for cakes should be taboo, or, if used at all, should consist merely of a thin plain white coat without almond paste or fancy border. Excellent substitutes might be provided such as nut bread, graham or bran gems with raisins, date corn muffins or other home-made brown breads.

Following is an economical and wholesome dinner menu for Christmas, 1917, in Canada and one the Food Controller would heartily approve:

Roast Chicken or Chicken Potpie.
Bread Crumb Dressing — Giblet Gravy
Mashed Potatoes—Celery
Carrot Pudding—Caramel Sauce
Bran Gems
Candied Orange Peel—Mints.

To make the gravy the giblets are covered with water and allowed to simmer for an hour. Then they are chopped fine. A gravy is made in the pan with four tablespoons each of fat and flour. When these are well blended the water in which the giblets simmered is added and enough boiling water to make two cups. This should be stirred over the fire until well thickened, then seasoned with salt and pepper. Finally the giblets should be added.

The following are the ingredients required for carrot pudding:

1 cup each grated carrot, potato, apple.

1 cup each sugar, chopped suet, seeded raisins.

1½ cups flour.

1 teaspoon each cinnamon, cloves, nutmeg.

1 teaspoon baking soda.

Juice of 1-2 lemon.

Sift together flour, salt, soda and spices and add to grated vegetable, sugar and suet. Add lemon juice last. Put into a well greased mould and steam four hours.

Bran Gems.

One cup bran.
One cup white flour.
One cup milk.
One-quarter cup sugar.
One teaspoon salt.
Four level teaspoons baking powder.
One egg.
One tablespoon melted dripping.

Mix and sift flour, baking powder and salt. Add the bran. Mix sugar, milk, well-beaten egg and melted shortening and combine the two mixtures. Bake in greased gem pans in a hot oven.

Candied Orange Peel.

Remove the peel from thin skinned oranges and cut it in quarters. Then cover with cold water and bring to the boiling point. Cook slowly until it is soft. Drain, remove the white part and cut the yellow rind in thin strips with scissors. Make a thick syrup of one cup sugar and one-half cup water. Boil until it threads. Cook the orange strips in this syrup for five minutes. Drain and roll in granulated sugar

"Three Blind Mice" Up-to-Date

Three nice wives, three nice wives, three nice wives,
See how they smile, see how they smile, see how they smile.
They've bought some hams some groceries and fish
And other good things for the Xmas dish;
They've everything nice the heart could wish,
These three nice wives.

Three nice girls,
See how they run,
They all ran after the same young man
And he jumped into a furniture van
Said, I'm going to Paskin's for a pail of jam,
So chase the girls.

Three nice boys,
Hear how they yell,
They all go whooping and shouting with glee,
We're going for candies and cake you see
The best in the city it's going to be,
So come on boys.

Three nice men,
Hear how they chuckle
The why they're so happy ye'll vera soon ken.
They got all they want, these three merry men
For only five dollars, when they thought 'twould be ten,
At Paskin's Store.

That's where they all come for Xmas supplies. And as a special for the kiddies we are going to give away, absolutely free, a splendid fully dressed, (with a grand assortment of toys) Xmas tree. See our windows for particulars and the tree.

CHRISTMAS CANDIES.

These Christmas candies are simple and dainty:

Brown Sugar Foam.

3 cupfuls light brokn sugar, 1 cupful chopped nutmeats, 1-4 teaspoonful cream-of-tartar, 1 egg-white, 1-2 teaspoonful vanilla, 1 cupful water.

Cook sugar, water, and cream-of-tartar together until a soft ball forms when a small portion is dropped in cold water. Meanwhile beat the egg-white with a fork on a good sized platter till stiff and dry. When mixture is sufficiently cooked, pour very slowly on to the egg-white, beating constantly. When all is added, stir in nuts and vanilla, beat till right consistency to pour into buttered loaf pan. Cut in squares.

Nut Loaf Candy.

4 tablespoonfuls granulated gelatin, 1 cupful mixed fruits, chopped, 1-2 cupful cold water, 2 cupfuls light brown sugar, 1 cupful hot water, 1 1-2 cupfuls mixed broken nut-meats, 1-4 cupful milk, 3-4 cupful cold strong coffee, tablespoonful butter.

Soak the gelatin in the cold water for five minutes and dissolve in the hot water. Let cool until it just begins to form jelly. Then make a fudge. Cook together the sugar, butter, milk, and coffee, until it forms a soft ball when dropped in cold water. Remove from fire, beat till creamy, then beat in nut-meats and the fruit. The former may be a mixture of pecans, peanuts, walnuts, etc., and the latter a mixture of figs, raisins, citron and preserved ginger. Then beat in the gelatin. Now pour into a buttered mold and set in a cold place for several hours, or, still better, two or three days. Cut in strips. Roll in the powdered sugar mixture.

Creamed Potatoes.

Dice one quart of cold boiled potatoes. Heat one pint of milk. Blend together two tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour and add to the potatoes. Add to the hot milk and stir well. Season and boil for five minutes.

Potato Rolls.

Take some cold mashed potatoes, season with salt and pepper, add two teaspoonfuls of butter and the yolks of two eggs. Shape into small rolls, dip in the whites of eggs and then into bread crumbs. Bake in the oven for thirty minutes.

Potato Puff.

Beat two cups of cold mashed potatoes and three tablespoonfuls of melted butter to a cream. Add two well beaten eggs and one cup of milk. Pour in a deep dish and bake in quick oven.

Anglicans Take Lead.

In a statement prepared by the Toronto Newman Club, a prominent Roman Catholic organization, there is set forth the percentage of enlistments according to the population of the various religious denominations of Ontario only. They are based on the 1911 census and the enlistments up to October 1, 1916, which numbered 137,907. The Anglicans, with an enlistment of 74,827, lead all the other denominations. Their percentage is 15 per cent., which is followed by the Presbyterians, who have a percentage of 4.82 and an enlistment of 25,224. Third place is taken by the Roman Catholics, of whom 14,198 entered the army out of a population of 484,997. The Methodists, who occupy fourth place, are shown to have a percentage of 2.69 and 18,070 soldiers. Out of a population of 26,727 the Jews enlisted to the number of 436, which is a percentage of 1.63. The remaining denominations have a percentage of 1.58, and an enlistment of 5,152 out of 232,944.

Inheritance Tax Argument

Inheritance taxes are very heavy. Unlike Fire hazard, they are not merely possible, they are absolutely certain.

They deplete your estate at once, and to your heirs represent a specific and definite loss of money.

In New York a $250,000 estate would pay a combined federal and state tax of about $12,000. If left to a friend or distant relative, about $22,000. The John Jacob Astor estate paid $3,150,000. J. P. Morgan has insured his life for $2,500,000 to cover a similar loss.

Thus the estate is provided promptly with the ready cash to pay this tax and other expenses without the need of hurriedly disposing of securities or other assets, perhaps at a loss, to meet such needs. The logic of the situation urges immediate action. Premium rates, however, low, advance with age, and so does the possibility of entering the physically impaired group and losing the opportunity to secure this protection.

Knowing that this loss is actually coming, it is simple a matter of ordinary business prudence to guard against it. The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada offer you a plan to do so at very low cost.

To Teach Soldiers Farming.

In response to a request made some time ago by the university authorities, the British Columbia Government consented to the granting of a twenty-one-year lease to the University of British Columbia of 290 acres of Government land adjoining the present university holdings at Point Grey, bringing the aggregate holdings of the university there to 550 acres. With this additional land the board of governors of the university will be able to carry out plans already prepared for extension work.

The addition thus given to the holdings devoted to the use of the university will permit of the extension of the work in scientific farming and, in connection therewith it is proposed to give returned soldiers the privilege of courses in agriculture. It is also proposed to give a short course during the winter months for farmers of the province, with special attention to the application of more scientific methods in the agricultural industry of the province.

A Youthful Gardener.

The prize-winner in a potato-growing contest for boys in Ontario recently realized the remarkable yield of four hundred and twenty bushels per acre, making a net profit per acre of thirty-seven pounds.

THE KISS STEALER

He Was Very Adroit In His Thefts

By F. A. MITCHEL

The railroad, like everything else, is a development. The first rails were strap iron on wooden beams. The first car was a stagecoach, then several stagecoaches together mounted on wheels. Then came the passenger car of the present day, only much smaller. When these cars were pulled through a tunnel the passengers were left in total darkness. Indeed, the lighting of railway cars passing through tunnels is a feature of recent years.

When Tom Arnold was about to return to college for his sophomore year he was asked if he would escort a little girl who was going in the same direction to boarding school. Tom didn't like being burdened with the care of a "little girl," but he couldn't very well decline. When he saw his charge he didn't mind taking care of her so much as he had thought he would. Lucy Atwood was fourteen years old, but tall enough for a girl of sixteen. She was very demure and appeared to be utterly devoid of conversational powers. Her protector, having reached the advanced age (to her) of eighteen, probably filled her with such awe as to prevent conversation with him.

But if Miss Atwood was tongue tied she was very pretty. There is nothing more delicate, to a young man especially, than a pair of pink coral lips. Lucy's complexion was as soft and downy as a peach, and her lips were a combination of beautiful curves. Tom couldn't keep his eyes off them. He was young and a sophomore in college, a combination that can occur but once in a man's life. His thoughts, his arguments, therefore were sophomoric:

"I have been burdened with the care of a tongue tied kid without recompense. It behooves me to look out for my own reward. I don't know any payment that would suit me better than just one kiss of those lips. In half an hour we'll get to the tunnel. It requires three minutes for a train to go through it, and one can do a great deal in three minutes."

This was the basis of a plan Tom formed. Before reaching the tunnel he would go into another car, first noting the exact position of his charge. As soon as the train plunged into darkness he would re-enter, make his way to where Lucy sat, take the kiss and retire. Some time after the train had emerged into the light he would go back to his seat, yawn, take up a newspaper and begin to read as if unconscious of anything eventful having happened.

It was a very pretty scheme, but more tempting to a youngster of eighteen than to a full fledged man. There was one thing about it, however, that Tom didn't like. The kid had been placed in his care, and he didn't consider it quite honorable to avail himself of the situation to take what didn't belong to him. But the more criminal the act, the more horror attached to being found out, the more attractive the scheme.

Tom sat looking sideways at those lips, before which every vestige of honor faded. Nevertheless as the train approached the tunnel his courage began to fail him. What an awful thing for him to do! But how nice! Suppose the girl should scream and some one should grab him! The very thought gave him the shivers. But he was at an age when the greater the risk the greater the temptation. He fell, and great was the fall thereof.

He had often been through the tunnel and knew the approaches well. Some ten minutes before the train reached it he told his charge that he would go into the smoking car for a while if she didn't mind sitting alone. She said she didn't, and Tom, having noted that the seat was the third one from the door on the right, left the car. He didn't smoke, fearing that the odor of tobacco would give him away. He sat looking out through a window, a prey to numerous emotions.

When the train entered the tunnel, summoning all his resolution, he hurried into the car he had left and counted the seats on the right by putting a hand on each till he came to the seat required. Folding Lucy in his arms, he took the desired kiss. There was a smothered cry, followed in a few moments by the sound of an opening and closing door, then no other than the rattling of the train.

When daylight came again several passengers who sat near Lucy looked in her direction for an explanation of the cry they had heard. She gave no indication of anything unusual. She was wiping the dust from her face with her handkerchief. She would remove a portion of it, look at the smudge it had made on her handkerchief, then rub off some more, scrutinizing it also, especially in one corner.

Some twenty minutes after the train had left the tunnel Tom Arnold came back and sat down beside his charge. Had Lucy looked him in the face she would surely have seen signs of guilt which, despite his efforts, he was unable to conceal, but she was looking out through the window and did not give him a glance.

Tom was delighted with the success of his scheme. It was not the kiss

MUCH GOOD WORK IS DONE BY THE CHILDRENS' AID

Children to Number of 215 Involved in the Year's Work---Agent Travelled 2000 Miles ---Need for Sewers---Agent Powell Commended.

More than two hundred children were envolved in the work carried on by the Children's Aid Society in the year just closed. More than 2000 miles were covered by officials of the Society in the prosecution of their work in the city and country. The amount of good work accomplished by the Society, as reported to the annual meeting in the City Council Chamber last night was a revelation to the officers, and should be well received by the citizens.

The financial position of the Society is satisfactory, thanks to the generosity of the citizens as a whole, and the generosity of good friends of the Society, who in their wills made bequests to help in carrying on the work in behalf of neglected children. The legacy left by the late Robert Fife, reference to which is made in the Secretary's report, includes a mortgage for $2700, which matures in three years. It is now drawing 3 percent interest.

It must be remembered however that the Society requires about $4,000 a year.

One of the needs of the work is the assistance of women in the matter of sewing for the children at the Shelter. At the present time several women are doing the work.

The Officers.

Hon. President, the Mayor of the City, President, Mr. E. A. Peck, first vice-president, Mrs. Birdsall, second vice-president, Rev. Father Phelan, secretary, Mr. Joseph Wearing, treasurer, Mr. W. H. Walkey, ex-officio members, the Warden of the County and the President of the Ministerial Association.

The executive committee is made up as follows: Mr. C. H. Pennefather, Mr. R. H. Parsons, Adjutant McElhiney, Mr. J. Edgar, Dr. D. C. King, Honorary Physician, Dr. J. E. Middleton, Honorary Dentist, Chief Thompson, Mr. H. B. Cowan, Rev. Father Phelan, Mr. George Cochrane, Mrs. (Dr.) King, Mrs. C. Graham, Mrs. Gibbs, Mrs. W. Stocker, Mrs. Walter Evans, Mrs. W. J. Hopwood, Mrs. J. A. McElhiney, Mrs. W. A. Sanderson, Mrs. G. A. MacDonald, Mrs. C. Rutherford, Miss Hurley, Mrs. Knox and Mrs. Meldrum.

Permanent Fund of $6200.

In his report Mr. E. A. Peck, the president, paid tribute to the work accomplished by the agent, the secretary solicitor, the treasurer, the matron, and the ladies who held regular meetings to sew for the children at the Shelter.

"The problem of the neglected child," said Mr. Peck, "should be kept always prominently before the public and constant effort put forth to deal with the causes which tend to make the neglect of children possible. Many of the cases arising are due to intemperance of parents, immorality, want of educational facilities, want of proper housing facilities. To some extent legislation and law enforcement may assist in eradicating these causes but the problem will never be fully solved, and must always demand vigilant attention.

"The passage and enforcement of the Ontario Temperance Act should ultimately prove a considerable factor in assisting the cause.

"It is gratifying to note the interest taken in the work of this County and which has shown itself in part by the contributions made to the funds of the Society. The permanent fund (from which the interest only is taken for the work) now representing $6200.

Balance of $1256.55.

The statement of receipts and disbursements was presented by the treasurer, Mr. Horace Walkey, as follows:

One Sad Case.

One of the saddest cases, reported by Agent Powell, was that of a small girl who had got away from his supervision, and was now in Toronto in bad environment. The officials of the Society had been unable to locate the girl.

A Bright Ward.

A bright spot in the work was the performance of a ward of the Society who at the age of eleven passed his entrance examinations.

Mr. Powell advocated dental treatment on children before they left the Shelter.

Children in Shelter on December 1st, 1917, eight.

Mr. C. H. Pennefather complimented Mr Powell on his report.

"It's too bad the citizens don't pay more attention to what is being done at the Shelter," said Mr. Walter Stocker. "If they were to see what is going on, the citizens would appreciate the work more."

"That's the best report we've had yet," remarked Mr. Stocker.

"We should try and interest the churches and get more assistance from them," said Mrs. Hopwood, after speaking in complimentary terms of the agent's work.

Joseph Wearing's Report.

The former agent, Mr. C. A. G. Spence, decided to resign in the month of May and Mr. George W. Powell was appointed in his place. A good deal of satisfactory pioneer work was done by Mr. Spence and this has been continued by Mr. Powell. Since his appointment Mr. Powell has shown himself indefatigable in his work and wise in his dealings both with children and their parents.

Mrs. Mary Read has continued to discharge her duties as Matron of the Children's Shelter throughout the year with the utmost degree of capability and has undoubtedly saved the Society a good many dollars by her diligence and economy. The children who have been in the shelter during the year have received the greatest care and solicitude.

Admittance of Children.

It was felt in the spring by the members of the Executive that the rules and regulations governing the admittance of children to the Shelter should be modified and systematized. A committee was appointed consisting of E. A. Peck, Rev. R. G. Peever, J. E. L. Goodwill, Joseph Wearing, Mrs. Walter Stocker, and Mrs. W. H. Gibbs and the resolutions submitted by this committee were unanimously adopted. One of the resolutions was that the Agent shall employ all possible means in co-operation with the Executive and other persons interested to persuade those in charge of neglected children to make conditions satisfactory and that children shall only be removed as a last resort. Another resolution was that while the Children's Shelter is not a foundling home or a boarding house it is to be understood that each case of a neglected child shall be decided on its merits irrespective of age.

Finances Satisfactory.

The finances of the Society are in a very satisfactory condition. During the year the Society received the sum of $500 from the estate of the late Dr. George Burnham, and $3,868.61 from the estate of the late Robert Fife. This money is invested in trust and the interest only will be used for current expenses.

A good deal of thanks is due to the ladies of the city who have worked unremittingly at the Shelter throughout the year and especially to Mesdames Gibbs, Stocker, Evans and Howard. A number of other ladies of the city have also been generous enough to do sewing and knitting at their homes in the interests of the children.

The Society also owes a good deal to Dr. D. C. King, who has given professional services and medicine free to the children at the Shelter throughout the year. In this must be included Drs. Scott, Morgan, Hammond and Buchanan who assisted Dr. King from time to time in slight operations on the children.

The Society is also very greatly indebted to Mrs. Knox and the ladies associated with her for the invaluable services which were rendered on Tag Day and also to the clerks of the different banks.

The members of the Royal Arthur Masonic Lodge attended the Shelter in a body last Christmas morning and made the hearts of the children glad by presents which they took along with them. There will be a number of children in the Shelter this Christmas and it is hoped that they will be again remembered by their friends among the citizens.

J. J. Turner & Sons have also been very kind in opening their opera house to the children during the year and St. John's Church and the Salvation Army were each good enough to invite the children of the Shelter to their annual Sunday School picnic.

Personally I wish to thank the President, Mr. E. A. Peck, and the Vice-President, Father Phelan, for the hearty assistance which they have given to me throughout the year.

Followed by Hoodoo.

Private I. H. Ferguson, of the 172nd Canadian Battalion, who afterwards transferred to the 54th and went to France, is not sure whether he is a lucky man or not. He was wounded at Vimy Ridge in April, and on proceeding to the base to be shipped to "Blighty" his train jumped the track. He received no further injuries, but was taken to the hospital at Etaples, where he was delayed for six weeks. The hospital ship which he should have caught but for the railroad accident, was torpedoed. He was sent back to the line again, and on receiving word of his wife's death in Canada, was granted furlough on compassionate grounds. When about to sail for Canada, he found that he could not proceed because he had insufficient funds to pay for his return passage. He cabled home for money, but before it arrived, a sailing took place, and the private was returned to his base. Ferguson is wondering if he is being followed by a "Hoodoo," or if his guardian angel is delaying him for a safe passage to his home in Kelowna, B.C.

Synopsis of Canadian Northwest Land Regulations

The sole head of a family or any male over 18 years old, who was at the commencement of the present war, and has since continued to be, a British subject or a subject of an allied or neutral country, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion Land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for District. Entry by proxy may be made on certain conditions. Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of land in each of three years.

In certain districts a homesteader may secure an adjoining quarter-section as pre-emption. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Reside six months in each of three years after earning homestead patent and cultivate 50 acres extra. May obtain pre-emption patent as soon as homestead patent on certain conditions.

A settler after obtaining homestead patent, if he cannot serve a pre-emption, may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

Holders of entries may count time of employment as farm laborers in Canada during 1917, as residence duties under certain conditions.

When Dominion Lands are advertised or posted for entry, returned soldiers who have served overseas and have been honorably discharged, receive one day priority in applying for entry at local Agent's Office (but not Sub-Agency). Discharge papers must be presented to Agent.

HUN CONSPIRATORS ARE GIVEN MAXIMUM SENTENCE AT DETROIT

Used United States as Base to Carry Out Plot Against Canada---Friendly Relatious of Two Countries is Demonstrated.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Detroit, Dec. 22.—Albert C. Kaltschmidt, who, with four others, was convicted in the federal court early this morning on a conspiracy charge, was sentenced to four years in the federal prison at Fort Leavenworth and to pay a fine of $20,000. It was the maximum sentence possible under the law for conviction under the three counts against him.

Mrs. Ida Neef, his sister, was sentenced to three years in the local house of correction and fined $15,000. Fritz Neef, her husband, and Karl Schmidt and his wife, Maria, were sentenced to two years at Fort Leavenworth and fined $10,000 each.

Franz Reepa, aged 70, a German, was the only one of the six acquitted on all three counts. He was held, however, to answer to two other indictments pending against him.

The trial came to an end at 3:30 this morning after a session of the court lasting since early Friday forenoon. The jury was out more than thirteen hours, several times asking additional instructions from the court.

In passing sentence Judge Arthur Tuttle pointed out that the statute under which the defendants were convicted was framed by Congress during peace times, and therefore it was not possible to impose heavier penalties.

Karl Schmidt, in addressing the court before sentence was passed, expressed his appreciation of the fair treatment accorded him. The counts on which Schmidt was convicted charged him with the setting on foot in the United States of a military enterprise against Canada, a conspiracy to dynamite the Detroit Screw Works and a plot to destroy the St. Clair River tunnel at Port Huron.

Str- Runs on Rocks in Fog This Morning

Judge Lavell at Kingston appeal tribunal said many farmers are doing nothing to increase production and are simply profiteering.

GERMAN PAPER SAYS MASSES ARE LITERALLY STARVING TO DEATH

Rich Are Living in Plenty it Adds—Forty Million in Want May Rise Against Powers and Germany Lose the War.

London, Dec. 22.—According to a Reuter's despatch from Amsterdam the Vorwaerts of Berlin, in a plain spoken attack on system of Herr Von Waldow, the German food controller, declares the great masses of German people not only are hungry but are literally starving. The paper adds that agricultural producers and rich residents in towns are living in plenty as hoarding is no longer prohibited.

Every war profiteer and millionaire, says the paper, has his kitchen and cellar full of ham and bacon. The middle class makes a precarious existence, spending all it possesses on food, but forty millions of the masses are starving and are unlikely to sit silent. We might have within a month an absolute catastrophe in Germany and a collapse even worse than Russia, resulting in German defeat and the loss of the war.

AIR TIGHT PROHIBITION IS DECREED BY UNION CABINET

No Importation After Monday and no Shipments to Dry Provinces After April 1.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Dec. 22.— After Monday next the importation of liquor into Canada will be prohibited, and after April 1 shipment of liquor from wet provinces to dry provinces in Canada will also be forbidden.

This is the official announcement made by Sir Robert Borden this afternoon. An order in council to this effect has been passed as a war measure. It is also announced that the manufacture of liquor in Canada will be prohibited after a date to be named. The latter order affects all beverages containing more than 2½ per cent. alcohol.

FIRST CALL TO COLORS JAN. 3

NOTICES WILL BE RECEIVED BY ELIGIBLE MEN IN A FEW DAYS.

Ottawa, Dec. 22.—Men called to the colors on January 3 as the first draft under the Military Service Act will receive their notices within the next few days. Instructions have been issued by the Military Service Council to the registrars in all military districts other than District No. 6 (Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island) to issue notice immediately to the men now available for service. Men will report for duty to the depot battalions as directed by the notice.

As many men as the district headquarters can handle will be summoned for January 3 and the balance day by day in such numbers as convenience may dictate. The number thus called up will be considerably in excess of 15,000. Under existing conditions the publication of the exact number of troops about to be trained in Canada for service overseas, or of the strength and composition, by stations, of units and detachments, is not regarded as advisable from a military point of view.

Anti-Conscriptionists Far in the Lead

Melbourne, Australia, Dec. 22 (via Reuter's Ottawa agency).—The latest referendum figures are: Against conscription, 922,000; for conscription, 749,000. The figures are not yet complete.

CAPT. BURNHAM'S MAJORITY IS 2350

Capt. J. H. Burnham's majority in the election on Monday was 2350. Sheriff Hall made the official report this afternoon.

The vote was: Burnham, 5221, Hall 2871.

Unionist Member Congratulated On His Stand At Election

Speaking with The Review today, Mr. Burnham, the Unionist member, remarked that he had received so many congratulations on his statement at the Opera House that he had not considered it necessary to hold meetings in the townships, as the question at issue was one of loyalty to the Empire and to the boys at the front, as the Unionists saw it, and hence it was not necessary to remind the farmers of their duty.

"Today," said Mr. Burnham, "I can go farther and say that I did not ask by word of mouth a single elector for his or her vote. If my over-anxious organization had known that fact, in addition to the meetingless one, they would have probably had a fit. But I could not bring myself to intrude my insignificant personality in this all-important matter of supporting the lads at the front. Women do not need any canvassing, and are not so silly as to wear their votes upon their sleeves for candidates to have for the asking. They know what they want and will not take anything else. The storm has passed, and left Quebec and some others in anything but splendid isolation. But Canada's heart is true to the core. We stand proud of the praise of the whole world. The newspapers of the United States cannot speak too highly of our courage at home as well as in the field. We had a great cause, and tried not to spoil it."

Will Run Again

T. F. MATTHEWS

Mr. T. F. Matthews, who has for the past sixteen years been a member of what is now known as the Utilities Commission, will again be a candidate at the coming election. Mr. Matthews does not feel like giving up the position now when there are matters of so much importance to come before the Commission. These include a filtration plant for the water system, the establishing of an electric sub-station and the improvement and extension of the hydro system in this district.

During his entire sixteen years of service, Mr. Matthews has filled the position as chairman of first the water board, and then of its successor, the Utilities Sommission.

CITY OF NAPLES REACHES PORT

BRITISH STEAMER NOT SUNK BY SUBMARINE AS REPORTED.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

An Atlantic Port, Dec. 22. — The British steamship City of Naples, reported a few days ago to have been sunk by a submarine torepdo off the British coast while under convoy of destroyers, arrived here today. It was learned that the vessel was not attacked by a U-boat, but struck a mine, and her officers, fearing she was seriously damaged, put back to a British port. A re-examination of the hull proved the effect of the explosion was negligible and the ship resumed her voyage.

An American vessel which was in the same convoy as the City of Naples, brought the story of the British ship's supposed sinking. The accident occurred on December 5 when the fleet was five days out from port.

ALL IS QUIET ON BRITISH FRONT

HOSTILE RAIDING PARTIES REPULSED— FRENCH AND ITALIAN SUCCESSES.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Dec. 22.—The lull on the British front continues. German raids at several points last night are the only activities reported in today's official communication. It follows: "Hostile raiding parties were repulsed during the night in the neighborhood of the Bapaume-Cambrai road east of Monchy le Preux and south-east of Armentieres. There is nothing further of special interest to report."

FRENCH WIN RAID.

Paris, Dec. 22.—There was lively artillery fighting last night in the region of Fayet, near St. Quentin, and in the Verdun region, around Beaumont and the Chaume wood, as well as in the Apremont wood sector. A successful raid was carried out by French troops near Moronvillers, in Champagne.

ITALIANS MAKE PROGRESS.

Rome, Dec. 22. — Italian forces in the region of Monte Asoline, on the northern Italian front yesterday, made further progress after lively fighting, in spite of adverse atmospheric conditions, it was officially announced today by the Italian war office. A hostile counter-attack was immediately repulsed.

PICKPOCKET IS GIVEN PRISON

David Walsh, convicted of pocket-picking at Millbrook, was sentenced to serve twelve months in prison, by Judge Ward at Cobourg. Walsh has been convicted fourteen times for pocket-picking and larceny and once for throwing a stone through the window of a railway coach here. Walsh is said to be a pal of Charles Grant, arrested here by Detective Newhall, and whose trial at Cobourg is pending.

MAYOR S SERVICES APPRECIATED BY COLLEAGUES, AND RECORDED

His Able, Fair, Discreet and Markedly Efficient Discharge of Duties Recognized by Citizens in General.

The city's aldermen last night placed on record their appreciation of retiring Mayor Duffus in the following resolution:

Moved by Ald. Duncan, seconded by Ald. Smith, that this council of the municipality of the City of Peterborough desires to place on record, by entry in the official minutes of proceeding its appreciation of the services given to the city, to and through the Council, by the retiring Mayor, Jos. J. Duffus.

This council has noticed and approved, and such appreciation has been most heartily concurred in by citizens, of the able, fair, discreet and markedly efficient manner in which the duties of the high office have been discharged. The incumbent of the Civic Chair has been at all times courteous and attentive and has outside of civic duties, been most painstaking in doing everything that could be done to assist and oblige.

The sittings of the Council and of the several committees have ever been harmonious during the last two years, a most desirable thing and one due to personal qualities of tact, good sense and a high regard for the dignity and efficiency of the civic body as exemplified in the ability of the chair and a decision that no friction would be permitted that personal appeal could set aside.

It is not permitted in such a resolution as this to specify but only to indicate in general, what has been accomplished, but to note that at all times the interests of the city, in execution and in forecast for the future, in anticipation of needs to come as well as matters to be done, the Civic Chair has always been conspicuous for its good sense, fair grasp of affairs and adherence to that reasonable economy of administration that makes for the best service.

That the members of this Council offer to the retiring Mayor sincere congratulations that his term of office has been approved by the public at large, that of the long roll of Civic Chiefs his record stands as one of the very best and conspicuous among that of many who have served before. And that this Council recognizes that no man who ascends the municipal platform ever attains the ideals with which he began his term of office, that the retiring Mayor may carry with him the satisfaction of having served well and faithfully, but with a cheerful sense that the true citizen is he who is willing to make the sacrifice of time and thought and care for the benefit of the city in which he lives, and whose progress and welfare he is most solicitous to forward and guard.

Peterborough, December 21st, 1917.

Aldermanic Banquets.

Talking to the resolution the aldermen punctuated the atmosphere with showers of appreciation of his worships two years' services, and regret that he could not see his way clear to accept a third term.

City Clerk Armstrong put the resolution and asked for a standing vote, which was unanimously accorded.

His worship replied in graceful and fitting terms. He appreciated the pleasant harmonious and satisfactory manner in which the city's work had been conducted during his regime, and regretted that business calls would not permit him to consider a third term in response to pressure by many citizens.

DEATH OF MR. JOHN YOUNG REEVE OF ENNISMORE

Spent Lifetime in the Township and He Served it Well.

Mr. John Young, reeve of Ennismore, died this morning at his residence, Lot 7, Concession 6, Ennismore, after a short illness, aged 64. The late Mr. Young had been a lifelong resident of the township, and he had served on the municipal council as councillor, and the present year as reeve, always giving earnest and faithful service as a representative of the people. Mr. Young made many friends, not alone in the township, but throughout the county of Peterborough, and all will join with The Review in extending condolences to the widow and family.

Four sons are: Francis, John and Michael, at home, and Cecil, at the Ontario Dental College, Toronto. The daughters are: Mrs. Wm. Young and Mrs. Francis Cavanagh of Ennismore, Miss Clara Young, teacher in the high school, Ennismore, Monica and Bernadine, at home, and Anna, of Detroit. The brothers are Frank and Samuel, Ennismore, and Patrick, Minneapolis. Mrs. Cornelius O'Connor of Ennismore and Mrs. Maurice Gallivan, in Western Canada, are sisters.

OFFICERS HOME FROM OVERSEAS

Lieut.-Col. T. W. H. Young, Major S. T. Medd and Capt. Vivian Lancaster returned to Peterborough, from overseas today, and were accorded a warm welcome by the citizens.

They were met at the station by Mayor Duffus, Ald. Stratton, Ald. Duncan and City Clerk Armstrong.

The time of Major the Rev. J. C. Davidson's return to Peterborough is indefinite.

Another arrest was made in New York in connection with the plot to place bombs on a British steamer.

Warden Max Brown expressed deep regret today on learning of Reeve Young's death. "Mr. Young was a very fine type of man and his loss will be keenly felt by all the members of the Council," said the Warden, who added that he would endeavor to attend the funeral.

The funeral will be held Monday morning at 9 o'clock to St. Martin's Church and St. Martin's cemetery, Ennismore.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 22, 1917

THE HEALTH ASSOCIATION.

THERE IS NO organization in the city engaged in a worthier work than the Peterborough Health Association. Not only are the beneficiaries of that society personally benefited, but the welfare of the general public is safeguarded every time a patient is cared for.

The association depends almost entirely upon voluntary subscriptions for funds. They are entitled to generous support, and will receive it in proportion to the spread of knowledge of what they are doing. An "at-home" will be held next Friday afternoon and evening. The proceeds of this affair are to be devoted to paying for the expenses of a little girl who is being treated with success at the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto. Let all help, for the object is worthy.

PALESTINE AND THE JEWS.

SPEAKING OF the capture of Jerusalem by General Allenby the Guelph Herald says that Britain favors the establishment of Palestine as a national home for the Jewish people, and the London Jewish Chronicle rejoices that at last after two thousand years of wandering, the Jews are to become a nation instead of a hyphenation. But, one wonders, how many of the Jews, scattered throughout the world, will seize their opportunity when offered, and take up their residence in the land of their fathers.

Will the thousands of Jews in the United States, for instance, leave that country and their business there in order to remove to the East and recommence life among their own people and co-religionists? Will the younger generation be inclined to help in the establishment of the nation? It appears doubtful. Russian Jews, Polish Jews, German Jews, etc., may be expected to welcome the chance to unite again in a land where freedom from oppression will be guaranteed by the victorious democracy of the world. Many of these are farmers and agriculturists and will see great possibilities in the old-new land. They will no longer be in fear of vindictive risings against them and the terrorism of other peoples.

For many years there has been urged the right of the Jews to have and own a country. Now there is every probability of this desire being granted. There should be gratification in the heart of every member of the race, but it is quite likely that, the wish being granted, it will not appear so desirable. Having established themselves in Britain, the United States, Canada and other lands, and having matched successfully their wits against those of these peoples, many will not care to confine themselves mainly to dealing with their own people.

Theoretically, the Jewish nation once more at home in its own land is a beautiful idea. Whether it will prove any great advantage to the people as a whole is not certain.

The Jewish race have kept themselves apart from the other branches of the human family. They have cherished all these centuries the hope that the Holy Land would be restored to them and that they would hold it again as a free and independent nation. It is too much to suppose that the Jews will be satisfied with a republic or content to be regarded as a colony of any other power. They feel that their history cannot be worked out according to prophecy except as a kingdom with a direct descendant of the House of David as a ruler.

The conversion of the Jews to the Christian faith is another question. They have held to their own creed steadfastly for over two thousand years, and any change that may be effected is likely to be slow.

AS TO GOOD ROADS.

COUNTY CLERK ELLIOTT'S discussion of the good roads problem at the meeting of the United Farmers in Toronto, brings up the truth that just as a chain is as strong as its weakest link, so is a highway as passable as its steepest hill. It is the up-grade, not the surface of the road, that determines the hauling power of the horses. There are hills in Peterborough County that will always regulate the weight of the farmer's load to market, no matter what the other conditions may be.

BEER AND THE GERMAN.

REGINALD ALDWORTH DALY, professor of geology in Harvard University, writing in the New York Times (a paper not exhibiting any special prejudice in favor of prohibition, but, on the contrary, its talk about drink has been unfriendly towards total abstinence and hostile to prohibition), named some of the acts of German officials since the war began, and suggested that mild, eternal intoxication is a partial but very real explanation of those unforgettable crimes.

He quotes Kraepelin, perhaps the greatest authority on the effects of German beer, as showing that there is no qualitative difference in the physiological effects of beer and spirits so far as the alcohol contents are concerned. Persistent use of beer, a four per cent. solution of alcohol, like whiskey, a fifty per cent. solution, produces a loss of self-control, and he declares that "a man who drinks beer even quite moderately is never quite sober."

While the effects of steady beer drinking are not as striking as in the case of persons poisoned with whiskey, rum, or absinthe, yet he ventures the hypothesis that lifelong drinking of mild beer has been one of the more potent causes for the amazing brutalities of official Germany.

"The Germanic peoples are the only group who feed alcohol to the babies or very young children of the middle and upper classes...... The child grows to manhood drinking alcohol and continually handicapped in his development of cerebral, and therefore moral, control. On the other hand, nearly all the alcohol drunk in France and England is consumed after the formative years of childhood are past, distinctly lessening the danger of permanent cerebral degeneration. The war policy of France and England is being controlled by men who have not been at all poisoned by alcohol, or at least have been less poisoned than many prominent German officials who, day in and day out, are kept irritable by the national drink."

Admitting that other factors enter into the fearful problem, Professor Daly urges that "some part of its solution may be found in the relations of chronic alcoholism to the human soul," and closes his remarkable article by asking, "Was the great Von Moltke right when he said, 'Beer is a far more dangerous enemy to Germany than all the armies of France'?"

WHO ARE THE LIBERALS?

SIX OF THE NINE provinces in the Dominion have supported Union Government. In these provinces only a small fraction of the liberal party opposed that Government. The men who have been elected in Quebec, in Nova Scotia and in Prince Edward Island have no right to call themselves Liberals. The best Liberalism in the country is behind the eight men who represent that party in the new Administration. The followers of Sir Wilfrid Laurier are Laurierites and opportunists. They certainly have no claim on the designation of the party which they have deserted.

FARMERS TO WIN THE WAR.

"UPON THE FARMER rests in large measure the final responsibility of winning the war in which we are now involved," says the Birmingham (Ala.) Sentinel, "therefore, the man who tills the soil and supports the soldier in the field and the family at home is rendering as noble and patriotic a service as the man who bears the brunt of battle."

This is the year when everyone who has to do with the growing of crops should do everything possible to get the largest crops. Ground should be plowed as soon as possible in the early spring. Stable manure and fertilizers should be used, good seed planted and the crops carefully tended.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

ONLY ONE MORE DAY for that shopping.

• • • •

GERMANY'S FEELERS for peace are no doubt aid and comfort to the man who was denied exemption.

• • • •

THESE MAY BE dark war days, but we have that familiar proverb left, and it seldom fails to work out.

• • • •

THE TORONTO WOMEN who have decided to pay no more than 35 cents a pound for Christmas turkey no doubt have provided themselves with a substitute.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

Gabriel Haas True Son of Canada.

(Toronto Telegram.)

A recent issue of the Walkerton Herald carried a picture of "Private Gabriel Haas, killed in action." The face that looked out from the printed page was as Teutonic in outline as the name of the young Canadian infantryman. The picture of Private Gabriel Haas and many another soldier of German origin shines in a splendor of sacrifice above the shame of the pro-Laurier voters in Waterloo Co., Perth Co., and other centres of Ontario.

By no possibility can Premier Borden's acknowledgments to the loyal press of both parties be extended to the London Advertiser. That rabid Grit organ can never see over the rim of the partisan bog in which it is ever hopelessly mired. It has a fitting counterpart in the Quebec Telegraph, but the latter has not the educative influence of patriotic citizenship around it, like its Ontario contemporary has.

(Guelph Herald.)

An attempt was made to stampede the electors with food profiteers, war purchase scandals, and the like, but the people did some thoughtful stocktaking and decided that Premier Borden was the man to be trusted in continuing to lead Canada in war times. Now let us all rally round him and the Union Government, and continue to earn by action the admiration that our position has evoked.

HOW TO AVOID PNEUMONIA

There is nothing especially unusual or alarming in the increase of deaths from pneumonia at the beginning of cold weather, but there is something actively helpful in the official recognition that pneumonia is an infectious disease, says the St. Thomas Times.

The way to escape infectious disease is to keep out of the path of its germs. In the case of pneumonia that is not possible for most people, but when the danger of infection is fully recognized it is possible to avoid, to a greater extent than most of us attempt, contact with people who sneeze and cough. The next precaution is to keep the body in condition so that it will resist germs of all diseases. Chills give to pneumonia germs their best chance to take hold, and most of us can be more careful to avoid chills than we care. Warm clothing is one method of protection, but that does not mean clothing so heavy as to start perspiration when one is in a heated building. Passing out of doors in that condition is almost certain to produce a chill if the day happens to be raw. For indoor livers and workers, light, absorbent clothing sufficient for their normal occupations is best, with good, warm wraps for protection when they go out of doors. Baths, and exercise which keep the skin and the other excretory mediums in good condition are also admirable means of protection.

But perhaps more important than anything is not to get frightened over an "epidemic" of pneumonia. Fear tends to paralyze the normal protective functions of the body and to leave its victims easy prey for all the diseases that fly. There is an old fable of a plague that was permitted to enter a city on condition that it would slay only 10,000. The resultant deaths reached 100,000, and when the personified plague was reproached, he replied: "I slew only 10,000. Fear slew the rest." When pneumonia is about, keep warm, but also keep cool. Do not get either chilled or frightened. In either condition you become an ideal germ-catcher.

PALESTINE TO BE A REPUBLIC

The Rev. Dr. W. C. Endly of Cleveland, an authority on archaeology, who has visited the Holy Land in connection with biblical research, told the congregation of the Madison Avenue Methodist Church in New York, when speaking on the subject of British captures in Palestine that it is held that in Jerusalem is to be found within the next few years such wealth of information concerning Jesus Christ as the world has ever possessed. He was most optimistic over the effect of new information about the Scriptures and about the founding of Christianity upon the future of the world.

The Rev. Dr. Fred Winslow Adams in St Paul's Church, West End avenue; the Rev. Dr. Edgar W. Work in the Fourth Presbyterian Church and the Rev. Dr. Charles L. Slattery in Grace Church were among those who spoke on the subject. At Grace Church hymns were sung bearing on the regaining of Jerusalem and the service was of the nature of a thanksgiving that Palestine again is in Christian hands.

"The Turkish Government has permitted practically no excavations and research in Jerusalem," said Dr. Endly in his discourse, "and at least sixty feet of accumulation now covers the Jerusalem of our Lord. At Scheckem, at Bethlehem and Nazareth, and indeed in many other points, those who know whereof they affirm are sure the richest of new information is to be discovered. Such discoveries will be made as the world has never seen. Hardly will the war end before these studies will start. The Christian world is impatient even now to begin.

"The Palestine of the future will be a republic, I think. It will be under British protection, and perhaps America will have a part in it. I hope we will. What I know of American Jews, especially here in New York, leads me to believe that Zionism expressed in Palestine will be liberal and progressive.

"Palestine is a possession of the world. It cannot longer be permitted to remain a sealed book. It must become such educational centre, such travel centre as the world commands nowhere else. Under enlightened rule the fertile land will again blossom. It can support millions, properly tilled. Railroad and trolley lines must network the territory. Historic spots must be discovered, correctly located and then placarded so that tourists are not deceived.

"A modern State must be brought into being. If the people are Protestant in any numbers there must be Protestant churches. Disgraceful quarrels between Islam and Catholic religious leaders must cease. There must be plenty of good hotels and some manufactories introduced. All of these things will come under British rule, or under British and American guarantees and republican rule."

Wit and Wisdom

Bessie Has an Idea.

Even our little tots weave war words into their talk. Bessie's aunt was a very obese lady, a fact which put an idea into the child's busy brain. She began by questioning her aunt about heaven and what folks did when they went there. Finally she said: "Well, auntie, I'll bet when you die and get wings and fly all about folks will think you're a Zeppelin."

"Dear me!" exclaimed young Mrs. Torkins. "Wouldn't ordinary coal have been a little cheaper?"

Not Much In It.

An old South Carolina darky was sent to the hospital at St. Xavier in Charleston. One of the gentle black-robed sisters put a thermometer in his mouth to take his temperature. Presently, when the doctor made his rounds, he said:

"Well, Nathan, how do you feel?"

"I feel right tol'ble, boss."

"Have you had any nourishment?"

"Yassir."

"What did you have?"

"A lady done gimme a piece of glass to suck, boss."

LITTLE BENNY'S NOTEBOOK

(By Lee Pape.)

Pop went out to buy a Krissmas tree last nite, me going with him to show him ware men was selling them on the street, the ferst place being rite erround the corner, a little man in a red sweller standing alongside of a lot of Krissmas trees leening against the wall, pop saying to him, Good eevning, Id like a fair sized tree if you have one to sell at a reesonable price.

Heers a nice one for ony 5 dollers, speshil rate seeing its you, sed the little man.

Perhaps you misunderstood me, sed pop. I jest wunt one tree, not haff a duzzin, wat are you enyway, a tree seller or a pirate?

Thats all rite wat I am, the tree is 6 dollers now insted of 5, and if you dont like that you can lump it, and if you dont take it you can leeve it, sed the little man.

I wodent buy a tree from you for 6 sents, said pop. And we kepp on wawking, me taking him to another place ware a long skinnie man was selling them, pop saying to him, Good eevning, wats your cheepist rate in good size trees?

You can have this one for $7, sed the man.

Wats it made of, radium? sed pop. And we kepp on going and I took him to ware a man with a red nose and a red mushtash was selling them, being a pritty good ways away, pop saying, Good eevning, can I get a fairly large tree for about $4? Maybe in Switzerland or some place you can, sed the man, my cheepist is $8. And me and pop wawked home agen, and Mr. Jones was standing on his frunt steps next dore, and pop sed, Youre the very man I wunt to see, Jones, will you do me a little favor? Theres a little man in a red sfetter selling Krissmas trees erround the corner. I wish you wood take this 5 doller bill and buy a tree for me and tell him to deliver it at my house. I know its a rather odd request, but the man owes me a little money, and I dont wunt to embarrass him by going down myself and making him think that perhaps I wunt the tree for nuthing.

Very natural, sed Mr. Jones. And me and pop went in and pritty soon the man rang the frunt door bell with the tree and pop told me to open the door for him and tell him to jest leeve it in the vesterbule.

A Gift for the Home

(Not for One Individual)

STRIPPED of all side-issues, the fight in this great war is for our HOMES. This awful conflict has taught us, as nothing else could, the value and sacredness of our homes. The Belgians and French appreciate this even more keenly, perhaps, than we do, but all Canada is awakening to the great fact that it is the homes—YOURS and your neighbors'—that hang in the balance.

And with the finer appreciation of our homes comes also a deeper sense of the duty that rests upon us to make these homes healthy, happy, useful centres of education, comfort, rest and pleasure.

And so this Christmas let us resolve to make one supreme gift to the home first, something that will be a step toward the right, and then to do what we can for individuals after.

Because close contact with actual conditions has shown us that music is the one influence that affects all alike, that anyone can understand, enjoy and benefit from, we urge that you add to your family treasures this Christmas Mr. Edison's most sublime gift to man

The NEW EDISON

DIAMOND DISC PHONOGRAPH

"The Phonograph with a Soul."

No needles to change—can be made to play any records.

This marvelous musical instrument really defies description, even as the most eloquent word-picture fails miserably to really portray the beauties of a precious voice.

But this much is true of The New Edison — it re-creates music of every kind so faultlessly that it is absolutely impossible to detect any difference between the real and Mr. Edison's re-creation. This has been proved beyond dispute by over 30 different artists who have toured the country singing and playing in unison with their own records. Over 500 of America's noted musical critics and one million music-lovers who have heard these unique concerts have admitted this voluntarily. Just grasp that fact!

Your home, this Christmas morning, and every Christmas hereafter and every day of every year, will be a better, happier place because of the influence of The New Edison.

Yet it costs but little to own one. If you do not care to pay cash, a small payment now and easy weekly or monthly sums will put this great treasure in your home while you are paying for it.

Be good to your home. Make your family happy in the possession of a New Edison.

TONS OF BUTTER.

15,414,154 Pounds in Cold Storage in Canada for Dec. 1.

Ottawa, Dec. 22.—In the regular monthly statement of quantities of food held in cold storage as on Dec. 1, 1917, an error occurred with regard to the quantity of butter stored in Montreal. Instead of 2,512,329 pounds, this should read 4,292,381 pounds. This makes the total quantity of butter in cold storeg in Canada for Dec. 1st 15,414,154 pounds.

ORIGINAL MODELS HARD TO GET

Women Have Little Chance of Individual Dressing at Present.

CARE IN BUYING NECESSARY

New Form of Oriental Skirt Now Popular Has Two Openings for the Feet and Is Closed in the Center.

New York.—The merry-go-round of fashion continues. Each of the great centers where women's apparel is sold reports an extremity of business that has caused the work people a loss of sleep and threatened the heads of the departments with a nervous collapse.

Naturally, women object to having their gowns copied, and there is a hubbub in the apparel world concerning the well established fact that the gown which is imported at a cost of $600 can be bought for $60 as a copy at one of the ready-to-wear shops.

There is no remedy for this condition. The woman who insists upon wearing models that are exhibited in the early part of the season must face the fact that she is apt to be repeated through the streets or at parties as though she were gazing into a maze of mirrors.

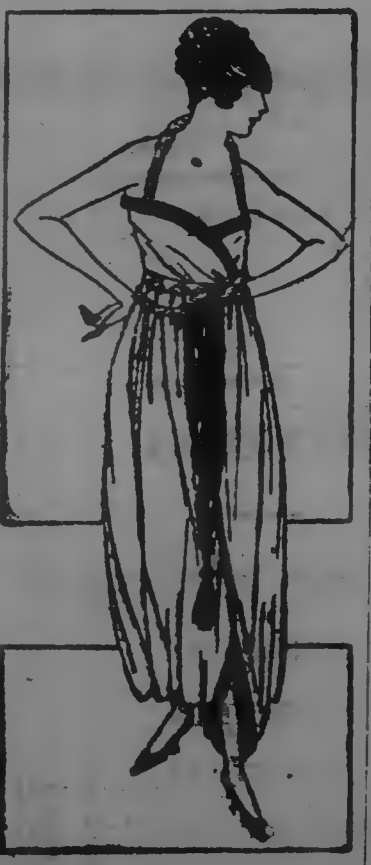
There are experts who say that the remedy for this condition lies in the hands of the American designers. They say that if the latter will create hundreds of gowns which are as agreeable and satisfying to women as the French models, there will be a chance for individual dressing.

This sounds well, but there are great difficulties in the way of establishing it as a reliable theory. An American designer who has made a remarkable reputation for her clothes insists that she does not design more than a dozen models during a season and that she hopes to sell a thousand gowns from these models. There you are.

Knowledge of Gowns Valuable.

The knowledge of gowns—their silhouettes, their fabrics, their various movements—will be first aid to those who are seeking not to be injured by buying what they don't want. It is not necessary to purchase a gown merely because it strikes your fancy; it is a very good thing to see everything than can be arranged for your inspection and then, out of all of them, choose the one which you like the best and which you think is the least apt to be worn by all your neighbors. If you don't mind this duplication on every side, then buy the gown which suits you, regardless of how often it will appear.

But the main thing to remember is that you must not be disappointed if you're not individual. There are certain gowns that stand out as symbols of popularity.



This gown is made of peach-colored crepe de chine, and the girdle-bodice is held in place with a necklace of dark green beads, which is repeated in a girdle. The slightly full skirt falls to the ankles, where part of the hem is turned into a Turkish trouser effect for one foot to pass through.

The first one that comes to mind is a Bulloz creation of a one-piece frock made in deep brown velours with a slight cascade effect down the side of a moderately narrow skirt. The distinguishing feature is a wide chain made from gold mesh, which from around the neck drops to the waist and seems to support an immense square of this gold mesh which looks for all the world like a woman's shopping bag spread out across the abdomen and attached to the belt.

Another is a medieval gown of deep purple velvet, with long, angel sleeves and a sweeping skirt that goes to the floor.

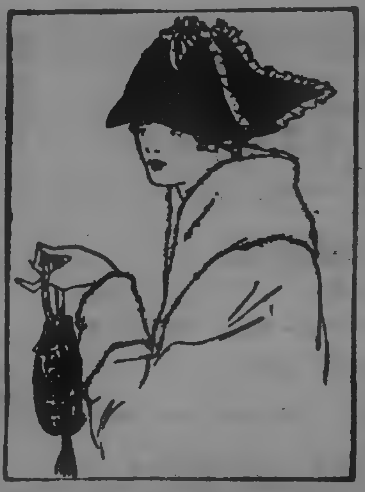
Another is a coat suit in which the jacket has a deep point in front and a rippling bustle at the back.

There are a dozen more, but these come to mind more quickly than any of the others.

The Oriental Skirt.

It is extraordinary how the Oriental skirt has held its own. Here it is with us again, and if one wanted to be historical, it would be necessary to go back to the early days of Paul Poiret, then Mme. Cheruit and then Callot and write of their efforts to make this tucked-in, Oriental garment the fashion.

Jenny has clung to it with a tenacity worthy of a better fashion. She has not varied the rather ugly line of the skirt movement which she adopted. She gathers the skirt to the waistline, turns the fullness at the bottom up to a tight, narrow lining and then allows it to swing free from the legs as the wearer walks.



This is the Colonial type of hat worn in the street. It is made of cardinal velvet, with a frill and cockade of white grosgrain ribbon.

This season she has produced a novelty in the form of a skirt that is more truly Oriental than the other, and in this she is side by side with half a dozen of the great French designers who have shown this skirt without any apology for its decided Orientalism.

The distinctive feature in which this new skirt differs from the old one, both being taken from the Orient, is that it has two openings for the feet and is closed in the center. Such a trick being adopted by smart society gives the eccentric designers a chance to do daring and remarkable things.

There is one gown which has an opening for the left foot, but not for the right one. There is another that has two pear-shaped openings for the feet directly in front, with the outer edges of the hem sewed together, allowing the fullness to cling to the outside of the ankles.

The only eccentric trick that remains for some French designer to do is to put the opening for the right foot at the back and the opening for the left foot at the front. Considering what has been created, one expects such a development of this particular fashion at any moment.

There is no use arguing against this new type of Oriental skirt for evening wear. It will prevail without doubt among those who like what is new and what is graceful, and there is no denying the exquisite grace of this type of Oriental skirt, and the good setting it gives to a slim ankle and well-shaped foot.

If there only could be a law against women with broad, thick ankles and broad feet wearing this type of evening skirt, we would be a better dressed nation, but as yet no censor of fashions has arisen.

Callot's Gowns for America.

This development of a new skirt is not the only interesting feature of fashions in this particular garment. A certain set of designers is endeavoring, despite the cry for economy in material, to establish a skirt that touches the ankles for the street and the toes for the evening.

A few of the best American designers are back of this movement in an alliance with the French. There are such leaders as Callot, however, who make no compromise, but cut the hems of their skirts to the shoetops for the street and an inch lower for the evening.

Another piece of bravado is the way Callot gives sleeves to her gowns. They are long sleeves, or, yes, quite covering the arms as well as the back, but they're made of a single piece of tulle and are attached to nothing more or less than a moderately high girdle which does not reach the arms at the sides or back by several inches.

She has one gown with oyster white sleeves and back of floating tulle made from a piece of tulle drapery that is banded for twelve inches with apple green tulle, and across the front of the wrapped satin bodice is a bias band of brilliant green crystal such as the queens wear in court costume.

Opposed to these evening gowns, she produces the robe of the stained-glass saints. It is of swinging velvet, in cathedral colors, and covers up the entire body from neck to heels with the exception of a few inches at the neck in front.

NO PEACE TERMS POSSIBLE UNTIL KAISER IS CAST OUT

Germany Must Set up Popular Government Before the Allied Nation Will Listen to Offers to End the War.

New York, Dec. 22.—The establishment of a responsible popular Government in Germany is now the principal necessity for the formal opening of peace negotiations.

President Wilson had inspired a declaration of Great Britain's war aims, which are practically identical with America's and which between them offer basically acceptable terms to the Germans if they democratize their Government. Not only are the American and British Governments in agreement concerning their own war purposes, but they hold the same views about the war aims of the other allies.

No Formal Statement.

It is, of course, impossible for Great Britain and America to make formal statements concerning the peace terms of the other entente powers. The United States, however, has been able to do what the Governments concerned are withholding officially from doing. Immediately after President Wilson's address at the opening of Congress, the United Press carried a semi-official Washington dispatch announcing America's attitude toward the allies' war aims.

Following Lloyd George's speech in the House of Commons, the United Press carries a London despatch of the same nature, making known Great Britain's attitude toward the allies' war aims. The Washington and London Despatches are substantially identical. This identity is of immense importance. It means that two nations which for the future must bear the brunt of the war in defence of the allies' cause, are in agreement as to the details of a just peace.

Just to Everybody.

These details of a just peace are just not only to the allies themselves, but also to Germany and Austro-Hungary. The only condition is that the German peace negotiations must be accredited by the German nation and not act simply as messengers of the Kaiser and the ruling caste.

Germany's own peace suggestions now being so industriously circulated, are worthless because they make no mention of a change in Germany's internal affairs. Until that is done, the German people must continue to offer themselves as human sacrifices to the Moloch of Kaiserism, though acceptable terms of a democratized peace await them.

Reparation Must Come.

Secretary Lansing said that no information of the terms of Germany's expected "Christmas peace" offer has reached the State Department, and that the attitude of the United States toward a peace negotiation was unchanged.

What purports to be an outline of the peace terms has been received here through neutral diplomatic channels. The attitude of the United States on peace accords with that of the co-belligerents—reparation and restoration by Germany.

BIGGEST SURPRISE OF HIS LIFE HE SAYS

WILLIAMSON OVERCOMES TROUBLES OF FIVE YEARS STANDING BY TAKING TANLAC.

"I have never been so surprised over anything as I have over the results of Tanlac in my case," said William Williamson, a well known brick mason living at 1115 St. Clarence avenue, Toronto, recently.

"My kidneys have been bothering me for four or five years," he continued, "but during the past year other ailments set in and kept me feeling miserable nearly all the time. I had terrible pains across my back, especially when I stooped over or tried to lift anything; then rheumatism settled in my right leg, and at times I simply suffered torture from it. The pain was so sharp and cutting at times I would almost drop in my tracks. My appetite went square back on me and nothing I would eat tasted right. I was very nervous could hardly sleep and I would just roll from one side of the bed to the other, and many a night I have not closed my eyes for sleep at all. I just had that degected, worn-out feeling, had no energy and didn't care for anything.

"One day a friend of mine said: Why don't you try Tanlac, I have taken it, and it surely did do me good.' So with that I began taking Tanlac and improving every day. I have now taken four bottles, the rheumatism never troubles me at all, and my kidneys are in fine shape. My appetite is fine and everything I eat tastes good and agrees with me. My nerves are strong and steady now, I sleep like a log, and all my tired, depressed feelings are gone. I now have my old-time strength and energy and feel like myself again. Tanlac has certainly been a great thing for me and I don't praise it too highly."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co. Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co. Ltd.

THIRTY YEARS ON SCHOOL BOARD

MR. W. H. HILL

Who has served the public for the past thirty years as a member of the School Board and who has decided to retire.

The Old Guard on the School Board is to be broken up. Death removed Dr. Burnham, the dean of the Board, a short time ago, and now three of the old standbys are to retire. These are Messrs. W. H. Hill, John Crane and Col. J. W. Miller.

Mr. Hill has been a member of the Board for thirty years and feels that as he must retire some time the present is as good as any. He has a long period of public service to his credit. He was for twenty years on the Public Library Board, twelve years on the City Water Board, and has been a member of the Nicholls Hospital Board for over twenty years. Mr. Hill first became a member of the Board of Education when the local schools were in their infancy, and he has helped to build up in this city one of the best educational systems in the province.

Mr. Crane has been on the Board for sixteen and Col. Miller for ten years.

Dr. F. C. Neal, who was first elected two years ago, will be a candidate for re-election. He has been a useful and hard-working member, interesting himself particularly in the health of the pupils and giving the public the benefit of his professional knowledge. Dr. Neal was chairman of the special committee that drew up the exhaustive report dealing with the treatment of defective children.

Besides the four vacancies on the Board above alluded to, that caused by the death of Dr. Burnham has to be filled. One of the names mentioned is that of Mr. G. R. Monroe, whose expert knowledge would be valuable in the event of the city deciding to establish a technical school.

Next year will be an important one in local educational circles. The King Edward School must be enlarged, and something must be done to relieve the congestion of pupils in the southwestern part of the city.

CITY COUNCIL SUCCESSFULLY DISPOSED OF MANY INTRICATE PROBLEMS DURING YEAR 1917

Chairmen of Committees, With Able Assistance of Finance Minister Stratton; Kept Expenditures Well Within Appropriations Complimented the Mayor.

Mayor Duffus' retiring address to his colleagues last night was replete with valuable data and information as to Peterborough's financial condition and prospects, together with suggestions for future municipal government. It was very lengthy, and the Review is constrained to publish it in sections, of which the following is the first:

In all likelihood this will be our final meeting, and I cannot allow this council to adjourn without expressing to you my very deep appreciation of the kind assistance you have given me during my term of office. If our work has been somewhat successful and pleasant it has been your kind co-operation that has helped to make it such.

I am satisfied that the different chairmen and their committees have done their utmost to facilitate their work. You are well aware that the major portion of the work is done in committee. Therefore the committees having worked well, accounts for success.

At the beginning of the year my earnest request was for harmony, efficiency and economy. Without harmony there is no efficiency, without efficiency there is no economy. These, gentlemen, I believe you have done your best to carry out, and let me say to you that I most thoroughly appreciate it. During the year a number of intricate problems have come up for consideration and I think in almost every instance, they were successfully and satisfactorily disposed of.

I have endeavored to give liberally of my time in the city's interest and I am confident it has been recognized and appreciated by the people generally, as I have had hundreds of requests to remain in the public service.

It is quite natural that my interest in the city should become more and more intensified from day to day by reason of the fact that I fully realize that the city's demands are becoming more vital as time goes on; I am fully aware that next year will be the most critical in the history of the city from a municipal standpoint, and nothing would give me more pleasure than assisting in solving the problem, but my family affairs and my business interests demand my personal attention for the time being, at least.

I wish to express my appreciation of the kind consideration and encouragement the citizens generally have given me during the years I have been in public office. I wish to express the same sentiments toward the Press of the city. It has been fair and at times encouraging.

I have appreciated the very pleasant assistance rendered me on all occasions by the entire staff at the City Hall, as well as that of all the other public departments in connection with the carrying on of the city's business.

One feature of municipal government which I have made a particular study of and maintained a keen interest in, is its financial aspect and of which I have done my utmost to get indelibly impressed upon the minds of each and every member of the council. This together with the able assistance of the Finance Chairman, has been instrumental in keeping the expenditures well within our appropriations, notwithstanding the ever increasing cost of labor and material we had to procure for the prosecution of the city's work.

The financing of municipalities is one problem that is occupying the minds of many noted financial experts from time to time, whose opinions seem to vary so much that it is little wonder that inexperienced municipal officers adopt insane methods and at times make serious mistakes.

My opinion is that this city enjoyed far too long a time a tax rate around 15 to 17 mills. Had the then Council raised the rate to 20 mills and subsequent Councils carried on the business on more of a cash basis issuing debentures for only large and permanent expenditures, Peterborough would not have more than a 22 or 23 mill rate today notwithstanding the fact that she has recently built many beautiful schools, sidewalks, pavements, bridges, sewers, etc.

In order to give a comprehensive idea of some of the expenditure and the cause of the increase in the tax rate, I submit the following facts and Greetings to You!

HEINTZMAN HALL,
Dec. 22nd, 1917

I cannot let this season of Good Will to All Men pass without expressing my hearty appreciation of that generous patronage by Peterborough's music loving public which has justified the establishment of Ye Olde Firme of Heintzman & Co., Limited, in Heintzman Hall, Royal Bank Building, corner of George and Hunter Streets.

In looking over our sales records for the past year, it is gratifying to note that Heintzman & Co's instruments have met with popular approval to a phenomenal extent; and in reflecting on our business experience in this city I find that words are inadequate to express suitable recognition of the abundant favors with which our operations have been honored. Suffice it to say, that after many years with Ye Olde Firme, I am this happy season constrained to admit the biggest debt to a buying public for cordial, pleasant and encouraging business relations it has yet been my duty to acknowledge.

Then, apart from business matters, permit me, on behalf of Mrs. Britton and myself, to extend to a large circle of good people in Peterborough our heartiest thanks for many courtesies and kindnesses showered upon us in this warm-hearted community. Strangers, in a strange city, a little over a year ago, we were met with the glad hand of fellowship and welcome, which has reached down to the hidden springs of feeling, and fostered an ever-growing spirit of friendship and companionship for which we cannot be too grateful.

In conclusion, I ask your acceptance from Mrs. Britton, myself and staff of assistants, of our very best wishes for Christmas and the New Year, in a lively hope that your measure of prosperity and happiness in 1918 may be full to the brim, pressed down, and running over.

Yours truly
B. H. BRITTON

WANT COLONIES BACK.

Le Matin Despatch Says—To Keep Belgium Otherwise.

Paris, Dec. 22. Austria-Hungary is pledged to support Germany in the retention of Alsace-Lorraine, according to a despatch printed in the Matin purporting to reveal the text of the agreement between the two biggest central powers. The Matin also asserted that Germany had determined not to evacuate Belgium unless her colonies were restored.

RECORD PRICE FOR PURE BREDS

Mr. David Batteer of "Fairview Stock Farm," disposed of his entire stock of pure bred Leicester sheep and lambs at the record price of 32.50 per head. This goes to show that the pure bred stock pays.

PLEA FOR MONEY FOR CLUB ROOMS

TO FURNISH QUARTERS OVER ROYAL BANK FOR GREAT WAR VETERANS.

If the families who are having a comfortable dinner in their cosy homes this Christmas, homes that have been kept safe for them by the maimed, (in many cases ill, and returned men, as well as by all who left to cross the sea and fight our battles for us, would give twenty-five cents, or what they can afford, or, indeed, what costs a little sacrifice, they would give pleasure to the G. W. V. and save a number of men and women a weary canvass of the city at this busy time of the year. The committee have promised to do their best to open the rooms on New Year's Day. We can do this if the money comes in quickly.

ETHEL FESSENDEN.

Money can be left at The Review or Examiner offices.

ALL DOGS MUST BE MUZZLED AND IN LEASH, OR KEPT OFF THE STREETS

Hurry up By-Law to This Effect Passed by Council Last Night.

The city fathers last night amended the dog bylaw, and dogs are no longer permitted to run at large under any circumstances what ever. If on the street at all they must be in leash and muzzled, and the bylaw is to be vigorously enforced. The penalty for infringing this measure is $20 fine or 2 months' imprisonment and destruction of the animal.

Above was the result of presentation by Drs. Amys and Fortune that at any moment 20 or 30 cases of rabies among dogs may develope in Peterborough, and that one man and one child of this community had died from rabies the past year.

Dr. Fortune pointed out that a few days ago a dog had been bitten by another canine, and rabies had developed. The latter animal probably affected by this dread disease was at large, but the former had been destroyed and its head taken to Ottawa today by government inspectors for examination to verify his (Dr. Fortune's) conviction that the brain will be found affected by rabies, as was that of another dog examined by the authorities a few weeks ago. "There are a lot of worthless curs running around this town," Dr. Fortune added, "and city dogs even infest the surrounding country. Farmers will not even raise sheep on that account."

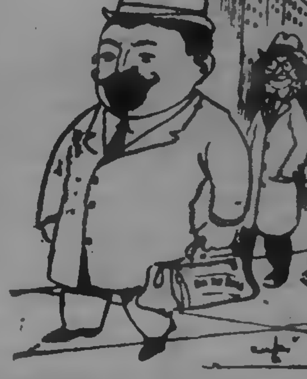
Dr. Fortune also declared that the Department of Agriculture is not at all satisfied with conditions in Peterborough, and unless drastic action is taken he expected the city to be strictly quarantined, which would mean that no animal, not even a horse, could leave its limit. He also urged the installation at the incinerator of an apparatus to electrocute dogs; a fee of 25c might be charged.

Dr. Amys was a strong supporter of Dr. Fortune, and hoped the city would take immediate action. But whatever steps are taken to safeguard the public, they should be rigorously enforced. As in cases of contagious diseases, it is useless to quarantine nine-tenths of the dogs and allow one-tenth to run at large. Complete isolation is needed.

Mayor Duffus—"I have heard quite sufficient to convince me that immediate action is necessary. One child is worth more than all the dogs in the Province. What are we here for if not to safeguard the citizens in such vital matters?"

Council was unanimous on this point, the bylaw was immediately amended as above referred to, and passed its three readings unanimously.

KNEW HIS BUSINESS.



Jinks—He's a fine doctor for children.

Blinks—That so?

Jinks—Yes; he gives them such nasty medicine that they're glad to get well.

Don't Boast.

Don't boast about what you have done,
Nor wear old laurel on your brow.
The thing that counts in life, my son,
Is only what you're doing now.

Synopsis of Canadian Northwest Land Regulations

The sole head of a family or any male over 18 years old, who was at the commencement of the present war, and has since continued to be, a British subject or a subject of an allied or neutral country, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion Land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for District. Entry by proxy may be made on certain conditions. Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of land in each of three years.

In certain districts a homesteader may secure an adjoining quarter-section as pre-emption. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Reside six months in each of three years after earning homestead patent and cultivate 50 acres extra. May obtain pre-emption patent as soon as homestead patent on certain conditions.

A settler after obtaining homestead patent, if he cannot serve a pre-emption, may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

Holders of entries may count time of employment as farm laborers in Canada during 1917, as residence duties under certain conditions.

When Dominion Lands are advertised or posted for entry, returned soldiers who have served overseas and have been honorably discharged, receive one day priority in applying for entry at local Agent's Office (but not Sub-Agency). Discharge papers must be presented to Agent.

Khaki-Colored Trench Coat.

Something for the soldiers and something for the sailors—what could please better the small girl's heart this autumn? Here is a decidedly knowing trench coat—khaki colored, if you please, and supplied with shiny buttons, buckled belt and plenty of pockets. And here a delightful sailor cap made of black velvet so that it may look smart with the khaki brown coat; and with U. S. navy in blue letters on a strap of white kid.

LICENSED BY THE GOVERNMENT SINCE 30 YEARS

OPEN AIR SKATING RINK IN EAST CITY IS TO BE PROVIDED AT ONCE

For The Benefit of Children of Tender Years --A Lady in Charge.

The city fathers met in their last session for this year last evening.

Secretary Whatley wrote claiming that the Great War Veterans had a prior right to the 93rd Battalion band instruments. One hundred members of the 93rd helped to raise the money for these instruments. Several of this battalion's band are at present members of the G.W.V.A., while many at the front will on their return join the band this organization is about to organize. For these reasons the Great War Veterans confidently look forward to Council's handing over to them the band instruments in question. This is in care of the Property Committee.

Rink For East City.

Judge Huycke appeared in behalf of a largely signed petition that a municipal skating rink be established in Ashburnham. Such a rink is needed for little ones of tender years and the ladies' different organizations have arranged that if a rink is provided a lady shall be in attendance in protection of the children. Armour's field was suggested in the petition as a suitable site for such a rink.

On motion of Ald. Smith and Weir the request was granted, and the City Engineer instructed to prepare a rink on Armour's field.

A Question of Economy.

His Worship here raised the question of whether, owing to but little public work now needed or likely to be called for during the winter months, it would not be possible to reduce expenditure in the Engineering department.

Ald. Dobbin suggested that either Evans or Fitzgerald might look after the municipal coal yard were there not sufficient other work to keep them employed.

Ald. Langford thought $5000 a year for salaries in the engineering department not justified under present conditions, and questioned if that department were being managed as economically as it might be. He believed in paying proper salaries, but the city should see to it that value for the money is forthcoming.

Ald. Duncan contended that there is as much work for the department this winter as other years, and could not see where any cut in expenditure could be made.

Ald. Smith was a strong advocate in favor of Street Inspector Alex. Fitzgerald, whom he characterized as one of the best employees the city has; in fact a man who goes out of his way to undertake work outside his office, and who is on the job early and late. He could not see room for any reduction either in men or salaries.

Ald. Weir agreed with Ald. Smith as to the efficiency of Fitzgerald, and could suggest no other means for economy except by reducing salaries, which, however, he did not urge.

His worship suggested that any opportunity for finding more employment for the engineering department should be taken advantage of.

Ald. McIntyre said he had always contended that his department was costing the city too much, and knew where unnecessary expenditure is incurred. He would, however, make no suggestions at this time, because when he had previously done so no notice was taken of him.

Engineer Parsons took the remarks of the Mayor and Ald. McIntyre to himself, and replied that he did not think any of the aldermen were aware of the work entailed in conducting his department. He questioned if any other community but Peterborough had avoided the expense of a consulting engineer as had been the case during his regime, with important engineering problems to be mastered. For instance, his drafting of plans for the sewage disposal system he figured to have saved the city $4,000 and now he was expected to design plans for the high level bridge. Then a city engineer had always plenty to do during the winter months in preparing for next season's work.

His worship did not question the engineer's industry or efficiency at all, but thought he should furnish council with a detailed report of exactly what is being and has to be done in his department, so that the council might be thoroughly conversant with the situation at all times.

There were present Mayor Duffus, Aldermen Smith, Weir, McIntyre, Langford, Worth, Duncan, Dobbin, Taylor and Saunders.

How It Is Done.

"I don't see how some of my friends are able to have automobiles."

"It is not so difficult as you think, old man. The wives help out wonderfully. A woman will go without an astonishing number of things for the sake of a car."

Hard to Do.

"Speaking of remarkable memories, there goes a man who has one."

"What can he do that is so extraordinary?"

"He can name all the statesmen who were members of the principal European cabinets six months ago."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

What He Left Out.

"This curbstone orator says he had the crowd going."

"He didn't complete his sentence. He should have added another word after 'going.'"

"And what word is that?"

"'Away.'"

A Mean Exposure.

"My daughter is engaged to a very promising young man."

"Yes, I know him. He has promised to pay me the money he borrowed from me when he got hold of yours."

KISS HIM!

What will you give him for Christmas?

Give him what he will like best.

He's human, with a man's failings and frailties; be has hurt you, has grieved you, has brought tears to your eyes. But then again he has been kind and considerate, has shared your sorrows, just as he has shared your joys. What if he has brought clouds into your life, he also has brought sunshine! He's been a good daddy, and, as husbands go, he's been a pretty good one.

And, after all, his worries have been big, his troubles hard to bear, and, perhaps, he was not always to blame. . . .

So, when he comes downstairs on Christmas morning, give him the best of gifts—give him a kiss—and put your heart into it!

Then give him the one thing that, better than all else, will chase away dull care, and gloom, and worries and troubles, big and little—give him a box of ARABELA Cigars.

10 or 25 or 50 in a box.

The tobacconist around the corner has them—has sold them these forty years.

Mild, mellow, of delicate aroma, they are to-day better than ever; the best at the price.

Bright for Him.

She—Brother Jack lost at cards last night.

He—Oh, well, every misfortune has its bright side.

She—I'd like to know the bright side of that?

He—I won it.

A Big Difference.

She—What is the difference between a detective in a novel and a detective in real life?

He—The story book detective invents a crime to fit his theories and the detective in real life invents theories to fit a crime.

One Explanation.

"The Eskimos like phonographs."

"I can easily understand that."

"Yes?"

"The walls of an Eskimo's igloo are so thick he can't hear his neighbor's phonograph playing the tunes he abominates."

Why the Lamp Went Out.

In the parlor there were three,
She, the parlor lamp and he;
Two is company, no doubt,
So the little lamp went out!

"These, you see, are socks that you can't wear out."

"I believe you. I'd scarcely dare wear them at home."

"Because the tenants give it up every year."

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

AUSTIN—TELFORD.

PRETTY WEDDING IN TRINITY METHODIST CHURCH THIS AFTERNOON.

Trinity Methodist Church was the scene of a very pretty wedding at 1 o'clock this afternoon when Florence Bertha, daughter of the late James Telford and Mrs. Telford, 658 Concession street, city, was married to Mr. Edward M. Austin, of Brooklyn, N. Y. Rev. J. P. Wilson, D.D., performed the ceremony. The bride, who entered the church on the arm of her brother, Mr. Percy Telford, wore a lovely gown of white georgette crepe with veil and orange blossoms and carried white roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Elizabeth Telford, who wore pearl grey crepe meteor, with large black hat. The groom was supported by Mr. Russell Telford, of Pembroke, cousin of the bride.

Little Miss Violet Cameron of Toronto acted as flower girl and carried sweetheart roses.

Mr. George H. King, organist of the church, presided at the organ.

Among the guests from a distance were Mrs. J. P. Sanders, of Indianapolis, and Mrs. John Rothwell, of Toronto.

After the ceremony the bridal party returned to the bride's home, where a dainty luncheon was served, and the happy couple left for a short trip before returning to Brooklyn, where they will reside.

The bride's travelling costume was of sand colored taffeta with gold lace hat trimmed with mink.

The many beautiful presents received by the happy couple testify to the high regard in which they are held.

DAYS OF HORROR IN STRICKEN HALIFAX CITY

DR. PIERS GIVES INSTANCES OF HAVOC WROUGHT BY EXPLOSION.

Dr. O'Donnell Piers writes from Halifax to Mrs. Robertson of this city, as follows:

"This is the first line I have attempted to write since the awful disaster. Thank God we are alive and well. It has been a terrible ten days' nightmare for us here. The explosion occurred at six minutes past 9. Billy was just about to step on a car when it happened. He rushed back and found us all cut and bleeding, and the windows all over the house blown into the house and splintered in a million pieces. When he found we had no bones broken he rushed off to see what he could do for others. Our first thought was that it was a German squadron bombarding the city. Then he thought the munitions at the dock had been blown up. It was absolutely terrifying. Had you been in your room you most certainly would have been killed. (Mrs. Robertson was in Halifax visiting before the disaster.) The window on the north side was blown into the room and the opposite wall had hundreds of pieces of glass imbedded in it right over your bed. The Lauries in the dock yard escaped with their lives and came right out here, and have been with us ever since. How they got out alive is a miracle. Mrs. Laurie was injured in both eyes, but we hope to save the sight. A man standing next to Commander Wyatt had his head blown off, but Evan didn't get a scratch. Some of the escapes have been miraculous. About 2,000 killed and 3,000 wounded. Over 250 have lost the sight of both eyes. People and cities everywhere have sent us wonderful help. We work night and day giving medical aid in the technical college."

The attorney-general of Great Britain will speak in New York early in January.

Chaplain Tells of Pte. Wedlock's End

SENDS SYMPATHETIC LETTER TO BRAVE SOLDIER'S WIDOW.

Mrs. R. Wedlock has received the following letter from the chaplain to the 52nd Canadians, who writes of the death in action of her husband, Pte. Dick Wedlock:

France, 15-11-17.
52nd Battalion.

Dear Mrs. Wedlock,—

The news of your loss has already reached you by this time. I came away on leave immediately after we came out of the action in which your husband fell. That explains the delay in writing.

He was instantly killed on the attack on Passchendale Ridge. We were in the first attack. He helped to save the day for the whole division and make a name for his battalion which stands out today above all others in the Canadian Corps. You, who love him best, could not pray for him to die a grander death—if he had to die—than he has died. Those who died that day won undying fame for their battalion.

God help and comfort you in this trial hour. May we so live that we shall be worthy to meet him in that new sphere of life where now he serves. It is very hard to part with our comrades, yet it is only by such unselfish sacrifices that peace and happiness and all future good shall come.

He is buried with his comrades on the slope of the ridges. It was impossible without a further sacrifice of life to bring them back to the rear area. I shall see that a fitting memorial cross is erected over him and his comrades.

His personal things will be forwarded to you through official channels.

Yours sincerely,
R. W. RIDGEWAY,
Chaplain 52nd Bn. Can.

GERMANS FAIL IN ANOTHER RAID

UNITED STATES MUST NOT ABATE WAR EFFORTS

No Matter How Much Germany May Talk of Peace Terms.

PLEDGE TO ALLIES TO BE KEPT

American Army and Resources Constitute Reserves of Victory.

Washington, Dec. 24.—Germany's newest peace propaganda, viewed as a forerunner to an offensive in the West, unless German-made peace is accepted by the allied nations, should not for a moment induce the United States to slacken its preparations far war, says Secretary Baker of the war department in his weekly review of the military situation. The review points out that the fighting morale of Italy may be relied upon, no matter how intensive the German peace campaign becomes.

U. S. Deciding Factor.

"Since the defeat of the German forces in front of Verdun," says Secretary Baker, "England and the British dominions have taken over an increasingly large share of the burden of the war. It is our duty, therefore, in looking to the future, to realise that if we, the United States are to fulfil the pledge we made on entering the war; if we are to fight this war to a successful conclusion, we must assume the full responsibility which rests upon us. We are freshest in the struggle, we have reserve man power and reserve mechanical power. Our armies constitute the reserves of victory."

FOUR TOWNS ARE ADDED TO LIST

BRITISH TROOPS CONTINUE VICTORIOUS ADVANCE IN PALESTINE.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Dec. 24.—Gen. Allenby's troops in Palestine continue their advance on the plain of Sharon, north of Jaffa, and have occupied four more towns. The official statement on operations, issued last night, reads:

"On Saturday morning, with naval co-operation, our left continued to advance north of Nahrelauja, reaching the line of Sheikh el Balutahel Jelil, about four miles north of the river. Pushing eastward and southward of the river we occupied Fejja and Mulebbis. This was followed by the capture of Rantieh on the Turkish railway to the north, and Khelbeida-Kelbireh, four miles southeast of Rantieh. Effective aerial work w ascarried out on enemy transports and infantry."

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, DECEMBER 24, 1917

TWO THOUSAND YEARS AFTER.

IT WAS IN THE LITTLE town of Bethlehem that He was born two thousand years ago, born in a manger, but with a celestial choir announcing the dawn of a new hope for the world, and the heavens, with a blaze of astral glory, proclaiming the birth of a King, the star drawing to the lowly cradle the wise men of the East to worship. It was the city of Jerusalem that witnessed the principal events of His ministry. It was in the city of the Great King that He unmasked the hypocrisy of the Pharisee and preached a new creed to the masses. It was in Jerusalem that people marveled at His wisdom and at the authority with which He spoke. It was in Jerusalem, too, where they took up stones to cast at Him when His teachings awoke their consciences.

He made a triumphant entry into the Holy City two thousand years ago as a man of peace, with the multitude singing His praises. It was only a few days later that He was led a captive through those same streets to the Mount of Death.

Jerusalem, made sacred by His life and sacrifice, is once more in possession of His people. The star that burned over Bethlehem has been rekindled. Millions instead of hundreds are paying Him reverence today, rejoicing that the scenes of His life and death have been rescued from the barbarians. His followers are banded together in a righteous cause. If they are using the sword, it is the sword which He brought them with which to overcome the enemies of the human race.

Prophecy is working out. The story of history is being repeated. There will yet be peace on earth and good will to all men, even though the clouds are heavy now, though Herod has come once more to life, and Rachel is still weeping for those who are not and never will be again.

She who was chosen for the high honor of being the mother of the Man Who was Divine, was called upon later to drink the cup of mortal anguish to the dregs when she witnessed His death on the Cross. To those to whom much is given much also is required.

The mothers of hundreds of the brave men who left their homes for the battle front have seen them nailed to the cross of Prussian militarism. The principle which cost a life on Calvary still lives. The sacrifices in Flanders will never die.

GOOD WILL TO MEN.

"Ring out a slowly dying cause,
And ancient forms of party strife;
Ring in the nobler modes of life,
With sweeter manners, purer laws."

THE ANCIENT FORM of party strife has received a knockout blow in Canada. May it never regain its old-time vigor. Tennyson's prayer for a better order of things has already been answered in part. The sweeter manners that he hopes for are already in evidence, as shown by the spirit in which the Canadian people cast their ballots last week. The purer laws are now something that are more than dreamed of. They are on the way. The public demand honor and justice on the part of their legislators.

At this season, when the whole earth is supposed to ring with that celestial anthem, first heard by the shepherds on the Judean plains two thousand years ago, and repeated at every Christmas season since, peace on earth should prevail. Racial rivalry should be forgotten. Religious strife should cease. Every man's creed should be regarded as a matter between himself and his Maker and his conscience. The same sublime sacrifice was made for all on Calvary, and the great objective for all is the same.

The military cemeteries in France and Belgium are mounded with the graves of Canadian dead. The same plain white cross marks the last resting place of those who gave their lives for others. Those men who fought and died together knew nothing of petty strife and rivalry, of racial distrust or religious fanaticism, as they passed through the Gethsemane of war. While they lived, fought and died together, while they sleep their last sleep side by side, is it fitting that those left alive at home should keep aflame the differences that have wrought mischief in this country all through its history?

There should be a union of factions in Canada just as there has been a coalition of political parties, and the inspiration for the movement for a new national brotherhood should come from the graves of our fallen heroes.

A GOVERNMENT WITH BACKING.

THE BORDEN Government, elected in 1911, had a majority in three of the provinces of the Dominion—Ontario, Manitoba and British Columbia. Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island broke even. In the election last week these figures were reversed, the Union Government carrying six of the nine provinces. The election means more than these figures show, for the popular majority behind the new Administration is something that has never been equalled previously in Canada. No government was ever so strong, aside altogether from the fact that it is composed of the strongest men in both the old parties. It has a double majority, without which it is impossible for a President of the United States to be elected—a majority not only of the provinces but a majority of the people in those provinces as well.

Already the new Government has demonstrated its strength. There has been enacted one of the most drastic pieces of legislation ever brought down in Canada, and that is the temperance measures that have just been decided upon by ordre-in-council. There is to be no more liquor imported into Canada after today. Traffic between a wet and a dry province must close after April 1, and on a date to be set later the manufacture of liquor in Canada must stop.

This action has been taken as a war measure. It is held that the successful prosecution of the war demands it, and it was to carry on the war that the Union Government was elected. The temperance question was not made an issue in the recent campaign. It is true that our contemporary could not resist the temptation to drag it in, and this forced the other side to ask Mr. Hall to define his position, but the Laurier candidate refused to be trapped. The new Government was under no pledge to introduce such an enactment. It required no pushing, but acted on its own initiative. This certainly marks a new era in the political history of Canada.

The right of the provinces to deal with the liquor question is not infringed. The action of the Government is simply a war measure, and provincial autonomy will be restored when the present conflict is over and normal conditions again prevail.

CHANGING THE WARD SYSTEM.

THE VOTERS WILL at the next election pass on the question of changing the system of electing aldermen by adopting the general vote plan, just as the Mayor, the members of the School Board and of the Utilities Commission. The bylaw is submitted at the request of the Trades and Labor Council, the members of which feel that in the general vote lies their only hope of electing Labor men as aldermen. The workingmen's vote is scattered over the whole city. It is almost negligible in any one ward.

The aldermen were elected by general vote up to 1910, when the present system was adopted. The reason given for the change at that time was that under the general vote the representation was not always fairly distributed either as to localities or class. The matter is now in the hands of the people, and any mayor or aldermen elected for 1918 will have no alternative but to put the popular mandate, whatever it may be, into force.

THE WAR LECTURE BUREAU.

CANADA IS NOT to be allowed to rest content with the splendid mandate given the Union Government to carry on the war. The people's interest is not to be permitted to flag. They are to be made to realise that there is still danger hanging over the Empire, and that action and sacrifice as well as votes are still required.

The War Lecture Bureau, at the head of which is Sir Robert Falconer, president of Toronto University, is a new institution. The plan of its promoters is to have a short address on the war delivered by some representative citizen in the different theatres of the country at least once a week. The first of these was made in this city Saturday night, when Mr. Joseph Wearing gave an admirable talk at the Grand Opera House on the present war situation.

Mr. Wearing made no attempt to minimize the seriousness of the present outlook, while he made the most of what Canada and the rest of the Allies have already done. Their work is not yet finished. The dark days of the winters of 1914 and 1915 are likely to be repeated this year. The Germans are massing their troops on the Western front for the greatest effort they have yet made. The decisive battle of the war may be fought before spring.

Mr. Wearing's address should set the people of Canada thinking. It gave them a clearer idea of actual affairs than they could gather from a week's reading of contradictory despatches from the different theatres of war. The people should not be unduly optimistic, as they may be inclined to be after the expression of the popular sentiment last week. The war is not yet won. It cannot be won, either, without further sacrifice of life and treasure.

THE DE LAVAL BYLAW.

ONE OF THE BYLAWS to be submitted to the people at the coming municipal election provides for the closing of land set aside for street purposes, in order to permit the De Laval Company to extend their plant. It seems almost a waste of time and effort to advance arguments in favor of the adoption of the bylaw. The matter is so clearly in the interests of the city that the ratepayers can be trusted to support the proposition.

The De Laval Company is one of Peterborough's most substantial industries, and their products, sent to all parts of the world, carry the name of the city with them. The company have fulfilled every obligation which they assumed when they established a branch here. In fact, the directors have done much more than they agreed to do. The number of skilled workmen employed has exceeded all expectations, and the relations between the company and their working staff have always been ideal.

To permit the closing of the street in question will work no hardship to anyone. A passageway will be retained to provide a thoroughfare in the event of its ever being required by the public. The bylaw, if carried, will not only help a company that has shown itself worthy of every consideration, but by increasing the working force, will add to the prosperity of the city.

The elector who votes for the closing of the street will make no mistake. It is a duty which he owes to the company and to the interests of the city alike.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

MAN WANTS BUT LITTLE here below except at Christmas.

• • • •

JOHN BARLEYCORN and the Kaiser will from present appearances make their exit together.

• • • •

AND BEST OF ALL, Santa Claus has a stock of reinforcements among his gifts for the men at the front.

• • • •

SANTA CLAUS will dive right into the battle trenches with that sleigh which appears to be shell proof as any tank.

• • • •

BRITAIN MAY occasionally be worsted in battle, but there is something about the race which prevents them from realising it.

• • • •

TOBOGGAN SLIDES and such forms of amusement have no excitement compared to that of the man who is running for aldermen.

AND WHEN KITCHENER said the war would last over at least three Christmas seasons, plenty of people thought he was exaggerating.

CHRISTMAS GAMES FOR THE YOUNG

This is one of the magic or trick games. The game leader must first select a helper who understands the trick to work with her. A small table is placed in the centre of the room, and on it is laid a spoon. The helper then leaves the room and the game leader asks some member of the party to look into the spoon. The helper is then called, and after carefully examining the spoon, names the one who has looked into it.

The trick is played in this way: When the game leader calls her helper to come in, she assumes the same sitting position as the person who looked into the spoon. If his feet are crossed she crosses her's in the same manner. By comparing the game leader with the other members of the party the helper can tell at a glance who has looked into the spoon. As the attention is centred on the spoon, the trick will not be discovered for some time.

Hat Toss.

The game leader selects two members of the party to choose sides as in a spelling match. When the sides are chosen and lined up facing each other, the game leader takes a hat and stands between the lines, at the head. If it falls with the crown down, those on her right can laugh, but those on her left must keep perfectly sober. If any in that line should laugh he must go over to his opponent's line. If, however, the hat falls with the brim touching the floor, those on the left are to laugh. The point of the game is to make those who are trying to keep from laughing fail and be obliged to go over to the winning side. This is a very simple game, but one that affords no end of amusement.

Clumps.

After a lively game like Hat Toss has been played a quiet one will be appreciated. The game leader will again divide the party into two equal groups and place them in separate rooms. A representative from each group is selected. The two representatives meet in an outer room and together select some object. The representative from the first room goes into the second room, the one from the second room goes to the first room. The object of the game is to find out by questioning the representative what object is selected. The questions must be answered by "yes" or "no." The group which first guesses the object may take a player from the other group. The side winning the greatest number of people wins the game.

Suppose the object is the hour hand on the clock. The question would start in this way. Does it belong to the animal kingdom? Is it a manufactured article? Does it belong to the mineral kingdom? Is it in this city? Is it in this room. When the object is found a new representative is chosen.

Fruit Basket.

An old game, and one that has been very popular, is called "Fruit Basket." The members of the party are seated around the room. The game leader gives each the name of some fruit. She then calls the name of one of the fruits three times. The one having that name must repeat her name once before the leader has finished. If the one called upon fails to do this, she must take the place in the centre and call upon some other member of the group. Suppose one of the group is named Oranges. The leader says, "Oranges, Oranges, Oranges." Before she has finished, the one with that name must respond "Oranges."

Gossip.

The game Gossip shows how a story may be changed as it is told from one person to another. The group leader whispers a sentence to the one sitting at her right. She in turn whispers what she heard to her next neighbor. In this way the story goes around the circle. No one is allowed to whisper the sentence twice. The one receiving the story must pass on what was heard. The last one in line then compares what she heard with the original story. It is amusing to note the changes that have taken place.

Three Questions.

If a group of people are very well acquainted, this game will prove entertaining. A circle is formed. The game leader blindfolds one of the group and places her in the centre of the circle, giving her a cane. The circle marches around until she raps three times on the floor with the cane. They then stop, and she touches one of them with her stick. This one must take hold of the other end of the cane. Holding it like a telephone the one in the centre asks three questions of the one at the other end. If she can guess who answers her questions, she may take her place in the circle, and the one who is caught must go in the centre. The one answering the questions tries in every way to disguise her voice.

TODAY'S STORY

"Bassett," requested Mr. Gunney, leaning over the counter of the general store, "I wish you'd give me 'bout a pound of crackers and mebbe five cents' wuth of cheese. You needn't wrop it up," he went on as Mr. Bassett reached for the twine. "I expect to eat it right here, if you don't mind the crumbs."

Caleb Peaslee, watching placidly, turned to Mr. Gunney.

"Ain't that a kind of light diet for you, Obed?" he asked. "Wife ain't left ye, has she?"

Mr. Gunney shifted his feet and reddened perceptibly.

"Wal, yes," he admitted, "I d'know but ye could call it that. She's gone over to Dedham for the day."

Caleb grinned with neighborly malice.

"She didn't leave a great sight of grub cooked up," he said, "if you're down to crackers and cheese already. What have you ben doin', Obed?"

Obed looked at Caleb with a whimsical smile.

"'Twas my fault, Caleb," he admitted sheepishly, "and now I'm getting paid out for it."

"Prob'ly it was six months ago—my wife says 'twas, but it don't seem nothin' like that long ago to me—that she begun to pester me 'bout fixin' the kitchen chimney. She claimed it didn't draw as it ought to, and, to be honest, there were times when it smoked consid'able. But you know how 'tis. A man does the work that seems to be crowdin' him wust, and lets the rest go with a lick and a promise—and in this case 'bout all the chimley got was the promise.

"Course I was cal'latin' to fix it when I got round to it, but it was one of them jobs that seems 's if they can be done 'bout as well one time as another, and fin'ly my wife quit talkin' 'bout it, and let it go out of my mind complete.

"I noticed from time to time that when she'd be cookin' and I was round the kitchen she'd be kind of short and curt with me, and her mouth would be shut sort of tight; but that ain't oncommon with most women, and it's better to let 'em alone at such times, I've found.

"I s'pose what brought things to a head was my goin' off with Ben Somers yesterday. I suppose I might jest as well and better been at home fixin' that chimley; as I told you, since she quit talkin' 'bout it, I ain't thought of it scurcely. I told her them very words this morn', and they only made her madder.

"'Wal' s'she, 'you pay heed to what I say this time, for it's my last word.

"'There was food 'nough cooked this mornin' for one person's breakfast,' she says, bitin' the words off short, "and I et it myself. What you're goin' to do for breakfast I don't know, but I ain't goin' to get it for you—not on that stove, with the chimley in the shape it is now!

"'I'm goin' to get ready now,' s'she, 'and go over to Dedham for the day. I'll be back tonight, and if by that time you've got that chimley fixed, well and good. But,' she says, with her mouth shut tighter'n any bear trap you ever see, 'not one spoonful of victuals do I cook over that stove till it is fixed—and you can lay your mind to that!'

"And with that," continued Mr. Gunney gloomily, "off she went, and I make no doubt she was in the right on't."

He rose and brushed the cracker crumbs from his lap.

"I guess I'd rather be gettin' back to work on that chimley," he remarked soberly, and Bassett and Mr. Peaslee grinned in sympathy.

Wit and Wisdom

Touching Compliment.

"I do hope you appreciate that in marrying my daughter you marry a large-hearted girl."

"I do, sir! And I hope she inherits those qualities from her father."

Talked It Away.

Young Genius (who has had the talk to himself, and as usual about himself)—Well, good-bye, Mrs. Meltham. It always does me good to come and see you. I had such a headache when I came, and now I've quite lost it."

Mrs. Meltham—Oh, it's not lost; I've got it.

A Possible Cost.

"Talk is cheap," remarked the ready-made philosopher.

"So is dynamite," rejoined Senator Sorghum. "But look at the damage it can do."

CHRISTMAS BELLS.

(By Mrs. F. A. Calder.)

Ring, chiming bells, a joyous strain,
The glad evangel tell again,
Which once angelic minstrels told
To shepherds watching on the wold.

Soft chanting, in their earthward flight,
To God be glory, in the height,
In silvery notes benison, flow,
Peace and good will to men below.

Ah, ne'er, since first that blest refrain,
Floated o'er wild Judea's plain,
Has sorer need, or greater, been
For that sweet solace song, I ween.

For earth is rent with bitter strife,
Discord, dissension, wrong, are rife;
Hatred and crime, wreck, ruin, pain,
Close follow in war's gory train.

Then ring, ye bells, ring loud and clear,
Message of comfort, hope and cheer;
Bid lonely hearts, distressed, forlorn,
Rejoice, for now a Saviour's born.

The Prince of Peace, whose mighty sway
The powers of earth and heaven obey,
All gloom let gladness now dispel,
He reigns supreme and all is well.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review: In a recent issue of the Examiner there appeared a slurring article entitled, 27 Squaws at Chemong Enfranchised, etc.

After a few slurs at the Borden Government it continues with the statement that the Indian women (disrespectfully or ignorantly alluded to as "squaws") were enfranchised for the purpose of the present election.

Now I want to say right here that those same women are entitled to their vote as well as any other person and I think the one who wrote the article is a pretty cheap sport, to slur a few Indian women because the election didn't suit him. And as regards the matter of instructions he is badly fooled if he thinks Indian women don't know how to vote. If there is any one in need of instructions I would say it is the man who wrote that insulting screed. I respectfully suggest that he take a course of instruction as to the proper way to address an Indian woman.

Our men have shown themselves to be just as loyal, just as uncomplaining and have died just as bravely as any on the field of battle. And this in my opinion is a much more honorable thing to do than to write snobbish items for the Examiner.

DEACON S. DOLBY

The Sins of a Perfect Man Find Him Out.

A PAINFUL DUTY PERFORMED.

The Village Gossip Feels It Incumbent Upon Her to Shatter Mrs. Dolby's Illusions—That Lady Threatens Suicide, but Postpones the Event.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright [illegible] Associated Literary Press.]

DEACON DOLBY carelessly announced that he must get some few squash seeds, and Mrs. Dolby remembered that Mr. Bacon had some.

When the deacon had finished his meal he set forth, saying he would be back in an hour. Mrs. Dolby mused:

"There goes the best husband in the state! Is there another man for a thousand miles around that would have thought of squash seeds because he knew that his wife doted on summer squashes? Samuel is the next thing to an angel!"

Halfway to his destination the deacon met Mrs. Tonguelash. He knew her to be a gossip and tried to avoid her.

"Why, Deacon Dolby! How're you been," she cackled, "and how's your dear wife?"

"Tolerable."

"I was thinking this morning that I orter call and tell her that I have a new recipe for making soft soap. It beats the old way. I'm going as far as the store anyway, and I might as well go along to the house."

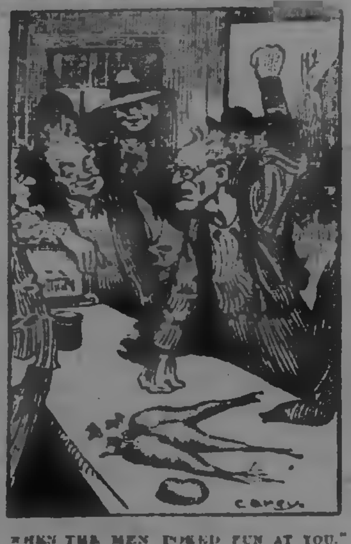
The deacon said things to himself as he passed on and hoped he might get home before Mrs. Tonguelash arrived. It was not to be. He had to call at four different places before he could find the seeds and was gone three hours.

On the kitchen table was a note.

"I am going to hang myself. You will find my dead body in the barn!"

"Humph!" said the deacon, as he began to plant his seeds.

The barn was only a few rods away, but he never looked at it.



"WHEN THE MEN POKED FUN AT YOU."

Mrs. Dolby's dead body at the end of a rope was swaying back and forth in the breeze, but he didn't seem to care.

His task done, he entered the house to get himself some supper. If Mrs. Dolby had hanged herself she couldn't be expected to get supper, nor was the deacon expected to go hungry.

Mrs. Dolby stood at the door for five minutes. Then she spoke:

"Samuel, you did not come to the barn."

The deacon struck at a fly.

"I left you a note stating that I was going to hang myself."

The note lay on the floor.

"You did not come out to look at my dead body!"

He didn't say a word.

"I intended to hang myself, but thought it only right to let you know why."

The deacon's eyebrows went up.

"Mrs. Tonguelash has been here!"

The words were given in a dramatic voice.

"You met her on the street and tried to stop her, but she had a duty to perform, and she could not be turned aside.

"Samuel Dolby, three months ago you gave a stranger $5 for a dime of 1840. He said it would bring $10 in New York. You didn't say a word about it to me. Next day you found you had been made a fool of. When the men poked fun at you what reply did you make?"

The deacon remembered his very words, but evaded the question.

"Here is just what you said. Mr. Tonguelash was there, and he wrote it down. You shouted out:

"'By the living jingo and durn my cats to Jericho, if I ever come across that blasted reptile I'll bust his coconut a yard wide!'"

Mrs. Dolby waited for a moment for the awful words to go echoing around the kitchen and then asked:

"Such awful blasphemy, and all this time I was regarding you as almost an angel! Oh, Samuel!"—

Mrs. Dolby's feelings overcame her, and she sobbed

"Samuel, do you"—

"Yes; I think those squash seeds will be coming up within ten days," he replied as he set off for the barn.

"Samuel didn't show one single sign of guilt, and I'm glad I didn't hang myself," she said as she put the teakettle on.

SIMPLE WINTER GOWN

Though it is simple, and of necessity war times will make for simplicity in winter gowns and winter functions, this creation for both formal and informal wear is adorable. It is of peach georgette gracefully draped and richly trimmed with bands of silver fox. A distinctive feature is the use of long sleeves with low decollete. A dainty ciel blue ribbon encircles the waist and a nosegay combining all the colors of the gown is placed on one shoulder.

EMBROIDERY TO BE REVIVED

France Determined to Re-Establish Industry in Order to Give Her Women Employment.

Paris is quite determined, that is certain, on the vast re-establishment of her business in embroidery. Her women are needleworkers of importance. None is so good on this planet, possibly, unless isolated exceptions in the Indian and Persian countries be taken into account.

Her gentlewomen are trained, as all gentlewomen used to be trained in olden days, before the sewing machine and ready-to-wear garments, in the art of holding a needle filled with fine thread and accomplishing wonders with it.

Money has been scarce among the people in aristocratic segments of French life, and the war has brought about the same kind of situation which existed during the Revolution; those who are too proud to work for their living in other epochs will now do so under the national strain.

Also, there are thousands of Belgian refugees and French women in other classes of life and society who must be supported. France does not believe in the nonproducing consumer.

And so these women and men, too old even to serve in that territory service of bearing the wounded from the trenches of the hills, which has been given to those who do not bear arms and who are sure of their footing and their nerves, are given the gentler service of embroidery for the world's clothes. So every woman who buys a gown that is embroidered in France is helping France.

BROWN SHOES ARE POPULAR

Particular Women Have Refused to Accept the Cloth Top as a Means of Saving Leather.

All the talk about leather conservation, and women signing the pledge against $15 shoes has not interfered one bit with women buying shoes of all leather, and at prices higher than ever before.

Particular women have not accepted the cloth top as a means of saving leather. Fewer freak shoes and colors are shown, but even a conservative model of plain leather is high priced.

Every once in so often commonsense low-heeled English walking boots become the fashion. The "once" comes again this fall, and they are exceptionally good in plain tan, laced. They are not like the gay sport shoe of summer.

There is a craze just now for brown and dark gray boots for dress. Plain leathers with buck tops will be much worn later, in such color combinations as gray and mole color, and brown with beige uppers.

Spot pumps of black patent leather will be much used with white spats or spats in the color of the suit. Evening slippers are of both black and white satin on many of which appear rhinestone buckles.

Whale Steak.

An interesting experiment has been inaugurated at Vancouver, where two thousand pounds of whale steak were offered in the leading fish and meat markets at the price of fivepence a pound. Many citizens took home a sample, but reports are not yet to hand as to the reception accorded the sea dainty by the families.

HE IS SURPRISED AFTER RESULTS

"I'M BEGINNING TO FEEL LIKE NEW MAN," SAYS FORREST, AFTER TAKING TANLAC.

"For three or four years," said William Forrest, 247 [illegible] Crescent, Toronto, "I had suffered from painful, disordered kidneys and nervousness without being able to get anything to help me. My kidneys bothered me constantly and the pain in my back, especially when I stooped over or tried to lift anything, was terrible. My nerves were all to pieces, I had weak, shaky spells, and my hands would tremble so at times I could hardly hold anything. I also had attacks of dizziness, when everything seemed to get dim before my eyes, and my head would swim so I could hardly stand up. I had little or no strength and energy and always felt tired and worn-out.

"I am now on my second bottle of Tanlac and I can certainly tell a big difference in my condition. The pain has almost disappeared from my back now and my kidneys don't bother me anything like they did, and I'm beginning to feel like a new man. My nerves are more quiet and steady and I don't have those weak, dizzy feelings like I did. I am already feeling better in every way than I have in a long time, and am regaining my strength rapidly. I have really been surprised to get such wonderful results in so short a time, and I can recommend Tanlac to all suffering people because I believe it will do them good.

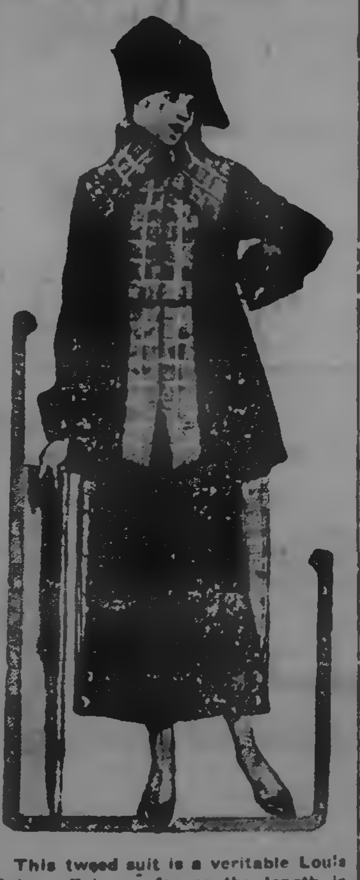
SUIT MADE WITH WAISTCOAT



This tweed suit is a veritable Louis Seize affair, so far as the length is concerned, and is rendered more interesting by being effected in a big bold check. For general utility a dark pepper-and-salt rough tweed is the choice that commends itself, with, for the waistcoat and side pieces of the skirt, a gray and black plaid, overchecked with fine lines of powder blue and yellow. The coat is cut on severely straight lines, although the adept tailor knows how to introduce just a suspicion of shapeliness without detracting from the elongated elegance. A collar that is part of the waistcoat plays a decorative part.

Nellie's Wisdom.

"Mamma, I's got a stomach ache," said Nellie, aged six.

"That's because you're been without lunch. Your stomach is empty. You would feel better if you had something in it."

That afternoon the minister called and in the course of conversation remarked that he had been suffering all day with a severe headache.

"That's because it's empty," said Nellie. "You'd feel better if you had something in it."—Chicago News.

She Knew.

"Everything seems to be going up in price. Would you believe it, it costs almost as much nowadays to dress a child as it does a grown person?" "I don't doubt it at all. Only yesterday I had to buy a new dog collar for Fifi, and the prices have almost doubled."—Detroit Free Press.

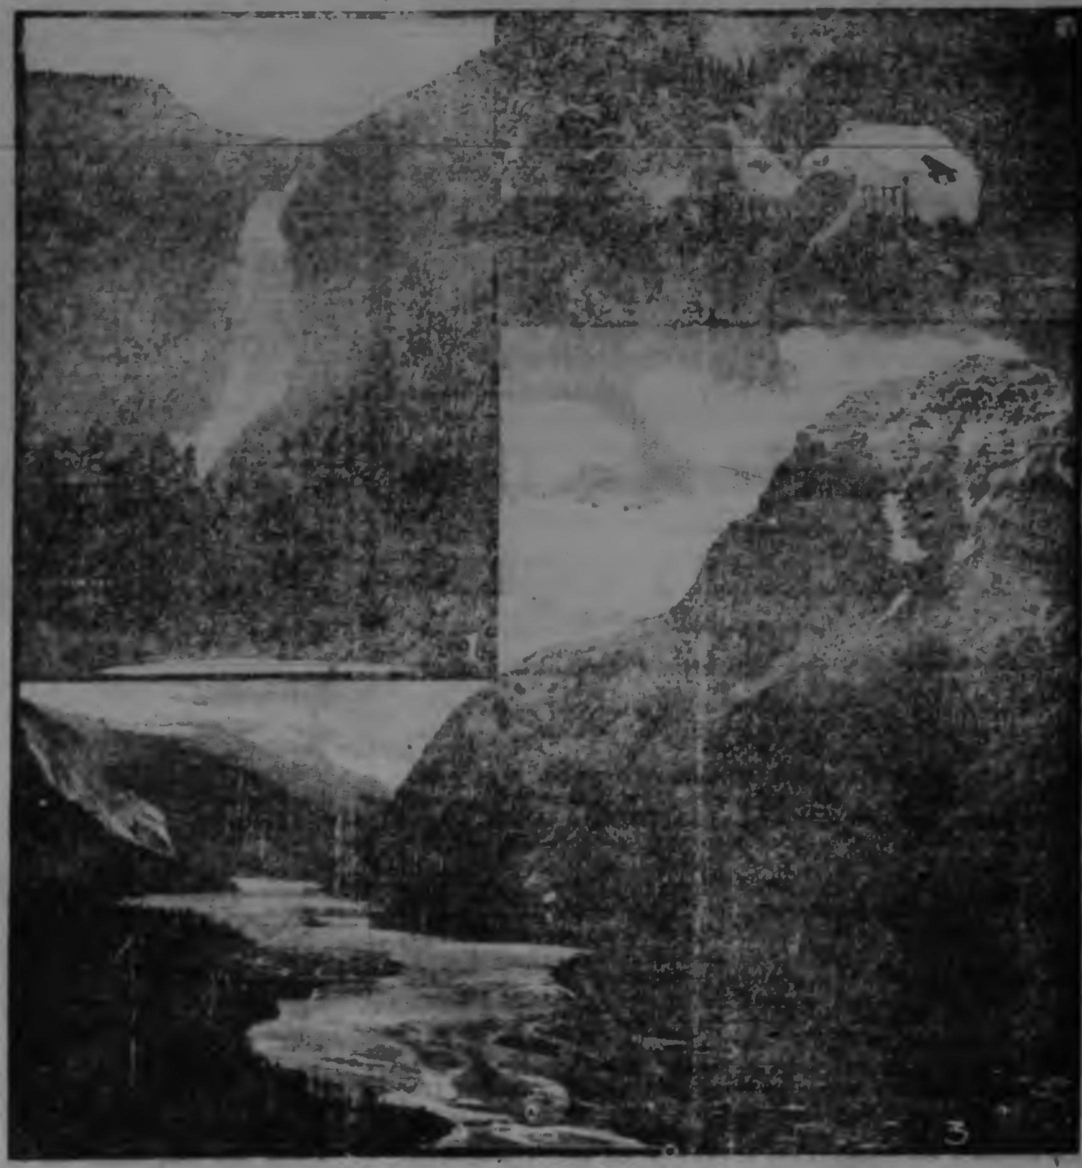
FALLING IN LOVE WITH YOHO



(1) The Famous Takakkaw Falls. (2) Camping under the Takakkaw Falls. (3) Mount Stephen

AMONGST the Canadian Rockies you meet folk from all over the world. And you really do meet them, not just read the tags on their luggage. People who wouldn't dream of following up their inclination to know you if they met you on Michigan Avenue or Broadway, calmly introduce themselves. And you part friends.

I'd been staying at the Glacier, where I knew everybody from the waiters up, and when I had to leave and go east again I'd have cried on Sir Donald's shoulder, if he hadn't been ten thousand feet above sea level and covered with a week's snow at that.

"Oh, but you'll make friends at Field," they told me comfortingly. "Mount Stephen will take Sir Donald's place in your heart."

Field is a little bit of a town that looks as though it had been washed up by the Kicking Horse River and thrown at the feet of Mts. Stephen and Dennis, where it hangs on by means of the long twin-steel rope of the track.

On the train between Field and Lake Louise you pass the gigantic gate posts of the Yoho Valley, a few minutes out of Field. But it took us more than four miles of scenic roadway to reach there, passing en route the aerial silver mine whose great doorway, perched hundreds of feet above us, looked like a swallow's nest for very littleness.

Next morning we were up bright and early for the beautiful drive through the Yoho Valley.

After passing Cache Creek the road turned sharply to the left and we entered the valley that grows narrower and deeper and awesomer and steeper for close on six miles. Here the crystal Kicking Horse falls into the glacial-muddy Yoho, with a result that reminds you of marble cake until the two streams are thoroughly mixed.

Mt. Ogden towers 8,795 feet to our right as we swing round the corner of Mt. Field. Mt. Niles, a thousand feet taller still, lies north again, and beyond is Balfour, another thousand step up into the blue.

The valley narrows. The plucky horses take one switchback after another as the trail goes up the mountain in a series of sharp Z's. The road, however, is a miracle of picturesque engineering.

At last the roaring river—it does roar between the granite bars of its long cage—is a hundred and fifty feet below and the bank on which the horses pause is so steep that it's almost undercut. You can hardly see the headlong Yoho, and if there weren't stout fences on which to lean, undoubtedly mother wouldn't get out of the carriage to love Canada at closer range. As it is, we shiver at the lonesome-awesomeness of this dark gorge.

The valley widens again. There are treed benches rising above it, beyond them steep bare precipices, and higher still the snow.

And then at last we came to Takakkaw.

The Indians looked at the swaying curtain of it and they said to one another, "Takakkaw!" which means "how wonderful." Over on the other side of the valley lies the camp which in a way deserves a "Takakkaw" of its own. There are bough beds and little stoves in every tent; there is the magic teepee in the centre of the clearing where the nightly fire coaxes grizzly stories out of the guides.

Not far from camp there is a big stream coming down the mountainside to the left, which, when it hits the valley branches into a perfect family tree of streamlets, a dozen big ones and dear knows how many grandchildren brooks that run here and there like fresh air excursion kiddies on a farm. Every winter the configuration of the place changes and the streams shout and begin all over again. No wonder the trail got lost.

We raced over the boulders. But boulders are treacherous animals to play with and will bite you in the back. This one didn't approve of being raced over. The worm turned. I turned too—not quite a somersault—landing on my hands and knees in one of the grandchildren-brooklets.

There was a long hot ten minutes silence. I was glad the sun on the stones were strong and drying.

"Takakkaw!" I cried, the fountains of my womanly sympathy carefully corked: "Did you go and fall in love with the Yoho too?"

ON THE FUNNY SIDE

Nearly Done

Jimmie was going out with his mother one afternoon and had been sent upstairs to get ready. After a long wait the mother called up the stairs: "Hurry down, Jimmie, we're late now. Have you got your shoes on yet?"

"Yes," replied the boy; "all but two."

Scientifically Considered.

"I think a man derives his mentality and character from his mother," remarked the student of heredity.

"Then," commented Miss Cayenne, "the mother of a slacker must have been one of those girls who manicure their nails and eat chocolates while mother does the housework."

Seems Fair Enough.

"Would you die for your country?"

"Yes, I would," answered the patriotic citizen, "and if I'm ever called on to make such a sacrifice I hope the fact that I don't know a single stanza of the national anthem will not be held against me."

CORDUROY USED AS LINING

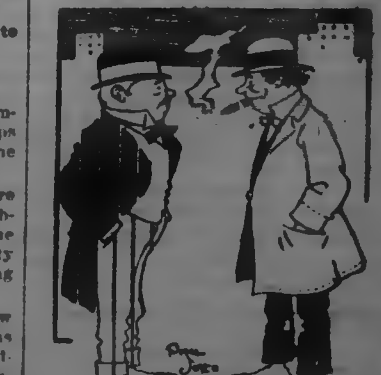
Ribbed Velvet Gives Substance to Coats Whose Outer Fabric Is of Light Weight Material.

Among the new ideals for the coming season are long coats and wraps lined with corduroy instead of the usual satin brocade or fur.

The lining of ribbed velvet will give substance to coats whose outer fabric is of light weight material. The interior color may be of white, putty or any of the pastel colors, according to that of the coat material.

It is yet to be seen just how the new idea will take. Two or three seasons ago a prominent French couturiere advanced the lining of linen for the jackets of silk. The sheer novelty of the thing attracted attention, but beyond that the vogue was not advanced. It is thought that something of the same sort may happen to the transposition for corduroy from the fabric of outer composition to that of the lining.

ONE MAN'S CONCLUSION.



"Watches and political candidates are much alike."

"What's the matter now?"

"That is, unless they run well they are no good!"

MAYORALTY ELECTION

GEO. H. DUNCAN'S ADDRESS

To the Electors of the City of Peterborough:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

I have the pleasure of soliciting your votes, sympathy and support in favor of my candidature for the Mayoralty at the coming election.

I have been one of your representatives for nine years, during which time I have served on all standing committees and many special committees, and in addition to this I have acted as chairman of most of the committees, which you will admit, should give me a very comprehensive knowledge of the workings of your City Council and qualify me for occupying the position of Mayor.

In deciding to be a candidate at the present election, in summing up the situation, I could not see how I could reasonably refuse the request of my friends. I strongly felt that, with nine years' experience, the people would expect nothing else but that I would be a contestant, and that it would be manifestly unfair to those who had supported me for nine years to fail to offer my services at this time.

In these days, when so many nations are engaged in a bloody and expensive war, and the financial machinery of the world is out of gear and general business conditions are so much disturbed, I am of the opinion that the greatest prudence should be exercised in the city's affairs. Much attention will have to be directed te sewage disposal with a view to disposing of the sewage of the city by artificial means instead of helping to pollute the waters of the Otonabee. The successful completion of the outfall sewer and the sewage disposal plant are matters of chief importance. If elected, these will have my close and most careful attention.

There is also the building of the new bridge over the Otonabee at Hunter street, which is supposed to be built by the end of 1919. This is one of the matter's this year's Council will have to deal with, and a great deal will depend upon labor conditions.

I will strongly oppose any further expensive pavements on our streets under present conditions.

I am in favor of extending our present street car lines to the north and west and to East City, so as to give a better service to the public generally.

I may mention that I have considered it my duty to identify myself with various public movements for the general moral and civic welfare of the city. I trust that in no case have I shown anything but a loyal desire for the furtherance of those measures which tended to promote good citizenship.

It has always been my policy, in cases where difficulties have arisen between the city and private parties, to endeavor to settle these matters without recourse to litigation, and by arriving at some solution that would be mutually satisfactory to both parties.

The securing of new industries consistent with the best interests of our city has always had, and will continue to have, my very best support.

My business record in the city I may leave in your hands. During the past 23 years I have been in business for myself. Faithful attention to business has brought some of its rewards, and I know of nothing that would bring my business methods under your reproach.

In conclusion, let me say that if elected I will be your Mayor, not of any section of the people, but all the people, and my election will be the assurance that all will be equally and fairly treated. I ask your vote and support, not in the hope that my election may increase my private gain or add to my personal ambition, but in the hope that I may be enabled to justify your confidence by the results of a sincere, earnest and honest effort to serve the city of which we are all so proud.

With renewed thanks for your kind support in the past and the hope that the year 1918 may be a year of harmony and progress for Peterborough, believe me,

Yours faithfully,
G. H. DUNCAN.

By the Professor.

Professor Jones and Mrs. Jones were both of the type colloquially known as strawberry blonds. In accordance with the immemorial custom of professors' families on small salaries at this particular southern college, the Jones family grew apace. Mary, the first, was born, and her hair came perilously near to being cerise. The twins lost to Mary in respect of red hair by just a shade. Johnny, the next, made fair at three months to make Mary seem a neutral color. Now, Mrs. Jones longed for just one black haired one. When the learned professor of ology from the scientific department dropped in for supper Mrs. Jones almost tearfully propounded to him a question.

"Oh, doctor," she asked, "do you think it must always be hereditary?"

The doctor looked from the aureoles of Professor and Mrs. Jones to the successive four alarms of fire red hair on the little Joneses.

"Not so much that," he assured her at last, "as redheditary."—New York Post.

Suspicious.

"There's something the matter with that man. I know it."

"What do you mean?"

"There's something about his character that is bad."

"How can you say that? He's a man of standing in this community."

"I don't care. I wouldn't trust him."

"What a silly idea! His honor has never been questioned."

"Oh, yes, it has, and that's why I say that with all his fine outward show there's something bad behind him."

"I don't see what makes you say that. Everybody knows he's all right."

"My suspicions have been confirmed. Wasn't he drawn on a jury the other day and didn't the lawyer for the defense peremptorily discharge him? That lawyer wouldn't have him in the case for anything."—Detroit Free Press.

A Mark Twain Story.

Upon one occasion when Mark Twain was called upon to speak at a public dinner he took for his theme "Honesty." He said that when he was a boy at home he one day saw a cartful of melons. He was only a boy—and he was tempted; besides, he liked melons. The opportunity was there; there was little or no risk of detection.

"I sneaked up to that cart," said Mark, "and I stole a melon. I went into a passage to demolish it. But I had no sooner set my teeth in it than I paused; a strange feeling came over me. I came to a quick resolution. Firmly I walked up to that cart, placed the stolen melon where I got it from and— took a ripe one!"

MIXING SLANG.

Canadians Are Learning Many Popular English Words.

The battlefields of France have served as a clearing house for slang, and many exchanges have taken place between the Canadians and the English of expressive words that the boys are adding to the language of to-morrow. The British Tommies took readily to "attaboy," "gink," and "Bonehead," and similar Americanisms, and in return the Canadians have secured a great deal of British slang, which is on the whole more picturesque than the American variety. Early in the game the Canadians learned the classic "Apoo," which is the British Tommy's rendering of the French phrase which means "There is no more room," and also to refer to a certain brand of cheap cigarettes popular throughout the British army as "singles to Woking," "singles" being short for "single tickets," and Woking a town that is chiefly famous for its big crematorium! The Canadian soon learns, too, to refer to all cheap cigarettes as "gaspers," and to any soft job as a "cushy" one. Even a light wound is a "cushy" or a "blighty" one, in that, while not disabling the recipient, it will restore him to "Blighty" (England) and comfort. The Canadian learns that to be reproved is to be "ticked off," and that to be jeered at is to "get the bird," this being theatrical slang, a performer who is hissed being said to have "got the bird,"—the "bird" in question being supposedly a goose, which when annoyed, hisses its wrath.

At the hospital, either in the wards or the recreation room, the collector of outre, neologisms would have a happy hunting ground. 'Pass the oojah,' says the one-armed man who is playing billiards. What is the oojah? The oojah is any object in heaven or earth; it is the thing which has no name or the name of which you have momentarily forgotten. The one armed man, about to make his stroke, requires the little twisted wire bridge, mounted on a lead pedestal, that forms the cue's rest which, poor chap! he ought to have formed with his lost hand. So he demands the oojah, which is army for what-d'ye-call-it. And his opponent, whose face is so disfigured that he has had to be given a molded mask to cover part of it, dubs his mask his oojah.

"Oojah may have come from the East, with 'cushy,' and 'blightly,' and 'bondbook' (a rifle), and 'Sieeda' (good morning), and 'burgoo' (porridge), a host of other jolly synonyms. But where did 'click' and 'rumble' originate? To be rumbled is to be found out: you may be 'rumbled swinging the lead,' which means that your shamming or shirking is detected. But if you apply for a 'soft job,' and obtain it' you have 'sucked.'"

Papineau—Soldier and Patriot.

The death of Major Talbot Papineau of the Princess Patricias Light Infantry in Flanders removes a young French-Canadian leader who, because of his aptitude for public affairs as well as his ancestry, commanded the respect and support of many of the younger generation throughout the Province of Quebec. The grandson of the leader of the Rebellion of 1837, and a cousin of Mr. Henri Bourassa, Talbot Papineau was a keen soldier, a devoted patriot, and an ardent supporter of the justice of Britain's cause. No finer or more logical defence of the attitude of Canada and the Empire toward the war has been penned by any Canadian than Papineau's letter of remonstrance against his cousin's dangerous utterances.

And now the gallant gentleman who tried to stem the tide of anti-war sentiment among his fellow-country men of Quebec has given his life for the cause he so whole-heartedly espoused. He might have lived in ignoble ease had he so desired. He might have chosen, without reproach after his fine record of active service, to be known as the Canadian historian of the war, for that post would have been his had he continued to do the staff work to which he had been assigned. But Papineau was a fighting man, not a bomb proofer. He went back to his battalion feeling that by so doing he could set an example to others as well as perform the service most congenial to him. For Talbot Papineau the bugle will not sound again. May his death in freedom's cause stir like a bugle call the people of his beloved Province, whose failure to rise to a great opportunity saddened and perplexed him, but never destroyed his faith in and affection for the French-Canadian race. English-speaking Canadians will not soon forget that from the same historic stem sprang Henri Bourassa, the nationalist, and Talbot Papineau, soldier and patriot, who died that liberty might not perish from the earth.

Bridge of the Brocade Girdle.

One of Japan's most interesting monuments of antiquity is the Bridge of the Brocade Girdle, built in the sixteen hundreds, a mass of pegs and crude joints—not a nail of metal in the entire length of seven hundred and fifty feet, and as good to-day as when built.

If milk be used to soften boot polish it will improve the gloss.

Brusque Criticism.

In the days when Rossini, the composer of "William Tell," was at the height of his fame, an unknown young composer brought him a manuscript to look over.

"What is it?" asked the great man.

"It's—it's a funeral march in memory of Weber," stammered the young aspirant.

Rossini set the music up before him on the piano and read it through rapidly. Then he turned and handed it back to its owner.

"Humph!" he growled. "It would have been better if you had died and Weber had written the funeral march!"

CHRISTMAS SPECIALS AT EMPIRE THEATRE.

(As a special holiday attraction for tonight and tomorrow (Christmas Day) The Empire is offering that pleasing film story "The Little Duchess," in which the famous youthful actress, Madge Evans, stars. This will be found a real Christmas treat, for the Empire's patrons, as Madge Evans is the cleverest child actress on the screen today. She is also the most beautiful child imaginable, and all who see this picture will want to see it again. The other numbers on this big Yuletide program are the Triangle Keystone comedy "Black Eyes and Blue" and Mutt and Jeff in "A Chemical Calamity."

For Wednesday the Empire is billing "The Spreading Dawn," with America's greatest emotional actress, Jane owl, as the leading star. Jane Cowl has been through a long gallery of stage successes and is the latest star of the spoken drama to heed the siren call of the screen.

CITY CANNOT LOOK FOR REDUCED EXPENSES WHILE WAR CONTINUES

Committed to Heavy Necessary Expenditures Which Cannot Be Avoided and Patriotic Demands Must be Met.

The Mayor, in his retiring address last Friday evening, recapitulated this city's financial condition and its industrial prospects as follows:

There is consideration that must be taken into account. The increases in the prices of materials and of wages have increased the cost of work done by the city as it has with all others. The city cannot build a sidewalk or a sewer, grade a roadway, repair a street, or remove snow, or do any work at the same cost that it did a few years ago, and the same cause makes its fire and police departments more expensive. There increased costs must effect the rate of taxation.

As to the future, so long as present conditions continue, we cannot look for reduced expenses and with further municipal grants for patriotic purposes, the expenses will increase, either by a large increase by placing the grants on the rate for the year or by a small but longer continued increase by the issue of debentures and the constant levy during the period of the debentures of interest and sinking funds.

The city is committed to some heavy necessary expenditures. A sewage disposal plant must be constructed, and the overhead bridge built over the river at Hunter street. The issue of debentures for these works, which must be made, will add to the interest and sinking fund charges very materially. As debentures that are outstanding fall due and are paid off, the present demands for these purposes will be reduced, but there are no considerable sums in debentures maturing for a few years. Only $8,000.00 fell due this year, and the amounts of debentures maturing in the next ten years are as follows:

	General
1919	$ 7,000.00
1920	34,000.00
1921	29,000.00
1922	6,100.00
1923	13,800.00
1924	33,000.00
1925
1926	26,200.00
1927	25,850.00
	174,950.00

L. Imp.	P. Sch.	Total
$ 4,410.92	—	$ 11,410.92
15,374.73	18,000.00	67,374.73
1,445.43	10,000.00	40,445.43
297.85		6,397.85
4,972.29		18,772.29
		33,000.00
6,026.60	6,500.00	12,526.60
7,200.63		33,400.63
28,122.55		53,972.55
67,851.00	34,500.00	277,301.00

These debentures are those that are chargeable to the general rates. In addition to these debentures payable by frontage rates to the amount of $81,291.10 will mature in the coming decade and, while these will not effect the general rate, they will reduce the taxes on the properties against which they are charged.

These amounts, maturing in the next ten years will not offset the debentures that will have to be issued for necessary works I have referred to. A growth of the city, adding to the amount of the assessment by the addition of new buildings and increases in values, which we look forward to, will assist to meet the demands, but this should not be discounted by new undertakings, because it will be needed to help to finance the works to which we are committed and to stabilize the rate when these works are carried out.

The main purposes to be kept in view, therefore, are to curtail expenditures so far as it can be done, to undertake no new works that will add to the debenture debt that are not imperatively needed and to work for the continued growth of the city, by the establishment of new industries and otherwise.

Frontage Up To 1927 (Inc.).

It is shown by the last published Government report that the taxation in Peterborough per head of population for municipal purposes, $10.91 per capita, is the third lowest in the cities of Ontario, and that the lowest is only 60 cents lower while the highest is $31.34 more. For municipal and school purposes combined the rate per head in Peterborough is $16.60 and is the sixth lowest of the Ontario cities, being $1.85 higher than the lowest and $33.76 lower than the highest. The net debt per head, $73.94, is the second lowest of the cities, the lowest being $62.20 and the highest $497.12.

Industrial.

While during the past three or four years there has not been the expansion in general manufacturing that there was in the preceding years, Peterborough has progressed in this direction. New factories have been established and several of the older factories have been enlarged, some of them considerably, and we have all seen with keen satisfaction the rebuilding of the great Quaker Oats plant. Several manufacturing concerns with which we have had negotiations decided that for the present they would not take any action, as the uncertain condition of business, the cost of building, the difficulty of procuring capital and other war conditions caused them to be cautious about branching out or starting new enterprises. But there are concerns which have in mind establishing factories in Canada as soon as conditions are more favorable, and, even if there is not a prospect of many manufacturing companies taking such action at this time, the present is a good time to make the city known, so that they will have Peterborough in mind. The Council, under the direction of the chairman of the Manufacturers' Committee has taken steps to make Peterborough better known, and this year published a small but useful pamphlet and is advertising in Canadian and United States papers. It is important that we should be ever on the alert to secure new industries, especially industries of a substantial character, such as we have here, and the seed being sown will bring forth fruit when the harvest time comes. Peterborough has been conservative, compared with many other places, in its policy of securing new industries, and consequently has not met with the losses that many places have, but the natural and acquired advantages that we possess, backed by enterprise and a sound policy of encouraging substantial industries, has been very successful in the past and I have no doubt whatever will continue to be successful. This is a manufacturing centre, and the progress of the city depends upon the activities of its factories and the securing of new ones, and we must bear this in mind and lose no opportunity for advancing the manufacturing importance of the city.

MEMBERSHIP IN THE Y.M.C.A.

The Y.M.C.A. building will be open as usual on Christmas day. On the evening of Christmas (Tuesday) a free entertainment will be given to members of the Boys' Department and their friends. About one hundred stereoptican slides will be used illustrating the story of Ben Hur and presenting a number of popular songs.—Every boy is urged to be present. This entertainment will be given in the gymnasium. Parents are also invited to attend and occupy seats in the gallery of the gymnasium.

Parents should not fail to include a Y.M.C.A. membership in their Christmas presents for this is a present that will bring enjoyment to a boy for the twelve long months of the year.

A special entertainment is being planned for the evening of January 8th, the proceedings of this entertainment to be devoted to paying the expenses of a few delegates to the Boys' Conference at Belleville January 17th, to 20th. This will be a very pleasing entertainment and should be well patronized in view of its very worthy object.

He Had Seldom.

The teacher of a village school was one day examining a few of her select pupils in grammar. "Stand up, Freddie, and make me a sentence containing the word 'seldom'," she said, pointing to a small boy. Freddie paused as if in thought; then, with a flush of triumph on his face, replied: "Last week father had five horses, but yesterday he seldom."

DE LAVAL BY-LAW ENDORSED

The following resolution was passed unanimously by the City Council:

Whereas when the DeLaval Company was established here a portion of the site, a strip on the north, was reserved for a street in case it should be needed in the future;

And whereas the Company now needs a portion of this reservation to provide for its expanding business and wishes to expend at once $7000.00 to $8000.00 in manufacturing buildings upon it;

And whereas Henry Hope & Sons, the only other owners of property adjoining the reservation, have filed with the City a consent to 42 feet of the reservation being closed;

And whereas the closing of the 42 feet and its use by the DeLaval Company would still leave a right-of-way of 18 feet, sufficient for laying sewers and for providing for such traffic as might develop;

And whereas the closing of this portion of the street and giving it to the Company will enable them to provide for their growing business, which has expanded largely since their factory was established here and is growing;

And whereas it is in the interest of the City to facilitate the growth of the industry;

Resolved that this Council having submitted a by-law to a vote of the electors to close that part of the street and give it to the Company, wishes to strongly commend the by-law to the electors and recommend them to support the by-law by voting for it on New Year's Day.

A DAY WILL DO IT

People who suffer from dyspepsia, indigestion, acidity of the stomach are sometimes under the impression they have to continue to suffer from their ailment and will be unable to obtain relief.

Dr. Bantas Dyspepsia Tablets are a positive cure for diseases arising from imperfect digestion. Headaches, soreness in the bones and limbs are frequently caused by poisonous gases being absorbed into the system and the kidneys are overtaxed in their effort to expell these gases. Dr. Bantas Dyspepsia Tablets will prevent the formation of gas, assist digestion and strengthen the entire system. The manufacturers are so confident that these tablets will do what we claim for them that your dealer is authorized to refund your money if they fail to give you satisfaction. Will you try them and be convinced. They are sold by one reliable dealer in each county. Sold in Peterborough at Lynch's Drug Store, 168 Hunter street. Price 50c per boxx. Mail orders attended to promptly.

Greetings

We send you our Heartiest Wish that every moment may be golden with Christmas Cheer and that each remembrance be bright ~~with pleasure~~ today and in the years to come.

May this be the Best Christmas you have ever had, and the worst you ever will have.

A Merry, Merry Christmas and many of them to you and yours.

PHENOMENAL PROGRESS AND EXPANSION REPORTED BY ROYAL BANK OF CANADA

During Past Year Bank Has Made Gain of Over Eighty-Two Millions in Assets And Over Fifty-Two Millions in Deposits. Full Assistance Given Dominion And British Governments. Strong Organization Chief Factor in New Records Established.

Montreal, Dec. 24.—(Special.) The annual statement of the Royal Bank of Canada for the fiscal year ending Nov. 30, 1917, is a most striking and valuable testimonial to Canada's financial strength.

For a number of years the giant strides made by this bank have been among the outstanding features of the expansion enjoyed by our larger Canadian financial institutions, but the wonderful records of previous years were excelled last year in point of growth of assets, of increase in deposits and of general business handled.

The bank has steadily strengthened its organization in every part of the Dominion, and the benefits of this organization are manifested in the increased business of the country which the bank now enjoys.

Canada has been confronted with unprecedented problems during the war period, and undoubtedly many dangers have been avoided because of the strength of the leading banks. While growing by leaps and bounds, the management of the Royal has kept it in a strong and liquid position. A special feature of this year's statement is afforded by the accounts indicating the manner in which the bank has rendered assistance to the Dominion and Imperial Governments in financing the war.

Every part of the general statement of assets and liabilities affords some indication of the remarkable manner in which the Royal has steadily forged ahead.

Features of Year's Business.

Total assets have jumped to $335,574,186, an increase of $82,000,000 for the past twelve months alone. This increase in the one year is equal to the bank's total assets ten years ago, after 35 years of business. In the past two years the increase in assets has amounted to $137,000,000. A closer study of the statement shows more clearly how the bank is benefiting from its strong organization in every section of the Dominion, as deposits have increased over $50,000,000 during the year, and almost $100,000,000 in the past two years.

Commercial loans in Canada show an increase of $16,000,000 for the year, largely due to the acquisition of the Quebec Bank.

The bank's deposit in the Central Gold Reserves has increased to $16,000,000 from $6,500,000, an increase of $9,500,000 during the year. The bank's holdings of Dominion and Provincial Government securities increased from $1,029,374 to $22,322,197, and the Canadian, municipal and British, foreign and colonial public securities from $14,012,086 to $21,586,545, representing financial operations in connection with the war.

Total deposits now stand at $252,987,382, as compared with $200,227,595 a year ago, and $154,976,327 two years ago. Of this total, deposits not bearing interest now stand at $70,498,667, compared with $59,365,396, and deposits bearing interest $182,488,715 as against $140,862,199, a year ago.

Substantial Increase in Earnings.

The very much larger business handled has permitted of a substantial increase in earnings. The profits for the year amounted to $2,327,979, equal to 18.03 per cent. on the capital, as compared with $2,111,307 in the previous year. These profits added to the balance of profit and loss at the end of the previous year brought the total amount available for distribution up to $3,180,325. This amount was distributed as follows: Regular dividends, $1,549,404; transferred to officers' pension fund $100,000; written off bank premises account, $250,000; war tax on bank note circulation, $128,357; contribution to Patriotic Fund, $60,000; transferred to reserve fund, $528,300. This left a balance of $564,264 to be carried forward to profit and loss. The bank reports an increase in the reserve fund from $12,560,000 to $14,000,000. The addition is represented by the transfer of $528,000 from the profits of the year and an amount of $911,700, being the premium on new capital stock issued to Quebec Bank shareholders at the time of the absorption.

This places the reserve of the bank in a very comfortable position, as it now totals $14,000,000, as against a paid-up capital of $12,911,700.

A knowledge of the progress and expansion enjoyed during the past year can be quickly obtained from the following comparative statement of the principal accounts at the end of the fiscal year Nov. 30, 1916, and Nov. 30, 1917:

	Nov. 30, 1916	Nov. 30, 1917

Western Wheat.

One hundred million bushels of grain were loaded and handled over the lines of the Canadian Northern Railway System in Western Canada during the crop year ended August 31st. In all 88,953 cars were handled over its lines in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta, 60,551 cars being moved through to Port Arthur and points east of that Lake Superior port. Wheat constituted the major portion of the total handlings, and was destined to relieve to a considerable degree the intense demand of the war-wracked peoples on the other side of the Atlantic.

In 1898, when the influence of the Canadian Northern Railway construction was beginning to be reflected in larger production on the western plains, the entire crop attained to less than 57 million bushels according to figures of the Department of the Interior. Accordingly the grain loaded and handled over the lines of the Canadian Northern — and a great deal of it produced from territory opened up for settlement since 1898—is almost double the western Canada production of 19 years ago. The difference is almost incalculable between the cash returns from the two crops to the farmer and to the manufacturers who provide the goods western Canadians need.

There are no statistics available of the capacity of the grain elevators in Canada in 1898, but official figures of the Department of the Interior show that in 1900 there were in Canada 426 elevators and 97 warehouses of a total capacity of 18,329,351 bushels. In 1916 and 1917 there were 3,360 elevators of a total capacity of 197,844,000 bushels.

Of these Manitoba has a capacity of 22,774,000; Saskatchewan, 65,625,000; Alberta, 25,886,000, and British Columbia, 1,793,000. The capacity of the terminal elevators in Ontario is given at 41,750,000 bushels. These are located chiefly at Port Arthur and Fort William, at the head of Canadian Great Lakes navigation. The C. N. R. elevator at Port Arthur, capacity 9,500,000 bushels, being the largest consolidated elevator plant in the world.

A Pessimist.

"You used to say you trusted to the wisdom of the plain people."

"Yes," replied Mr Growcher. "But where are you going to find them? The public is getting some remarkably fancy notions these days."—Washington Star.

Smoke Nuisance.

The family doctor was paying a semi-social, semi-official visit. As he took a leisurely departure he paused to discuss with Margaret's mother the general health conditions of the city.

"We're not so badly off—comparatively, that is," he said. "For one thing, there are only two uncontrolled, unmitigated smoke nuisances in town."

From the sofa in the corner Margaret spoke:

"Yes, doctor, I know," said she—"nana and Uncle Jim."—Delineator.

Synopsis of Canadian Northwest Land Regulations

The sole head of a family or any male over 18 years old, who was at the commencement of the present war, and has since continued to be, a British subject or a subject of an allied or neutral country, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion Land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for District. Entry by proxy may be made on certain conditions. Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of land in each of three years.

In certain districts a homesteader may secure an adjoining quarter-section as pre-emption. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Reside six months in each of three years after earning homestead patent and cultivate 50 acres extra. May obtain pre-emption patent as soon as homestead patent on certain conditions.

A settler after obtaining homestead patent, if he cannot serve a pre-emption, may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

Holders of entries may count time of employment as farm laborers in Canada during 1917, as residence duties under certain conditions.

When Dominion Lands are advertised or posted for entry, returned soldiers who have served overseas and have been honorably discharged, receive one day priority in applying for entry at local Agent's Office (but not Sub-Agency). Discharge papers must be presented to Agent.

Air Engineers in the War

THE endeavors of aeronautical engineers to surpass the best efforts of the enemy are responsible for the fantastic speeds now achieved. Increasing speed is obtained by increasing the engine power, and decreasing weight and resistance. Monoplanes, including the Fokker and Morane-Saulenier, soon reached the limit of their development, and were discarded in favor of biplanes and triplanes. The rotary motor likewise went by the board, to be replaced by fixed motors of the general style used on automobiles, but infinitely lighter and more powerful. Minor constructional details have been given the most minute consideration; the number of brace wires has been reduced to a minimum; hundreds of experiments have been made to determine the most efficient cross-section for a strut; even the taper given to the end of the exhaust pipe is the result of painstaking calculation.

The limit has not yet been reached. France has new machines in construction which will out-distance and out-climb everything now on the front, and we have reason to believe that the Germans, likewise, are about to bring out something good. It must not be forgotten that there exists, always, the possibility of some really radical development. Progress thus far, great though it is, has all been along the same well-defined lines, but that does not bar the possibility of some startling invention which will start designers working along wholly new lines.

The tremendous development of the avion de chasse had a natural reaction on all other types of airplanes. From the standpoint of convenience the old "pusher" type of machine was ideal for reconnaissance and artillery control. The observer's seat was forward, where he had an unobstructed view, and where he could easily communicate with the pilot. But these machines too easily fell victims to the fast enemy. The mass of brace wires, and the motor and propeller in the rear, made them undefendable from attack from behind. Their only chance in a combat lay in keeping face to face with the enemy. Slow-manoeuvering as they were, this was well nigh an impossibility, and losses were high. Such machines, now, are never used over the enemy lines. The few that remain on the front are used only for the work that can be done in the interior of the friendly lines.

For work over the enemy we now use exclusively airplanes which are well suited to defense, and which are faster than were the earlier avions de chasse. To judge by their formidable armament one would call them fighting planes, as indeed they are. An airplane may be intended solely for photographic reconnaissance, yet the only feature that distinguishes it for that purpose will be the camera trap between the observer's feet. Outside of that, every detail is designed with an eye toward service in a combat. The observer's seat is away behind, his range of vision is seriously limited, and communication with the pilot is difficult, but he is well situated to stand off an attack. The observer has a movable machine-gun, and there is another one forward for the pilot, fixed, and controlled as on an avion de chasse. When on reconnaissance or artillery control the observer keeps a careful lookout behind, ready at any instant to change from wireless key to machine-gun.

The increase in power and number of avions de chasse has led to the development of a new sort of observation machine, or rather to the resurrection and improvement of a type once discarded. This is the triplane, or three-seater, a large, fairly fast machine, carrying, beside pilot and observer, a machine-gunner. Its strong point is its almost perfect defense. The observer is forward, where he has all the advantages of view that were offered in the old "pushers," while the machine gunner is behind where he can meet attack from that direction. Gunner and observer each have twin machine-guns. Sometimes the gunner has a third, especially placed for shooting downward, and in some cases there are two more controlled by the pilot. With seven guns, or even with five, well handled, they are no easy prey. Conjointly this type of machine has another advantage, which is appreciated only by an observer. In a biplane the observer must interrupt his work every few seconds to look around for enemy planes, but in the triplane the gunner keeps the lookout, leaving the observer free to do his work without interruption.

The Caproni used successfully by the Italians as a bombarder, was the forerunner of the present triplane. The Caproni has three motors, and carries two pilots and one machine-gunner, so, in point of defense, is no better than a biplane. The present triplane was developed by the French and English, along separate lines, but it was not long before the idea was adopted by the Germans. The Gothas, used in the recent London raids, were of this type.

The beginnings of the Gotha were similar to those of the Fokker; just as the Fokker was inspired by the Morane-Saulenier, the Gotha was inspired by the English Handly-Page. Last winter, before they had been put on the front, one of the early Handly-Pages was sent from England to Dunkirk, carrying some $6,000 worth of motor parts that were urgenly required at the Dunkirk air station. The weather was such that no airplane should have have been allowed to go out. The English pilot became completely lost in the fog and eventually landed behind the German lines.

Lost Her Place.

Gertrude, aged three, sat in her high chair at the dinner table turning about in her fingers a small ear of corn, from which she had been nibbling a row at a time. Suddenly she burst into tears.

"What is the matter, dear?" asked her mother.

"I've lost my place!" sobbed the little one.—Delineator.

Anxiety.

"I understand that you are going to retire from politics," said the friend.

"Well," replied Senator Sorghum, "I put that rumor out among my constituents as a sort of feeler. It was received with so much enthusiasm that I'm afraid it's going to come true."—Washington Star.

Inheritance Tax Argument

Inheritance taxes are very heavy. Unlike Fire hazard, they are not merely possible, they are absolutely certain.

They deplete your estate at once, and to your heirs represent a specific and definite loss of money.

In New York a $250,000 estate would pay a combined federal and state tax of about $12,000. If left to a friend or distant relative, about $22,000. The John Jacob Astor estate paid $3,150,000. J. P. Morgan has insured his life for $2,500,000 to cover a similar loss.

Thus the estate is provided promptly with the ready cash to pay this tax and other expenses without the need of hurriedly disposing of securities or other assets, perhaps at a loss, to meet such needs. The logic of the situation urges immediate action. Premium rates, however, low, advance with age, and so does the possibility of entering the physically impaired group and losing the opportunity to secure this protection.

Knowing that this loss is actually coming, it is simply a matter of ordinary business prudence to guard against it. The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada offer you a plan to do so at very low cost.

Will Turkey Make Peace?

IN the intervals of his massacres, whether in Anatolia or Syria, the Turk has had time to count the cost. As the days go by, and it becomes manifestly more obvious that the fortunes of the Central Powers are waning, he begins to wonder whether the massacres have been fraught with all the immunity to himself which he was led to anticipate. That portion, therefore, of Pashadom which is not irretrievably committed to the murders of the Armenians and Jews, begins to look more and more askance at Berlin, and more and more in the direction of the pro-Ally minority in the country, which has been silenced ever since the day when Enver Pasha sent the Turkish fleet to the bombardment of Odessa.

Enver himself would probably never contemplate a surrender to the Allies. He is too severely compromised in the Armenian massacres for that. Besides he is a German to the core, by which is meant that his instincts of government are those prevalent in the Central autocracies rather than among the allied democracies. But with Talaat it is a little different. He lacks Enver's fanaticism. He turns almost naturally towards the point of safety, with the result that at the present moment, though he is as deeply involved as Enver in the Armenian massacres, he has begun to look somewhat restlessly over his shoulder in the direction of London and Paris. If Talaat were once convinced that Germany's was a lost cause, and if he once began to believe that it was possible for him to escape from his own past, by making terms with the enemy in the gate, there is no reason to suppose that he would hesitate for one moment in so doing. At the same time, though Enver and Talaat represent, for the moment, the power of the Caliph, inasmuch as they have the full support of the German bayonets, none the less, there are other statesmen in Turkey who, though during the Duumvirate they have ceased to count for anything, would, by the slightest turn of the political wheel, be brought to the top with the same suddenness with which Enver and Talaat would be submerged.

It is the object of all those elements in the Empire, then, which have never believed in, or which at all events have lost their trust in the power of Berlin, to combine in order to purchase the territorial integrity of the Ottoman Empire by means of a separate peace with the allied powers. Such a peace they recognize, is hopeless as long as Enver, with his German bodyguard, dominates the situation. But a revolution could unmake Enver as a revolution made him, and so, in the tangled skein of Turkish politics to-day, the revolutionary plays his part.

The aim of all these Turkish elements is to preserve the integrity of Turkey. In order to do this they are willing to promise anything. And they have already made their first step towards applying a coat of whitewash to themselves and the country, by the effort to father the Armenian massacres upon the Kurds. Now it may as well be said, quite distinctly, and at the very beginning, that this will not do. Every available man in the Ottoman Empire has been called up for active service. The Kurds are as much a part of the Ottoman forces as the Jews, the Armenians, or the Arabs. If the Kurds had attempted to betray the Turkish military posts, they would have been dealt with precisely as the Armenians were dealt with for happening to possess more money and a wider civilization than Turk or Kurd. And supposing, for one moment, it could be proved that the Kurds were guilty of the Armenian massacres, they were guilty of them as an organized Turkish force, under control of the government in Constantinople, and intrusted, with the protection, if that is the cynically correct word to use, of the Armenian villagers. The simple fact, and the damning fact, is that Talaat himself declared that the Armenian question was being settled by leaving no Armenian question to settle, and consequently, if the Kurds have been the butchers employed, there is no escape from the fact that they have been employed under Turkish authority, and have acted under Turkish instigation. But the fact is that the evidence of those on the spot is to the effect that the Kurds were not the culprits.

The simple fact that the Armenian massacres were undertaken partly, as Talaat declared, to get rid of an awkward question; partly, in a spirit of pure plunder, so as to acquire the riches of the richest part of the population; and partly, in order to clear the line of the Bagdad Railway and the great caravan routes for their exploitation by the Sublime Porte as concessions or settlements.

The chief object, unquestionably, was to get rid of the Armenians, and so finally to dispose of the claims of the Armenian to autonomy in Asia Minor. It is always, however, a difficult thing to destroy a nation and, in spite of every abomination it was possible to practice, a large body of Armenians escaped, and these Armenians, with the assistance of the Armenians in other parts of the world, amounting in all to some four millions of people, are now more loudly than ever demanding the foundation of an autonomous Armenian state between the Baltic and the Mediterranean, and from Kaisarich to Mount Ararat. If the powers could be induced to listen to such an idea, then of the Ottoman Empire, it would have to be recorded. "Delenda est Carthago," an end must be made of Carthage. It is the foundation of this state, beyond most things, therefore, that the Turks, who are endeavoring to engineer a separate peace, are intent on preventing.

Blindness.

She—How much do you love me?

He—Every way.

She—Tell me all about it.

He—But I have.

She—Tell me all over again.

He—Oh, my darling—

She—Tell me all the ways you know. Besides, you may have missed something. And I like to hear it all over again.

He—I love you!

She—But how?

He—Why, for the moment I can't quite think—but—I love you.

She—But can't you tell me how you feel?

He—Oh, I feel, I feel—why, I love you. What more can I say?

She—Oh, dear, it seems so dreadfully unsatisfactory!

He—Never mind. If I could tell you about it in just the way you want me to it wouldn't be love.—Life.

ONE HAPPY MOMENT.

A SORRY lot I must confess,
That even now is comfortless,
Ere love has lost its newness,
For, though she's dear as life to me,
My love and I cannot agree
I cannot live—oh, dire distress!—
In unison with Eunice.

For her I'd seek the wide world's ends
On weary pilgrimage I'd wend
From Ecuador to Tunis
I'd gather all the gold of Nome
To bring her for a hecatomb
If so my days I might but spend
In unison with Eunice.

I treasure each assenting word
That from her lips I've ever heard
Because of very fewness
I say a thing she laughs to scorn
My thought and leaves me quite forlorn
I cannot be—it seems absurd—
In unison with Eunice.

There's just one moment I'd not miss—
A moment of such double bliss
As quite dispels my blueness.
For when I rise to get my hat
And start to leave her mother's flat
I osculate a good night kiss—
In unison with Eunice!

Winners in Greene Edison Essay Contest

The essay contest for cash prizes offered by The J. M Greene Music Co., to be competed for by the pupils of the Senir and Junior IV. Form of the city, resulted in some clever papers being submitted.

The subject was, "Thomas A. Edison and His Favorite Invention, the Phonograph." Mr. C. E. Jamieson, of the Collegiate staff, acted as judge and the awards were as follows:

SR. FOURTH

1--Edna Hewson	$4.00
2--Myrtle Schwerer	3.00
3--Mary Ryan	2.00
4--Garnet Stevens	1.00

JR. FOURTH

1--Ethel M. Cooper	$4.00
2--Mary Wood	3.00
3--Ben. Sims	2.00
4--Edna Barry	1.00

The prizes were presented Tuesday evening at an invitation musicale in the auditorium of the Greene Music Building, which was filled with the contestants and their friends. The successful essays were also read, and a very pleasant evening spent by all.

CLOSED TODAY.

The management of the Colonial Weaving Co. permitted their employees to work Saturday afternoon in order that they might have a holiday today, Christmas Eve.

"So ye be gaun to lave us, passon," said an old lady to a vicar.

"Yes, Sarah," he replied; "I am getting on in years, and they cannot hear me at the end of the church."

"Hear 'e! Sure that don't matter so long as we can see 'e; and you know, passon, 'tain' the pig that squeals the loudest makes the best bacon."

Refreshing His Memory.

"But you forget sir that I treated you three times I called and I have made five calls to collect the money."—

Crossed Wires.

The girl with the debutante slouch gasped a little. "Why, the idea!" she said. "There must be some mistake! He was coming to see me at once when he got back! At least, that was the last thing I told him! Morgan is so shy that one has to bring him out. He must have been ill or something"—

"No, his health has been excellent," said the other girl.

"Well," snapped the girl with the debutante slouch, "since you seem to know so much about Morgan Spillings, perhaps you can tell me just why I haven't known a thing about his getting back or why he hasn't been to see me"—

"I am sure I don't know," said the brisk young woman with a faint smile, "unless it's because he has been so busy with me. We're to be married in June. I'm having such a lot of clothes made that I've got to hurry along this minute or miss my fittings. Goodby!"

"Well, I always said Morgan was queer!" said the girl with the debutante slouch. "I'm sure you'll be very happy together!"—Chicago News.

Respecting His Prejudice.

There was a man in Cleveland who entertained many progressive ideas, and one of these ideas was a prejudice against burial. He wished to be cremated. His weeping widow took the remains to the crematory in due season.

"How do you wish this done?" asked the manager.

"I know nothing about it," sobbed the widow. "I want his last wishes carried out. That's all I know."

"Well, we have the French method, the German method and the very popular Milanese method of cremation. Have you any choice?"

"Oh, please use the German method: My poor husband always hated French and Italian cookery!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Challenge.

A white haired lady, who had been awarded £100 for the death of her husband, applied for it to be paid out to her in the Bow county court.

Judge Smyly—Will you have a crossed check to save trouble if you have your pocket picked?

The Lady.—Certainly not. I've looked after myself all these years and think I can do it now. (Looking round the court)—Who is it that thinks he can pick my pocket?—London Tit-Bits.

Play—Why We Never Married.

Dialogue—Watermelon Pickle.

Dialogue—Letter to Santa.

Comic Song—Mr. Thos. Petrie. (encored).

Play—Mechanical Men.

Chorus—Ring the Bells —. The school.

All numbers on the programme were most heartily applauded. One of the most striking features of the evening was a play, entitled "Mechanical Men," managed by Mr. Max Archer. In this play, the manager in introducing his wonderful new machine, which was exhibited on the platform, gave the following address:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—Let me introduce myself as Professor Make-'im of Mannsville, Ohio. No doubt you have all heard of the wonderful inventions of Edison and of what electricity has done to revolutionize the world in past years. You know, too, of those wonderful inventions: the phonograph, the motion picture machine, and the telephone. In fact, the telephone today is almost as indispensable as our daily bread. You have heard of Professor Morse, the inventor of the telegraph—'twas he who proposed the laying of the Atlantic cable which, at the present time, carries such wonderful messages across the boundless main. Think of Marconi, that Italion. His work, the invention of wireless telegraphy, has enabled us to send messages thousands of miles on the air waves without intermission. But here, (pointing to his small machine), ladies and gentlemen, is a far more wonderful invention than any one of these, or, in fact, than them all put together. It is called the M. M. M. M.—the Mechanical Man-Making Machine.

You are all well aware of the great scarcity of men at the present time. I never could understand why we should wait from eighteen to twenty years on a man growing up to be of any service to his country. "Now, as the evangelist says, 'is the accepted time,' and I have overcome this difficulty through the inventing of this machine which is capable of producing mechanical men at the rate of one in every 30 seconds, two a minute, one hundred and twenty an hour, twelve hundred in ten hours. I guarantee it to work under all classes and conditions of weather. It requires but slight attention. Five drops of oil, in five different places every five days is guaranteed to keep the mechanism of these mechanical men in perfect working order at all times of the year. All moveable parts and joints of these mechanical men are equipped with the famous Hyatt Roller Bearings which are installed on practically all the high-priced automobiles at the present day. The ingredients used in making these mechanical men are known only to myself and I hold the patent in both Canada and the States. I can make everything from the high-born Canadian gentleman to the Chinese coolie from Hong Kong, China.

In my demonstration this evening I want to show to you the making ability of this machine and the working ability of these mechanical men.

Do not get the impression that each of these mechanical men is adapte to one particular kind of work. The man who pumps water can pare the potatoes just as easily as the man who pares the potatoes; or the man who bucksaws wood can take the part of the Chinaman who handles the flat-iron. This is merely a demonstration to show you the making ability of this machine as well as the working ability of these mechanical men. My two workmen here will take these men and place them against the wall accordingly as I manufacture them. Then they will place each one at a machine and I shall in turn start each man working. My iea in making these mechanical men was to eliminate the use of the gasoline engine on account of gasoline being so expensive. After the demonstration of the working ability of these men, I shall show you how nine of these men can be carried on the palm of my hand.

These men are not for sale; the machine is. But the ingredients must be purchased from myself at the small cost of five dollars an ounce —inexpensive, when you think of manufacturing two men from each ounce."

At the conclusion of this address, this wonderful machine was started, the ingredients being poured in, and as Professor Make'im turned the crank out popped nine stalwart mechanical men in turn. The workmen very, very carefully placed these at first in standing position against the wall and later in places ready to start their various occupations. Then at work they, in turn, began—one bucksawing wood, one sweeping the floor, the Chinaman handling the flat-iron, the nigger pumping water, the typical Canadian gentleman raising his hat.

When this demonstration of the working ability of these mechanical men was finished the men were again put into the machine and the Professor gathered the ingredients in a four-ounce bottle which he later carried in the palm of his hand to show to the audience.

At the conclusion of the program Santa Claus distributed the presents from the Christmas tree and the entertainment closed by the singing of the National Anthem.

The proceeds amounted to $47.80.

Holiday Programs at Royal Theatre

The Royal is offering a special holiday attraction for tonight (Christmas Eve) in Wm. Fox's stupendous and amazing million and a half dollar production, "A Daughter of the Gods," in 10 terse interest-holding reels. In this piece there are 7,500 feet of film shown and a Moorish City which cost $350,000 to build and destroy. An entire Caribbean island and all of its population were utilized to assist the principal actors in making this stupendous picture. Don't miss this Christmas Eve treat. At a price within the reach of all.

"The Great Secret," a big Vitagraph comedy success and a Western story will also be shown— 15 reels.

For tomorrow (Christmas Day) matinee and night, the Royal has a mammoth holiday program—15 reels in all, including a great 5 part Vitagraph feature drama, Charlie Chaplin in "The Farmer," showing two irresistibly funny reels; a big Metro war drama in 5 parts, together with the latest Western masterpiece (3 parts).

Royal patrons are asked to remember that no item on tonight's program will be repeated on Christmas Day, tomorrow's show will be entirely new. And both are worth more than the admission to be charged.

The Austrian Spy at Strand Theatre

The management of The Strand Theatre is fortunate in securing for its holiday performances, tonight and Christmas afternoon and night, an extraordinary special war feature drama entitled "The Austrian Spy." This is Paramount's latest film success, produced at an enormous expenditure, and in it the noted Theodore Roberts and the charming Anita King are seen to fascinating advantage. This piece is marvelously picturized and is full of thrilling climaxes, which bring home to all beholders many nefarious plots of enemy spies which threaten to undermine the Allies cause. There will also be other high-class features at The Strand for the holiday, specially secured for the occasion.

Peterborough Health Association

The Annual "At Home" of the Nurses' Supervision Committee of the Peterborough Health Association will be held in the Empress Hotel Friday afternoon and evening, December 28th. Cards will begin at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and tea served from 4:45 p.m. until 5:30 p.m. In the evening there will be cards and dancing, commencing at 8 o'clock. No invitations have been issued, and a hearty invitation is extended to our many friends for both afternoon and evening.

Those desiring to secure tables will please phone Miss Archer, 1308. Everyone who takes a table will please supply pencils, score cards and cards for same. Cards or dancing, 50c; general admission, 25c. Come and bring your friends with you.

STEFANSSON'S PARTY ARE SAFE

POWER AND INFLUENCE OF BOLSHEVIKI IS REPORTED AS ON WANE IN RUSSIA

Correspondents of London Papers Agree on That Point—Lack of Authority Given as the Cause.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Dec. 26.—There have been occasional assertions in recent Petrograd despatches that the influence and power of the Bolsheviki was waning, but never with such unanimity as in special despatches dated from the Russian capital Sunday and printed today. Nearly all make the point in one form or another that the defection from the workmen's and soldiers' organization is growing constantly.

Among the causes alleged are a general lack of authority, the increase in drunkenness, the reluctance of the population to work, and the scarcity of foodstuffs. The main desire of the soldiers is said to be for peace.

The correspondents cite instances of the Bolsheviki troops refusing to march, declining to attack the Ukrainians, and permitting the Cossacks to disarm them without resistance. The Bolsheviki leaders the Petrograd correspondent of the Morning Post says, appear to be becoming conscious of hopeless failure, while the correspondent of the Daily News writes that there is tremendous and growing opposition to the Bolsheviki among all classes. Men who formerly supported them are turning against them, and "German hirelings" is a common term of denunciation.

CANVASS FOR FUNDS TO FURNISH CLUB ROOMS FOR WAR VETERNNS

Towards the end of this week the members of the Woman's Auxiliary to the Great War Veterans Association, will inaugurate their canvass of the whole city for funds to equip the club rooms for the veterans.

The object of the canvass is a most commendable one—in fact no citizen should have the slightest hesitation in contributing to the Fund, and doubtless will not. The citizens can, and will give $2000, the amount required to furnish the club rooms, and in doing so will be playing only a small part, in comparison with what the Veterans have done for them.

JUDGE TELLS APPLICANT TRIBUNAL DID NOT ERR

Young Farmer Did Not Get Much Encouragement

"I haven't the slightest doubt that the tribunal did right in disallowing your claim," Judge Huycke told Cephas George Leslie, a young farmer, this morning, when Leslie sought exemption on the grounds that he is a farmer. He was told the decision would be mailed to him.

The father of James Victor Newell, of Norwood, appeared before the Board too late to speak for the application on behalf of his son, the application having been dealt with last Wednesday. However, the information to hand was that there were five brothers, all engaged in farming.

"I thought that as there were so many being exempted, I had a right to it," said Lawrence Meagher, Aylmer street.

A brother was killed at the front. As the Board wished to learn the disposition of another brother's application, decision was deferred.

In a letter to the press, Lieut. J. A. McNabb cites the order in council providing for the appointment of representatives to appear before exemption appeal boards and says:

"There is no authority whatever for the constitution of a Farmers Tribunal, nor of any other Tribunal to sit in competition with or substitution for the statutory local exemption tribunals and appellate tribunal.

"These farmers representatives must confine themselves to acting in advisory capacities.

"All they can do in appeals is to make a recommendation to the military representative, whether or not application should be made to the Honorable Mr. Justice Duff, as central appeal judge, for leave to appeal to him.

"Representatives have not the right to alter a decision as given by any local exemption tribunal or appeal tribunal nor have they the right to grant exemption."

Lieut. Stratton Writes From Italy

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Stratton have received a letter from their son, Lt. Reg. Stratton, M.C., who is now with the 237th Field Company, Royal Engineers, in Italy. He says the officers and men feel proud of being chosen for this duty. They had a wonderful trip down through Monte Carlo and the Riviera. Crowds turned out to see them, covered them with flags and flowers and fed them on coffee, cakes and cigarettes.

QUEBEC SAYS IT IS SPITE WORK

PROVINCE THREATENS TO OPPOSE RECENT TEMPERANCE LEGISLATION.

Montreal, Dec. 26.—The liquor interests in the Province of Quebec are examining into the probable effects of the order-in-Council passed by the Dominion Government in regard to the importation of liquor, non-manufacture, and inter-provincial traffic. Expert opinion is that outside of anything the Province of Quebec may do during the present session of the Legislature, prohibition is practically being applied to this province, and the provincial revenues will suffer by over a million dollars per year. Not only will the province suffer as to revenue, but the city of Montreal will be hit hard. The city draws special taxes from breweries and hotels for running such businesses, and also in special water rates, beer pumps and other ways. The members of the Legislature seem determined to do something to show the feeling of the people, as the idea is growing that the step was taken by the Federal Government partly for the purpose of showing that the almost unanimous vote of this province against the Union Government is looked on with disfavor at Ottawa. Expression to this view no doubt will be given in the Legislature at Quebec and in a manner more definite, it is said, than the academic discussion on the Francoeur motion to break up the Confederation.

In Montreal, the order-in-Council means that the two hundred places which are to be given licenses will have little to sell, and consequently will have no reason for paying an enhanced price for licenses to sell beer of 2½ per cent. alcoholic strength.

Berlin Reports Artillery Action

(Special Correspondence.)

Berlin (via London), Dec. 26.—There was increased artillery fighting yesterday southeast of Ypres on the Belgian front, and near Maeuvres and Marconing on the Cambrai front. French detachments reconnoitering south of Juvincourt were repulsed after hand-to-hand fighting.

CHRISTMAS JOY AT THE SHELTER

Citizen's Liberality Made Children Happy.

$25 FOR MATRON

The children at the Children's Aid Shelter spent a happy time on Christmas Eve and Christmas Day. Citizens sent candies, nuts, fruit, toys and other cheer. Mr. Walter Stocker took the role of Santa Claus on Monday night when all the children received gifts from the tree.

Mrs. Reid, the matron, was given a pleasant surprise, when on behalf of the Society, Mr. E. A. Peck, the president, made the presentation of $25 to Mrs. Reid, who is taking a holiday to get a much needed rest.

As an instance of how much the children become attached to the comforts of the Shelter, one of the children recently taken from a home in Dummer, cried bitterly this morning when Agent Powell had to take him to the police court to have the youngster officially made a ward of the Society.

Masonic Ring For Wm. Hill

Mr. William Hill, chief examiner for the Imperial Munitions Board, at the Peter Hamilton Co., is wearing a beautiful solid gold Masonic ring, the Christmas gift from the examiners under his charge at the Hamilton company.

The presentation was made on Saturday, and was a most pleasant surprise to the recipient.

LITTLE DOING ON BRITISH FRONT

FRENCH WIN IN AN ARTILLERY DUEL AND TAKE MORE PRISONERS.

London, Dec. 26.—There was nothing special to report on the British front in France yesterday, says an official statement issued today by the war office.

French Take Prisoners.

Paris, Dec. 26.—On the right bank of the Meuse (Verdun front) the energetic reply of our batteries put an end to a vigorous bombardment of our lines in the region of Bezonvaux, says today's official communication. In the region of St. Quentin and in Upper Alsace French patrols penetrated German trenches, bringing back prisoners.

ITALIANS WIN TO LOSE AGAIN

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Rome, Dec. 26.—Col Del Rosso and Monte Val Bella on the Asiago plateau were recaptured by the Italian forces in a counter-attack yesterday, but it was found impossible to hold them, the war office announced today.

An Austro-German attack was launched between Col Delosso and the Frenseia Valley. The enemy, however, was not able to advance beyond Sasso, close beside the Col Delosso height.

LIEUT. STOCK HOME TONIGHT.

Lieut. Percy Stock is expected to arrive home tonight. He reached Toronto today from New York, and Mrs. Stock went to the Queen City this morning to meet her husband.

The Brantford Municipal Council fuel distributing center opened at the City Hall.

EXPLORERS ARE REPORTED SAFE AT FT. YUKON

Stefansson and His Arctic Party Have Been Heard from At Last.

WILL TAKE THE STEAMER HOME

News Received at Ottawa First Heard from the Party in Months.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Dec. 26. — Viljamar Stefansson, the Canadian explorer, and his party of twenty-four men are safe. A message received by G. J. Desbarats, Deputy Minister of Naval Affairs, today announces that Stefansson and his party have arrived safely at Fort Yukon, Alaska, from the far north. This means that the explorers, about whose safety there has been considerable doubt for several months past, are coming back to civilization after their long sojourn in the Arctic regions.

It is presumed that the party will now make their way to Nome and wait for the first steamer that will bring them back to Canada. It is possible, however, that Stefansson may decide to go overland to Dawson.

YOUNG AVIATOR BELIEVED LOST

Sub. Flght-Lieut. F. C. Cressman is Reported Missing.

Sub. Flight-Lieut. Fred C. Cressman, younger son of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Cressman, Hunter street W., is officially reported missing and believed drowned on December 24. Yesterday evening Mr. and Mrs. Cressman received this message from the British Admiralty:

"Regret to inform you that Sub. Flight Lieut. F. C. Cressman, officially reported missing, believed drowned, December 24. Will cable any further information received."

Coming as it did towards the end of a merry Christmas Day, the news of the casualty report brought deep sorrow to many citizens, and every effort was put forth to console the grief-stricken parents and the brother and sister of the young airman. It has been pointed out that better news may be received. So far as is known Lieut. Cressman was on coastal duty. He no doubt met with a mishap and while his machine may have plunged into the sea, there is the possibility that he was picked up by one of the numerous patrol boats which besides co-operating with the aerial forces in protecting the coast, keep an eye on the air machines so as to be able to give aid in case of a machine falling into the sea.

The employes of the Cressman Co. Ltd., received the news with every evidence of sincere sorrow, and today the face of every clerk and every department head is saddened. Lieut. Cressman was a great favorite with the store employes, as well as with a large circle of friends and acquaintances, when he assisted his father and brother Mr. Harry Cressman in the management of the store.

APPEALS BEING HEARD BY JUSTICE MacLAREN

Draftees Receive Notice to Report at Kingston on January 3.

Hon. Mr. Justice MacLaren of Toronto is sitting as an appeal board in the City Council chamber to hear the appeals of those who are appealing from the decisions given by the Military Service Tribunal of which Judge Huycke was chairman, by which their claims for exemption from military service was disallowed.

All other appeals in Peterborough are made before Judge Huycke.

Many of the draftees have received official notice to report at Kingston on January 3rd for duty.

ALD. DUNCAN GETS THE MAYOR'S CHAIR WITHOUT CONTEST

Acclamation for R.N. Jones in West Ward ---Eight Candidates for School Board.

Shortly after the eleventh hour this morning ex.-Ald. G. Walter Green decided not to enter the mayoralty contest, and not accept nomination for aldermanic honors in the West Ward. Ald. G. H. Duncan was therefore given the mayor's chair by acclamation.

Robert N. Jones, Charlotte street, who was one of six aldermanic nominations in the West Ward, was the only nominee to qualify. He enters the 1917 council without a contest.

The Centre Ward will have a contest with Ald. A. H. Stratton and ex.-Ald. John Edgar in the race. Mr. E. F. Mason, who was nominated in this ward, did not qualify.

In the East Ward, Mr. T. W. Oke will contest the seat held by Ald. Archie McIntyre, and in the South Ward Ald. Jos. Saunders will have opposition from Mr. J. J. Turner and Mr. G. T. Dryland.

Messrs. W. H. Bradburn, W. H. Hill, John Crane, F. W. Dean, M. A. Morrison, W. G. Morrow, W. A. Richardson and W. J. Thompson will not be candidates for the Board of Education. Those whose names will go before the ratepayers are: Trustee Frank C. Neal, G. O. Cameron, Joseph Wearing, E. G. Patterson, W. H. Pretty, J. M. Greene, J. W. Worth and G. R. Munro.

Only five seats are to be filled.

CHRISTMAS DAY IN TRENCHES

CANADIAN SOLDIERS HAD QUIET HOLIDAY — GERMAN RUSE FAILS.

(By W. A. Willison, Canadian Press Correspondent in Flanders.)

Canadian Army Headquarters, December 26.—The Canadian front was quiet over Christmas. Our patrols recently have been active, while our artillery, trench mortars and machine guns have been a trifle busier. Poor visibility has made aeroplane observation difficult; in fact, three low-flying enemy machines, mistaking the trenches, swept their own with gunfire yesterday.

Taking advantage of snow on the ground, a small German party endeavored to approach our line dressed in white. It was dispersed by our machine guns.

PRESIDENT TO CONTROL ROADS

UNITED STATES IS BELIEVED TO HAVE SOLUTION OF TRANSPORTATION PROBLEM.

Washington, Dec. 26. — The nation's transportation facilities will be taken over by the President of the United States on Dec. 31st, is the statement made here in high circles. While no confirmation was forthcoming from the White House, the information given is that the President has finally decided upon this step to solve the increasing railroad congestion. His proclamation has been prepared, it is said, and is ready to be made public after his conference with representatives of the Big Four brotherhoods and railroad presidents later in the week.

CONSCRIPTION DEFEATED.

Majority Against It in Australia Is Now 173,000.

Melbourne, Australia, Dec. 26. — The latest figures of the referendum on conscription in Australia are:

Against conscription, 993,000; for conscription, 820,000. Majority against, 173,000.

GIFT OF BIBLE AND BOUQUET

Presentation to Mrs. Thomas Brown by Her Class.

A very enjoyable evening was spent Christmas eve when the sixteen members of the Gleaners' Bible Class met at the home of their teacher, Mrs. Thomas Brown, and presented her with a teacher's Bible and bouquet of flowers, accompanied by an address. Light refreshments were served. The address was:

Dear Teacher,—The members of the Gleaners' Bible Class take this opportunity of thanking you for interest shown us in the past year, and feel it our duty to present to you this small token of appreciation. Hoping you will continue the good work and wishing you the compliments of the season.

Signed on behalf of the class.

Miss Addie Orr, President.
Miss Winnie Saunders.
Miss Mamie Cronk.

RUSSIA SEEKS GENERAL PEACE

ALL COUNTRIES TO BE ASKED TO TAKE PART IN THE MOVEMENT.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Petrograd, Dec. 26.—The Bolsheviki Government has decided to send special representatives to all countries, belligerent as well as neutral, to further the propaganda of internationalism. Two million rubles have been appropriated for this purpose.

Messages continue to pour in congratulating the Government on enacting prohibition.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, DEC. 26, 1917

THE CIVIC ELECTION.

IF EVER THE RATEPAYERS of the city were called upon to exercise more than usual care in the selection of officials to look after the interests of the city, now is the time. If they err in their choice, they will have only themselves to blame, for among the candidates they should have no difficulty in finding those who are eminently fitted for the duties they are willing to assume.

Within the next two years at the farthest the city will be called on to expend upwards of half a million dollars for improvements that must be made. There is no means by which this outlay can be avoided. The ratepayers by an overwhelming majority have accepted the proposition to build a high level bridge and also to bridge the river at Hunter street. The agreement has been made with the Quaker Oats Company, and that firm has more than carried out, to date, its part of the contract. The city must keep its pledge. Ashburnham, too, is interested in these improvements, and the future of the east side depends upon them. These bridges must be completed by the end of 1919. The work of preparing for the construction must at least be taken up during the coming year.

The sewage disposal plant is another matter over which the city officials have really no control so far as avoiding the expenditure is concerned. The civic officials in this matter are simply carrying out the mandate of the provincial authorities. No candidate for mayor or other office can hope to side-step either of these issues, or by a skilful play on words lead the unthinking among the ratepayers to believe that these expenditures can be postponed until after the war. The people are confronted by a condition, and not a theory. The question is one of completing the city's contract with the Quaker Oats Company and carrying out the orders of the Provincial Board of Health to the best possible advantage.

City officials should be chosen for their fitness to perform the onerous duties which will be imposed upon them. A man's record both as a public official in the past and his attainments in his own private business should be taken into consideration. Because a candidate has been a number of years in the harness, because he may have distinguished himself as a "jiwer," a no reason to assume that he has all the qualifications for handling the expenditure of half a million dollars of the city's funds, all of which is extraordinary outlay. There is a long list of candidates from which to choose. The material is there. The selection rests with the electors.

Let the different candidates speak out plainly and not attempt to dodge this or that issue. The question of the Patriotic Fund is another serious problem, and every candidate for the Council should be required to state whether or not he believes that this matter should be taken over by the Government and so put on an official and solid basis or whether the dependents of the soldiers should remain as so many wards of the city really dependent upon public charity.

It is the misfortune of the citizens that they are to lose the services of a number of veterans who have built up the educational system of the city, making the local schools what they are—among the best in the Dominion. Four new members of the Board of Education will have to be selected. Just as with the Council, there are matters of grave importance, matters which call for heavy outlay, to come before the School Board next year, outlay, too, which is mandatory. The school population has overgrown the accommodation. More room must be provided or the provincial authorities will withhold the grants. Education for the young must be provide, war or no war. The King Edward School must be enlarged to take care of the school population in that district. It will be necessary to remodel the South Central School or to provide an entirely new building in the southwestern section of the city. For this work a board of business men should be selected, and there are plenty of such men among the list of candidates from whom to choose.

If the electors are disposed to infuse new life into the City Council, there are plenty of young men from whom to choose. The seekers for office who have developed a habit of offering their services at every opportunity, only to be turned down, should be ignored. They have been given their chance and should be satisfied. There are promising young men like Frank H. Dawson among the list of aldermanic candidates, young men whose records in the business and social life of the community justify the electors in taking a chance by electing them to office.

CONSCRIPTION IN AUSTRALIA.

FOR THE SECOND TIME conscription has been defeated by the votes of the people of Australia, and that by a decisive majority. This coming so soon after the election in Canada, where the popular verdict was so different, should not be interpreted as an evidence that the people of Austrlia are opposed to taking a further part in the war. Conditions in the two countries are by no means the same.

In the first place, Australia voted on the question of conscription and all that term implies, not on the principle of selective draft as submitted to the people of Canada. There was danger that the industries and production forces in Australia would be seriously disturbed. This was one reason that induced the people to oppose it. The Allies require food as well as men. Australia has furnished the latter and should be allowed to continue in the work of feeding the fighting forces.

Australia has sent to the front a larger proportion of its population than any British dominion, or for that matter any of the Entente nations. Its population is about five million, and it has 500,000 men in the battle line, or 10 per cent. of the total. The highest percentage of the entire population of any country that entered the military service was reached by the Southern States during the American Civil War, and then the figure was only eight per cent. Australia has eclipsed all military records and that without recourse to anything like compulsion. There was no section of the country indifferent as to its duty. The burden was equally borne. Neither were there racial or religious differences to cause strife or jealousy among the people.

In view of this record, who can upbraid the people of Australia if once again they have declared for the voluntary system? Are they not justified in maintaining that that system has answered the purpose and that they have done their full duty?

To equal the war record of Austrlia, Canada should have 800,000 men bearing arms instead of a trifle over half that number. Had that record been attained, conscription would never have been submitted to the Canadian people, or if it had would certainly never have been endorsed by popular vote.

THE BANK OF COMMERCE.

THE ANNUAL STATEMENT of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, published in another column, is entitled to careful consideration. It not only reveals the growth of one of the country's leading financial institutions, but shows how it has been possible for Canada's business interests to bear up under the crucial test of the war.

The Canadian Bank of Commerce has concentrated its activities on meeting Canadian business requirements. This is indicated not only by actual withdrawals from abroad, but by increased loans. One of the most striking features of the statement is the remarkable increase of $56,000,000 in assets, the total being $344,375,000. This expansion was due chiefly to the growth of business loans within Canada, the increase in this item being over $16,000,000 to a total of $149,882,000, which demonstrates the substantial manner in which the bank has assisted Canadian business concerns in their undertakings. Even to a greater extent the bank has assisted the Dominion and Imperial Governments. Its holdings of Dominion and provincial securities increased from $2,781,960 to $27,596,420. It has also increased its holdings of British, foreign and colonial public securities by nearly five million dollars.

The bank found it expedient on the other hand to reduce call loans in Canada $1,264,271 to $13,460,000; call loans elsewhere, $1,064,000 to $20,076,000, and current loans elsewhere $1,558,000 to $14, 846,000.

In these unsettled times it is well that regard should be had to the liquid condition of the bank's assets. Accordingly we find the Commerce holdings of cash have increased over $8,000,000, and now stand at $54,652,000. The increase of $40,000,000 in the amount it has in the Central Gold Reserves is to provide for an increase in the bank's notes in circulation.

The liabilities side of the statement also reveals extraordinary growth in important departments. To begin with, notes of the bank in circulation increased nearly five million dollars to $23,995,000. Deposits at the bank show heavy increases. Demand deposits stood at $86,458,403, which was an increase of $23,974,000, whereas savings deposits expanded $22,555,000 to $190,000,000. The former item indicates the present prosperity of commercial concerns doing business with the bank, and the latter the accumulating bank accounts due to increased savings of the public.

The bank's profits grew substantially as a result of business expansion. Net profits for the year were $2,637,555, an increase of $198,140 or slightly more than 8.1 per cent. The percentage of net profits to capital and reserve combined was a little better than 9 per cent. The bank paid dividends for the year of 10 per cent., two bonuses aggregating $300,000; war tax on bank-note circulation, $150,000, transferred to pension fund, $85,000, and subscribed $72,800 to various patriotic and Red Cross funds. As the balance at the credit of profit and loss account brought forward from the previous year was $802,319, the bank, after making the above disbursement, carried forward into the current year $1,332,074.

One of the gratifying features of this statement is the fact that Peterborough has a branch of this thriving financial institution, a branch, too, which under careful and expert management, has helped to make the year's record the gratifying success that it has proved.

THE UTILITIES COMMISSION.

LIKE EVERY OTHER board in the city, the Utilities Commission has work of especial importance before it next year. This includes the establishing of a filtration plant, the construction of a sub-station, and the general development of the electric system.

The voters have already made their choice of a Utilities Commissioner, as Mr. T. F. Matthews has been reelected without a contest. His years of service fit him for the position, and his qualifications place him above any other citizen who might be mentioned. If the voters exercise the same wise judgment in the selection of other officials, the business affairs of the city will be placed in efficient hands.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

MAY NEXT CHRISTMAS be free from the shadow of war.

• • • •

THE BRITISH ARMY in Palestine plucked the Turkey as that bird was never plucked at Christmas before.

• • • •

THE OLD-FASHIONED candidate who runs for office at the request of his many friends is still in evidence.

• • • •

AND THE KAISER had no Christmas gifts for his subjects but another installment of the same old brand of autocracy.

• • • •

ANYWAY the majority given Alderman Langford two years ago was enough to frighten off all competitoors at this election.

• • • •

AUSTRALIA would probably have felt different about conscription, as the Chicago News remarks, if it had a Quebec of its own.

• • • •

WITH SUCH A LIST of candidates for the School Board, the electors, even if blindfolded, could hardly fail to make a wise choice.

THE KING'S CALL TO PRAYER

The text of the King's proclamation setting apart the first Sunday in January as a day of national prayer throughout the Empire is as follows:

"The world-wide struggle for the triumph of right and liberty is entering upon its last and most difficult phase. The enemy is striving by desperate assault and subtle intrigue to perpetuate the wrongs already committed and stem the tide of free civilisation. We have yet to complete the great task to which, more than three years ago, we dedicated ourselves.

At such a time I would call upon you to devote a special day to prayer that we may have the clear-sightedness and strength necessary to the victory of our cause.

"This victory will be gained only if we steadfastly remember the responsibility which rests upon us, and in a spirit of reverent obedience ask the blessing of Almighty God upon our endeavors. With hearts grateful for the Divine guidance which has led us so far towards our goal, let us seek to be enlightened in our understanding and fortified in our courage in facing the sacrifices we may yet have to make before our work is done.

"I therefore hereby appoint January 6, the first Sunday of the year, to be set aside as a special day of prayer and thanksgiving in all the churches throughout my Dominions and require that this proclamation be read at the services held on that day."

SENT GREETING TO SOLDIERS

Sir Robert Borden sent to General Currie and to General Turner the following Christmas message for the Canadian troops overseas:

"To the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the Canadian forces overseas: It is again my great privilege to convey to you from the Government and people of Canada the greetings and gratitude which during the season are deep in the heart of every Canadian. At this Christmas time we recall in loving and solemn memory the many thousands of your gallant comrades who have passed into their perfect peace. They died that Canada might live. They gave up their lives that we might have peace here on earth. But their spirit yet lives to inspire the nations, which can never forget. You who are completing their unfinished task look to us for support and cheer; the men and women of Canada have already shown you that your trust is not in vain. Our sacrifice can never equal yours, but in the new year now approaching we shall resolve anew that as the army struggles and suffers for the nation, so the nation will strive and endure for the army, and both for the great common cause of liberty and civilization, to which we have concentrated our efforts, but which unhappily remains yet to be secured. We hope and pray for a speedy victory, but however long the necessity may demand, we shall struggle on, convinced in heart and conscience that only in the complete downfall of militarist aggression may we and our allies hope for that secure and honorable peace without which every sacrifice would rise up to shame us and our children in the years to come.

18 PRISONER IN TURKEY.

Lt. Travers Williams-Taylor Captured in Mesopotamia.

Montreal, Dec. 26.—Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor received a cable from the British Secretary of War announcing definitely that Sir Frederick's son, Lt. Travers Williams-Taylor, of the 13th Hussars, Imperial Army, is a prisoner in Turkey. Lt. Williams-Taylor was last seen wounded and pinned under his horse after a charge of the Hussars in the engagement in Mesopotamia.

RETURNS FOR THE ELGINS.

St. Thomas, Dec. 26.—Official returns made for West Elgin gave Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labor, a majority over Wm. Tolmie of 825. David Marshall's majority in East Elgin is 115.

YOUNG'S POINT.

(Special to The Review.)

Young's Point, Dec. 26.—Miss Lottie Kearney of the Lakeview House is spending Christmas in Montreal with her sister, Mrs. George McAdams.

Mr. George McAdams, representing the Street Car Advertising Co., of Montreal, visited the Lake View House last week.

Miss Irene Young, trained nurse, of Rochester, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. P. Young, came home to spend the holidays.

Capt. P. J. Young met Miss Irene in Toronto and accompanied her home.

Mrs. L. Duboise of Denver, who has been on an extended visit with relatives here, leaves for Denver, Col., this week. She will be accompanied by her niece, Miss Loretta Young.

School closed here on Friday afternoon, for the Xmas holidays, with a social and entertainment. A good program was rendered with songs, recitations, drills, etc. The principal, Mr. Arthur Smith, expects to spend Xmas with his brother, Mr. John Smith, East City, Peterborough. The assistant, Miss Anna Duck of Lindsay, returned to her home for the holidays.

Miss Maggie Tooke, who is teaching school section No. 12, left for her home in Barrie for Xmas.

This is excellent weather for our blacksmith, Mr. Robt. Charleton, as the roads are covered with ice once more. There were all kinds of vehicles out on Saturday last, wheels, sleighs, etc.

Monday, election day, was a busy day in the village, and at the polling divisions and much interest was manifested.

Mr. William Pemmit, assistant lock master, left for Parry Sound district, and expects to be employed in one of the lumber camps there.

Mrs. Arthur Dugan, who has been occupying a house belonging to Mr. Walter Young, removed into the village and is now residing in Mr. Wm. McGregor's house.

Quite a number of the villagers went to Peterborough on Saturday to meet "Old Santa Clause" and leave orders with him for Christmas gifts for the children.

Mr. David Curtin, walking boss, for the McDonald Lumber Co., registered at the Carleton House, last week.

THE WARD SYSTEM.

Editor Review: When Ashburnham became a part of the municipality of Peterborough there was perhaps no written agreement setting forth the terms of the contract, but there was at least an understanding. One of these was that the East Ward was always to be represented in the City Council by two aldermen. In no other way could the residents of the east side receive a fair show and even under present conditions we have found it difficult to obtain this.

When we annexed our town to the city it was understood that we were to have the same advantages as to sewers, water privileges and fire protection as the rest of the municipality and that the street car system was to be extended across the river. Years have passed, and we find ourselves in all these particulars practically where we were at the time of annexation.

If we cannot get that to which we are in all fairness entitled when we have two aldermen of our own, what can we hope for if even our right of representation in the City Council is taken away from us? That is just what will happen if the bylaw to abolish the ward system for the general vote is carried at the next election. The East Ward will find itself without an alderman. At every civic election the rest of the city will combine against us, and the west siders will hog everything in sight.

For that reason I hope that the bylaw will be defeated. It will be if a unanimous vote on this side can accomplish its overthrow. I do not believe that one voter here will support it. If he does, he is, to say the least, indifferent to the welfare of his section of the city. In all fairness, as a matter of simple justice to every ward in Peterborough, vote against the bylaw.

THE ANGLICANS, TOO

Send Praise To Government for the Temperance Order.

Toronto, Dec. 26.—Supporting the interview with the Bishop of Toronto, the following night letter was telegraphed to Premier Borden:

"With sanction of the Primate, the chairman of the executive and other members of the committee desire to express on behalf of the Council for Social Service of the Church of England in Canada our high appreciation of the action of the Government re the liquor traffic."

REDUCTION IN RATES.

Orillia Claims the Lowest Price for Lighting in Canada.

Orillia, Dec. 26—The Orillia water, light and power commission announced a handsome Christmas gift to light and power users in the shape of a reduction in rates amounting to about 20 per cent. This reduction is made possible by the recent completion of the new plant at Swift Rapids, which gives the town ample current for all its requirements, and at a cost of production much lower than under former conditions.

Two examples from the schedule will give some idea of the cost of domestic lighting in Orillia; ten p. c. watt lamps on a flat rate will cost only $1.08 per month for 24-hour service; on meter $1.08 will buy 65 kilowatt hours with a ten-lamp installation.

There has been a reduction in all classes of service, commercial as well as domestic, and also in power rates. The charge for street lighting is now $5 per annum for a 100-watt lamp, which is believed to be the lowest of any town in Canada.

LILIUOKALANI AT 80.

Making a Hawaiian-English Dictionary for Use in Schools.

Hawaii's immortal singer, author of "Aloha Oe," known as Queen Lil in the days when she ruled the Hawaiian islands, is now compiling a Hawaiian English dictionary for use in the schools of the islands, though she is now nearly 80 years old. This was learned lately from Mrs. Dr. Atcherley of 1743 Nelson street, Vancouver, a cousin of the former ruler.

Mrs. Atcherley spends every winter in the former queen's company. She last saw her distinguished relative on February 6 of this year, on which date she sailed for her home in Vancouver. Mrs. Atcherley is the wife of Dr. Atcherley of the royal navy, who is now in active service on the Atlantic. He is a descendant of the famous Sir Roger Atcherley, who gave Leadenhall market, London, to the poor. Mrs. Atcherley's full name is Princess Haahoe-Kabethei-malie-Kahikoloa Atcherley. She is a cousin of Queen Liliuokalani and a foster daughter of King Kalakaua and his queen consort, Kapiolani, and was reared in the islands. She now has in her parlor a treasured legacy from the late king, the portraits of himself and his consort painted in 1885 by Petrovitz, R. A.

Mrs. Atcherley said former Queen Liliuokalani celebrated her 79th birthday on Tuesday, September 2. She was born in 1838 and during her life have occurred the stormiest monarchial and republican crises in the history of the Hawaiian island group.

Queen Liliuokalani is now an old woman whose thoughts are much on the future. She is a true Christian and has left behind all the worldly strife which marred her middle life. To-day she lives in a splendid house near Honolulu, visited by her direct relatives, but keeping aloof from the general tourist public which still endeavors to see the famous figure of the great political game of the early '90's.

Only on her birthdays is the public allowed to approach her. Then she sits in state on her front porch and visitors walk by, bowing to her and receiving in return the stately salutation of the former queen. Great throngs of natives and of white people attend this function, the whites mainly through curiosity, the natives through deep respect. Also, on these days, the royal band plays at the former queen's residence. It is led by the original band leader, the German musician who was bandmaster through the last regime of royalty in the Sandwich islands.

On other days the queen sees no one, though tourists frequently stroll through her gardens in hope of a distant glimpse. The former queen motors for an hour each day, and spends considerable time in her garden. She is now engaged in a work which shows that her mental powers are not impaired. She is compiling a Hawaiian-English dictionary for use in the government schools, and already has 4,000 words in the work.

When King Kalakaua died in San Francisco on January 2, 1891, he was succeeded by Queen Liliuokalani. The white people, aroused to fighting pitch by an attempt of the queen to bring the kingdom under purely native rule and control, called on the United States Government to send troops to protect American property. A small body of troops was sent. Under protest, and acting on the advice of her ministers, the queen surrendered to these troops to avoid bloodshed. A treaty of annexation was negotiated the next month with the United States, but this was withdrawn by President Cleveland when he came into power in March, 1893.

The United States Government then ordered the reinstatement of the queen. The republican government which had been set up when she relinquished office was under Sanford B. Dole, who was president. Backed by the whites and with the sympathy of many Americans at home, he refused to allow the queen's reinstatement. The United States then refused to intervene to reinstate the queen.

On July 4, 1894, the republic was proclaimed. A plot during that year to overthrow the republic was frustrated, and the queen was arrested. The plot was broken up on January 6, 1895, and on January 24 she renounced her claim to the throne and swore allegiance to the republic. On September 17 she was granted conditional pardon and on August 13, 1897, under President McKinley, the Hawaiian islands were annexed to the United States. S. B. Dole, the first president of the republic, was made the first governor. Seven years ago Queen Liliuokalani was granted a pension of $40,000 per year by the American Government.

Chances of War.

Well-informed military men say that if your boy goes to the front

He has twenty-nine chances of coming home to one chance of being killed.

He has ninety-eight chances of recovering from a wound to two chances of dying.

He has only one chance in 500 of losing a limb.

He will live five years longer because of physical training.

He is freer from disease in the army than in civil life.

He has better medical care at the front than at home.

In this war one man dies from disease to every ten from bullets.

This war is less wasteful of life than any other in history.

Only 10 per cent. of all Canadians disabled for further service have been physically unable to engage in their former occupations.

CLOTHES OF MANY COLORS OFFERED

Average Woman Confused by Kaleidoscope Run Before Her Eyes.

MIDNIGHT BLUE HOLDS OWN

Dark Green Is Popular but Is Shade Women Must Use With Care—Burgundy Red and Artillery Gray Prominent.

New York.—These are stirring times in clothes. The manufacturers and shops have prepared for a rush season. It is their own expression that they are actually scrambling for a supply to meet the demand.

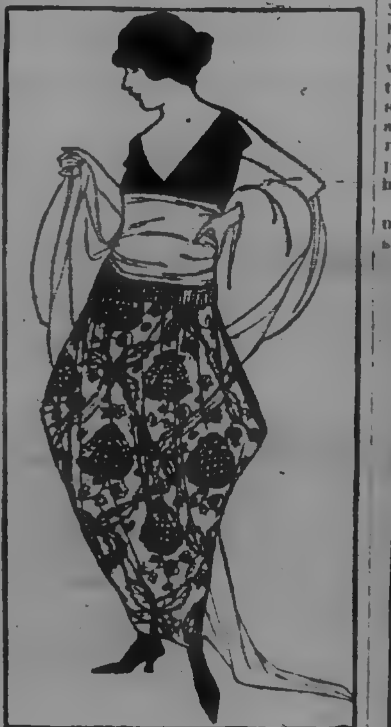
The French gowns are here. New American gowns are not only exploited, but tremendously admired and approved. The efforts of those who have taken the French silhouette and built gowns in their own workrooms, made of American materials, should be commended in an entire chapter.

Some of the best houses in this country have tried out experienced designers and colorists in producing several hundred gowns that are first cousins to the French in that they express the adopted Paris lines. Each of the designers gives full tribute to the fact that Paris has laid down the laws for the season; but every designer boasts with honest pride that the clothes are the product of American study and workmanship.

In every case, the houses that showed these American gowns called upon their experienced French workers to produce them, and the only ones that were successful were the gowns that had been given into the hands of those who had studied the Paris methods with reverence and earnestness. The result was that the clientele of these houses saw extraordinarily good drapery, the combination of alluring colors and an excellence in tailored suits that we are led to believe is purely American.

The Colors That Prevail.

The silhouette has been established. Every woman now knows that her skirt is to be narrow and her coat long or short, provided it clings to the figure. She knows that top coats are as important as frocks and that some of the best tailors offer only sport suits and top coats to wear over thin one-piece gowns.



The material in this evening gown is heavy brocaded satin, the odd bodice in dark blue with a girdle of pale gold dotted with jet beads. Skirt of pale gold with flowers in blue, gold and black.

She also knows that soft materials take precedence over stiff ones; but she has not exactly classified the various colors, fabrics and accessories that she must accept or avoid.

These are vastly important matters to the average shopper. True, there is a class of women who go to expensive houses that handle only a few of the most fashionable pieces of apparel and offer nothing that can lead one into the wrong path; but this class remains an exclusive one, and what they do or do not do is not always a guide to the mass of women who must fight out the battle of clothes in their own way and to whom victory is vital.

Take colors. Who does not feel perplexed and confused on entering a shop where hundreds of colors are dashed upon the vision and offered as the latest thing? One feels that a gigantic kaleidoscope has been run before the eyes. The brain refuses to work. The judgment is suspended. One goes out of the shop with a feeling that it is futile to try to buy clothes and with a desire to let the season slide.

It is this discouragement that assails three-quarters of the women who go out to get their new apparel, so let them be guided by the fact that not many colors are really in fashion.

TWO LONG YEARS HE SUFFERED

"Fruit-a-tives" Made Him Feel As If Walking On Air

Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 28th. 1914.

"For over two years, I was troubled with Constipation, Drowsiness, Lack of Appetite and Headaches. One day I saw your sign which read "Fruit a tives make you feel like walking on air." This appealed to me, so I decided to try a box. In a very short time, I began to feel better, and now I feel fine. I have a good appetite, relish everything I eat, and the Headaches are gone entirely. I recommend this pleasant fruit medicine to all my friends".

BOWSER, NURSE.

Mrs. Bowser Tells Story of His Loving Devotion

HE CURED HER HEADACHE.

Said So Himself, and His Word Does Not Bear Contradiction—Cook Had Left the Family in the Lurch, but Mr. B Was Equal to the Occasion

By M. QUAD.

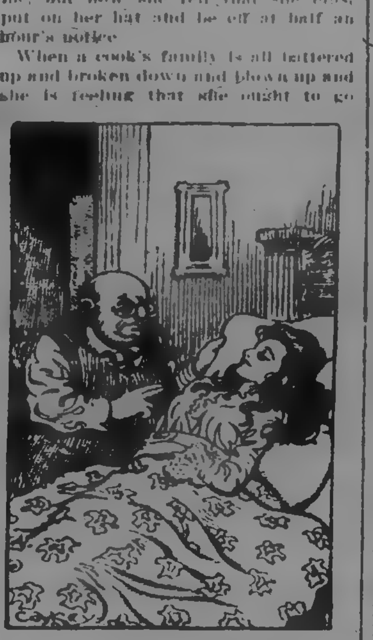
[Copyright, by Associated Literary Press.]

MR. BOWSER is an eccentric man. He is an impulsive man. He is what they call a bluffer. With him a thing must be so because he thinks so.

He prides himself on being a student of economy, and yet he buys a hog for $7, pays $6 for a pen, feeds him $2 worth of grain and when he is through his bacon has cost him 7 cents a pound more than it would at the butcher's.

I knew from the cook's face the other morning that a cataclysm of some sort was due, and half an hour after Mr. Bowser had departed I was sobbingly informed that her father had broken a leg, her mother was down with typhoid fever and one of her sisters had been blown up by the kerosene can. She hadn't said anything about it before, not wishing to worry me, but now she felt that she must put on her hat and be off at half an hour's notice.

When a cook's family is all battered up and broken down and blown up and she is feeling that she ought to go home and fall down the cellar stairs and break her neck to keep them company, nothing can be said by the lady who employs her.



"LIE QUIET AND DON'T WORRY."

I simply assured Mary that my sympathies went out for her and that I hoped she would be back within a day or two, and away she went. There was the ironing left undone, and one of my headaches coming on, but I set out to do the best I could and let it go at that.

Unusually Sympathetic.

By 3 o'clock in the afternoon I went to bed with such a splitting headache that it seemed as if nails were being driven into my skull, and there was only a slight abatement when Mr. Bowser came up to dinner. I was dreading his arrival. As a rule, when he comes home and finds me in bed he stands before me with folded arms and nods his head and says:

"Flat down in bed again, eh? I knew it would come! A woman who goes wading around barefoot in the snow or rain must expect to pay for it. Well, you'll get no sympathy out of me!"

On this occasion, however, and to my great surprise he came upstairs with quiet tread and laid a hand on my head and said:

"You've got one of your old headaches, and I'm mighty sorry for you. As the cook is not to be found downstairs, I suppose she's gone?"

"Yes, but it wasn't my fault."

"Of course not. Well, there's no use to worry. I'm not so helpless that I can't pick up a bite for myself. You lie quiet and don't worry."

"But I am sorry to have things all upset in this way when you come home," I said.

"Never mind little woman. It's a long time between your headaches and we'll get along as slick as grease."

Heaping on the Kindness.

There have been occasions when I had headaches that Mr. Bowser would go whistling and tramping about and banging away at the furnace doors, but this time he carefully avoided making any noise. It was half an hour before he came upstairs again, and then it was to say:

"What you want is something to eat. A headache is always worse on an empty stomach."

He had brought me up some cold corned beef left from the day before, with a liberal slice of bread and butter with jam on it. I turned dizzy at the sight, and it was all I could do to thank him for his kindness and tell him I hoped to have an appetite by and by.

"I will leave it here," he said, "and the minute you feel like eating I hope you will devour every morsel of it. I can stave off a headache every time by filling up with corned beef and sauerkraut. Just let me cool your head for you."

He took a towel and sopped it in cold water and laid it on my head. The water ran down my neck in streams, and he pressed a part of the towel over my mouth till I could hardly breathe and then he said:

"You want another quilt on this bed. Always sweat a fever out if you can."

I was burning up and needed less coverings instead of more, but I couldn't hurt his feelings by saying so. He put on an extra quilt and then insisted on rubbing my feet to get up a circulation. Every move of his hand went through my head, but I determined to die before making any objections. He lifted me up and turned my pillow over, shaded my eyes from the gas, wet the towel again and asked to look at my tongue and then departed on tiptoe.

His Grandmother's Idea.

I was dozing when Mr. Bowser came up again, carrying a dish in his hand. I scented the odor of fried sausages and nearly expired.

"I happened to think of what my grandmother used to say," he observed as he put the dish down. "She always contended that fried sausages were better than any doctor's medicine. As soon as you can eat three or four I believe your headache will entirely disappear."

I think it hurt his feelings a bit because I refused to make an effort, but he soon got over it. Then he remarked that his Aunt Ellen suffered for twenty years with headaches, but finally learned that if she sat propped up in bed they would go away within an hour. I tried to please him, but was so much worse after fifteen minutes that he agreed that his Aunt Ellen must have had asthma instead of a headache.

How Mr. Bowser got things ready for breakfast I did not learn until next morning. Then I found that he had ground coffee and allspice together, mixed sausage, corned beef, cabbage, oatmeal and sage together for a hash and dropped the wiping cloth into the teakettle. When he came up again I had fallen into a light sleep, and the cat was there. As soon as he began talking to the feline I awoke.

"So you are here, are you, you miserable, wall eyed son of a gun!" he said in a stage whisper. "I can't wring your old neck here and now, but don't forget that I am on your trail. If Mrs. Bowser dies, and there is a chance that she will, I'll be the death of you within fifteen minutes! If she pulls through my vengeance will only be delayed. I have sworn to have your scalp, and have it I will!"

The cat got downstairs and out on the back fence as soon as possible to do some thinking, and as soon as Mr. Bowser discovered that I was awake he offered to go over to the drug store and get me some salts, carbolic acid, chloride of lime or anything else any of his family had ever heard of in connection with any ailment whatever. When I replied that I needed nothing in that line he offered to go out and arouse the butcher and baker and bring in pork chops and graham bread. He suggested pickles and sardines from the delicatessen store for an appetizer and for a long five minutes descanted on the virtues of hard cider as a cure-all.

Soothing Literature.

As I wanted nothing but sleep to cure my headache, he decided to sit by me and read me to sleep. Under the circumstances I couldn't tell him that if he would go downstairs I would be asleep in ten minutes. He looked around for a book, but the only thing at hand was a copy of the voyage of Captain Cook. That was as good as anything, according to Mr. Bowser. Every word seemed to go through my head, but I shut my eyes and gritted my teeth and let him read on. How many islands and continents the captain discovered I shall never recall to memory, but I recollect that he had been discovering here and there for a number of years, when he landed to be eaten by cannibals. Mr. Bowser's voice betrayed considerable emotion when he reached this point. He had never been eaten himself, but he knew how it must be. The natives were working away when I fell asleep and lost Mr. Bowser, the cannibals, the captain and all else.

It was daylight when I awoke. My headache was all [illegible] self again. Mr. Bowser had also read himself to sleep. He sat in his chair in a heap, the book on the floor beside him and the cat on her back asleep, with legs in the air.

"By George," exclaimed Mr. Bowser as I roused him up, "I didn't know whether you would pull through or not. You were an awfully sick woman, and nothing but my loving care and knowledge of what should be done pulled you through. And now let this be a great moral lesson to you to behave yourself!"

Circumstances Alter Cases.

"Let me have some money, dear; I want to take a little trip."

"Can't afford it."

"Isn't that too provoking? I was thinking of visiting mamma to keep her from coming here."

"Why didn't you say so at first?"—Judge.

THE WAYS OF A MAN.

They Are Not Necessarily Unalterable, as Every Woman Knows.

HE carried flowers and diamond rings to please that dazzling belle, and caramels and other things that damsels love so well. He'd sit for hours upon a chair and hold her on his knees; he blew his money here and there as though it grew on trees. "If I had half what you are worth," he used to say, "my sweet, I'd put a shawl strap round the earth and lay it at your feet."

He had no other thought, it seemed, than just to cheer her heart, and everything of which she dreamed he purchased in the mart.

"When we are spliced," he used to say, "you'll have all you desire—a gold mine or a load of hay, a dachshund or a lyre. My one great aim will be to make your life a thing of joy, so haste and to the altar take your little Clarence boy."

And so she thought she drew a peach when they were wed in June. Alas, how oft for plums we reach and only get a prune!

"And so you want another hat?" he thundered to his frau. "Just tell me what is wrong with that—the one you're wearing now! No wonder that I have the blues, the way the money goes. Last week you blew yourself for shoes; next week you'll want new clothes!

"I wish you were like other wives and would like them behave; it is the object of their lives to help their husbands save. All day I'm in the business fight and strain my heart and soul, and when I journey home at night you touch me for my roll. You want a twenty dollar hat to hold your topknot down or else a new Angora cat, a lapdog or a gown. You lie awake at night and think of things you'd like to buy, and when I draw a little chink you surely make it fly.

"With such a wife as you, I say, a husband has no chance. You pull his starboard limb by day; by night you rob his pants.

"My sainted mother, when she dwelt in this sad vale of tears, had one old lid, of cloth or felt, she wore for thirty years. She helped my father all the time, she pickled every bone, and if she had to blow a dime it made her weep and moan.

"The hat you wear is good as new; 'twill do another year. So don't stand round, the rag to chew—I'm busy now, my dear."—Walt Mason in Judge.

Real.

Bridget's mistress was severity itself on one point. She would not in any circumstances allow anything approaching finery in the dress of her servants. Therefore, when Bridget after several warnings appeared with a very large and vivid bunch of flowers in her hat, naturally her mistress was much annoyed.

"How many times have I told you that I do not allow my servants to wear artificial flowers?" she cried. "I gave you fair warning that the next time you disobeyed me you leave."

"But I haven't disobeyed you, mum," said Bridget; "these aren't artificial flowers."

"How dare you! Well, I never did! You have the assurance to tell me I cannot believe my own eyes!"

"Well, mum, they ain't artificial flowers. They're real 'uns. I got 'em out of master's greenhouse."—Exchange.

WHO BEGAN WAR?

German General Makes Claim to the Terrible Distinction.

General Hell is the appropriate name of the soldier who persuaded the Kaiser to mobilize his army and so precipitated the world war, according to a revelation in the Vossische Zeitung of Berlin.

This paper publishes a document which is to clear up the question: Who took the first step toward the opening of the hostilities between Russia and Germany, written by General Hell, the present chief of Field Marshal von Mackensen's staff. In 1914 General Hell was, until the war broke out, chief of the general staff of the Twentieth Army Corps, Allenstein.

On July 31, 1914, according to General Hell, he was rung up on the telephone by the chief of the General Staff, Moltke, in Berlin. Their conversation was as follows:

Moltke—Have you got the impression at the frontier that Russia is mobilizing?

Hell—Yes, I have had that impression for several days.

Moltke—What makes you think so?

Hell—The frontier is hermetically closed. No one is allowed to enter; besides, since yesterday the frontier guardhouses have been on fire. And in Mlawa red mobilization proclamations are said to have been put up.

Moltke—Why have you not yet procured one of the proclamations?

Hell—I am doing my best to procure one, but owing to the closure of the frontier I have not yet succeeded.

Moltke—You must get me one of those red bills; I must have certainty on that score, otherwise I cannot issue a command for the mobilization.

Hell—Your Excellency may be sure that the Russian is mobilizing.

Moltke—Do you take the responsibility for that statement upon yourself?

Hell—I do, as a am fully convinced.

General Hell goes on to say:

"This conversation took place at 7 o'clock in the morning. At 9 o'clock in the morning Rittmeister Koestring called. He had just come from Moscow and corroborated my suspicion. He said that for several days mobilization transports could be seen along the frontier and that he probably had crossed the frontier by the last train that was available. I sent this statement to Berlin. But I heard that Moltke was having an audience with his Majesty. I requested that Koestring's report should be forwarded to the palace. Late that afternoon the order for the impending danger of war was issued, not yet the order for mobilization."

Happy Revolutionists.

Some of the naive and mischievous doings of Russian Revolutionists, whose happiness knew no bounds after the overflow of the Czar, are told by William G. Shepherd. The following is representative:

"There was that great day in the village of Gotchina, for instance. All through the long life of Gotchina there stood on its outskirts a palace, surrounded by grounds that were sacred, and inhabited by high-born folks that a peasant must always touch his cap to. When the wave of revolution reached Gotchina, the village folk there did their bit in helping the common folks get on top; and the uncommon folks in the palace fled. Did Gotchina burn down the palace? No. That would have been angry work or alcoholic play, and Gotchina was unalcoholically and cheerfully playful. A peasant discovered in one of the once-sacred ponds huge dark forms that moved about in the cool waters.

"'Fish!' The call went around like a cry of fire.

"Before the day was over, the peasants, with hooks and lines, were pulling out giant carp, some of them a hundred years old, which the high-born folk of the palace and their fathers before them had been nurturing like old wine.

"On the third night there was such a barbecue of giant carp as will put that day down in the history of Gotchina forever. It was Gotchina's way of showing that it had thrown off the old yoke. And, like all the rest of Russia, it smiled, instead of frowning with earnestness, and was happy instead of angry."—Everybody's magazine.

"THE LILAC DOMINO."

The management of The Grand promises a big treat to its patrons on New Year's Day, matinee and night, when the Metropolitan Comic Opera Corp of New York will present for the first time in this city "The Lilac Domino," an elaborate musical production of beauty, fun and fashion that delighted New York and Boston for an entire year and made a tremendous hit in all of the principal cities throughout the United States. This tuneful opera was originally produced in Paris, where it created a veritable sensation, which was later duplicated in all of the capitals of Europe and is at present being presented in London, England.

The production embraces every feature of high class musical entertainment from Grand Opera to the popular syncopated variety of lyrical song and dance now prevalent in New York. It abounds in clean, wholesome comedy, interpreted by six of America's foremost comedians, and practically every form of dancing is introduced by clever exponents of that particular form of art.

A fortune has been spent on the scenic and costume mounting of the opera, and the electrical effects are as elaborate and artistic as anything that has ever yet been seen upon the stage.

The cast which will appear here is positively guaranteed by the management to be identically the same as in the larger cities where the company played extended engagements and includes such well known Broadway, New York, favorites as J. Humbird Duffey, formerly of the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company, who also created the lead in the Henry W. Savage production of "Sari"; Dorothy Dunbar Pringle, Canada's most famous light opera soprano; Doris Paine, formerly with Andreas Dippel's production of "Gypsey Love"; Herbert Standing, formerly of the George Edwards' productions of London; Teddy Wilde, for the past six seasons with the Henry W. Savage productions; Cesar Gonzales, who has been identified with Henry W. Savage's English Grand Opera Companies, Clara Thropp, a well-known comedienne of International reputation, and Sydney De Grey, one of the best known and most popular singing and dancing comedians before the public, who for many years has appeared in the leading comedy roles of Broadway's most popular musical successes. A young, vivacious and pretty chorus is another pleasing feature of the production.

Political Offensive May Make the Huns Break Away From Following the Kaiser

THE Allies should not abandon their political offensive against Germany, according to Right Hon. Arthur Henderson, former Labor member of the Lloyd George Ministry and leader of the British Labor party, because in many respects it is the most dangerous the House of Hohenzollem has to face.

"The real position is that the German people and the high command realize that their military plans have failed. They are now at pains to prevent their military failure leading to a political upheaval at home.

"Military victory is not the final aim of the Allies. It is a means to an end. It is sought in order to enable them to achieve the sort of peace which they conceive to be essential to prevent any future recurrence of the present awful struggle and to secure the end of the war for all time.

"That is broadly the aim of the Allies, and it seems to me that to supplement military effort by the political weapon in order to more quickly achieve such an honorable and a lasting peace would not weaken the Allies' position but would strengthen it.

"We are at war with the Kaiser and Kaiserism and personally I do not want to see any peace made with Kaiserism. If the peace settlement is to have any prospect of durability it must be made with the German people and not with the Kaiser.

"I strongly advocate a political offensive in order to widen the breach between Kaiserism and the German people. By a 'political offensive' I do not mean that Great Britain should resort to the use of unscrupulous diplomatic practices as Germany has done. The British people would not tolerate them. But I do say that they should make a wise and discriminate use of legitimate political methods, which are open and above board, and which mean elimination of secret diplomacy."

"At present," he continued, "the Allies are negotiating with the Kaiser's servants. All the speeches made by the German Chancellor and replied to by Allied statesmen constitute the employment of open political means to bring about a settlement of the war. It is a game of skilled diplomacy, but one of the chief faults is that the Allies are playing it with a Minister who is solely responsible to the Kaiser.

"To my mind the most satisfactory channel of communication available is provided by the German Socialist and particularly by the minority Socialist. Personally I would much rather consult with a German minority Socialist during the war than with an official of an autocratic German Government after the war.

"If we really desire to see a democratic Germany we should do all in our power to strengthen the democratic elements in Germany. If we intend that peace when it comes shall be a democratic and lasting peace made by democratically elected representatives of all the peoples concerned, surely it would be better to address our speeches not to the German Imperial Chancellor, who is the servant of the Kaiser, but to the elected representatives of the German people.

"So long as military effort is necessary there must be no slackening on the part of the Allies, but that is no reason why side by side with such effort we should not attempt, by a wise and sensible use of the political weapon, to hasten the settlement of the war by a peace which shall be just, honorable, and democratic."

Sea Water.

Sea water is a complicated mixture of a great variety of substances. Roughly speaking, it consists of 96½ per cent of fresh water plus 3½ per cent of mineral salts. Three-fourths of these salts is chloride of sodium, or common table salt, and the next largest constituent is chloride of magnesium. After these come sulphate of magnesium, sulphate of lime, sulphate of potash, bromide of magnesium and carbonate of lime. In addition to these substances, sea water contains minute quantities of quite a variety of elements, including iodine, phosphorus and arsenic. It also contains some silver, copper, zinc, nickel, cobalt, iron and gold. Copper and zinc are found in some seaweeds, and certain species of coral is three-millionths silver.

Curved Arms of Flywheels.

A great many people imagine that the arms of flywheels and pulleys are curved for the sake of beauty and graceful appearance. But this is not so. In the making of these wheels they are cast in sand from molten iron poured in. As the arms are of less thickness and body than the heavy rim and the hub, they begin to cool off quicker. By the time the arms are "set" the rim and hub are still cooling and contracting, and the effect of their shrinkage is to cause a very powerful pull on the arms. As the latter are solidly set they become severely strained, but if the arms are curved they withstand the pull that goes on during shrinkage and simply straighten out a little.

The Beginning of Brazil.

Rising brisk and early one bright morning toward the close of the fifteenth century, a nice Portuguese gentleman, to wit, Cabral, going for a sail, decided to take his comical little fleet down the west coast of Africa, turn to the east, totter across the Indian ocean and, before he grew quite old, reach the Indies. The opening voyage was shorter than expected. He awoke one day to find land on his right instead of on his left, land which Pinzon had scratched three months earlier, land in the west and not in the east. It was Brazil.—London Chronicle.

Without Fear.

"The first shall be last and the last shall be first," quoted the devout citizen.

"It makes no difference to me how you arrange 'em," replied the expert commercialist. "I'll get mine either way. I'm the middleman."

"What's the matter, my dear?"

"Oh, I'm trying to tell that Gotrox person how perfectly beautiful we think her horrid old wedding present is.

Very Good.

"Did he get a good wife?"

"Good for a million."

"Good enough."

A False Impression.

He—Wear furs? Of course they don't wear furs. That's nonsense!

Overdone.

"Yes; and herself also."

"How about her husband?"

"Oh, he has been done over and again!"—Judge.

AN ACCIDENTAL HERO.

Sometimes It's Easy to Make a Hit If You've Got the Nerve.

EGBERT DOBBS was one of those boys who never knew how to dance. The parties he attended were devoted mostly to kissing games and at such the other kids had nothing on Egbert.

It was not until he was about sixteen years old that Egbert realized that he had missed something. He could wabble through a square set and he was strong on the grand march to supper, but at other entries Egbert was a shine and knew it.

At this, the crisis in his young life he might still have beaten it to dancing school, but he did not. He became a pitiable victim of self consciousness and at parties for the next four years spent most of his time out in the hall in the vicinity of the lemonade bowl.

When Egbert was twenty-three years old he spent his two weeks' vacation at Mud Knob, in the Catskires. It was the era of the tango and the maxixe. One night in the hotel ballroom a husky summer girl dragged him out on the floor.

"I can't dance!" spluttered Egbert hysterically.

"Come on; you gotter!" cried the playful thing.

"But I can't, I tell you!" he gasped.

"Yes, you can! Just keep a-bobbing!"

Egbert was helpless. Heavens, what a frightful spectacle he was making of himself! How the girls would laugh at him! How the other fellows would josh him! All the while he was slipping, sliding, crouching, skidding rocking from side to side, up and down, in and out, in the grasp of a giggling girl who wouldn't let go of him.

When the music stopped Egbert staggered toward the door. His sole idea was to escape. But he was intercepted by a whole bevy of girls.

"Oh, Mr. Dobbs," cried one, "what was that you were dancing with Miss Biggs? Won't you show me?"

"Oh, Mr. Dobbs," cried another "won't you teach me?"

"Me, too, Mr. Dobbs!" said a third in shrill appeal. "It had some awfully cute steps in it. Where did you learn it?"

In short, instead of a boob, Egbert found himself a hero.

Moral.—All is dance that wiggles.—Puck.

It Seemed Natural.

"Well, well," said the man who had returned to the little old town. "I can hardly realize that it is twenty years since I left here."

"I dunno why you should feel that way about it," replied the old inhabitant. "There's been a lot of changes. The Baptist church has been tore down and rebuilt since you went away, there's Lem Richardson's garage where the postoffice was when you lived here, we've got three movin picture shows that we didn't have when you left, and there's been lots of other improvements. I should think you'd notice 'em."

"Oh, yes, I've noticed the improvements, but I see that Bill Higgins is still running for constable, so I can hardly realize that there has been any change."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Report of the Auditors to the Shareholders of The Canadian Bank of Commerce

In accordance with the provisions of sub-sections 19 and 20 of Section 56 of the Bank Act, 1913, we report as follows:

We have audited the above Balance Sheet and compared it with the books and vouchers at Head Office and with the certified returns from the branches. We have obtained all the information and explanations that we have required, and are of the opinion that the transactions of the Bank which have come under our notice have been within the powers of the Bank.

We have checked the cash and verified the securities representing the investments of the Bank at its chief office and principal branches at a date other than, and in addition to, the verification at 30th November, 1917, and found that they were in agreement with the entries in the books of the Bank relating thereto.

In our opinion the Balance Sheet is properly drawn up so as to exhibit a true and correct view of the state of the affairs of the Bank according to the best of our information and the explanations given to us, and as shown by the books of the Bank.

KILLED

Mrs.

W. H. PRETTY
FOR
Boar of Education

141 Hunter St. E.,
Peterborough, December 25, 1917.
To the Electorate of the City of Peterborough,—

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

Should it be your pleasure to elect me as one of your representatives on the Board of Education for the city of Peterborough at the coming civic elections, it will be equally my pleasure to willingly serve you in that capacity to the best of my ability to do so.

I am fully aware of and appreciate the importance of the continued development of our educational facilities, in the general interests of our young people and the city of Peterborough, both from the standpoint of "General" education and "Technical" education, and I am of opinion that neither branch can be neglected with impunity.

As a graduate in Engineering Science of the University of London, England, I am not unacquainted with the preparatory needs of students who purpose entering similar institutions.

Above all things I am a believer in giving our young people and our "artisans" and "craftsmen" generally, every educational opportunity within our means, so that they may be able to look back, in the years to come, with satisfaction, on our efforts of today.

I take this opportunity of expressing my appreciation of the good work which has unquestionably been done, educationally, in the past, by previous Boards of Education, and will endeavor, if elected, to do my duty also, with due consideration for the students, the teachers, the city of Peterborough and the public purse.

Yours very truly.
W. H. PRETTY.

Card of Thanks

To the Electors of East Peterboro.

Ladies and Gentlemen:

I take this opportunity of extending my heartfelt thanks for the splendid support I received in East Peterborough on Monday, having been re-elected as your representative as a supporter of Union Government by majority of over 900 with the soldiers vote still to hear from.

I do not presume to take any credit for a personal victory, but attribute my success to your anxiety for the endorsation of Union Government and in the interests of civilization and christianity.

Especially do I thank the ladies for their noble, whole-hearted support to which in no small measure was due my victory at the polls.

I assure the electors of this County that I shall continue, as in the past, to do my whole duty by them in the best interests of the Riding and the Dominion as a whole.

Yours very sincerely.
JOHN A. SEXSMITH.

AMERICA'S GREAT NEED.

Teaching That Will Lead to Contentment and Stability.

No steam boiler is safe without its provision against overpressure. A perfectly even application of its power to the work it is doing is not possible. All through mechanics runs this same necessity of safeguarding against the surplus of force which must be generated to accomplish the work which the machine is set to do. The safety valve for steam power and the fuse for electric circuits are mechanical essentials.

Sanity, national as well as individual, demands balance. It demands men and women who unite with special practical efficiency in producing an equal skill and wisdom in using products. The most vitally important question of our immediate future is not what wealth and leisure can we achieve as an average for our people, but what shall we do with the wealth and leisure which as an average we do secure.

It is assumed in our educational thought that with more money and leisure will come more contentment and stability. These will only come to a people prepared to secure and understand them. Unless our schools give their pupils this preparation we shall some day need a cataclysm to show us the eternal fitness of things.

MEANING OF HORSEPOWER.

And How a Person In Lifting Weight May Expend That Force.

It has been estimated that to lift 550 pounds one foot in one second requires what is known as one horsepower. Similarly a horsepower is able to raise twice that weight one foot in twice the time or one-half foot in just that time. Moreover, it can raise half 550 pounds one foot in half a second or two feet in a second, and so on. Therefore, if you lift one-quarter of that weight, 137½ pounds, four feet in one second you are exerting a horsepower.

Accordingly, when a person who weighs 137½ pounds runs upstairs at the rate of four feet a second he is exerting the equivalent of a horsepower. For a man weighing twice that much, 275 pounds, it would be necessary to climb at the rate of only two feet a second to exert a horsepower.

It is possible to do much more. As a matter of fact, a horse often exerts many times a horsepower. The average horse can draw a wagon up a hill where a ten horsepower engine with the same load would fail. A horsepower does not represent the greatest momentary strength of the average horse, but is a measure of the power which he can exert continuously.

Washington's Tomb.

At the late date of 1827 a wish expressed by General Washington in his will was obeyed. He had called attention to his selection of a spot for a new tomb for himself and family and those of the family already buried in the old vault. The old tomb was disadvantageously situated on the side of a hill which was subject to landslides. For the new vault he specified not only the spot, but also dimensions and materials. According to these, his own plans, a tomb was built, and his and Mrs. Washington's bodies were transferred to it, along with the remains in the old vault of other members of the family. The latter were buried together within the vault, out of sight, while the bodies of General and Mrs. Washington are in stone coffins above the ground, within plain view between the slender bars of a grated iron doorway. It is for this reason that the most illustrious of our dead has so simple a mausoleum—obedience to his wish.

Neighborhood Society.

"Oh, mother," cried Mabel, who had never visited in the country, "I have just had a letter from my schoolmate inviting me to spend two weeks on her father's farm!"

Mabel's mother looked up languidly.

"Yes, dear," she remarked, "and what does she say about the society in the neighborhood? Does she mention any one?"

"No," answered Mabel thoughtfully, "but I've heard her mention the Holsteins and Guernseys."

"Oh, well," said her mother, "I presume they are pleasant people."

Human Horns.

In the anatomical museum of the Edinburgh university four horns are preserved which had grown upon human heads. One of these is about seven inches long, as thick as the little finger and crooked in shape. A label attached to it bears this inscription: "This horn was cut by Arthur Temple, chirurgeon, out of the head of Elizabeth Low, being three inches above the right ear, before witnesses, the 14th of May, 1671. It was a-growing seven yeares. Her age is fifty yeares."

The three other human horns also graced the heads of ladies.

HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS.

Men Will Delve Into the Past of Our Nation.

All those volunteer workers who have ever seriously endeavored to make a documentary study of any portion, not to say the whole, of the real history of Canada, have found themselves greatly hampered by the lack of material. There are probably many documents of untold value yet to be unearthed among the State and private papers of the various Provinces of this Dominion, and there is certainly abundant opportunity to make more accessible to the public those which have been brought to light by enthusiastic researchers working each on his own line for some special object.

While the general public will be advantageously served directly through the appointment by the Dominion Government of an "Historical Documents Publications Board," they will also be indirectly benefited to an indefinite extent by the work of those who devote themselves to the elucidation of special aspects or special periods of Canadian history. Of such enthusiasts there is a large and increasing number in the United States as well as in Canada, for it should never be forgotten that, for all practical research purposes, the history of the British colonies in North America prior to the Revolutionary War of 1776-83 was, and is, and increasingly will be a material part of the history of Canada.

On the personnel of the Board it is unnecessary to enlarge, as the name of every member of it is quite familiar to all those who have been during the past generation endeavoring to assist the people of Canada to really know the history of their own country. Dr. Adam Shortt was for years a successful teacher of historical and economic subjects in Queen's University, Kingston, and his subsequent experience as the head of the Dominion Civil Service Commission has been of a sort to increase his aptitude for the Chairmanship of the Documents Board. It may be added that already Dr. Shortt has been a practical worker in the mine of material, having collaborated with Mr. Arthur G. Doughty in the preparation of a very useful collection of public documents selected from the contents of the Archives, of which Mr. Doughty has had charge since the retirement of Mr. Douglas Brymner, the first Archivist of the Dominion. Professor Charles W. Colby is well known as a member of the teaching staff of McGill University, and as a writer on historical subjects, and mutatis mutandis the same statement applies to Professor Geo. M. Wrong, who has charge of the department of history in the University of Toronto. The name of Mr. Thomas Chapais of Quebec is not as familiar to the English-speaking people of Canada as it should and hereafter will be; he is pre-eminently suited to carry on research work among the documents in French, relating not merely to the history of Quebec Province prior to 1763, but also to the history of Lower Canada before and during the union with Upper Canada, and as part of the Dominion of Canada since 1867.

Not much has been told the public yet as to the way in which the Board is expected to carry on its very important work, but it is already known that Dr. Shortt will be a salaried officer of the Dominion Civil Service, and he will doubtless be expected to devote his whole time, ability, skill, and learning to the work of the Board; fortunately he will beyond question find that work congenial.

Our Art Societies.

Reminiscences of the cradle and infancy of art in Canada were charmingly given in a recent address by Mr. F. M. Bell Smith, the well-known Canadian painter. Mr. Bell-Smith prefaced his remarks by saying that "art in Canada to-day is not merely fanciful, but is a wholesome and very valuable reality." He made a brief reference to Jacobi, one of the best colorists who had ever come to Canada from Europe, and to Paul Kane and to Kreighoff, a Russian Pole, who won not a little fame as the painter of "habitant" life in the Province of Quebec.

It was, however, left to Mr. Bell-Smith's father, John Bell-Smith, to found the first society of artists in Canada. This was just after he settled in Montreal in 1866. He was its first president. The Vice-President was John Alexander Fraser, one of the best water color painters the Dominion had seen. Others were his brother, William Fraser, Henry Sandham, James Duncan, and William Raphael. This society of Canadian artists was the parent from which all other art bodies grew, though the original did not long continue owing to the fact that the founders left Montreal.

Mr. Bell-Smith, with his family, and John A. Fraser moved to Toronto, and through their efforts largely the Ontario Society of Arts was formed in 1872, "which exists as a very live and active institution to-day," added Mr. Bell-Smith.

The establishment of the Royal Canadian Academy, under the inspiration of the Marquis of Lorne and the Princess Louise, was touched on briefly. Mr. L. R. O'Brien was first president, and the storm he raised in his first selection among academicians was recalled. Mr. Bell-Smith told how curiously the same scene appealed to different artists. He mentioned that he and three other Canadian artists were sketching within arm's length of each other in the Rocky Mountains some years ago, and each of the same theme made such a different picture that they were scarcely recognizable to themselves as the self-same view.

The cozy little fur waistcoat is one of this season's successful novelties. Waistcoats of this kind are being made of all sorts of different furs, astrakhan, musquash, squirrel, beaver and dyed rabbit. Such waistcoats can be worn with the most severely plain tailored suit and they not only look attractive, but they are so warm that the coat can be thrown open in the manner now considered so supremely "correct."

The winter suit which is shown in the sketch was created by Worth. It is simplicity itself, but so beautifully cut and so admirably well chosen, so far as materials are concerned, that it might be worn on the most elaborate and ceremonious occasion. The material of both coat and skirt was currant-red duvetyn and the trimming was musquash in a dark brown shade, writes Idalia de Villiers, a Paris correspondent.

Worth is making many winter suits of this order and he is using quantities of soft duvetine and corded gaberdine. I noted many different shades of rich red in his showrooms, but the bright currant shade seems a special favorite. This red has a touch of purple in it and it is particularly attractive in diagonal serge, duvetine and gaberdine.

Worth is not making any walking skirts shorter than "ankle length," and nearly all his new model skirts are plain and fitted at the waist. Large slip-pockets are introduced at the sides and the skirts fall in perfectly straight lines from waist to hem without giving any idea of the ugly "hobble" outline. Please take special note of the large turn-over collar shown in this sketch.

This style of collar appears on all the new winter coats made at the best houses and they are exceedingly cozy and warm. Chez Worth and also chez Paquin and Doucet I heard that a great deal of silk is to be used this winter and coming spring to spare the woolen materials as much as possible. I have seen effective tailored suits made of dark blue and black broadcloth, which had panels of faille and whole bodices of the same silk.

Story of a Lion.

One of Sir Charles Wakefield's predecessors in office, while in the Arabian desert, came face to face with a lion of parts. Down on his knees went the worldly knight in fervent prayer. The lion understood—or did not—and retreated supperless. Thereupon the pilgrim came home and gave £200 to the Church of St. Katherine Cree, Leadenhall street, where the lion sermon is still preached on each anniversary of the escape, Oct. 16.—London Chronicle.

Volubility.

HOW VOSS WAS KILLED.

London Youth Took Part in Fight With Famous German.

Flight-Lieut. Bert Perry, R. F. C., in a letter to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George E. Perry of London, written on October 8, gives a description of the air battle in which the famous German aviator, Voss, lost his life.

It will be remembered that the Associated Press cable that carried the news of this battle, the English aviator who brought Voss down being designated as "Brown." The information is now given that the man responsible for the feat was Lieut. Rhys-David, and that Lieut. Cronyn of London, Ont., had an important part in it. Lieut. Cronyn is a son of Major Hugh Cronyn and has been in the Royal Flying Corps a couple of years, most of that time flying in India. In France he has been with No. 56 Squadron, which Lieut. Perry says is the crack squadron there. He says:

"It is Capt. Ball's old squadron, and has a record of 200 Huns shot down in five months. Well, the day I was talking to Cronyn, he went out in an afternoon patrol. He had the experience of his young life. He got into the scrap in which Lieut. Rhys-David brought down Lieut. Voss, the crack Hun. Cronyn was attacked by three triplanes, one of which was flown by Voss. Cronyn was under his formation several hundred feet, owing to engine trouble. When he was attacked he kept manoeuvring so as to keep the Huns off his tail, but they got in several shots at him. In the meantime, though, the other machines in his formation dived on the Huns, and two of them went off east. The other kept after Cronyn, but his attention was taken by the others. For several minutes Voss battled with six of them and flew rings around them. They all say he was a wonderful pilot. However, they proved too much for him. Lieut. Rhys-David, who has many Huns to his credit, got in a burst of shots, and the triplane went down. It landed a few feet on our side of the line, and when the body was taken out it was discovered to be Voss. As the Huns had got Guynemer a few days before almost in the same place it sort of evened matters.

"Cronyn started back for the aerodrome, but when he went to turn he found that his aileron controls were shot away, and he could not get his machine out of the bank. He sideslipped for nearly three thousand feet before he managed to get his engine on and pull himself up on an even keel again. Fortunately he was headed for the aerodrome then, and all he had to do was to steer by his rudder straight ahead. He managed to land safely, but when his machine was examined it was found so badly damaged that it was a "write off"—that means it had to be written off as too badly damaged to repair. There were several bursts of shot through his machine, but Cronyn escaped without a scratch."

The ordeal had been hard on the young Londoner's nerves, and at the time Lieut. Perry wrote Lt. Cronyn had been sent to England to recuperate.

"Blighty Corner."

One place which many Canadian soldiers visit in Paris is the British "Blighty Corner," officially known as the "Foyer du Soldat Anglais." It is conducted by a group of English and American women as a place where Canadian, Australian, and New Zealand soldiers who cannot go home for their ten days' leave may find a welcome. It has all the facilities of an up-to-date club, with perhaps a little more of the air of "home" than an ordinary club. Tea is served every afternoon to all comers by the wives of British officers, and there is every afternoon and evening a program of music and entertainment.

"My visit has given me much pleasure," wrote the Prince of Wales in the visitors' book. "Ditto" wrote the Duke of Connaught.

On the occasion of the Duke of Connaught's visit the cheers of the Canadian soldiers were so lusty as to offend the ears of some of the residents of a fashionable hotel in the Place Vendome nearby. They filed a complaint with the police, but the police replied: "They are authorised to make as much noise as they please. The British soldiers were not told to make less noise when they blew up the mines at Messines."

Twice a week the men at "Blighty Corner" are taken to visit the old corners of Paris. An interesting incident occurred this week when a party visited the Church of Jeanne d'Arc. The priest presented them with souvenir medals representing Joan of Arc. "But there are only three Roman Catholics among them," he was told. "It does not matter," replied the broad-minded priest. "They all serve the same Master and General."

The Term "Coal-oil."

The term "coal-oil" applied to the form of petroleum at one time most generally in use, was born of a misapprehension, writes Victor Ross in his book "Petroleum in Canada." It is said that in 1790 miners in the Shropshire coal mines in England observed oil trickling from the fissures in the veins and naturally believed that it came from the coal. Many years later this circumstance was quoted to sustain the theory that soft coal beds were the source of supply. When the first large deposits of petroleum in the United States were discovered, bitumen coal was also found in immense quantities in the same regions; thus the belief that the two were of common origin was fixed more firmly and the term "coal-oil" came into general use. This belief was common among operators until oil was found at points far removed from any coal, as for example in the Petrolia and Oil Springs fields of Ontario.

HANS THE COBBLER

Advice Gets Him Trouble Instead of Business.

THE TAILOR'S TIP A FLUKE.

Which Forces the Sartorial Artist to the Conclusion That Nature Has Denied Hans the Faculty of Putting Up a Bluff and Getting Away With It.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, " by Associated Literary Press.]

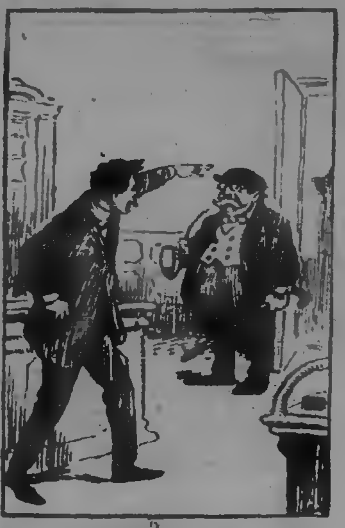
I VHAS putting some cement patch on a shoe for 15 cents vhen dot little tailor calls at my shop und says:

"Hans, where vhas der crowd?"

"Only two peoples comes in today," I says.

"Look here, my frendt," he says, "der trubles mit you vhat dot you don't understand der peoples in dis country. Put on your Sunday clothes und go und look at some pianos and iceboxes und new furniture und say you vhas a cobbler. If dey gif you some cobbling, you buy your goods of dem. Dey shall belief he vhas rich und keeps fife men."

Vhell, dot looks all right to me und my wife und I put on my black suit und take a walk. By und by I comes by a piano store und goes in. Dot man bows und shmiles. He shows me ten pianos und I says to him:



"UND TELLS ME TO PEAT IT."

"I like to ask my wife first. Maybe we shall take eight pianos und mebbe only seven, but if you want some patches on your shoes or lifts on your heels, you gome by my shop. My price vhas low und my work good."

"I don't like some cobbler shops," says dot man as he looks mad. "If you don't vhant some pianos vhy you come in here und take oop my time? Maybe you vhas looking for a mouth-organ at fife cents?"

He says my friends better put me in some crazy house before I do damage und tells me to peat it. I vhas discouraged, but I goes down der street to a hardware store und looks at some refrigerators.

"She vhas der best in der world," says der man ash he comes opp. "You can put some onions und milk in dot box togther, und dey shan't shmell of each odder. He vhas brass hinges outside und der Arctic ocean inside, und your ice bill vhas only 10 cents a week. If you vhant a bargain, here she vhas. I knock der price down from $70 to $8.50 to close out."

"Vhell, maybe I like to buy feefteen refrigerators," says I.

"Feefteen! Den dot price vhas reduced to $8.49 apiece. Vhas you building feefteen new flats?"

"Oh, no; I vhas der German cobbler, you know. If you do peesness mit me I shall mit you. I can put some new soles on your shoes for 60 cents."

"But do you vant some refrigerators today?"

"Do you like some of my cement patches or pearl soles on your shoes?"

He don't answer me. He takes me by der arm und leads me to der door, und pooty queek I vhas oudt.

I vhas going home when I meets a real estate office und I belief I shall try once more. Dot man he has ten houses for sale und twenty to rent, und I says to him:

"Maybe you like to sell a house for $40,000."

"I shall sell you a palace for dot," he says as he shakes hands. "Do you like a house on a hill mit forty rooms und a basement?"

"I belief I do."

"How mooch you like to pay down?"

"I can't say. I like to talk peesness mit you. If you come by my cobbler shop for repairs I shall buy my house und lots from you. Do you like cement patches on a shoe, or shall I sew him on?"

"I vill put some patches on you if you don't go out!" he shouts, und he don't let me shpeak to him again before I vhas on der sidewalk.

I goes home und takes off my Sunday clothes, und pooty queek dot little tailor comes in und says:

"Vhell, Hans, vhas he all right? Do you scare opp some peesness?"

I tells him how it vhas und he shakes his head und says:

"Sometings vhas wrong, Hans—sometings vhas wrong."

"But how shall I do now?"

"I guess you shall keep quiet und shtay by der shop. I see now it vhas deeferent. You don't look some peesness about you, und nopody beliefs you vhas a candidate for aldermans or haf a pull by der poleece force."

Money in Tokio Banks.

The end of September found the Tokio banks with more money than at any time in the history of the Empire. Total deposits were 1,011,524,992 yen ($505,762,496). This showing of deposits is almost two-thirds larger than for a similar period in 1914. At the same time, general loans mounted to $402,909,688. Cash in hand, despite increased deposits, is not large, owing to demands for end-of-the month settlements, being only $30,616,850. Day-to-day money was quoted at 1 sen (½ cent Canadian) to 1.2 sen per diem. Time loans are quarter of a cent higher.

The Crisis Passed.

"The German communiques, announcing in comforting tones this defeat and that retreat and the other surrender, remind me of the young doctor." The speaker was the late Herbert Tree. He went on: "A young doctor said to his wife, 'Yes, I felt greatly worried over Banker Bond's case until the climax was passed.' 'Will he be out soon?' asked the young wife. 'Well, not till the day of the funeral,' said the doctor."

French Peasantry and the War

"The backbone of the French Army, as he is the backbone of France, is the French peasant," says Mr. Henry Sheahan in "A Volunteer Poilu." "He has three very good qualities—endurance, patience, and willingness to work. Apart from those characteristics he is an excellent fellow by himself—not jovial, to be sure, but solid, self-respecting, and glad to make friends when there is a chance that the friendship will be a real one. He does not care very much for the working-men of the towns, the ouvriers, with their fantastic theories of universal brotherhood and peace, and he hates the depute whom the workingman elects as he hates a vine fungus. A needless timidity, some fear of showing himself off as a simpleton, has kept him from having his just influence in French politics; but the war is freeing him from those shackles.

"Another thing about the peasantry is that trench warfare does not weary them, the constant contact with the earth having nothing unusual in it. A friend of mine, the younger son of a great landed family of the province of Anjou, was captain of a company almost exclusively composed of peasants of his native region; he loved them as if they were his children, and they would follow him anywhere. The little company, almost to a man, was wiped out in the battles round Verdun. In a letter I received from this officer a few days before his death he told me that his company was waiting in a new trench for the Germans to attack. Suddenly the tension was relieved by a fierce little discussion carried on in whispers. His soldiers appeared to be studying the earth of the trench.

"'What's the trouble about?' he asked. Came the answer—

"'They are quarrelling as to whether the earth of this trench is better for cabbages than for turnips!'"

The Influence of Light.

The sensitiveness of growing plants to the influence of light is fairly well known. In a recent experiment cress seedlings showed a distinct curvature after an exposure of only two seconds to a light of two hundred candle power. The feebler the light the longer is the time required to produce a reaction, but in an hour the seedling will curve towards the feeblest glimmer of light.

The effect of light on the colors of organized creation is shown in the sea. Near the shore there are seaweeds of the most beautiful hues, particularly on rocks which are left dry by the tide; and the rich tints of the actiniæ which inhabit shallow water must often have been observed. The fish which swim near the surface are also distinguished by the variety of their colors, whereas those which live at greater depths are gray, brown, or black.

Electricity Kills Germs.

According to an editorial in the Medical Record on the electrical sterilization of milk, this method of destroying bacteria has some advantages over pasteurization and boiling. These conclusions are based on reports of experiments.

Joffre Admires Canadians.

The Prime Minister has received the following cablegram from Sir George Perley, acting High Commissioner for Canada in London:

London, Oct. 8, 1917.
Prime Minister, Ottawa:

The Canadian Military Mission called on Marshal Joffre this morning to pay their respects to the victor of the Marne. The Marshal said he was all the more pleased with their visit, as the memories of the ovations accorded him in Montreal while M. Viviani was being acclaimed in Ottawa, were still fresh in his mind. He expressed his admiration for the part played by the Canadian army in the war, adding: "I am just a soldier. I do not know anything about your politics. I am positive, however, that in Canada, as in all the other Entente countries, it is realized by all that in this fight against the assassination of Belgium and Serbia every civilized man must bring his maximum effort to bear.

(Signed) Perley.

New Citizens.

Over 2,000 agriculturists from the United States have settled on the grain-fields of Western Canada since January 1st of this year.

The German press is adopting the inspired attitude that the honors of war as regards the East African campaign rest with the Germans.

The conduct of the American engineers at Cambrai was praised in a letter written by General J. B. Seely, commanding a Canadian cavalry brigade.

Synopsis of Canadian Northwest Land Regulations

The sole head of a family or any male over 18 years old, who was at the commencement of the present war, and has since continued to be, a British subject or a subject of an allied or neutral country, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion Land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for District. Entry by proxy may be made on certain conditions. Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of land in each of three years.

In certain districts a homesteader may secure an adjoining quarter-section as pre-emption. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Reside six months in each of three years after earning homestead patent and cultivate 50 acres extra. May obtain pre-emption patent as soon as homestead patent on certain conditions.

A settler after obtaining homestead patent, if he cannot secure a pre-emption, may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

Holders of entries may count time of employment as farm laborers in Canada during 1917, as residence duties under certain conditions.

When Dominion Lands are advertised or posted for entry, returned soldiers who have served overseas and have been honorably discharged, receive one day priority in applying for entry at local Agent's Office (but not Sub-Agency). Discharge papers must be presented to Agent.

CURLERS OUT IN FORCE

The curlers had a big day at the rink yesterday when the roarin' game was in full swing morning, afternoon and night.

The first big event on the card will be the annual games in the President and Vice-President competition on New Year's day. On the day following the schedule games will open. The schedule will be posted at the rink within the next few days.

LINDSAY TEAM HARD PROBLEM FOR THE PETES

Joe Dioyer, Captain of Fast Seven at Sarnia.

All junior O. H. A. players are asked to be out to practice at the rink tonight between 7 and 8 o'clock. Only a few days more and the locals will open the district games at Lindsay, and as the Scugogville brigade have a husky bunch of players this season, it will require all the opposition the Petes can muster to win the series with Dick Butler's seven.

Joe Dwyer, the former Peterborough goaler, is captain of the Sarnia team this season. His team has just completed two games with Detroit, both of which were Sarnia victories. Jack Adams, of the 247th Battalion team last season, and Lornie Rose are out in front of Dwyer.

ROYAL MESSAGE TO SOLDIERS

KING AND QUEEN SEND GREETINGS TO CANADIAN HEROES.

Ottawa, Dec. 26.—The Governor-General has received from the Colonial Secretary the following messages from Their Majesties King George and Queen Mary for transmission to the Canadian troops:

"I send to all ranks of the navy and army my hearty good wishes for Christmas and the New Year.

"I realize your hardships patiently and cheerfully borne, and rejoice in the success you have won so nobly. The nation stands faithful to its pledges, resolute to fulfil them.

"May God bless your efforts and give us victory.

(Signed) "GEORGE, R.I."

"Our Christmas thoughts are with the sick and wounded sailors and soldiers. We know by personal experience with what patience and cheerfulness their sufferings are borne. We wish all a speedy restoration to health, a restful Christmas time, and brighter days to come.

(Signed)

"GEORGE, R. I.,
MARY, R."

He Caused a Panic.

The early days of the oil industry were not unattended with serious hazards to life, but modern invention has in a considerable degree minimized these dangers. Moreover, with growing scientific knowledge of petroleum, many fears once entertained have been dissipated. In 1860 the people of Western Pennsylvania were thrown into a panic by the proposal of a stranger, claiming to be an European scientist, to shoot a white-hot bolt into the bowels of the earth through an iron pipe driven to a great depth for the purpose. By the ignition of inflammable gases, thought to exist in the great cavities beneath the earth's crust, the promoter expected to produce a sufficient explosion to lay bare the subterranean reservoirs of oil. The Pennsylvanian populace, instead of viewing this proposal with the distrust and apathy traditionally accorded the first efforts of inventive minds, possessed sufficient imagination to picture the possible results, and were so convinced that the scientist minimized rather than exaggerated the feasibility of his undertaking, that they selected a small but representative committee to hang him on the spot. Because he had conspired to disturb not only the peace but the actual foundations of society in Pennsylvania he was taken into custody and solemnly warned to desist. Less than a year afterward nitro-glycerine was being exploded in large quantities deep down in the earth to shatter the rock and give an outlet to the oil without disturbance to the landscape.—Victor Ross in "Petroleum in Canada."

Inheritance Tax Argument

Inheritance taxes are very heavy. Unlike Fire hazard, they are not merely possible, they are absolutely certain.

They deplete your estate at once, and to your heirs represent a specific and definite loss of money.

In New York a $250,000 estate would pay a combined federal and state tax of about $12,000. If left to a friend or distant relative, about $22,000. The John Jacob Astor estate paid $2,150,000. J. P. Morgan has insured his life for $2,500,000 to cover a similar loss.

Thus the estate is provided promptly with the ready cash to pay this tax and other expenses without the need of hurriedly disposing of securities or other assets, perhaps at a loss, to meet such needs. The logic of the situation urges immediate action. Premium rates, however, low, advance with age, and so does the possibility of entering the physically impaired group and losing the opportunity to secure this protection.

Knowing that this loss is actually coming, it is simply a matter of ordinary business prudence to guard against it. The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada offer you a plan to do so at very low cost.

POEMS IN PATOIS.

"Nor' Shor' Verses" Come From New Brunswick.

Another Canadian poet who is finding his material in a part of the Dominion not hitherto treated in verse has just come before the Canadian public. In "Nor' Shor' Verses" Richard D. Ware has put into poetic form the dialect spoken by the people who live on the north shore of New Brunswick, between the Miramichi and the Bay of Chaleur. Mr. Ware tells us in his short introduction that most of the people who live in this part of Gloucester are French, descendants of the old-time Acadians. These Canadians, that is the fishers, the farmers, and the lumbermen among them, speak a broken English to enable them to mix with their English fellow-citizens, who do not attempt to talk French. In their patois, Mr. Ware has written his poetry. It is hardly necessary to add that one is reminded at once of the inimitable Habitant poems of the late Dr. Drummond, but in spite of that fact Mr. Ware has put individuality into his work. His verses tell of different phases of the life of these workers, and he sketches into them a nice appreciation of Canadian scenery. In a poem like "The Silver Thaw" for example, one gets a picture that calls to mind familiar scenes:

W'en de storm she go an' de sun he shine
Ba gee, it mak' great sight,
W'en all de fiel' an' bush an' vine
Mak' rainbow wit' de light.
De win' she mak' dem jomp an' play,
An' 'oh-la! in de ear
Soun' leetle bell lak cloches des fays
Meex een de air you hear.

There are many little bits of description as effective as that in Mr. Ware's slender volume of poetry. One only regrets that it is impossible to quote one of the longer poems in full to demonstrate how Mr. Ware catches the atmosphere of the country and suggests the character of these men, with their primitive humors. But space will only permit the use of one of the shorter poems, which does not show the writer at his best. It is entitled "The Teamsters":

Aw, de haulin's well mos' done:
Anodder touch o' sun
Sure mak' de road a fright, altogedder.
De ice she goin' fas an' eet never boun' to las'
Onless dere com' a shif' o' nor'-wes' wedder.
De ronner grit an' grin'
An' de track dey leave behin'
Cut right down to de groun' in forty place.
De bridge, dey are all bare,
An' she meltin' everyw'ere.
Eet play 'ell on de riggin' an' de trace.

Haulin' down to Tracadie,
To Tracadie, to Tracadie,
Any man who say can 'ave de job for all o' me.
Liftin', shiftin', every load,
Haulin', crawlin', down de road,
Dat's de trip we mak' to Tracadie.

But w'en we all get t'rough,
De firs' t'ing dere's to do
Is mak' de start de neares' place is handy.
Wit' som' "square face" up to Joe
For de giner an' de toe
Or leetle drink off 'Charley' ole French brandy.

He say "'ave dis one wit' me,"
An' de h'yes dey all agree,
An' de bottle go a'tackin' 'cross de table
Till de're jos' a leetle full—
Den dere's jos anodder pull
An' we go an' get de horse out in de stable.

Trottin' 'ome from Tracadie,
From Tracadie, from Tracadie,
Anyman and everyman feel jos' as fine as me.
Jinglin' janglin' up de road,
Every b'y's a proper load
W'en he start away from Tracadie.

NEW YORK'S DIRECTORY.

In Early Editions They Turned a Poet Loose Upon the Job.

The first New York city directory was printed in 1786 and was a scanty affair, with the "Van" descendants of the Dutch settlers of New Amsterdam taking up pretty nearly all the space.

The first attempt to compile names of New Yorkers by business or trade was made in 1805, when a classified list was appended to the directory. At the top of each classification the publishers inserted the work of a poet whose lyre was turned to commerce. This, for instance, is the bard's thoughts on hairdressers:

Ye ragged pates, your hair we'll crop
And dress it vastly pretty,
Or if your blocks are bare walk in,
I warrant we can fit ye,
With bag or queue or long pig tail
Or brushed wig or grizzled—

It was pointed out that the poet evidently had no trouble finding inspiration for each of the different businesses he was called upon to sing about until he came to the list of restaurants, which was published without verse, leading to the belief that the strain of singing of food had been too much for the bard.

Kuhlmann Is Not Clever, But Has Proved Himself To Be Very Determined

A CORRESPONDENT of The London Daily Telegraph writes as follows of Germany's Foreign Minister.

"The new German Minister for Foreign Affairs was for so long councillor at the embassy in Carlton House Terrace that by the close of his time here he was better known by sight in London society than any German diplomatist, except, of course, Count Paul Metternich. But beyond this circle he was scarcely known at all. He took little trouble to make himself acquainted with any stratum of English life, except that from which the Englishmen with whom he had official relations were drawn, and in which he naturally found the social relaxation in which his diplomatic position allowed him to indulge.

"The new Foreign Secretary is typically German in build, feature, character, methods, and mentality, and, to do him justice, he would regard such a description as a sincere compliment. He has always put his work for Germany first, and left no stone unturned in his efforts to attain his end.

"His obedience to his orders has always been instant and unquestioning. We in England have been rather shocked by the discovery that all the time during which Prince Lichnowsky acted as German Ambassador von Kuhlmann behind his back was keeping up a secret correspondence with the Kaiser and the Chancellor, which rendered the position of the ambassador humiliating and his work useless. But this is the common practice of the German Government.

"Though a man of great determination and activity, he cannot be called a clever man. The disastrous attempts to foment a holy war may be taken as an illustration of his greatest defect, an inability to form a picture of the character of the people with whom he is dealing. It must have been a task very much to his taste, for though his knowledge of Oriental affairs was never great his political interest in them was absorbing. I think I am right in saying that up to the very last the only map that hung on the walls of his private room in the embassy was our brown-contoured General Staff map of Persia and Afghanistan!

"Yet he is probably unconscious to this day that by this strange act of imprudence he put on their guard every one of the dull, bronzed Englishmen who visited him and seemed to know scarcely anything about the problems of the Persian Gulf. With his interest in Mahometan countries, he should at least have known that a jihad may be proclaimed only after a formal call to the other side to embrace Islam.

"The Turks are not devoid of humor, and the picture of Mohammed V. solemnly calling upon the kings and presidents of the world to abandon Christianity for Islam probably made them regard the whole matter as a silly farce. But of a sense of humor von Kuhlmann is devoid, and he went on unsmiling to his catastrophe.

"There is no one in the ranks of the German diplomatic service whose claim to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs is likely to be regarded as greater than von Kuhlmann's. For though his best friends could hardly regard him as an inspired diplomatist, he has qualities that will serve Germany in good stead. He has a presence and a certain power of insistence that will be of use to Prussia in the days of a congress in which there will be little room for finesse and less for intrigue."

Sea Otters.

Some of the habits of the sea-otter are very interesting. For example, an otter always swims on his back, his tail serving as a rudder and his head slightly raised so that by looking over his shoulder he can shape his course. When about to dive, however, he turns on his stomach, remaining in that position while under water, but changing again on coming to the top. Swimming a few feet below the surface, an otter very much resembles a sailor in his oilskins. An amusing story is told of a tourist fisherman who, seeing one of these animals swimming in this manner, hurried ashore and related a wonderful tale about having seen a sailor man apparently drowned swimming with all the vigor of life six or seven feet under water; and who, when he, thinking the man might be alive, rowed to his assistance, went down and stayed down. The fisherman would not believe it when told that it was probably a sea-otter, and he returned immediately to his Eastern home convinced he had received a supernatural warning of some dire calamity about to happen.—St. Nicholas.

English Army Etiquette.

It has come at last—the offence of an officer dining in public with a private. It was bound to come, soon or late. The present writer met not long ago a private in uniform and two men in mufti. Of the two, one, who should have been wearing the uniform of a second lieutenant, explained: "Private Blank, here, is my uncle. He is up for a visit, and according to regulations I ought not to be seen about with him. Since I joined the army I have grown bang out of my civilian rig, so I've borrowed a suit from the guv'nor, haven't I, dad?" "Yes, you have, and it's my best, you villain," answered the second civilian.—London Daily Chronicle.

The value of otters is fully recognized by the Chinese, who train them to fish.

The Crops of Quebec.

The Bureau of Statistics of the province has issued an estimate of the yields of grain crops in Quebec in 1917. The figures are:

	Bushels.
Wheat	3,952,000
Oats	33,958,000
Barley	3,312,000
Rye	443,000
Peas	897,000
Beans	841,000
Buckwheat	2,822,000
Flaxseed	68,000
Mixed grains	3,070,000

The preparation of these statistics in so full a form is a new activity of the administration of the province; and it may take some time and experience to secure the approximation to accuracy which issue that is to be expected in connection with crop estimates. As the records stand they show a grain production of about 50,000,000 bushels, of which over three-fifths is oats. The wheat yield is under 4,000,000 bushels, and is probably about one quarter of the consumption of the province. The statistics of the bureau would indicate that the acreage under wheat has increased somewhat in recent years, the yield in the late past having been estimated at between one and two million bushels a year. Quebec was at one time a considerable grower of wheat, both of the winter and spring varieties. As in other parts of the continent, however, many of the farmers exhausted the capacity of their soils and had to take to other branches of culture to make a living. The greater production now claimed may be evidence of improvement in methods as well as an extension of the area under cultivation. The province has long been a large oat-growing district. In comparing Quebec's production with that of provinces to the west it is to remembered that this province is under some climatological disadvantages which make harder the work of the advanced agriculturist. In recent years, also, grain growing has been giving way in many districts, in both the eastern and western divisions, to dairying and stock raising, with highly profitable results; and at the last industrial fair at Toronto Quebec dairymen took more than a proportionate number of the awards for excellence.

An Official Story-Teller.

In several of the public libraries of Canada story-telling to children has for some years been a special feature. Each Saturday morning from fifty to one hundred children assemble at the library in a room set apart for the purpose and called the "Children's Room." The ages of the children vary from six to fourteen years. At St. John, New Brunswick, story-telling has been continued now for three years. This year it has been found advisable to divide the children according to age and to hold two classes of half an hour each. The work has steadily grown in interest, and the demand for books of a less trivial type justify the work of the committee in charge. During the summer, when opportunity offers and a story-teller of note is a guest of the city, notice is given to the library, and it is often possible to have a special session.

My Agent

By F. A. MITCHEL

I took my vacation in October in my runabout.

One evening I was keeping an eye out for a place to stay over when I came to a neat looking house—not a farmhouse that looked as if it was or had been inhabited by refined people. But what attracted my attention was a sign fastened to the gate bearing the words "Matrimonial Agency." It seemed rather to me that they should be "Courting Quarters." The place was certainly very cozy.

It is needless to add that I put up at the house. I was received by an elderly lady whose manner seemed quite too refined and courtly for an occupant of such a modest establishment. I asked her if she were the matrimonial agent, and she said she was not. Her daughter was trying to make something in that way. She never appeared to strangers unless they called professionally. Being curious, I told the mother that I was ready for a wife whenever fate should throw one into my hands and, handing her a fee in advance, asked to see her daughter.

I expected to meet an angular old maid or widow. What was my surprise when the plumpest, rosiest little creature came into the room, smiling from her eyebrows to the tip of her dimpled chin. She appeared to be about seventeen years old, though she was twenty. Coming at once to business, she asked:

"Do you prefer a blond or a brunette?"

Looking into her blue eyes, I told her that I preferred blonds. "But," I added, "before coming to particulars I should like to talk with you about matrimony. Do you recommend it?"

"It would be absurd for me to recommend what is so important a part, if not the most important part, of nature."

It struck me that this was evading responsibility. I wondered at one so young being so diplomatic.

"Do you vouch for the persons you introduce?" I asked.

"Only for their respectability."

"Then you do not guarantee happiness?"

"I do not. The happiness of married persons depends only on themselves."

"Have you made many matches?"

"A number of persons I have brought together have married."

"Have the unions usually turned out happily?"

"I have not been in the business long enough to find out."

"You surely don't sail under false pretenses."

I described the appearance of the girl I should like to marry, and she might have been the twin sister of the matrimonial agent. She declined to notice the fact that I had given her as a model, and nothing I could do to persuade her to drop her professional attitude had any effect upon her. Her method was to give her business card to the man of the couple she proposed to bring together, with the name and address of the lady on it. But she never introduced a couple unless she had thoroughly investigated both parties and was satisfied that each was in earnest in seeking a matrimonial mate.

Before leaving I gave her my name and address, with references to certain cronies of mine whom I could trust. I had no idea of having her introduce me to a possible wife. My object was to visit her again, and I knew she would not receive me unless I satisfied her that my application was bona fide. Indeed, in one respect it was bona fide. I was willing to consider the agent herself as a possible wife—not that I had made up my mind to any such result, but it was pleasant to contemplate.

The matrimonial agency was not far distant from my home, and a fortnight after my return I ran out in my car to see the agent again. She informed me—which I already knew—that the reports of me were satisfactory and she was ready to give me a card to a young lady who was looking for a husband. I took the card, but informed the agent that, being very busy, I might not soon deliver it. Not wishing that she should be delayed in receiving her fee, I handed her another retainer. She took it in a businesslike manner and told me I was welcome to take my own time in the matter.

When I called again I told the agent that I should like several introductions, stating at the same time that I would choose a wife from among those in whom she was interested. She consented to this, and I left her. During the winter I went to see her a number of times, always apologizing for not having called on any of the young ladies whose addresses she had given me.

Toward spring, after having called on the agent many times and upon none of those she had recommended, I went to see her for the last time as a client. I told her that I had decided on a wife and it only remained for the lady to decide on me. She herself was the girl I wanted.

Without any expression of surprise she took out her portemonnaie and handed me the fees I had given her.

"You are offended," I said. "You consider that I have deceived you."

"No," she said, with a smile. "I knew your intentions before you knew them yourself. I have accepted and saved these fees that you should have the wherewithal for an engagement ring."

Where It Fell.

"I thought you were working on Jay Krank's new house," said a house painter's friend.

"I was goin' to," replied the house painter, "but I had a quarrel with him and he said he'd put the paint on himself."

"And did he do it?"

"Yes, that is where he put most of it."—Philadelphia Press.

Young Officers.

"Diarist," in the Westminster Gazette, reminds his readers that premature nomination to military rank, such as is recently reported in the case of the ten year-old son of the German Crown Prince, was not unknown at one time in Scotland, and was not reserved to princes. Families who could command influence often secured a captaincy, or even higher rank, for an infant together with the salary attached to the post. The story is told of the case of the father of a family, somewhere in the eighteenth century, who was disturbed at breakfast by a hideous noise upstairs. A servant, being called down and interrogated, replied soothingly: "Hoots, sir, it's naethin' ava. It's just the major greetin' at the lumps in his parritch."

GERMANS UNABLE TO AGREE TO TERMS OFFERED BY RUSSIANS.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Dec. 26. — The Russo-German peace negotiations, which were to have been resumed on Monday after a postponement to give the Germans time to formulate their reply to the Russian terms, were again delayed for one day, an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Petrograd reports. The despatch also says the Germans have asked for further postponement until January 2.

Workers Needed For Pneumonia Jackets

The Red Cross work room will be open on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock to finish the 200 pneumonia jackets asked for by the Headquarters Society. It is hoped that there will be a large number of workers present. Mr. Sarel, special commissioner sent by the Canadian Government to inspect the administration in France, will address the workers at 4.30.

A Christmas Bonus by Bonner-Worth Co.

TWENTY PER CENT. OF PREVIOUS WEEK'S PAY TO ALL EMPLOYES.

On Saturday last the employees of the Bonner-Worth Company Limited received a very welcome Christmas box from the management.

Every employee at the above factory received a special Christmas bonus of 20 per cent of their previous week's pay.

The gift was appreciated very much by the help and shows the cordial and co-operative spirit existing between the management and the help at the Bonner-Worth Company Limited.

ONE RUN OUT ON CHRISTMAS DAY

SMALL FIRE IN COMSTOCK'S WORKSHOP MADE WORK FOR FIREMEN.

The firemen had a run to 56 Sophia street on Christmas eve to put out a chimney fire at the home of J. Lynn. On Christmas day morning, $50 damage was caused by a small fire in Comstock's workshop.

MEN GIVE PIPE TO FIRE CHIEF

AND ASSISTANT CHIEF GETS A BOX OF CIGARS.

The men of the fire department expressed their esteem for Fire Chief Grange and assistant chief Johnson, on Christmas Eve, by presenting a pipe to the former, and a box of cigars to the latter.

The spirit of comradeship and the feeling of confidence at the fire hall was never so highly evidenced as it is today.

Entertainment at S. A. Temple

YOUNG AND OLD ENJOYED FINE PROGRAM CHRISTMAS NIGHT.

The annual Christmas entertainment at the S. A. Temple last evening was a splendid success from every viewpoint. The quality of the program, the packed building, the happy and appreciative crowd, the satisfied children, a good Jack Frost, and a splendid Santa Claus, all went to the making of a happy Christmas event.

Mrs. Wm. Badley, Guard leader, deserves special mention, with her young people, who were responsible entirely for the program. It was splendid indeed, and part of it will be repeated at the young people's meeting on Thursday evening at 7:30.

Band Well Received.

The Temple Band were very well received yesterday with their serenading effort, and many generous responses was the result. They will continue every evening this week, New Year's eve and New Year's Day.

GAVE LECTURE ON BEN HUR

STORY AND ILLUSTRATIONS INTEREST BOYS AT THE Y. M. C. A.

GUNNER OUTRAM WAS IN HALIFAX

INJURED IN EXPLOSION—HARROWING SCENES WITNESSED BY LOCAL SOLDIER.

Gunner James Outram, of the 74th Battery, is spending the holidays with his parents on Edinburgh street. With a number of comrades he was delayed in Montreal and missed the transport that was to carry them overseas from Halifax, and was in latter city at the time of the catastrophe. When the explosion came Gunner Outram, who when he enlisted was barely 18 years old, was in the Halifax Armories with a number of others. The door of the building was blown completely from its hinges and fell on Gunner Outram who was unconscious for some time as a result. Several of his companions were seriously injured. Gunner Outram still carries a wound on his head, but is otherwise none the worse of his experience.

He gives harrowing accounts of some of the scenes witnessed in the desolated city after the calamity. The injured and the dead were everywhere. Bodies of citizens burned to a crisp were found among the ruins of their homes. One of the saddest sights of all, Gunner Outram says, was that of a dead mother clasping a child in her arms. The bodies were so firmly frozen together that it was impossible to separate them, and they were buried just as they were found.

Teacher Remembered by School Pupils

At the closing exercises of the school year, the pupils of the Warsaw Senior Room surprised their teacher, Miss E. M. Dewart by presenting her with a dainty fruit set, a beautiful box of stationery, and a pretty hemstitched afternoon tea cloth. An address was read by Elsie Tucker and Stella Ellis made the presentation.

Miss Dewart who was taken by surprise, replied in a few suitable words, thanking them for their kind remembrance and expressing her pleasure in her work amongst them.

HUNS LOSE HEAVILY TO FRENCH

NEW DETECTIVE ON CHIEF THOMPSON'S STAFF RUNS HIMSELF INTO THE CELLS

A Would-be Sleuth Swallowed Hook Line and Bait.

Said to be Bigamist

Police Chief Thompson is having a quiet chuckle all to himself, and thereby hangs a tale.

Some time ago a stranger presented himself to the police chief, asking for a position as detective on the police force. His story was to the effect that he had received instruction in a school for the training of detectives, and having heard of the exploits of Peterborough detectives he thought this city a good stamping ground. But the chief didn't want any "correspondence" detectives and the would-be Sherlock Holmes departed.

Bigamist At Large.

About the same time, Chief Thompson received advice from Belleville to be on the lookout for an alleged bigamist. The description of the man, given by the Belleville police, and the general appearance of the "detective" looked so good to Chief Thompson, that he decided to bring about an introduction, learning of his whereabouts the Chief arranged an interview. He was queried as to his position as regards the Military Service Act.

He Gets a Case.

"Oh," said he, "I'm not in the first draft because I'm married."

"Is that so," remarked the Chief. "Would you mind getting me a copy of your marriage registration?"

Willing to do anything that would find favor with the Chief, who might hire him as a detective, he quite readily agreed to provide the information. He wrote Toronto and got all the details of his first marriage.

Yesterday afternoon Detective Newhall went out and took him into custody to await the arrival of an officer from Belleville.

Late in the afternoon, the police received information which alleges that this man entered into a marriage contract with a woman in Peterborough, the date being November 26.

The police say he was the most dejected looking prisoner in the cells for many a day.

He was first married in 1912. It is alleged that he went through a form of marriage with a young woman living in Belleville, in July of this year.

Tribute Paid To Geoff. Hilliard

Hamilton, Dec. 27.—Referring to the death of G. C. Hilliard, a Highfield school boy who was killed in action, J. H. Collinson, principal of Highfield, pays the following tribute:

Highfield school is mourning the loss of another brave boy—Geoffrey Hilliard, who has succumbed to wounds received some time ago. Geoffrey Hilliard was one of the noblest type of young man. His strong face, strong physique and strong, clean soul endeared him to the best of his comrades at Highfield, at the Royal Military College and in the Royal Canadian dragoons with whom his military life was spent. Quietness and confidence were his strength, and none who knew him and loved him can doubt but that he did his last duty as a gallant gentleman. He was worthy to join the glorious legion that has already crossed the border to do service that "we wot not of." Yes, Geoffrey Hilliard has played a man's part and has earned a brave man's reward.

He was a son of G. A. Hilliard of Lakefield.

FRENCH LOSSES BY SUBS REPORTED FOR ONE WEEK.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Dec. 27.—In the week ending December 22 one French steamer of more than 1,600 tons and one of less than that tonnage were sunk by submarines and mines. No fishing vessels were lost.

IS COMMITTED ON TWO CHARGES

Signed Statement by F. J. Squire in the Police Court.

County Magistrate Langley, this morning committed F. J. Squire of Havelock for trial on the charge of perjury, arising out of statements made by Squire before a fire marshal's investigation at Havelock.

A signed statement by Squire as to his conduct bearing on the investigation was accepted as evidence. The statement is in the nature of a confession.

Joseph Wearing acted for the Crown and F. D. Kerr for the defence.

Detective Newhall said he met Squire in Havelock. The latter who appeared to be highly excited, volunteered the statement that he had made some foolish statements at the fire inquest. The two went to Simpson's hotel and after a conversation, Squire decided to come to Peterborough. On his arrival at the police station he wrote a statement which he signed. No threats or inducements were made. "He was unnerved and could hardly spell the words," said witness.

Police Chief Thompson testified that Squire was depressed, and said he wished to make a clean breast of his statements to the fire marshal. "He assured me that he knew nothing about the fires," said the Chief.

Another information charging Squire with perjury was laid by the Crown and on the evidence heard he was committed for trial. Bail bonds to the amount of $2000 were accepted.

Mr. Harman's mills at Fullarton, near St. Marys, were destroyed by fire.

LONDON PAPERS DISCUSS SHIFT IN ADMIRALTY

Opinion Is Divided Over the Retirement of Sir John Jellicoe.

SOME JOURNALS ARE SURPRISED

Others Congratulate Government for Performing a Painful Duty.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Dec. 27.—The prominence given to the retirement of Admiral Sir John R. Jellicoe as First Sea Lord in favor of Vice Admiral Sir Rosslyn Wemyss in the morning newspapers is commensurate with his great reputation and the place he has so long held in the public estimation. Notwithstanding the recent severe animadversions concerning the Admiralty from some quarters, several newspapers treat the announcement as a sensational surprise and two or three accompany their remarks with warm expressions of regret. The Daily Telegraph, one of these, calls for a fuller official statement and the reasons for Admiral Jellicoe's retirement.

On the other hand, the Daily Mail, which long has campaigned against Admiral Jellicoe, says openly that it cannot pretend regret. It adds that Sir Eric Geddes, First Lord of the Admiralty, deserves the thanks of the country for not shrinking from a painful duty. The Times, though less frankly outspoken, does not conceal its satisfaction, and sees in the change the determination of the Government to give younger men a chance. It says: "We heartily congratulate the government, having once taken the decision, on accepting its full consequences at once."

ALLIED POWERS MUST AGREE TO PEACE TERMS

Germans Will Not Make Treaty with Russian Government Alone.

OTHER NATIONS MUST BE PARTY

Bolsheviki Government Is Not Recognized by Former Allies.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Dec. 27.—Virtual acceptance of the peace terms offered by Russia was made by the Central Powers, in a statement issued to the peace conference on Tuesday by Count Czernin, the Austro-Hungarian foreign minister. The Teutonic allies, however, cannot bind themselves to the Russian terms unless Russia's allies also recognize them and carry them out honestly toward the Central Powers.

Peace without forcible annexations and indemnities is agreeable to the Central Powers, and they will conclude general peace immediately on conditions equally just to all belligerents. The Central Powers share Russian condemnation of the prolongation of the war for purposes of conquest. Count Czernin agrees that the people have the right of self-definition, but says that subject nationalities must solve their problems under the laws of the countries under whose sway they live.

The Entente Allies up to this time have not recognized the lawful right of the Bolsheviki government to rule Russia and they have not agreed to the terms Russia proferred at the beginning of the Brest-Litovsk conference.

UNITED STATES STILL REFUSES TO RECOGNIZE THE BOLSHEVIKI

No Peace Terms Can be Discussed With Germans While Present Russian Government is Party to Treaty.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, Dec. 27.—Conditions surrounding Count Czernin's proposals for the basis of peace cause officials here to feel some apprehension for their sincerity. There is a great disposition to feel that the object of the German plenipotentiaries is simply to protract negotiations as long as possible without any expectation of an immediate peace agreement.

It can be stated authoritatively that the position of the U. S. Government has not changed in any respect with regard to its determination to enter into no agreement with a government which does not represent the free will of the governed people.

RE BUILDING AT HALIFAX

Col. Bob Low Wants Occupation of Men Available.

In response to his telegram to Halifax advising Col. Low who has supervision over the building operations there, that the local Trades and Labor Council wished to know if Col. Low required tradesmen, to assist in his operations, Mayor Duffus received the following reply today:

Telegram received. Owing to the lack of accommodations we cannot handle tradesmen for a few days. Will notify you later. Wire different occupations of these men.

R. S. LOW,
Colonel Mgr. Reconstruction, Halifax.

The Mayor would now like to hear from the Trades Council as to the occupations of the men who are available for work in Halifax.

KAISER BARELY ESCAPED DEATH

Geneva, Dec. 27.—The German emperor, returning with his staff from the Verdun front, had a narrow escape during the reprisal raid of a British air squadron on Mannheim Christmas eve, according to a despatch from Basle. Only about an hour earlier the emperor's special train left the station, which was partly destroyed by several bombs. A section of the tracks was torn up, cutting communication north.

In fact, the emperor's train was the last to leave Mannheim, and no trains arrived at Basle on Tuesday from that city. Two bombs fell on the palace and one on the suspension bridge across the Neka river, both structures being badly damaged. An ammunition factory in a northern suburb was blown up. Few persons were killed here, however, as the employes were having a holiday. A considerable number of persons were killed or injured within the town, and several were blown into the Rhine.

HOME VISITATION DAY FOR PETERBORO CHURCHES AND SCHOOLS ON JAN. 4

To Visit Every Home and Reach Every Individual in City.

The churches in Peterborough are uniting in a cooperative effort to visit every home and reach every individual on Friday, January 4th. A representative committee of ministers and laymen have the work in charge. The effort is under the direction of Rev. E. W. Halpenny, General Secretary of the Ontario Sunday School Association. The Visitation of January 4th attempts only to ascertain the desire of every inmate and detached person dwelling in every home and boarding house, and in the name of all the churches combined, to urge upon them to make themselves at home and become identified with that local church to which they prefer to belong.

The city has been divided into five districts; two in north and two in the south end, west of the river, and one district east of the river. Each district has a chairman. The chairmen are as follows: District No. 1, W. G. Reid; District, No. 2, Wm. Madill; District No. 3, R. C. Braund; District No. 4, J. A. Johnson; District No. 5, Mr. John Speer. An estimate is being made of the number of visitors required to reach the entire city between two and five o'clock on Friday afternoon, January 4th, then each congregation is asked to furnish its proportion of the visitors. These will be assembled at some central place on Thursday evening, January 3rd, for instruction. No classified list of the strength of the various churches is published. The cards used to obtain information are classified and distributed at once to the authorities of each church according to the preference expressed on the cards.

Rev. Dougald Brown is chairman of the Committee, and Rev. Robert Pogue, secretary.

ARRESTS MADE BY WHOLESALE

OVER THREE HUNDRED GERMAN SOCIALISTS ARRESTED ON CHRISTMAS EVE.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Dec. 27.—More than three hundred members of the German Minority Socialist party were arrested on Christmas Eve by the German military authorities, according to Zurich despatches given out today by the wireless press.

STOCKS SOAR IN UNITED STATES

FINANCIAL WORLD IS PLEASED WITH PRESIDENT'S LATEST MOVE.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Dec. 27.—Stocks soared at the opening of the stock market today, denoting the satisfaction of the financial community with the President's decision to take over the railroads. The advances ranged from two to eight points in the railroad list, all standard shares being bid up furiously.

MISS AUDREY HUYCKE IS WINNER OF THE FORD CAR

Offered at Church Bazaar to One Who Guessed Nearest Number of Grains in Three Quarts of Wheat—I. Gordon Gets Canoe.

Miss Audrey Huycke, daughter of Judge Huycke, won the automobile offered by the bazaar held by the Church of the Immaculate Conception to any one who would guess the nearest to the exact number of grains of wheat in three quarts. The number by actual count was 92,943 grains. Miss Huycke guessed 92,975, being only 32 out.

The canoe built and donated by Mr. Joseph Murdock of the Peterborough Canoe Company, was won by Mr. I. Gordon, of 90 Park street. All the tickets were put in a box and one drawn at a venture. The lucky one was number 305.

The drawing and the counting last night were systematically and fairly conducted, Rev. Dean McColl looking after all the details. The wheat, which formed the subject for the interesting contest, was obtained from Mr. George Mather, and was sealed in a glass jar by Dean McColl, Mr. Mather, William Perdue and Ald. Weir. Last night the seal was examined by the same gentlemen and found intact. The jar was opened and the grain was distributed among 16 volunteer counters. These sat in pairs at tables and alternated in counting their share of the grains in lots of one hundred. It required nearly two hours to complete the count, and the average made by each table was a little over 5,000.

When it was ascertained that the actual number of good kernels in the jar was 92,943, the work of examining the tickets — and there were several hundred of them — was taken up by Dean McColl and Ald. Weir. The estimates ran all the way from 999 to 11,000,000, and the second closest guess was 93,000. The third best guess was 93,011, made by Mr. J. J. Devlin.

The auto won by Miss Huycke is a Ford touring car, and the young lady is today receiving the congratulations of her friends on her success.

Ther is yet another prize to be awarded, the splendid oil painting of the late Sir John Macdonald, which has been on exhibition in the window of R. J. Soden's book store. The person who guesses the number of beans in a jar will receive this painting as a reward.

All the contestants last night were well pleased with the fairness with which the contest was conducted. A large number of tickets were sold, and prizes will be awarded to those who sold the highest number. The names of these in order are Messrs. John Woodhouse, J. J. Devlin and Mrs. P. Dwyer and Mrs. Jas Hogan.

The gross receipts of the bazaar to date amount to $3822.50.

British Steamer Is Reported Lost

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Dec. 27. — The British steamer City of Nagpur, 8,331 tons, has been wrecked in Delagoa Bay, Portuguese East Africa, according to a despatch to the Times from Lisbon. The passengers, numbering 259, were saved, as was the cargo.

THE WARDEN AND EXEMPTIONS

Capt. Burnham Has a Word to Say About Work of Farmers' Tribunals.

"With regard to the letters that are appearing in the local press," remarked Capt. Burnham to The Review this morning, "attacking the Warden and other government officials regarding exemption, it is only necessary to say that the Warden and his assistants are making no complaints about not being backed up by the Government or of any lack of authority in their positions. The attacks being made on him are not conducive to a calm, quiet state of public mind, and it would be well for those making these attacks to leave the matter in the hands of the Government and to attend to their own business as they may find it. The farmers have nothing to fear. The Warden's appointment was clear and definite from the Government, and left no doubt whatever as to the Government's intention, no matter what criticism may be made by those not authorized by the Government to make it."

S. L. BRYSON IS DEAD OF WOUNDS

LAKEFIELD SOLDIER WAS WITH CAVALRY SERVICE IN FRANCE.

The over-night casualty list contains the name of S. L. Bryson of Lakefield, who has died of wounds. He was with the cavalry.

Gunner W. M. Lyle of Bobcaygeon also is listed as died of wounds.

GERMANS FAIL AGAIN IN RAIDS ON THE FRENCH LINES AT VERDUN

Meet With Heavy Losses in Dead and Prisoners---No Infantry Action on British Front.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Dec. 27.—Except for some hostile artillery activity north and east of Ypres, there was nothing to report last night.

Germans Lose Heavily.

Paris, Dec. 27.—The Germans made two attacks on the Verdun front today but were not able to break through the French lines, the war office reports.

Three attacks were made by the Germans last night on the Verdun front east of the Meuse. At their third attempt the Germans succeeded in reaching the French lines but were driven out immediately with heavy losses, leaving prisoners.

CAPT. HOPKINS ARRIVES HOME

LINDSAY OFFICER WENT OVERSEAS WITH THE 21ST BATTALION.

Lindsay, Dec. 27.—Capt. Lester W. Hopkins, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Hopkins, has arrived home, after two and a half years' absence overseas. Capt. Hopkins left Canada with the 21st Battalion and later was attached to the Royal Flying Corps, winning considerable distinction and was promoted to the post of flight commander. He has taken part in many of the famous raids over the lines in France, but has been fortunate enough to come off practically unscathed.

WEATHER FORECASTS.

South easterly winds. Milder with light snow falls. Friday comparatively mild at first, then turning colder.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 27, 1917

A TURN IN THE TIDE.

AN ARTICLE published in another column sets forth that the United States Immigration Department has ascertained that there is to be a turn in the tide and that when the war is over at least three million residents of foreign birth or descent will leave the land of their adoption to return to the countries from which they originally came. This class will be made up largely of the men who are engaged in the lower grades of labor, and their return to Europe will have a depressing effect upon the industrial conditions in America.

The three millions spoken of represent actual workers. All, or nearly all, of them are heads of families. Allowing three in a family, the usual multiple, it is plain then, that the United States stands to lose nine millions in population when the war is over.

Those who expect to return have already secured the tickets for their passage, so that no time will be lost in getting away when the opportunity arrives. The aliens look for better conditions in their home countries when peace is restored. They hope for new forms of government, under which the poor will have an equal chance with the rich, just as they have in America. The love of native land will be the deciding factor.

It is not improbable that the same exodus of aliens to Europe will be noted in Canada. The same inducements to return will move the stranger here. Economists love to tell us that when the war is over there will be an excess of labor and that times will be hard, that the poorer classes will flock to Canada from the countries that have been devastated by years of war. It is just possible that these economists are out in their reckoning and that exactly reverse conditions will prevail.

A CHANCE TO SAVE.

IF THE NEW GOVERNMENT is set on economy, there is one department in which they can effect a saving worth while, and that is in the matter of printing reports of the various departments and issuing blue books which are turned out from the government presses in an interminable stream and distributed free over the country. The majority of these publications are never read. To issue them simply makes work for the printers. Their distribution litters up the postal service and adds to the burdens of the letter carriers. The works are useful mainly as waste paper or as fuel for the furnace during the winter season. To stop their publication would not detract from the sum total of the people's knowledge, but it would accomplish something by saving considerable each year in the Federal outlay.

There are departmental reports published in pamphlet form at regular intervals and sent out to the various newspapers with a polite request that they be reproduced. Attached to these requests there is always a notice that the government will pay the newspapers nothing for their trouble. The press is supposed to do this work for the benefit of the public.

Everyone connected with the preparation of these reports is paid for his services. Why, then, should the newspapers be asked to contribute their share of the labor without compensation? The papers publish very few of these documents as it is. They may be induced to take up the work when they are shown that the services of the compilers, the printers and the distributers are also donated free of charge.

Governments are notoriously poor pay. The civil servants as a class receive less remuneration than men doing the same class of work in private life. Besides this, governments are noted for their tendency to request newspapers to do for nothing work that is charged to private individuals and firms at regular advertising rates.

"BLESSED ARE THE PEACEMAKERS."

MR A. STEWART of this city has the following letter in a recent issue of the Ottawa Citizen:

> Editor, Citizen: Some time ago I selected the Citizen as one of the best, fairest and cleanest papers published in Canada.
>
> It apparently had a high moral standard. It refused unhealthy advertising, and must have suffered considerable loss thereby. Any paper that would consider right before monetary consideration, before political or even national advantage, would be a priceless boon to any country today. Now I find the feet of the beautiful image I had set up to be only clay.
>
> That the Citizen should lend its pages to array province against province, one nationality against another, to sow the seeds of discord and race hatred, is beyond ordinary comprehension. We think few will question the purpose of the Franchise Act.
>
> The huge majorities will no doubt greatly aid in maintaining the self-respect of the conscientious members-elect. Is it still a debatable question whether the end in view justifies any means? Should we be silent regarding any wrong that proves to be to our own advantage?
>
> The people have spoken decisively: it was their right, and we think the heart of the Canadian people is in the right place, but could not the same result have been obtained by other means? Was it necessary for us to so forget some of the principles we have stood for to gain the end? Now the victorious West has the chance of a lifetime to be magnanimous. Will the press and pulpits continue to "rub it in," to array race prejudices and religious animosities against each other. Is there any daily paper in Canada big enough and patriotic enough to debar from its pages everything that would have any other tendency than to heal the break in Canadian unity? Will the Citizen be the first to see its greatest opportunity? "Blessed are the peacemakers."

Ontario as well as the equally victorious West can afford to be magnanimous and drop all party or racial strife now just as they dropped it on election day. There is a conciliatory spirit in the atmosphere such as this country never knew before. All that the victors look for now is for the vanquished party to accept the verdict and fall in line with the amjority. Whether or not this will be done depends not so much on the masses of the people themselves as upon the attitude of their leaders who are entirely responsible for the present situation.

AS IT STRIKES CHICAGO.

RESULTS of the general election in Canada are satisfactory on the whole to the friends of freedom and democracy, says the Chicago News. In a few constituencies the outcome may be disappointing, but a substantial majority for the Borden coalition government is indicated by the returns already available. The soldiers' vote is expected to add a few more seats to the Borden side of the chamber.

What this outcome means is too plain to require emphasizing. The Opposition, led by that astute politician, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, chose to treat the election as a referendum on the "paramount issue" of conscription. There were other questions before the voters, but these were neglected, being practically lost sight of toward the end of the stormy campaign. Laurier promised to suspend the conscription act in the event of a victory for his party and to submit it to the voters at a special election.

He counted on the solid support of the Province of Quebec and on the help of all the pacifists and the weak-kneed and pro-German elements throughout the Dominion. Many resolute supporters of the war distinctly regarded the result as uncertain. The voters of Canada, however, have vigorously rejected the counsels of the timid and the disloyal. They have declared in favor of the Borden policy of methodical and effective prosecution of the war. They have approved conscription as the only course consonant with fairness and democracy. They have upheld nationalism in the government and fidelity to the cause of the free nations that are arrayed against Prussian tyranny and aggression.

The pacifist challenge has been worthily met. Canada's soldiers who are fighting for liberty and humanity are now assured of whole-hearted support at home.

When the Chicago News uses the word nationalism is forgets that the term has a different meaning in Canada, the only English-speaking country in which it is misappropriated and misapplied.

A RAISE IN RATES.

THE EMPLOYES of the various railways in Canada have applied for or have already been granted a raise in wages. This increase, as usual, comes out of the pockets of the public instead of affecting the dividends of the corporations. To offset this extra outlay the railways have applied to the Commission for authority to increase their freight and passenger rates and this has been granted. There will be a raise of 15 per cent. in both branches of the service, this change to take effect as soon as the new schedule can be prepared.

And still the cost of living goes up. The new rate means an increase of at least 15 per cent. in the price of everything, including coal which is shipped into the city. Coal that sold for $10 a ton will now automatically go to $11.50. A railway ticket, single to Toronto, that costs $.35 now, will be $2.70 when the new scale takes effect, and everything handled by the railways will be raised in cost to the consumer in the same proportion.

After all, it seems that the increase in the price of commodities begins with the price of production. The present price of labor explains everything. Wood costs more today than it ever did, and it is no difficult matter to locate the reason. An advertisement now running in The Review for men to cut two-foot wood offers $3 a cord for the work. Only a few years ago men were glad to get 50 cents for this grade of labor. An increase of 600 per cent. in the cost of production certainly justifies a raise in the ultimate selling price over that which prevailed a few years ago.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

Greatest Thing Ever Happened.

(Simcoe Reformer.)

If any newspaper in Canada advocated conscription and the formation of a Union Government to make it possible before the Reformer did, we have not heard of it. As a pioneer in the movement, we regard Monday's achievement as the greatest thing that ever happened in Canada.

Where a Samaritan Won Fame.

(Brooklyn Eagle.)

The British will soon fix it so that a man can go from Jerusalem to Jericho without falling among thieves. Even honest Turks will not regret the change.

The Canadian Army.

(Dr Andrew McPhail in University Monthly.)

The Canadian army is a school of character and of manners. The life is one of poverty, temperance, obedience and chastity. If lives are being lost, souls are being saved. No man comes out of the army a worse man. All men who come out will be better men, and for them the war between good and evil will have ended in victory.

The Kaiser's Camouflage.

(Buffalo Courier.)

The Kaiser has the cunning of the lunatic coupling his peace talk with Christmas. But however much the people of Germany may be deluded by this peace talk—it is really nothing but palaver—the world has ceased to pay much attention to it; in fact, the world is growing resentful of his own sinister and malign uses.

Not the Only Ones.

(Detroit Free Press.)

Mme. Melba is wearing last winter's furs as an economy measure to help defeat the Kaiser. Which reminds us that we can claim that we are wearing last winter's overcoat for patriotic reasons.

Missed Important Significance.

(London Free Press.) [redacted]

Those who would deny the pulpit the right to speak in the recent election must have missed the significance of the honor roll.

Canada As a Pattern.

(Chicago British-American.)

We do not have to refer to ancient Sparta and its steel-souled men and women to provide a pattern for an ideal United States in war-time. Just look across the border at Canada.

THREE MILLION WORKMEN ARE PREPARING TO LEAVE AMERICA

Three million persons among the foreign population of the United States are prepared to emigrate as soon as world peace is declared. While this figure appears enormous, it is based on a careful survey by a Government expert and the threatened crisis in labor supply that must result is being carefully considered by administration officers.

The total includes workers only, and not all but most all are heads of families. No account is taken of the number of women and children they will carry to Europe and Asia Minor with them.

The mining industry and the steel and kindred industries will be the hardest hit by the emigration. Workers in these fields are preparing to leave by thousands. This is particularly true of the Poles, the Russian nationals and other Slavs, the Syrians and Greeks, the Bohemians and other nationals of the Dual Monarchy.

A Government official, one of the most widely known labor experts in the country, has in his office safe tickets for a large number of these men. The lists include United States citizens as well as aliens who have entrusted their tickets to the safe keeping of the official, who declares that every passage on all of the big transatlantic lines, even the German lines, is booked for months after peace is declared.

Seek Land and Opportunities.

These men are for the most part land hungry and opportunity hungry. They believe that the tax burdens in their native lands will be no greater than they are in America. They likewise believe that they will command respect and influence at home in the reconstruction and political adjustments expected after the war, but most of all they believe that wealth is ahead of them at the end of the homeward path because of the capital and knowledge they will carry with them from America.

Greeks are preparing to leave by the wholesale, but they will be largely guided by the terms of peace. If Asia Minor is opened to trade they will go back in swarms. They dream of a revival of the old commercial empires of the southern seas of Europe, with Greece a mighty factor in this commerce as she was in the early centuries. The Syrians share in this hope also. Whole communities are preparing to leave the United States to stand at the forefront of the movement they believe inevitable.

The Russian nationals, particularly the Jews, are going back to a free Russia and its opportunities. Like the traders of the south, they see vast development opportunities that have remained untouched for centuries.

Bohemians in this country, according to Uncle Sam's expert who has been in close touch with the foreign communities for years and has studied them and worked with them, are talking of a free Bohemia.

Armenians to Remain.

Strange to say, he does not believe that the Armenians will go back. Whole villages have come to the United States at every opportunity, and they expect a great tide of immigration after the war that will transport all Armenia to the United States. Armenians are cancelling return passages that have been held for months.

The Lithuanians and Poles from the mining and steel industries are making great preparations for a return home. Turks too are preparing to return in large numbers.

This movement will have a far reaching effect on the raw material industries. Most of the miners of the country who are foreign born are preparing to emigrate.

EDITOR'S MAIL

WARD SYSTEM AGAIN.

Editor, Review: In yesterday's issue a correspondent signing himself "East Sider" makes the statement that if we abolish the ward system of electing aldermen, as advocated by the Trades and Labor Council, "At every civic election the rest of the city will combine against us and the west siders will hog everything in sight." This is, to say the least, a very extravagant statement and one which is not borne out by past experience.

If the west siders want to act in that manner their opportunities are certainly greater under the present system, where their eight aldermen, in whose election we have no voice whatever, could combine against our two and defeat any measure brought in to benefit Ashburnham. Now, under the general vote system no bunch of aldermen would dare to do this, as they would each one be depending, in a large measure, on the votes of the residents of East City for re-election.

Of course, it is possible that some of our present aldermen, who were afraid of a referendum on the question and voted against it in Council, might be left at home, but their places would be taken by better men who have the interests of the whole city at heart—and surely that would be no calamity to Ashburnham.

Union Labor, by nominating its best men, would also have a chance of having some representation on the Council, where we have no chance at present.

The Dominion Trades Congress, which has been called the workingmen's parliament, has as one of the planks of its platform, the abolition of the ward system in municipal elections, and the local Trades and Labor Council is backing up the parent body, which has made a study of the question in every city of any size in the Dominion.

The Labor men have induced the City Council to submit the matter to a vote, and now it remains with the people to back them up, and, by voting for the bylaw say they are in favor of true democracy—government of the people by the people and for the people—when they will have a voice in the election of all the aldermen who are making laws for all the city, instead of, as at present, only two, who have practically no influence with the rest of the Council.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space, I am,

Yours truly,
UNION LABOR

THE ELECTIONS.

Editor, Review: The situation in regard to the coming election of four new members to the Board of Education is one that should be given some thought by the electors. Three splendid business men, who have for a long time given their services to the city on this board, are now retiring. To John Crane, W. H. Hill and Col. Miller are due the lasting gratitude of the citizens, and the three vacancies will not be easily filled. From the new material now offered, four new members, including one to take the place of the late lamented Dr. Burnham, are to be chosen. Only one of the eight names that will be on the Board of Education ballot is that of a former member. Dr. Neal has given two years' creditable service to the Board and deserves the endorsement of the voters in being again returned as a member.

From the other seven aspirants, one name stands out prominently as an eminently suitable man for the position, Mr. J. M. Greene. Peterborough has seen Mr. Greene build up a business from a very small beginning to one of the largest in the city, with four branches in other cities and towns. That in itself is a record that certainly merits recognition, and when marking the ballot for Dr. Neal the next one should be for Mr. J. M. Greene.

There will be three other good men chosen in addition to the above two, because the six other names are all men who would make good Board members, but in the opinion of the writer there should be no mistake made in accepting a man of Mr. Greene's capabilities when he is willing to undertake the duties involved.

Thanking you for space to express my opinion, I am,

Respectfully yours,
OBSERVER.

A CORRECTION.

Editor, Review: Kindly allow me to correct the statement in last evening's issue of the Examiner to the effect that I am a member of the Trent Canal staff in this city. I recently terminated this appointment, and my business is now that of a consulting civil and mechanical engineer.

Thanking you for many courtesies received at your hands, I remain,

W. H. PRETTY,
A. M. Inst. C. E.

FOR THE SCHOOL BOARD.

Editor, Review: Mr. E. G. Patterson is a candidate for the Board of Education. There is no man in this city better qualified to assist in the organization of the new Technical School which it is expected the Government will unite with the Board of Education in erecting. This is very important, too, to assist returned soldiers in learning trades, and apprentices in developing themselves into experts rather than putting in long periods of apprenticeship in the factories. The importance of Peterborough's growth depends to a very great extent upon her success in developing her factories and in improving the position of her mechanics, and strong effort should be made to elect the representative of the manufacturing concern which is the backbone of the city.

VARIED RICHES OF GREATER ONTARIO

Northern-grown Wheat Is Province's Best—Climate, Minerals, Pulpwood and Fisheries Discussed

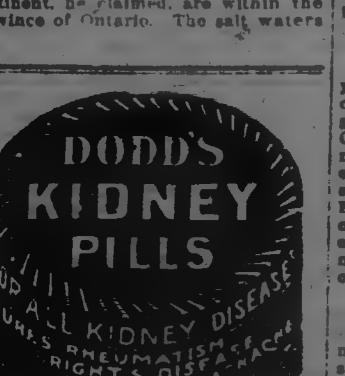
Mr. J. L. Englehart, as manager of the Ontario Government's Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway gave facts on the riches of Greater Ontario; the agricultural, fishery and mineral possibilities of which equal the very best in the world. The climatic conditions, he said, are all that are to be desired: the rainfall well distributed throughout the area, with temperate summers, delightful autumn, and sunshine at Haileybury equal to that at Toronto. There were virtually three soils, mould, created by leaves and forests for countless ages; below this, clay which on test compares favorably with that of Lambton county, except for fall wheat and corn; underlying the clay is limestone—a reservoir into which roots descend and refresh themselves, create growth, ripen grain, roots, vegetables, etc. Greater Ontario has twenty millions of acres of alluvial soil. This does not include vast stretches of agricultural possibilities south and west of James Bay.

Success Already

Mr Englehart said further that farms taken up by settlers at fifty cents per acre are now valued at from $100 to $150 per acre. Temiskaming took the highest mark in 1916 for potatoes in the standing field crop competition for Ontario. An exhibit of spring wheat from Uno Park was awarded first honors in competition with counties from York east and Parry Sound south. Settlers could get usually $16 per acre for pulpwood cut, drawn and peeled; thus settlers were paid for clearing their own land, the work being easy as compared with old Ontario, as there are no tap roots; while uncleared spruce wood forms a savings bank for settlers on which they may draw as needed. In New Ontario the approximate value of pine on Crown lands was $150,000,000; on licensed lands, $19,500,000; pulpwood, approximate value, 300,000,000.

Cheap Power and Munitions

Fisheries are important, with annual value of four millions. The largest fresh water fisheries on the continent, he claimed, are within the Province of Ontario. The salt waters in James Bay and Hudson Bay are teeming with fish, a virgin field. The speaker predicted that that region would form the future summer resort of the Province, with motoring from Pacific to Atlantic. Between Cochrane and James Bay there were more than a million horse power. Some day the navigation of that region will come to Ontario and Toronto. In that secluded part of the world are ideal conditions for munition factories that may be of imperial importance, as minerals are plentiful which furnish nitrates for explosives and also for the very best fertilizers, which will be needed in our Canadian West.



WELSH SURNAMES FEW

Quaint Peculiarities of People of Celtic Principality

Wales has plenty of coal, slate, scenery, and consonants, but very few surnames. If a Welsh schoolmaster should say, "Jones, you may go home now for being a good boy," the whole school would quit. People who are not called Jones are called Williams, or Evans, or Hughes, or Lloyd. They divide these names between them, and make the best of it. They do not follow the English method of taking their surnames from towns and villages. They felt that to do so would cut them off from the rest of mankind. Nobody could possibly call on Mrs. Llanymynech. Dislocation of the jaw is a great drawback to social intercourse.

The Welshman has the Celtic imagination. He never calls a spade a spade. When he has done describing this implement of agriculture, the stolid Englishman thinks he has been listening to a story from the "Arabian Nights." Hence the Englishman says the Welshman is an "untruther." He isn't really. It's only a difference of method. The Welshman means the truth, which is the main thing. His conscience is all right, if his story isn't.

The Welshmen is intensely patriotic. He regards Wales as the hub of the universe, "look you." The Welsh and the Manx are akin, and it was a Manxman who spoke of "the Isle of Man and the adjacent islands of Great Britain." But Welshmen are not devoid of the Imperial spirit. They have helped to colonise the earth's empty spaces. They have fought in every continent side by side with their co-islanders.

Unkneaded Graham Bread

Make a batter of ½ compressed yeast cake dissolved in a quarter of a cupful of warm water, three cupfuls graham flour, one teaspoonful salt. Cover and leave over night. In the morning add one cupful sugar and enough graham flour to make a batter so still it can be lifted with the hand. Butter pound-size coffee-cans thoroughly and fill half full; let rise till about three-quarters full, and then make an hour and a quarter in a slow oven. This makes three good loaves.

Baked Brown Bread

One cup molasses, 2 cups buttermilk or sour milk; 2 eggs, 1 3-4 teaspoons soda, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 2 cups flour, 5 cups graham flour. Mix in the order given, dissolving the soda in a tablespoon of hot water. Put in baking tins, filling two-thirds full and

TO MAKE COLORS FAST

To preserve the colors of ginghams, printed lawns, &c., and before washing almost any colored fabrics it is recommended to soak them for some time in water to every gallon of which is added a spoonful of ox gall. A strong, clear tea of common hay will preserve the color of French linens. Vinegar in the rinsing water for pink and green fabrics will brighten these colors, and soda answers the same purpose for both purple and blue. The colors of the above fabrics may be preserved by using a strong, milk-warm lather of white soap, putting the dress into it instead of rubbing it on the material and stirring into a fast and second tub of rinsing water a large tablespoonful of ox gall. To prepare ox gall for washing colored articles, empty it into a bottle, put it it a handful of salt, and keep it closely corked. A teacupful to five gallons of the rinsing water will suffice.

Satin and Tulle

Flounce upon flounce of soft tulle falling over a dainty flesh-colored satin lining goes far to make this dance gown a charming affair. Elaborate pearl bead festoons, and embroidery afford rich trimming. The bodice is extremely simple, the only relief from the folds of tulle being the wide band of pearl embroidery.

TOOTHBRUSH FOR BABY

Decay of Milk Teeth Should Be Delayed Always

Mothers often feel that the first teeth are of small consequence, because they are not permanent. They do not appreciate the fact that poor teeth make for poor health, they detract from the child's appearance and do much to injure the permanent teeth. The washing of the mouth should be continued until the first teeth are cut; then a small toothbrush with soft bristles should be applied to the gums. If any stains appear on the teeth they should be removed at once with a little carbonate of lime in powdered form or powdered pumice stone. Should it be allowed to remain it will result in the decay of the teeth and help in the making of receding gums. As soon as any decay appears in a child's tooth it should be taken to a dentist, before it works havoc with the other teeth.

Dried Beef Dainties

Sliced smoked beef may be used in an almost infinite variety of ways. As a breakfast or luncheon dish, especially in hot weather, it will prove gratifying. It may take the place of toast in serving scrambled or poached eggs. It may be sauted or broiled. It may be served whole, or chopped and made into timbales with cheese, or heated in different sauces. In many dishes it will take the place of ham very happily. The house mother who lays in a supply of sliced dried beef will be surprised at the number of new dishes she will be able to serve with this simple ingredient as the foundation of each.

Veal Salad

Put one pound of cooked veal through a food chopper with two stalks of celery, then add one-fourth pound of chopped walnut meats. Season with salt and pepper and pour over tablespoonful of butter, stir in one tablespoonful of flour, add one-half cupful of milk and let come to a boil. Beat three eggs with one tablespoonful of sugar, one teaspoonful of mustard, one-half cupful of wine vinegar and salt and pepper to taste. Stir all together. Let come to the boiling point and set away to cool.

English Rissoles

Chop cold meat, beef or whatever you have, fine. Mix it with stock made by dissolving one-half teaspoon of beef extract in one-half cup of hot water, season and add diced carrots or a few peas. Add one-half cup of fine, dried bread crumbs to a cupful of meat. Add a raw egg, mix well, form into rolls. Dip in flour, place in a wire basket and fry in deep, pure leaf lard. To serve, place on platter around a mound of French fried potatoes and garnish with cress.

Caramel Filling

Two cups of brown sugar, one-half cup of cream or rich milk, two teaspoonsful butter, one teaspoonful of vanilla. Boil ingredients together, stirring constantly until the mass forms a soft ball in cold water. Take from stove and beat until thick enough to spread. Add flavoring just before spreading on the cake.

Endive and Escarole

Endive is a good food. When well blanched it is most agreeable. Blanching removes the bitter dandelion flavor. There are self-blanching kinds that head like cabbages. The broad leaved kinds are those which are called escarole.

FELT LIKE A NEW PERSON

After Taking Only One Box Of "Fruit-a-tives"

EAST SHIP HARBOUR, N. S.

"It is with great pleasure that I write to tell you of the wonderful benefits I have received from taking "Fruit-a-tives". For years, I was a dreadful sufferer from Constipation and Headaches, and I was miserable in every way. Nothing in the way of medicines seemed to help me. Then I finally tried "Fruit-a-tives" and the effect was splendid. After taking one box, I feel like a new person, to have relief from those sickening Headaches".

HUGE RAILWAY SHOPS

Efficiency in Repair Work Sought by Canadian Roads

The principal car repair plant of the Grand Trunk Railway for the lines west of the St. Clair River at Port Huron for many years, was destroyed by fire during the winter of 1914-1915. Their old plant was of limited capacity and located at what was the old terminus of the line previous to the construction of the tunnel under the St. Clair River. After the fire negotiations were carried on between the town of Port Huron and the railroad, resulting in the acquisition of the property vacated by the Port Huron Thresher Company, which property was very much more advantageously situated, being near the tunnel line.

The plant was first planned to consist of a power house containing 6 150 h.p. boilers serving double turbo-steam generating units of 300 k.w. for developing the electric power for lighting and operation of machines, all motor driven; a passenger car shop accommodating 27 modern passenger cars; a freight car shop accommodating 70 freight cars; and other buildings. These buildings, including trackage, were to take a space of approximately 55 acres; arranged for economical operation, special attention having been given to this feature to ensure maximum efficiency. The total cost was estimated at $700,000.

GOOD MILK PROTECTS BABIES

Accounting of Twenty-first Year of the Nathan Straus Depots in New York.

Nathan Straus's work of protecting the babies from milk-borne diseases has completed its twenty-first year with a record of only one death in the last summer among the 2,200 babies that have been supplied with milk modified and pasteurized at the seventeen depots. The one death was caused by pneumonia.

During the year 2,193,684 bottles of milk were supplied and 1,326,100 glasses of milk were served at the summer stations in the parks and on the recreation piers. While the number of infant milk depots in the city has increased to nearly a hundred the Straus stations are the only ones that supply the milk in nursing bottles, first modified, then pasteurized in the bottles. It is to this fact that Mr. Straus attributes the remarkable record of the last summer.

The output by months was as follows: September, 166,649 bottles; October, 154,919; November, 143,856; December, 161,475; January, 164,785; February, 159,611; March, 197,084; April, 197,646; May, 206,875; June, 213,293; July, 214,672; August, 202,789; total, 2,193,684.

In the twenty-one years of this work more than 33,000,000 bottles of pasteurized milk have been supplied for the babies and over 17,000,000 glasses of milk have been served at the depots. In the first year 34,000 bottles were supplied. The records do not include barley water, of which no account is kept.

At all the depots free medical attendance is supplied when desired, with instructions for the mothers.

Books of Ancient Rome.

It has been pointed out that in old Rome books were actually produced and sold more easily and quickly than they are in modern times. With his trained staff of readers and transcribers, it is contended, an ancient Roman pupblisher could turn out an edition of any work at very cheap rates, and almost a moment's notice. There was, of course, no initial expense of typesetting before a single copy could be produced, no costly extras in the form of printer's corrections. The manuscript came from the author; the publisher handed it to his slaves, and if the book were of ordinary dimensions the complete edition could, it is said, be ready, if necessary, within 24 hours.

The old Roman libraries were immense as well as splendid. Plutarch says that the library of Lucullus, who expended much of his money on books, "had walks, galleries, and cabinets open to all visitors." It was proposed by Julius Caesar to open this library to the public.—Harper's Weekly.

WASHING WITH ICE

Used on the Face It Brings Out a Good Healthy Color

Some things are so simple no one ever bothers with them. The new way a few of the beauty-seeking girls have been face-washing lately is one of these. This fad, which is quite sensible enough to be a fashion, is washing with ice.

A clear skin depends on a good circulation. But in spite of the various beauty-lotions and beauty talks and beauty systems, few women ever do anything much to bring their own natural color to their faces. The ice acts on the blood, quickens the circulation and shows its effect in the skin. This little plan may be just what is needed to make your face wear that bright color which you so much envy in the face of your friend.

Each morning, after taking a ten-minute exercise to wake you up, get a small piece of ice and wash the face and neck until the piece is entirely used. As the ice, to begin with, should be about half the size of your fist, you will see that the chilling will be pretty thorough. When the ice is melted rub the face briskly with a Turkish towel until it is quite dry.

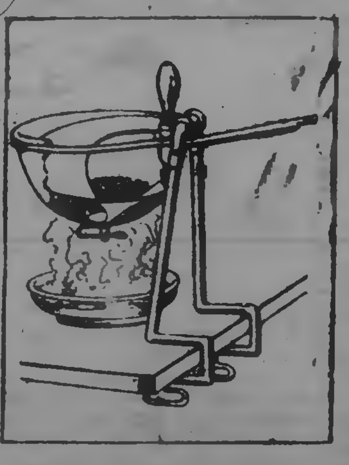
For a few minutes the face is red like a frost-bitten apple, then that fades away into a nice color.

The ice not only helps the circulation but it acts as a tonic on the muscles.

COLANDER AND PRESS

Hulls Vegetables and Squeezes Juices Out of Fruit

A kitchen utensil that should save the cook much labor and time has been invented by a Western man. It is a combination colander and fruit press, and is said to remove the hulls from beans, peas, etc., and the skins and seeds from tomatoes, apples, grapes and the like without losing any of the essence or juices of these articles. Its inventor claims many other merits for it, some almost miraculous. An iron upright clamps to the edge of the table, and this supports a colander bowl. Revolving in the bowl is a spiral blade that performs manifold duties. When the handle is turned and the blade revolves it not only pares the skin from the fruit of vegetables in the bowl, but presses them against the colander bottom and squeezes out their substance.



SPIRAL BLADE THE SECRET.

DOT VEILS HARMFUL

"Every dot in a woman's veil is worth five dollars to the oculist," an old member of the profession declares, "and there is no doubt that the modern veil, with its intricate figuring and bold designs, is far more harmful than the old time veil, which was either plain or adorned with small spots.

"A closely woven network offers a considerable barrier to evaporation, and the surrounding of the skin of the face with material which hinders the proper ventilation of the eyes and skin produces a certain amount of trouble. Thus all conditions of eczema or skin irritation which women complain of are due to the heated condition of the eye brought about by the veil.

"Associated with the watering there is redness of the eyes and a curious oversensitiveness to light. Again, a veil which presses tightly under the chin compresses the veins of the face, and this intensifies any tendency to skin irritation, and may account by impeding the circulation for woman's chief dread in life, a red nose."

A Child's Laughter

All the bells of heaven may ring,
And all the birds of heaven may sing,
All the wells on earth may spring,
All the winds of earth may bring
All sweet sounds together;
Sweeter far than all things heard,
Hand of harper, tone of bird,
Sound of wood at sundown stirred
Welling water's winsome word,
Wind in warm wan weather.

One thing yet there is that none
Hearing ere its chime be done,
Know not well the sweetest one
Heard of man beneath the sun,
Hoped in heaven hereafter;
Soft and strong, loud and bright,
Very sound of very light
Heard from morning's rosiest height,
When the soul of all delight
Fills a child's clear laughter.

Golden bells of welcome rolled
Never forth such notes not tolled
Hours so blithe in tone so bold
As the radiant mouth of gold
Here that rings forth heaven
If the golden crested wren
Were a nightengale, why, then
Something seen and heard of men
Might be half as sweet as when Laughs a child of seven.

FISH FOR THE TABLE

How to Buy, Prepare and Cook Different Varieties

Almost all fish are best directly after taken from the water. The more delicate the fish the poorer its keeping qualities. White fish bear transportation poorly. Cod fish loses its delicate flavor if packed in ice and transported over the country. Rich fish, like salmon and halibut, have much better keeping qualities than the lighter kind.

Fresh fish is firm, eyes full and rather bright, and the odor, while it is always fishy, will not be disagreeable. An ordinary fish, freshly caught and cooked, will far surpass in flavor and wholesomeness a fish kept for days or weeks, packed in ice.

To Prepare Fish For Cooking

Wipe fish inside and out with cloth wrung out of cold water. Remove any scales that may have been overlooked at the market by drawing knife over fish, beginning at tail and working toward head. Incline knife towards you to prevent scales from flying.

Small fish are usually served with head and tail on.

To bone a fish begin at the tail, run a sharp knife close to the backbone and with knife follow the bone its entire length, thus removing half the flesh from the bones. Turn and remove flesh from the other side. Pick out any small bones that remain after removing backbone.

Turbot

Any dry fish may be used, but those having much oil or color to flesh do not make as pleasing looking dishes. Halibut or whitefish are the nicest.

Steam 3 pounds of fish until tender. Remove bones, skin and flake the fish. Sprinkle with a little salt and white pepper. Make a sauce of 2 cups of milk, 6 tablespoons of flour blended with 5 tablespoons of butter. Stir to avoid lumps. Let cook 20 minutes. When slightly cool add 2 well beaten eggs, 1 teaspoon of minced onion and 1 tablespoon minced parsley. Put layer of fish, then layer of sauce in baking pan until all is used. Sprinkle top with crumbs and dots of butter and bake until brown.

Crabmeat Cutlets

Boil and flake 2 cups of crabmeat. Make a thick white sauce, using 1 cup of milk and 2 tablespoons of flour blended with 2 even tablespoons of butter. When smooth put into milk. Turn into double boiler and cook 20 minutes. Add ½ teaspoon of salt, 1 teaspoon of parsley, dash of nutmeg and ½ teaspoon of minced onion. Cayenne if desired. Turn in the cooked crabmeat and stir all together. Allow to cool a little. Make this mixture into little heaps or balls and allow to stand an hour in cold place. When ready to serve form into cutlet shape. Dip in beaten egg and then fine bread crumbs. Fry in deep fat. Drain and serve with slices of lemon or hot tartar sauce.

Salmon in Molds

Remove bones, oil and skin from fish in 1 can of salmon. Mince fine with fork and rub into the fish 3 tablespoons of melted butter until light and foamy. Add to them ½ cup of fine bread crumbs. Season fish to taste with salt and pepper. Add 1 tablespoon of eggs and crumbs. Put in well buttered molds and steam 1 hour.

Hot Tartar Sauce

To ½ cup of thick white sauce add ½ cup of mayonnaise dressing, ½ teaspoon of minced chives and 1 teaspoon of lemon juice. Put into double boiler to heat. Do not boil. Stir into this ½ teaspoon each of cucumber pickle, olives, parsley and capers, all minced fine. Serve at once piping hot.

Sauce For Salmon

Thicken 1 cup of milk with 1 tablespoon of flour blended with 1 tablespoon of butter. Put all in double boiler and cook 15 minutes. Stir often to prevent lumps. Add to this the liquor and oil from 1 can of salmon. Salt to taste and a dash of cayenne. Just before serving add 1 teaspoon of catsup. Take from stove and stir in one well beaten raw egg. Serve at once.

U. S. Food Controller Hoover says that in spite of evidence given before the Senate investigating committee there is a very evident shortage of sugar.

SEEN ONLY IN A DREAM

The Finest Man in the World Is Here Well Described

The finest man in the world, writes Ada Patterson, is so faithful that in all the world there is but one woman to him. The woman of his choice—with memories of his mother. He is so indifferent to all other women save this one that his women acquaintances complain that he passes them on the street without recognition, a fact that fills the one woman with pervasive and continual joy. He is strong in mind and body and character that he is afraid of no man in the world. He never trembles for his job. He never lies to get himself out of a tight place. He is so strong in the might of right that he will not be afraid to die, nor make his accounting to the great Judge.

He has a sense of responsibility so strong that he is careful about making a promise, and, having given it, he will keep it though the sky crashes down upon him. He is so tender that I have seen his eyes blaze at an affront to a woman, a harsh word to a child, and I saw him shake as he might a snarling puppy, a man who was beating a horse. He is so considerate that when he swears he steps outside the house and directs his profanity at the elements. He never makes use of his family as a safety valve for his temper.

He is so brave that he never needs to lie. It is the coward who lies. The coward lies because he is afraid to tell the truth. He is liberal but is sane enough to be a spendthrift. He is a hard worker, but his sensibilities are not dulled by routine. He is cheerful but does not afflict his companions with the inane jokes or with those atrocities called puns. He is a money-maker but not a money-worshipper. He does not bow down to the dollar but keeps enough dollars jingling in his pockets for practical purposes.

He is firm but not stubborn. He hesitates not a second to say: "I was wrong." He is so free from usual masculine vanity that if a woman flatters him he is embarrassed. He is so clever that he sees through her to the reasons for the flattery. He respects the good in woman and ignores the bad, but he does not overemphasize the woman element in his life.

He is self-reliant but not selfish. It has been proven that he begins more sentences with "What would you like?" than "I want." His character is such that a woman can rest her heart upon it as she rests her head upon a pillow. The rock of ages kind of man that every woman seeks, and in whom every woman's heart would find rest. I knew him once, for a few minutes—in a dream.

Whence Came Thimbles?

In the days of England's "Merry Monarch," women, and men too, wore silver bells on their thumbs—thumb bells they called them—and they wore them more for ornament than use. Through careless pronunciation and misspelling the thumb bells of the 16th century became "thimbles" and in time they came to be worn on the middle finger as a protection from the needle point when sewing. Sailors, as well as seamstresses, wear thimbles or thummels, as the seamen call them, but the sailor's thimble is a ring rather than a cap.

Feminine Facts

Statistics show that France has 1,800,000 families without children.

It is said that 47 per cent. of the stockholders in the Pennsylvania railroad are women.

In Denmark they usually furnish a school teacher with a house, a barn and also a few acres of ground.

Japan contains 500,000 factory girls.

In Singapore women are employed as road builders.

There are four women members of the Chinese parliament.

VICTORY LOAN

Payments due on January the 2nd may be made at any time to and including January the 11th. Scrip Certificates will be delivered in exchange for payments then due. Payments due January the 2nd must be made at the Bank branch mentioned in the application.

The extension of time to January the 11th is given for the convenience of subscribers and Banks so that subscribers will not be unduly detained waiting their turn at a Receiving Teller's wicket, as would most likely be the case if all payments had to be made on one day only. Subscribers should not wait until January the 11th, or a day or so before and thus create the situation sought to be avoided. In every case, interest at the rate of five and one half per cent per annum from January the 2nd must be paid if payment is not made on or before the 11th.

For the convenience of subscribers, by arrangement of the Canadian Bankers' Association, Banks will remain open on the evenings of Thursday and Friday, January 3rd and 4th, and on the afternoon of Saturday, January the 5th. Evening hours 7.30 to 9.30. Saturday afternoon from 2 until 6 o'clock.

It has been brought to the attention of the Finance Department that a considerable number of subscribers, who have deposits with Banks, are under the impression that their Banks will take care of their January payments by automatically debiting their accounts with the necessary payments. This is incorrect. Each and every subscriber must personally arrange for these payments.

Deputy Minister of Finance.

Reading—Miss Doris Sandy.

Valedictory Address—Fred. Bowker.

Mouthorgan Selection—Two Boys.

Presentation of Certificates and Diplomas—Mr. T. C. Ivory, chairman of School Board.

God Save the King.

Corp. Cornell, who is an ex-High School student, on arising to speak, was greeted by three cheers and a tiger, followed by the old familiar High School yell. On reaching the front of the room an address of welcome was read by one of the students, and the presentation of a very handsome leather case containing two military brushes was made. Corp. Cornell, though taken by surprise, thanked his old associates in a few well-chosen words, after which he gave a graphic description of life at the front. Corp. Cornell cannot speak too highly of the Y. M. C. A. work in France and also of the treatment of the wounded "Tommies" in London. His address was listened to with rapt attention and much appreciation.

"IT KEPT ME ON THE PAYROLL" HE SAID

COCHRANE WAS ON VERGE OF QUITTING JOB WHEN HE BEGAN TAKING TANLAC.

"Tanlac has kept me on the payroll, and that's one of my reasons for thinking it the best medicine in the world." William Cochrane who made this statement, was born and reared in Toronto, has a wide acquaintance. He resides at 429 Eric Terrace and holds a good position with the Dominion Express Company.

"I have never been much on medicines," Mr. Cochrane continued, "but Tanlac is one I can certainly back up. I have never spent money to better advantage in my life than I did when I bought it. A year ago or more I began to notice a tired feeling that I couldn't shake off. Even after coming home at night and lying down it clung to me. Finally I got to where my work would completely exhaust me, and I would come home so tired, and worn-out I could hardly move. All day at my work I felt 'all in,' had no strength and energy and never felt like doing anything. I was advised to stop off and rest up for three or four weeks, but I kept pegging along, thinking I would get better. Nothing helped me, however, and I kept getting weaker all the time.

"I kept reading testimonials of so many who had been helped by Tanlac that I became convinced it was good, so I decided to try it, and I honestly believe it has saved me from a general breakdown. I have no doubt if it hadn't been for Tanlac I would have been compelled in a short while longer to give up my job, at least for a while, for I tell you I was just about past going when I first began taking it. Well, six bottles have relieved me entirely of that exhausted, half-dead feeling and my general health is better than it has been in over two years. The medicine built me up and put me on my feet, with strength and energy to do my work with all ease. I am now on the job regular every day, feeling fine, and when I hear a man complaining of feeling bad, the first thing I think of is to tell him to try Tanlac."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co. Ltd.

CHANDOS.

A Christmas tree and grand entertainment was held at S. S. No. 8, Chandos in Hawke's school house on Friday evening, Dec. 21, and was carried out with unparalleled success. The night was ideal and the school was crowded to seating capacity. The school house was beautifully decorated with Union Jacks, Canadian flags, pennants, streamers of red, white and blue, Xmas bells, evergreen, etc. The tree was a marvel of beauty and contained presents to delight the little folks. The children carried out their parts without a mistake and are certainly a credit to the school.

The following was the programme rendered:

Chairman's address—Mr. Robert Tanner.

Instrumental violin and autoharp—Mr. and Mrs. W. Staples.

Acrostic—Welcome—The children.

Recitation—The music stool—Laura Tanner.

Recitation—Eddie Everett.

Song—A Xmas sleigh ride—The children.

Recitation—Papa's letter—Minnie Tanner.

Chickadee drill—Five little children.

Recitation—Frank Elmhirst.

Dialogue—The Irish schoolmaster—Neddie and Ernest Tanner, Eddie and Willie Everett.

Recitation—Mrs. Everett.

Recitation—The knot hole in the fence—Ernest Tanner.

Violin and autoharp selection—Mr. and Mrs. Staples.

Recitation—A mortifying mistake—Ethel Masters.

Recitation—Little Victor Tanner, aged 4 years.

Recitation—The Union Jack—Neddie Tanner.

Acrostic—Christmas—Nine children.

Newspaper drill—Twelve children.

Recitation—Willie Everett.

Dialogue—Visitors from the city—Mrs. W. Tucker, Mrs. E. Tucker, Miss Dalton, Miss Maud Tucker, Mack Tucker, Frank Elmhirst.

Recitation—When Huldy 'spects her beau—Mary Tanner.

Song—We'll never let the old flag fall—The children, assisted by Misses E. Brown and F. Stephens.

Recitation—The fireman's wedding—Mrs. W. Staples.

Dialogue—Goin' somewhere—Isaac Wilbert, Neddie, Laura and Josie Tanner.

Recitation—Kitty's picture—Josie Tanner.

Upside down drill—Five children.

Recitation—When father carves the duck—Phyllis Tanner.

Recitation—A little girl's speech—Gladys Tanner.

At the close of the programme a vote of thanks was extended to the teacher, Mrs. Staples, by Mr. Robert Tanner, Sec.-Treas. of S. S. No. 8, Chandos, for the trouble she had taken in training the children. The motion was seconded and carried.

Sends Nuxated Iron

To the French Soldiers to Help Give Them Strength, Power and Endurance

General Gibson Says It Should be Used By Every Soldier Who Goes to the Front—That He Himself is Hale and Hearty in His 91st Year, He Attributes Largely to His Recent Use of Nuxated Iron

WESTERN UNION

Dr. H. B. Vail, formerly Physician in the Baltimore Hospital, Former Health Commissioner Wm. R. Kerr and others give valuable advice and information on the use of Nuxated Iron as a tonic, strength and blood builder.

What every soldier most needs is tremendous "stay" there; strength, power and endurance, with nerves of steel and blood of iron. To produce this result, there is nothing in my experience which I have found so valuable as organic iron—Nuxated Iron, says Dr. H. B. Vail, formerly Physician in the Baltimore Hospital and a Medical Examiner. A large quantity of this valuable product was sent to the French soldiers by Mme. Sarah Bernhardt. I took Nuxated Iron myself to build me up after a serious case of nervous exhaustion. The effects were apparent after a few days and within three weeks it had virtually revitalized my whole system and put me in a superb physical condition.

If General Gibson's advice were followed and every soldier who goes to the front carried a package of Nuxated Iron in his kit, I am sure that the men would not only be better, stronger fighters, but that we would have far less sickness in the Army and much less work for the Red Cross and Army Hospitals to do. Time and again I have prescribed organic iron—Nuxated Iron—and surprised patients at the rapidity with which the weakness and general debility were replaced by a renewed feeling of strength and vitality.

General Horatio Gates Gibson says Nuxated Iron has brought back to him in good measure that old buoyancy and energy that filled his veins in 1847 when he made his triumphant entry with General Scott into the City of Mexico and that he attributes the fact that he is hale and hearty in his 91st year, after an active military life with service in both the Mexican and Civil Wars largely to his recent use of this wonderful product.

Another remarkable case is that of General David Stuart Gordon, noted Indian fighter and hero of the battle of Gettysburg. General Gordon says: "When I became badly run down this year, I found myself totally without the physical power to 'come back' as I had done in my younger days. I tried different 'so-called tonics' without feeling any better, but finally I heard how physicians were widely recommending organic iron to renew red blood and rebuild strength in worn-out bodies. As a result, I started taking Nuxated Iron and within a month it had roused my weakened vital forces and made me feel strong again, giving me an endurance such as I never hoped to again possess."

Former Health Commissioner of Chicago, Wm. R. Kerr, said: "As Health Commissioner of the City of Chicago, I was importuned many times to recommend different medicines, mineral waters, etc. Never yet have I gone on record as favoring any particular remedy that it ought to be used in every hospital and prescribed by every physician in this country, and if my endorsement shall induce anaemic, nervous, run-down men and women to take Nuxated Iron, and receive the wonderful tonic benefits which I have received, I shall feel greatly gratified that I made an exception to my life-long rule in recommending it."

Dr. E. Sauer, a Boston physician, who has studied both in this country and in great European Medical Institutions, said: "Nuxated Iron is a wonderful remedy. Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with the blood pressure of a boy of twenty, and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man; in fact, a young man he really was, notwithstanding his age. The secret, he said, was taking iron—Nuxated Iron had filled him with renewed life. At 30 he was in bad health—at 46 he was careworn and nearly all in—now at 50 after taking Nuxated Iron, a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the buoyancy of youth.

"If people would only take Nuxated Iron when they feel weak or run-down, instead of dosing themselves with habit-forming drugs, stimulants and alcoholic beverages, I am convinced that in this way they could ward off disease, preventing it becoming organic in thousands of cases, and thereby the lives of thousands might be saved who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, kidney, liver, heart trouble and other dangerous maladies. Thousands of people suffer from iron deficiency and do not know it. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained.

NUXATED—Nuxated Iron, which is so strongly endorsed by Mme. Sarah Bernhardt, the worlds most noted actress, and which has been used with such surprising results by Dr. James Louis Beyea, Generals Gibson and Gordon, and former Health Commissioner Kerr of Chicago, and which is prescribed and recommended by physicians in such a great variety of cases, is not a patent medicine, nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron, that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any Charitable Institution if they cannot take any man or woman under sixty who lacks iron and increase their strength 100 per cent. or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

URGES USE OF HORSEFLESH.

Dean Hoskins, of N. Y. Veterinary College, Tells of Advantages.

W. Horace Hoskins, Dean of the New York University and State Veterinary College, strongly advocates the increased use of horse meat in place of the more costly flesh of other animals. Some time ago Dean Hoskins gave eight reasons why the American people should eat horse meat, and in a statement made recently he further advocates the use of equine flesh in all American households.

At present five butcher shops in New York City are selling horse meat and one of them sells horse meat exclusively. The meat is sold under Government inspection at 15 cents a pound. As the price of most meat is more than three times this amount the use of horse flesh is most economical.

INCREASE IN RATES.

Railways To Raise Freight Charges 15 Per Cent.

Ottawa, Dec. 27.—The Dominion Railway Commission will shortly bring down a judgment in the application of railway companies for an increase of 15 per cent. in freight rates. While it is stated that an increase has been granted in view of the increase in material, too, it is not thought that the increase is on the basis of a flat raise as requested. The application was a blanket one to apply to all lines and all commodities. The increase, it is believed, will take various local conditions into consideration and will also consider various commodities.

MAY HAVE TO POOL COAL.

Coal Operators Are Taking Advantage of War.

Washington, Dec. 27.—Many coal operators have taken advantage of war times and are making much greater profits now than before war was declared. Fuel Administrator Garfield stated at the Senate coal hearing.

Dr. Garfield said that if the war continued very long the Government would be compelled to pool coal and sell it at reasonable prices. He saw little relief in prospect for the railroads until their operations were centralized.

Dr. Garfield said he was issuing priority orders to relieve suffering and sending coal where "it was most needed regardless of where it was consigned." He said he did not want to place blame for lack of transportation on anyone, nor did he want to try to shift blame that might be attached to his administration. He added that it was impossible for the railroads to cope with the situation.

FOR

Board of Education

141 Hunter St. E.,
Peterborough, December 25, 1917.

To the Electorate of the City of Peterborough,—

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

Should it be your pleasure to elect me as one of your representatives on the Board of Education for the city of Peterborough at the coming civic elections, it will be equally my pleasure to willingly serve you in that capacity to the best of my ability to do so.

I am fully aware of and appreciate the importance of the continued development of our educational facilities, in the general interests of our young people and the city of Peterborough, both from the standpoint of "General" education and "Technical" education, and I am of opinion that neither branch can be neglected with impunity.

As a graduate in Engineering Science of the University of London, England, I am not unacquainted with the preparatory needs of students who purpose entering similar institutions.

Above all things I am a believer in giving our young people and our "artisans" and "craftsmen" generally, every educational opportunity within our means, so that they may be able to look back, in the years to come, with satisfaction, on our efforts of today.

I take this opportunity of expressing my appreciation of the good work which has unquestionably been done, educationally, in the past, by previous Boards of Education, and will endeavor, if elected, to do my duty also, with due consideration for the students, the teachers, the city of Peterborough and the public purse.

Yours very truly,
W. H. PRETTY.

Alderman Jones' Card of Thanks

To the Electors of the West Ward.

Ladies and Gentlemen:

Having done me the honor of electing me by acclamation to the important position of Alderman for your Ward for 1918, please accept my sincerest thanks for this evidence of your confidence.

I have a deep interest in Peterborough, and a strong faith in its citizens and its resources, so that you may depend on my cheerfully giving to the new Council Board all the assistance in my power to secure a prosperous municipal year.

With best wishes for a happy New Year.

Your obedient servant,
R. N. JONES.

To the Electors of The Centre Ward

Ladies and Gentlemen.

At the request of a large number of my friends I am a candidate for Alderman in the Centre Ward. I appeal to you for your vote and influence in my behalf. My past experience in the City Council, and my record when there, is a good reason why you should elect me as your representative in Centre Ward. I promise, if elected, to look after your interests and the interests of the whole city in an efficient manner, without fear or favor.

I remain, ladies and gentlemen,
Yours truly,

NATURAL BIRTHRIGHT OF PEOPLE MUST NOT GO TO POWER BARONS

Electric Energy Nearest Approach to Philosopher's Stone—Coal Situation in the City—Many Municipalities Worse off Than Peterboro.

The following section of Mayor Duffus' retiring address deals with vital questions, and will be found of peculiar interest:

Hydro-Electric Energy.

Hydro-Electric power, making for inexpensive light, heat and power, warrants the intense interest of all public men on behalf of the people.

Scientists and quasi-scientists have racked their brains looking for perpetual motion without recognizing the endless chain of evaporation condensation and sunlight that makes our rain, rivers, lakes and oceans without costing society a red cent and from which the public obtains its Hydro-Electric energy, the cost of which is, in Ontario, quite normal compared with the amount distributed.

Such is the value of electricity becoming to be regarded throughout the Province of Ontario, rich as it is in waterpower that we can see no reason why we should not go on until all homes, factories, and farms are completely electrified.

That it will become, like other forms of fuel, scarce and high in price, is not thought of, because Hydro-Electric energy will last as long as the human race, for it is the nearest approach to the philosopher's stone that is ever likely to occur in the economy of nature. The more of it we use, the cheaper we can produce it.

The opinions of methodical observers, the stern evidence of fact point to the conclusion that very shortly for obvious reasons our railways will be extensively electrified. They can haul larger loads, can accellerate better, can negotiate to better advantage in winter weather, can operate 25 to 30 per cent cheaper proportionately than steam. It is alleged that 25 per cent of a railway's energy is expended hauling its own coal.

Having proper regard to these facts, you can readily observe the unlimited demand there will be for electric energy in this highly developed agricultural and industrial Province. This very clearly demonstrates that municipal authorities must see to it that Government decline to accede to any application for power franchises to private monoply interests.

I am inflexibly opposed to any more such privileges and I think awakened opinion is against the handing over of this valuable natural birthright of the people of Canada to any group of exploiting power barons.

The time has come in Canada for National leaders to declare themselves plainly on the side of conservation of hydro-electric power for the benefit of all the people and not for any private group.

The great water powers of Canada are more precious to the Nation than the richest coal deposits. They are National heritage. The publicly owned Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario has demonstrated that the water powers can be owned, controlled and operated by the state to the lasting advantage of the whole people. The granting of franchises to private monoply interests is detrimental to public welfare and no Government has the moral right to be so unwise and unprovident as to leave out such natural resources to any private monoply.

Gentlemen, no proposition of the present day promises such returns to the great mass of the people of this country and I exhort you give it your very keenest consideration.

The Coal Question.

In the early spring the Council foreseeing that there would be a shortage of coal, made application under the Ontario Act for authorization to establish a municipal fuel supply.

Following a session of the Ontario Railway Board, their permission was granted, the first to be granted in Ontario. Delays occurred, in that the authorization had to be finally approved by Order-in-Council, of the Ontario Cabinet, and this was not accomplished until well on in the month of June. The city authorized an issue of debentures to provide money to purchase coal and on the strength of the authorization the Bank was prepared to advance money if necessary.

Arrangements were made to take over the sheds at the Rehill yard, and this was done, at a rental of $35 per month for several months with further option.

It was proposed to place in the sheds a supply of coal and hold it for winter necessities, also to sell from the cars, as by so doing the delivery cost would be lessened.

The one essential in the coal business is to establish a connection as a source of supply. It takes years to accomplish this. The large companies have had for many years local representatives, and from these companies no coal could be had. The city was compelled to resort to the independent sources of supply, through the jobbers and to buy its coal at practically from $1.35 to $1.50 per ton more than local dealers would pay for Line Company coal. That was a serious handicap, and could only be met by the strictest economy in the cost of distribution. A contract was made with Mr. W. H. Lytle for a general delivery all over the city at a price of 80c per ton. This has worked out very well and the contractor has given efficient service.

Selling off the cars a foreman and one man have been in service to fill the bags, weigh coal and unload cars. When there seemed a chance of having to pay demurrage, the coal was unloaded into the bins.

At first it was thought well, as a supply of coal was promised, to sell in lots of three tons and under. This worked out very well during the early part of September, but the state of the coal supply on the other side and the rules put into effect by the United States Fuel Administration whereby only certain quantities were allowed to come into Canada, increased the difficulty of getting coal and brought down deliveries to one ton and eventually to half ton lots.

Citizens paid in money freely in the hope of getting coal. So far the business has been financed out of the money so paid in, and the city money has not been touched. The money in the bank bears interest, which helps to defray the expense.

We have had an unusually early and very severe winter. All over the Province the demand is incessant [illegible] coal. Many municipalities have fared much worse than Peterborough. The local dealers have been energetic in procuring a supply, and have met the demand in fairly good shape. There is privation, so far as individual supply is concerned, but no one has gone cold. This has brought into our lives a new care and a new anxiety, and one that may not be done away with for a number of years.

Just recently the situation has become more acute. It is serious but not alarming. Some time ago after our visit to Toronto proving ineffective, I went to Ottawa and the Deputy Food Controller informed me that only 200,000 tons of coal was allotted to Ontario for the months of November and December. After that he considered plenty of coal would be available. He showed me a list of over 100 municipalities who up to the present had only received 20 per cent of last year's supply, while Peterborough had received about 65 per cent.

However he stated the Government had arranged to bring in 50,000 tons for emergency purposes, a portion for Montreal and a portion for Toronto. He said, "Go to Toronto and see the Hon. Fuel Controller and make arrangements to get a supply of this coal." This I did, accompanied by Mr. Hicks who very kindly went along to verify the position Peterborough was in from the coal dealer's standpoint. In Toronto we were informed that coal was procured by the Government and handled by the Toronto Coal and Dock Company, that 40,000 tons had been sold and promised but that only 13,000 tons were available, thus the result.

However thanks to our persistence and that of our dealers, we are getting a few carloads, which is taking care of the situation for the time being.

Great credit is due our dealers for Peterborough getting as much coal as she did. Particular credit is due Messrs. Robt. Hicks Company who had the foresight to go early in the season and risk buying at a high price many carloads of independent coal, and I say frankly had it not been for the patriotic action on the part of the Robert Hicks Company, many hundred homes in the City of Peterborough would be without coal tonight.

It is gratifying to know that the majority of the dependents of the men on service at the front from this city have been provided with fuel.

Early in May last, anticipating a shortage the Patriotic Fund office appealed to the Head Office, in Ottawa, to allow this Branch to use as much as $10,000 to provide, in advance, coal for those on the fund here. After consideration, the Head Office reluctantly had to decline on the ground that so many places would ask for the same convenience.

Our local Branch at once consulted the women, and they were asked to bring in for deposit in the bank, sums of money, to be expended in securing fuel. This was done, and arrangements made for a supply through a Toronto house. Eventually the Toronto house could not make good, in view of the complications that came up with regard to supply from the States. The case was laid before Mr. Hicks and he at once brought in between $3000.00 and $4,000.00 worth of coal from an independent source, which was delivered at the homes and paid for out of the savings from the families. The accommodation afforded by Mr Hicks was entirely outside his general trade and for two weeks he laid aside all other business and delivered the coal in rapid deliveries. So that between what was brought in for the Fund and by the City, nearly 1500 tons of coal were handled. No doubt this lessened the anxiety and placed in the city an amount of coal that otherwise might not have reached the city. The kindliest feeling has existed between the dealers and the city. Credit is due Alderman Weir whose advice was always sound and helpful. Much credit is due Alderman Dobbin who worked continuously, also Alderman Stratton who worked with him on the sub-committee, also to Mr. Adams and his staff, whose work has been doubled on account of the coal question. The same applies to the Police Department.

The question of wood has been thoroughly gone into but without very practical results, but some will be forthcoming in the near future.

Of all the responsibilities to be handed to my successor this one of a supply of fuel will be the most pertinent and pressing. Other things may be shelved and set aside to a more convenient season, but this one is of the present. The real causes of the shortage is based on war conditions.

The new Mayor will require to be at the service of the city at all times, as the day has come when a Mayor is a real servant of the people. If he is not prepared to be this, better that he were not in office. The conditions prevailing now have thrown on the municipality and its council a lot more anxiety and care that must be met. The Alderman must be more than a representative. He must be the willing loyal helpful servant of his constituency. None other will fill the bill. Being a critic in the Council is not constructive. It makes for nothing but a hindrance and dampens the efforts and thoughts of others who may try to do what is helpful.

Rheumatism

A Home Cure Given by One Who Had It

In the spring of [illegible] I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally, I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with Rheumatism, and it effected a cure in every case.

I want every sufferer from any form of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of curing your Rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but, understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when positive relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write today.

You Look As YOU FEEL

You know well enough when your liver is loafing.

Constipation is the first warning; then you begin to "feel mean all over."

Your skin soon gets the bad news, it grows dull, yellow, muddy and unsightly.

Violent purgatives are not what you need—just the gentle help of this old-time standard remedy.

Colorless faces often show the absence of iron in the blood.

BOWSER'S VISITOR

It's His Mother-in-law, Whom He Welcomes Warmly.

HE'S GOING TO BE NICE TO HER

And Overlook Her Little Eccentricities. But In Spite of His Laudable Intentions the Old Lady Steers the Conversation Into Disagreeable Channels and Trouble Ensues.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, [illegible], by Associated Literary Press.]

MR. BOWSER was smiling and good natured when he reached home and Mrs. Bowser was so pleased over the fact that they were hardly seated at the table when she said:

"I have news for you. Who do you think is coming on the 8 o'clock train?"

"Not your mother?" he queried.

"Yes, got a telegram from her an hour ago. I—I hope you won't be mad."

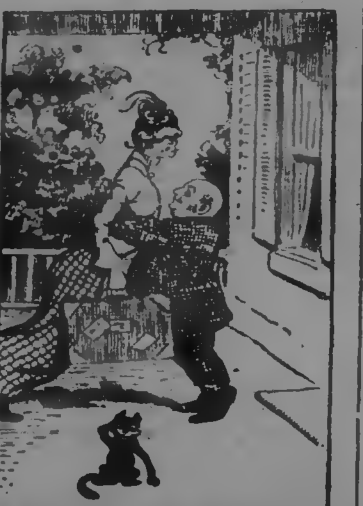
"Mad? Why should I be mad? She's a nice old lady, and we always got along all right. I shall be glad to see her."

"I'm so glad! Mother is a plain spoken woman, you know. She always says just what she thinks. You won't care if she speaks her mind?"

"Not the slightest. She can talk her head off for all I care. I believe I differed with her the last time she was here, but that's all past and gone. She's in her second childhood, and if she's blunt we can overlook it. You just make yourself easy about me."

"That is nice and sweet of you. I was so afraid you might not be glad to see her."

"You just think I'm a queer man," said Mr. Bowser as he looked across at her. "Is she not your mother? Isn't she as dear to me as my own? Do you imagine I would hurt your feelings by having unpleasant words with an old lady, who is not responsible for half she says? She's got a way of saying mean things, but if she happens to hit me I'll simply laugh at her. I hope she'll stay at least four weeks, and I'll lay myself out to give her a pleasant visit."



HER WELCOME WAS WARM

Mrs. Bowser had several dim and undefined remembrances connected with a former visit, but she choked them back and made herself believe that Mr. Bowser would do all he said.

When the hour and the mother-in-law arrived her welcome was warm, and for an hour or so all was harmony and good will. The conversation, which had been made up of home happenings, finally fell flat, and the mother-in-law started up afresh by saying:

"Out our way we have been much interested in a divorce case, and I am glad to say it came out all right. That is, the wife got her divorce."

"What was the trouble?" carelessly queried Mr. Bowser.

"Why, he was a man who was always bossing and bulldozing his wife. He thought he knew it all and she nothing. He was always kicking and fault finding, and her life was made miserable. She was a sweet, patient woman, or she would never have stood it a month. I expect there are plenty of other women suffering just as she suffered."

Trouble Brewing.

Mrs. Bowser saw a flush creep over Mr. Bowser's face and attempted to turn the conversation. He smiled, but followed the smile with an observation:

"And there are no doubt plenty of husbands who are made miserable by wives who have no system of management."

"They are a poor lot, take 'em as they run," continued the old lady with a good deal of acid in her tones. "I am glad you are behaving yourself better than you used to."

Mr. Bowser's neck began to grow red and his ears to twitch, and Mrs. Bowser made a heroic effort to get her mother upstairs to unpack her trunk. Mr. Bowser remembered his promise, but at the same time he felt that he had been hit and must hit back, and he therefore said:

"Why do you say better than I used to be? Did you ever have any fault to find in me?"

"You started out to nag and boss, I believe, and were always threatening divorce if anything went wrong. I'm glad you've got over it. While you may be the man of the house and all that, you've got no more rights than the woman. Do you still keep up your fads, or have you become sensible?"

This was piling it on to Mr. Bowser. He could have turned it off with a laugh and taken a walk, but his dignity would have suffered by so doing. He didn't ache for a row, but he wanted his mother-in-law to understand that he was at the head of that family.

Mrs. Bowser Feels a Storm Coming.

"What fads to you refer to?" he quietly asked, while Mrs. Bowser dodged out of the room to escape the coming storm.

"Oh, you used to have 'em by the thousand. When I was here last you paid $15 for a fire escape or some such folderol. I believe you were also going to raise your own pork and eggs, and you had an electric battery, a homemade burglar alarm and a machine for making your own porous plasters. It's a wonder you haven't tried something to make your hair grow. I never get a letter without wondering what tomfoolery you've been up to."

"You—you are talking to me!" gasped Mr. Bowser as his eyes hung out and his chin bobbled up and down.

"I'm not in the habit of talking to the walls," replied the mother-in-law. "I hope you haven't got the idea that you are too big to be talked to."

"But I never had a fad in my life!" he protested.

"Nonsense! You have kept the house upset with 'em for the last ten years. However, you may get over it in time. Do you still cross your hands under your coat tails and teeter back and forth on your heels and try to make your wife believe that you are a big Injun?"

Mr. Bowser Can Stand It No Longer.

"Woman," exclaimed Mr. Bowser as he jumped to his feet, "I allow no living person to talk to me that way! Did you come out here to—to"—

"I came out here on a short visit," she interrupted, "and if you behave yourself we shall get along all right. No need of your getting red all over and bristling up in hopes to scare me. You've got a voice on you like a bullfrog, but I've heard that kind before. Have you got through making a nuisance of yourself in the kitchen and thinking you know all about bossing a hired girl?"

"I never interfered with the domestic arrangements of the house!" he shouted as he looked around for the cat to give her a lift with his foot.

"Why, you drove two away when I was here last! I told Annie then that you were the biggest humbug I ever met with, and if she'd taken my advice she'd have sat down on you like a brick house. I'm glad to hear you are minding your own business. Have you expended any sympathy on tramps lately?"

"Woman, have you come a hundred miles to insult me?" demanded Mr. Bowser as his heels got red hot under him.

"Don't get a stroke of apoplexy over it!" replied the mother-in-law as she coaxed the cat on her lap. "What you need is a wife who will trim you down occasionally. All husbands need trimming. They are apt to think they own the earth. What are you breathing so hard about? Got another hog in the pen?"

"I never had a hog!"

"Perhaps it was a calf, then; I know you had a poor animal of some sort penned"—

"Never!"

Adding Insult to Injury.

"Don't shout so loud, and for mercy sake sit down in that chair before your knees collapse under you! Seems to me you are getting bow legged. With about ten pounds more of fat on your ribs you'll lead the procession. How many cures for rheumatism have you got on hand just now?"

"And I've got to stand this!" groaned Mr. Bowser as he looked around in a helpless way.

"Oh, you'll survive and be the better for it. I'm going upstairs now, but tomorrow I shall want to talk to you a little. That is, you need a lot of trimming and you'll get it. Don't swallow your collar button now, and don't go banging around and threatening to get a divorce from Annie. I'll bid you good night now and see you in the morning."

Two hours later he came creeping up to bed. Mrs. Bowser looked at him from her half closed eyes and noted that he was palefaced and his eyes had a hunted look, and as he got into bed he uttered a groan and whispered to himself:

"And she is to have a further talk to me tomorrow, and there is no chance to murder her in cold blood!"

Setting Him Right.

"I will admit," said the careful house agent, "that there is some water in the cellar."

"But you said the soil was sandy," remonstrated the prospective tenant.

"The water in the cellar doesn't come from the soil," the agent hastily explained. "It comes through the roof."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Synopsis of Canadian Northwest Land Regulations.

The sole head of a family or any male over 18 years old, who was at the commencement of the present war, and has since continued to be, a British subject or a subject of an allied or neutral country, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion Land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for District. Entry by proxy may be made on certain conditions. Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of land in each of three years.

In certain districts a homesteader may secure an adjoining quarter-section as pre-emption. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Reside six months in each of three years after earning homestead patent and cultivate 50 acres extra. May obtain pre-emption patent as soon as homestead patent on certain conditions.

A settler after obtaining homestead patent, if he cannot serve a pre-emption, may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

Holders of entries may count time of employment as farm laborers in Canada during 1917, as residence duties under certain conditions.

When Dominion Lands are advertised or posted for entry, returned soldiers who have served overseas and have been honorably discharged, receive one day priority in applying for entry at local Agent's Office (but not Sub-Agency). Discharge papers must be presented to Agent.

TODAY'S STORY

It was Sunday afternoon in the gardens of the Luxembourg.

The crowd, chattering and laughing, filled the alleys, streamed up and down the steps between the sculptured queens of a bygone France and smiled into one another's eyes under the pale October sun. Except for the gay uniforms of the officers—and the crape of the widows—it might have been the old Paris, the Paris of one's youth.

The children, hundreds and hundreds of them, sailed the same winged boats on the great basin of the fountain or wandered among the same exquisitely tended flowers. The same hoops bounded on the level paths.

These at least were at peace.

Suddenly a gong throbbed enticingly. It was greeted by a dozen piping voices. "Oh, c'est le Guignol! It's Punch and Judy! Come."

With a whoop they rushed into the covered enclosure and settled themselves with much flouncing of little skirts and many expectant thrills. These were the children of the comfortable. It costs two sous to see the Guignol.

Outside, against the ropes, indulgent parents and other brothers waited smiling. The curtain of the tiny stage went up on a breathless silence. The faces of the children were like little lamps of happiness.

An enormous green crocodile, with cavernous jaws as large as a man's hand, thumped dramatically on the boards, and, amid shrieks of delightful laughter, was slain by a marionette.

Then Le Grand Guignol, Punch himself, resplendent in scarlet and gold, with huge creaking voice and a face such as never was under the sun, sprang up before them. His thumping was thunder, his words a cannonade.

Suddenly a child's voice, shrill with terror, tripping in its agony, cut into the laughter.

"C'est un boche. A boche like the one who hurt my father!" The voice subsided in a flood of tears.

The older children smiled indulgently. They were wise; they knew better. Was not this Le Grand Guignol, the children's friend? A boche was something different, something quite, quite different.

The disturber was removed. The play went on.

But peace had fled from the gardens of the Luxembourg.

Owing to the shortage of woolen gloves for the Canadian troops in England, arrangements have been made for the issue of woolen mitts.

AGAINST CONSCRIPTION.

Australian Soldiers Piling Up Anti-Conscription Majority.

Melbourne, Australia Dec. 27—(Reuters' Ottawa Agency).—The latest figures in the referendum are: 870,000 for and 1,050,000 against conscription, including the first returns from the Australian military forces, which, it is officially announced, are 17,000 for and 23,000 against.

TWO BRAVE CHILDREN

FOUGHT SAVAGE COUGAR THAT ATTACKED THEM.

His Majesty the King Has Awarded Medals to a Boy and Girl, Aged Eight and Eleven Years, for the Heroic Manner in Which They Risked Their Lives in an Uneven Struggle.

HIS MAJESTY THE KING has awarded the Albert Medal to two children, Doreen Ashburnham, aged eleven years, and her companion, Anthony Farrer, aged eight years, for courage and presence of mind in saving each other's lives when attacked by a ferocious panther.

The medals have reached the Lieutenant-Governor of British Columbia, and it is understood that the Red Cross Society will arrange the details of the presentation.

The official communication from the department of the Secretary of State for Canada reads:

"I have the honor to refer to correspondence upon the subject of the case of Doreen Ashburnham and Anthony Farrer, and to inform you that His Excellency the Governor-General has just been advised that His Majesty the King has been pleased to approve of the award of the Albert Medal of the second class to each of the children, in recognition of their gallantry in saving life, and that the medals are being forwarded to-day to His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor of British Columbia, who will present them on behalf of His Majesty." The communication is signed by Thomas Mulvey, Under-Secretary of State.

Last September 23, Doreen Ashburnham and Anthony Farrer left the Ashburnham residence at the south-east corner of Cowichan Lake, Vancouver Island, to catch their saddle ponies pasturing about a mile distant from the dwelling. The distance had been almost traversed when the two little folks were confronted by a full-grown cougar crouching in the path about six feet from them.

The panther immediately began to show fight, and before any attempt of escape could be made by the children it had sprung upon the little eleven-year-old girl, throwing her to the ground face downward. The brute then commenced to tear Doreen's clothes from her back. Young Anthony, although only eight years of age, called to his companion to remain perfectly still and allow him to carry out a plan. Without more ado, he, with great presence of mind, rushed to an elevated positon behind a small bush and jumped full upon the panther's back. Exerting every ounce of his childish strength, he managed to overbalance the beast and allowed Doreen to regain her feet.

The infuriated animal was by this time thoroughly aroused. Equipped with no other weapon save the bridle, with heroism, devotion, and self-sacrifice, the children, fearful of what might happen, faced the snarling animal, trying to fight it away by beating it with the bridle over the head. A few minutes of fierce encounter followed, when Antohny was struck by one of the great paws, with claws extended, full in the face. The child fell to the ground. In a second the enraged animal sprang upon the little chap's back, and, clawing viciously, mauled the back of his scalp with its teeth.

While apparently at the mercy of the beast, this magnificent-spirited child called to Doreen to make her escape. This could easily have been done at this stage, as it could a few minutes earlier, when Anthony had the chance to escape, but no such thought was in her mind, for there before her was a ghastly struggle going on. Terrified at what she saw, and believing that she could help Anthony, Doreen set upon the animal with fists and bridle. Little effect seemed to come after her strenuous efforts, for the animal was becoming more savage.

In one last noble impulse she steeled herself for an ordeal that would have sickened a strong man: She deliberately thrust her arm into the creature's mouth, thus saving Anthony further mauling, for already his scalp was badly lacerated. Realizing that one eye of the panther was blind, and with her arm still in the mouth of the brute, she proceeded to attack the other eye with her finger nails.

Practically sightless now, but more vicious than ever, the panther released his hold on Anthony, freed the girl's arm, and reared itself up on its hindquarters for a final struggle with Doreen. Reduced to disadvantage of ability to see properly, and denied of its prey, the defeated panther gave up the struggle, slunk away and sought refuge under a log.

Both Anthony and Doreen were in a serious condition, the former suffering from loss of blood and agony of wounds. A nearby practitioner who attended the little kiddies found it necessary to use twelve stitches on the scalp of Anthony, since it was badly torn and hanging down, while his cheek, nose, and back had been torn by the claws of the animal.

Charles March, a homesteader of the locality, hunted and killed the animal. It was disclosed on examination that the animal was in a comparatively starved condition. To its semi-blindness was attributed its lack of ability to hunt for itself, its attack on the children being regarded as the outcome of its hunger.

Readers of this extraordinary story of heroism, devotion, and self sacrifice are reminded that the above facts are taken in detail from original signed and certified depositions of the principal actors, the statement of the doctor, and that of the man who slew the panther, and also the special observations of Sir Clive Phillipps Wolley.

The Judge Silenced.

In the famous trial of the dean of St. Asaph, Mr. Erskine, the great English lawyer, put a question to the jury relative to the meaning of their verdict. Justice Buller objected to its propriety. The counsel reiterated his question and demanded an answer. The judge again interposed his authority in these emphatic words:

"Sit down, Mr. Erskine. Know your duty or I shall be obliged to make you know it."

Mr. Erskine, with equal warmth, replied: "I know my duty as well as your lordship knows your duty. I stand here as the advocate of a fellow citizen, and I will not sit down."

The judge was silent, and the advocate persisted in his questions.—London Opinion.

U-BOAT PERIL SEEN BY EXPERT

Warning of Frenchman Against Undue Optimism.

PIRATES CANNOT SUCCEED

Before the Germans Finally Admit Defeat of Their Ruthless Submarine Warfare Another Effort Will Doubtless Be Made —Are Believed to Be Preparing For It.

THE French naval expert, Olivier Guiheneuc, deprecates the talk of "failure of the submarine war," which has obtained in certain quarters since the [illegible] made by Mr. Lloyd George last July. Is this optimism justified? M. Guiheneuc turns to the facts for an answer to his question. Mr. Lloyd George's statement, that since April, the month when the results of the submarine war were the most damaging to the Allies, these results have decreased, though figures show great variableness, was based on the statistics published in The Daily Chronicle, which showed the percentage of British ships torpedoed each week to have been 16.25 during March, 26.6 during April, 18.75 during May, 21.5 in June, and only 16.5 in July, whereas at the end of the week ending July 15th no French vessel had been torpedoed at all. The British Premier deduced from these figures the conclusion that now that the days are getting shorter, there would probably be a further decrease in the number of attacks. And from this it has been thought permissible to conclude that the submarine campaign had failed. It sounds like sheer "bourrage de crane," mischievous nonsense, and it is bad to expose public opinion to alternate security and deception.

M. Guiheneuc proceeds to consider the statement that longer nights are an advantage to commercial vessels, and he finds that though this is the case they are also favorable to submarines, for they enable a submarine to remain submerged during the day, most of them having a capacity of 11 to 12 hours energy in their accumulators, and it is only the very newest which are not obliged to come to the surface during the long and clear summer days. It is certain, he says, that the decrease in the number of submarine attacks can be attributed, though only partially, to the improved measures which have been taken to deal with these attacks. Neither must the audacity and interpidity of officers and crews of the patrolling boats be forgotten, nor the efforts of the Japanese and Americans, who are co-operating more closely with us. But in the light of the declarations made by Michaelis, Hindenburg, Tirpitz, and Captain Persius, is it reasonable to believe that there is no further German effort in preparation? The presence of fewer German submarines can be accounted for not only by destruction by allied craft, but because they are in dock effecting repairs after the spring campaign, and also by the fact that the new undersea craft—there are 350 of them, according to the statement of a prisoner who has worked on the submarines, and which is reproduced in the official "Moniteur de la Flotte" of June 20th —are not completed nor are their crews sufficiently trained. It is definitely known that in order to form these crews, our enemies were compelled to disarm their armored vessels of the Brunschweig and Deutschland type, about 15 years old.

It is more likely that submarine warfare will reach another crisis towards the beginning of the year. I do not say that the Allies will not be able to cope with it. What I do say is this: If the increase in the number of powerful patrol boats, the rational use of the existing means of action, have at last given us a slight superiority in the defensive against submarine attack, the number of submarines launched on the seas is going to increase considerably in a short time. . . . and we shall have to begin our efforts over again. Submarine warfare will have extended its borders, for there will be more hunters and more hunted.

Then does it follow that we must despair of ever allaying this nightmare? Certainly not. "Let us fix our eyes on a point where our sea forces necessarily come into contact," says Admiral Degouy in the Revue des Deux Mondes, "the point where lies the hinge of the two fronts of the west and the north. That is where, finally, that dangerous spell will be broken which chained the enormous naval power of the allied nations."

The solution of the enigma lies in the British offensive of which the German papers speak, the offensive which, if it succeeds, will free first Zeebrugge and then Antwerp.

ARIZONA KICKLETS

The Editor Turns to a New Task—Book Reviewing.

MORE SCORN THAN PRAISE.

He Is Especially Taken With the Romance of an Heiress With a Fancy For Suitors In Red Woolen Shirts—A Correspondent Dropped.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, [illegible], by Associated Literary Press.]

ACCORDING to our office scales, the book entitled "The Love of Theodore" weighs just twenty-four ounces. We can't find out that Theodore's love was anything to brag of, and the fact that he loved for thirteen long years before saying anything about it does not recommend him to our estimation. A young man who loves a girl so that he can't sleep nights and yet permits her to make artificial flowers for 30 cents a day and attempt suicide nine different times should be chained up to a Digger Indian. The book leaves her clasped to his bosom, but in spite of his long love he may have found some other excuse to stand her off. We can't conscientiously recommend the book.

SHOULD BE CHAINED UP

We can't say we admire the book entitled "Won by Chance." It's too much of a chance. Geraldine Hopkins gets lost in a forest twenty miles long by fifteen broad, and on the same day Reginald Schemerhorn has just escaped a cyclone, and Geraldine has been hanging over the brink of a precipice for two hours. We think it would have been better to have had the couple meet in a first class chop house and get acquainted through Geraldine finding that her watch had stopped or that she had left her purse at home.

In "Found at Last" the daughter of a millionaire has had forty offers of marriage. She knows that every one of the forty young men simply want her cash. She determines that whoever gets her shall get her through love, and she packs her trunk and goes west and pretends to be poor. She strikes a job teaching school at $6 a month and board, and after about six months along comes Popsy Harrison, a young man in a red woolen shirt, who is head boss in a sawmill. He says "Gosh hang it!" and "Gol durn it!" and he wipes his mouth on the tablecloth, but she discovers that he loves her for herself, and she gives him her heart and a stack of government bonds as big as a house. Things ought to always come out that way, and we hope the book will have a large sale.

We can't conscientiously recommend the book entitled "The Hatbox Mystery." A young man calls on a young girl and leaves his hatbox behind. She opens it, of course, and she finds a letter showing that he loves another and has put up a job to rob a bank. The girl sets out to thwart him and bring him to justice, and, after falling down a well, being blown up on a steamboat and run over by a trolley car, she discovers that the supposed villain is a millionaire in disguise and that the hatbox belongs to another man. There are too many adventures for a small box, and the girl doesn't even marry the millionaire after his innocence has been proved, and the hatbox dropped out of a third story window.

We wish it distinctly understood that Major Shortwell is no longer the Washington correspondent of the Kicker. We had great hopes of the major when he started out. He went away from here in a red shirt and buckskin leggings and cowboy hat, and we saw to it that he had two guns and bowie knife and lasso. His first two letters hit the boys plumb center, but then he began to fail and was a disappointment. We suspected the reason and began to investigate. It is with sorrow that we saw he went back on his crowd. We have convincing proofs that he hadn't been in Washington a month before he began to eat pie with a fork, wear white shirts and walk around in store clothes. It was inevitable that his style of writing should change, and two weeks ago it degenerated into such twaddle that we threw the copy into the wastebasket. We are done with the major.

JACKSON—FERGUSON.

A quiet wedding was solemnized on December 22 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Ferguson, Cobourg, when their daughter Lillian Margaret was married to Walter D. Jackson, B.S.A., of Carp, son of Mr. D. Jackson, Grimsby, by Rev. P. J. Jull, of Lakefield.

BRUMMELL—MULLIGAN.

A quiet but very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Mulligan at 2 o'clock this afternoon, when their daughter Ola Muriel was united in marriage to Alexander McKenzie Brummell of Loverna, Sask. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Robt. Pogue, the bride being assisted by her sister, Gladys, and the groom by Sergt W. I. Irvine, who has just returned from France. The bride looked very sweet in a coffee brown charmeuse dress with gold trimmings. The beautiful array of gifts received showed the high place the young couple occupied in the hearts of their many friends. The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome seal coat. The happy couple left on the 4 o'clock train, C.P.R., for Toronto and other places. On their return will stay a few weeks before leaving for their home in Loverna, Sask.

WILL CONSCRIPT ALL BRITISH

WHO ARE IN UNITED STATES OR SEND THEM BACK HOME.

New York, Dec. 27.—Plans for the conscription of British subjects in the United States were described here by Sir Frederick Edwin Smith, Attorney-General of Great Britain, who arrived in this country on a mission to lay the matter before the Government at Washington.

"Arrangements to have British subjects of military age returned to their country of origin unless they have already joined military forces voluntarily, have been made with virtually all of our allies," Sir Frederick said, "and we hope to make similar arrangements now for America."

Russ-Jews in England.

After three years of the war, he said, it was found there were thousands of Russian Jews in London who had not joined the English forces and would not return to Russia because they said they feared political persecution there. They were given the option, he said, of going back or ~~joining~~ the British forces and were forced to do one or the other, despite the agitations they started.

"In fact the British Government had no notice, for public opinion absolutely refused to allow the forcible withdrawal of Englishmen from their business while aliens of military age, in the homely phrase, 'hold their job,'" Sir Frederick said.

MAYOR DUNCAN'S THANKS

To the Electors of the City of Peterborough :

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

I desire to take this opportunity of tendering you my sincere thanks for the renewal of confidence which you have expressed in my election by acclamation as Mayor of the city for 1918.

I desire to repeat my promise to put forth every legitimate effort to safeguard the best interests of our city as your Mayor.

Being in touch with all the unfinished business that goes forward to the new Council of 1918 as perhaps no other member of the new Council will be, I strongly appeal to you to accord me all the assistance possible by a careful selection of the best men available for your Board of Aldermen.

There are many matters of great importance to the city's interests which are to be presented for the consideration of the Council of 1918, which will require the very best judgment of your civic representatives.

With assurances of your goodwill and gratitude for your many expressions of confidence during the past nine years I extend my sincere good wishes for a bright and happy New Year.

Yours faithfully,

GEO. H. DUNCAN.

LADIES HAVE CHARGE OF CANVASS FOR FUNDS TO EQUIP CLUB ROOMS

"The citizens should be liberal in their contributions towards furnishing the club rooms for the Great War Veterans Association," said a prominent citizen to The Review today. "It's a small amount, and it's the least we can do in our efforts to repay the boys for what they have done for us."

The following ladies will be in charge of the canvass which will start this week:

Mrs. Turner, Mrs. Browning, Mrs. Lillico, Mrs. Sharpe, Mrs. Devy, Mrs. Bugg, Mrs. Coleman, Mrs. Whitaker, Mrs. Hughes, Miss Robinson, Mrs. Knox, Mrs. Bartlett, Mrs. Grange, Mrs. Fessenden, Mrs. Jamieson, Mrs. Walmsley, Mrs. Rew, Mrs. Massey-Cook, Mrs. Torrance, Mrs. McIntosh, Mrs. Pollock, Mrs. Watt, Mrs. T. SUPPOSED DEAD FOR 27 YEARS

W. P. GIROUX'S FAMILY HAS RECEIVED LETTER FROM HIM AT LAST.

Twenty-seven years ago W. P. Giroux left this city after a residence of about ten years in Peterborough and so on after a report reached his friends that a man of that name had died in Montreal. Some of his relatives have mourned him as dead all these years while others refused to give up hope. One of the latter was his brother, Mr. George H. Giroux. Yesterday the latter received a letter from the long lost brother who is now located at Hibbing, Minnesota, and working for that State as fire warden.

Since leaving Peterborough Mr. Giroux married and raised a family but wife and children are dead now with the exception of a son who is in the American Navy.

JELLICOE OUT OF ADMIRALTY

IS REPLACED BY VICE-ADMIRAL WEMYSS AND MADE A PEER.

London, Dec. 27.—Vice-Admiral Sir Rosslyn Wemyss has been appointed First Sea Lord in succession to Admiral Sir John R. Jellicoe, according to an official announcement.

Admiral Jellicoe has been elevated to the peerage in recognition of his very distinguished services. The hope is expressed that his experience may be utilized later in another post.

Admiral Jellicoe, who had performed notable service in the British navy as commander of the Atlantic and home fleets and also as second sea lord, was made supreme commander of the home fleet at the outbreak of the war. In the summer following the Jutland battle he was appointed first sea lord, turning over command of the Grand Fleet to Vice-Admiral Sir David Beatty, who had commanded the British warships in their fight against the German. Jellicoe is 58 years of age.

Vice Admiral Wemyss became second sea lord in the present year. He won commendation for the part he took in the Jutland battle. Wemyss entered the navy in 1877 and was made a rear-admiral in 1912.

HAVE CHEERED MEN OVERSEAS

CANADIANS AT HOME RECEIVED MESSAGE FROM THE TRENCHES.

Canadian Army Headquarters, Dec. 27.—"To comrades and friends in support in Canada, this Christmas message is from the Canadian corps from every division, brigade, battalion and man. It is our deeply sincere wish for a year of future happiness and for our early reunion. We feel today that the race behind us is of such strength and magnitude that it will inspire each of us to greater deeds and will surely lead us to the goal of victory, peace and home."

Such is the message to the Dominion from its fighting men in France, while to the fighting men themselves, the corps commander has sent the following message:

"The corps commander has taken this opportunity of sending every officer, non-commissioned officer and man in the Canadian corps all good wishes for Christmas. He trusts that the coming year may bring with it the attainment of our great objective—victorious peace and a happy return to our near and dear ones in Canada. This is not a mere stereotyped wish. Behind it lies the deep appreciation of your splendid work which has been carried to such successful conclusions by every unit in the corps and also to a full recognition of the sacrifices that have been made, the difficulties overcome, the hardships endured and the high standard of discipline maintained. Your actions have made the name of your homeland one to be revered, respected and honored now and throughout the years to come."

MARRIED

TUCKER — LONSBERRY — At the Manse, Lakefield, on Dec. 26, by Rev. P. L. Jull, Maxwell Howard Tucker and Laura May Lonsberry, both of Dummer Township.

"THE LILAC DOMINO"

A Splendid Attraction for the Holiday.

That tuneful musical comedy success of fun, frolic and fashion, "The Lilac Domino," which delighted New York, Boston, Chicago and all the principal cities of America for long engagements, has been secured by the local management for a matinee and evening performance at "The Grand" New Year's Day, Tuesday, January 1.

The company, numbering over half a hundred, is guaranteed by the management to be the only and original company and the same identical organization that has appeared in the leading high-class theatres of the principal cities for extended engagements. The musical score is too difficult to be sung by inferior artists or played by any but the most talented musicians, and the cast contains the names of more high-salaried artists than have probably ever been heard or seen here at any one time. The entire massive scenic and electrical effects are carried and which were all built in London, England, at the Gaiety Theatre. "The Lilac Domino" is undoubtedly the most pronounced musical success on tour, and the few Canadian cities visited are extremely fortunate in securing this delightful musical success of all Europe and America. The seat sale opens Saturday next at 10 a.m.

Brantford Patriotic Fund officials demand either proof or retraction of Mayor Bowlby's statement that women in the city had been threatened during the recent election campaign with loss of their grant if they did not vote for W. F. Cockshutt, Unionist candidate.

GERMAN PAPERS OPPOSE PEACE

FOUR GERMAN SUBS CAPTURED WITHOUT FIGHT BY AMERICANS

Boston Newspaper Man Brings Story From French Port—Crew of Another Sub Meeting and Surrender to United States Seamen.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Boston, Dec. 29. — Four German submarines were captured recently by twelve American destroyers, according to an American seaman who has reached his home here from a French port. The seaman, a former Boston newspaper man, was aboard the troopship at the French port recently, he said, when the destroyers, all flying the Stars and Stripes, steamed in with their prizes. The submersibles were lying upon the surface of the ocean with their conning towers open, during the process of recharging their batteries, when the American destroyers swept down upon them and took them prisoner without a fight.

While the transport was still at the French port, the seaman said, a German boat entered the harbor with a white flag flying from her periscope. The enemy crew explained that they had been lying in wait for a troopship in the open sea, and that when they failed to find her and supplies ran low the crew mutinied, killed the commander and decided to surrender.

Roumanian King Lays Down Sceptre

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Dec. 29.— King Ferdinand has abdicated the Roumanian throne in favor of Crown Prince Charles, according to persistent rumors in Petrograd. Official confirmation, however, is lacking.

A daring attempt at robbery of the Royal Bank at Dundas was frustrated by a constable.

Huns Hold 46,712 British Prisoners

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Dec. 15 (by mail—British prisoners held by the enemy, including those in Switzerland, total 46,712, according to an official announcement.

With the calling up of the first draft next Thursday stringent measures will be taken against men who have failed to register under the Military Service Act.

Denmark was declared to be strongly in favor of the Allies.

CHEER UP IT'S 48 DEGREES BELOW AT WHITE RIVER; IS ONLY 27 BELOW HERE

The Cold Wave Will Linger in Ontario Over Sunday.

Twenty-seven degrees below zero was the official record this morning for Peterborough. This is the lowest figure since Dec. 26, 1914, and is two degrees lower than Sunday morning two weeks ago. Lowest temperature yesterday, 17 below zero, and the highest 10 degrees below at the noon hour.—W .P.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Dec. 29. — All Canada, from the Rockies to the Atlantic, is in the grip of exceptionally severe zero weather today. Calgary, which yesterday reported 10 degrees below zero, was a bit warmer this morning at 8 a.m. when the mercury stood at four above. The weather man reports a cold wave moving east, but it will likely linger around Ontario and Quebec over Sunday. Winnipeg and Cobalt each reported temperatures of 32 below zero this morning, and White River, Ont., which rejoices in its reputation as the coldest spot in American civilisation, was 48 below. Quebec Province reported a temperature of 30 below, while Ontario temperatures varied from 16 below in Toronto to 22 below in Kingston. In the Maritime Provinces, St. John, N. B., reported 14 below at 8 a.m., but suffering Halifax was being mercifully spared the extreme cold weather at that hour when the temperature was reported at 12 above.

Paris, Dec. 29.—The ten billion francs asked for in the third war loan has been exceeded, according to a statement made in the Chamber of Deputies today by M. Klotz, the Minister of Finance.

M. Klotz said that the returns for the loan were still incomplete, but that the subscriptions, not including those from abroad, aggregated 10,276,000,000 francs.

GERMAN PAPERS UNITE IN CONDEMNATION OF PEACE TERMS OF THE CENTRAL POWERS

Say Everything so Far Fought for is Lost—Entente Nations Have Won Greatest Victory of War.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Amsterdam, Dec. 29. — Pan-German newspapers angrily condemn the peace terms of the Central Powers.

The Taglische Rundschau of Berlin says: "Never before have we given up so completely everything we so dearly bought with the blood of hundreds of thousands, with the sweat of millions, with the deprivations of our children, with our own hunger."

The Deutsche Zeitung says the Entente has won the greatest victory of the war and that the diplomats have destroyed all that has been fought for.

The Koelnishe Zeitung on the other hand regards the conditions as opening the road to peace advantageous to all sides.

The Lokal Anzeiger thinks the German answer to Russia will not be much to the taste of people with military leanings, but adds: "The outlines, however, are drawn wide enough to give scope for the demands of justice. Definite judgment upon the peace work at Brest-Litovsk depends on how far this possibility is utilized in later negotiations."

BERLIN CLAIMS FRESH SUCCESS

SAYS ITALIAN ATTACK YESTERDAY BROKE DOWN UNDER FIRE.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, Dec. 29.—An Italian attack against the Austro-German position on the heights east of Monte Tomba broke down yesterday under the fire of the Teutons, it was announced officially today by the German war office, as follows: "Italian Front—An Italian attack against the heights east of Monte Tomba broke down under our fire."

TO THE CENTRE WARD ELECTORS

Although nominated to succeed myself as alderman in the Centre Ward, a position which I have held for the past four years, I have not canvassed a single elector, preferring to leave the matter to the judgment of the people. I will take this opportunity of submitting several reasons why I feel myself justified in asking for the votes of the electors in the election Tuesday. In the first place, I am a resident of the ward in which I seek election.

I have been chairman of the Finance Committee, the most important in the Council, for the past three years. I believe I have warrant for saying that I understand the financial affairs of Peterborough better than any member of the Council, present or prospective.

During the next two years the city will be called upon to lay out nearly half a million dollars over and above the ordinary expenditures, on the high level bridge and the sewage disposal plant. If ever care was necessary in the handling of municipal money matters, it will be during the period for which the new aldermen are being elected.

I am one of the largest ratepayers in the city, and as such should be entitled to confidence that I will combine progress and economy in all matters of public interest.

My record as Finance Minister is before you. I have always striven to save the people's money, and that will continue to be my policy if you honor me with a renewal of your confidence.

PENALTIES FOR DRAFTEES ABSENT WITHOUT LEAVE

Five Groups of Those Who Fail to Report and The Punishments For Each

Ottawa, Dec. 29.—With the calling up of the first draft next week strong measures will be taken against men who have failed to register under the Military Service Act. "Announcement of a reward to any civil police or peace officer for the apprehension and delivery into military custody of a deserter or absentee without leave," is the forerunner of further steps to ensure that all members of Class 1 comply with the law.

Instructions for dealing with deserters and absentees without leave have been issued, and the general policy determined. Generally speaking, there are five different groups of men who, from a military point of view, may be dealt with as absentees without leave. The groups and the penalties to which the men in each case are liable are as follows:

1. Men who have failed to comply with the proclamation calling out Class 1—Liable for any term of imprisonment not exceeding five years with hard labor.

2. Men who, having reported or claimed exemption under the Military Service Act, have failed to attend for medical examination when ordered to do so — Punishable by civil magistrates by a fine not exceeding $200, and not less than $25, and by not more than three months' imprisonment. If not fined, punishable by military law as absentees without leave, or deserters.

3. Men who, having been ordered to report for duty, fail to do so — Punishable in the same way as absentees of group 4, if, before they were required to report for duty, they were taken on the strength of the C. E. F., otherwise, punishable by military law.

4. Men who, having been taken on the strength of a unit of the C. E. F. or of the active militia as volunteers, or as drafted men, and either before or after the issue of the proclamation under the Military Service Act, or the passing of that are now, or hereafter become, ist without leave—Punishable shown. The ates by two years' vet and are trimmed nsent of velvet figures the General Officer Commanding the district in which the prosecution is brought, or by military law.

5. Men who, having been granted leave of absence without pay, cease or fail to comply with the conditions upon which their leave was granted —Punishable in the same way as men in group 4.

Men in all the five groups mentioned, it is pointed out, are alike, in that they are all soldiers absent without leave and subject to military as well as civil arrest for their absence.

REINFORCE GALLANT 21ST

It is quite probable that many of the Peterborough draftees will go to France to reinforce the 21st Battalion, which has given such a good account of itself in the great war.

The draftees from this county will report at Kingston on Jan. 3rd. The drafted men will be used entirely as reinforcements. They will be trained for several months in Canada, and will complete their training in England.

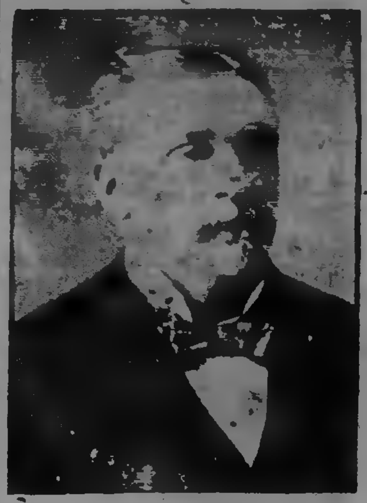
AUBURN MILLS STAFF PRESENTS MR. JAS. KENDRY WITH GOLD WATCH

Pleasant Affair Marks Happy Relations Between Employer and His Force of Workers.



MR. JAMES KENDRY

Who last night was presented with a solid gold watch by his employes at the Auburn Woolen Mills.

When the motors that drive the machinery in the Auburn Woolen Mills closed down at 5:30 last night the three hundred or more employes from the youngest to the oldest gathered in the yarn room, and Mr. James Kendry, president of the company, was brought in. Mr. Walter Anderson, overseer of the picking department, who has been with the company for 45 years, then stepped forward and read a complimentary address expressive of the friendly feeling which the members of the working force held for Mr. Kendry.

Mr. Wm. Hartley, another veteran in point of service, who is now head of a department with a record of 43 years to his credit, presented Mr. Kendry with a solid gold watch. Mr. Kendry was taken completely by surprise, but made a feeling response to the appreciation of his employes.

The pleasant affair of last night is only another evidence of the happy relations that bind the employers and the working force together at the Auburn Mills. Twice during the past year wages have been raised without any solicitation on the part of those interested. Last spring a parcel of land was set aside for the use of the married employes, who raised vegetables sufficient to carry them and their families through the winter. Last night marked another happy occasion and indicates the sentiments of the workers for Mr. Kendry, who has been with the company altogether for 45 years, and who for 40 years of that time has been a member of the firm, working up to his present position as president

The Address.

The address was as follows:

Dear Mr. Kendry:

On the eve of a new year and your departure for the Sunny South, we have gathered together to extend our sincerest good wishes showing our appreciation of your many kindnesses and your consideration during the long years of office as president of the Auburn Woolen Co. Ltd.

Life is as a rainbow web in whose making each one has a part to play. Time with its opportunities for good or ill, sorts out each act of strong or weak endeavor, the spinner spins the rope of years into the warp of life. The weaver, in his busy round, fills in the golden ambitions, ties up the broken threads and views with pride his work performed—the inheritance of the loom.

To have devoted a life time of service, to have reached the reward of your endeavors and to have woven into the fabric an honorable record—this has been your recompense.

We find no more fitting time to recite our feelings and would ask you to accept this remembrance as a token of our good will and of the goodfellowship existing, and may it long mark out for you hours, and days, and years of happiness, health and prosperity, and may you return restored in health, and ready to take up once more the work to which you are so devotedly bound.

Signed on behalf of the employes of the Auburn Woolen Co. Ltd.

Two Airships Are Wrecked in North Sea

(Canadian Press Despatch)

MINISTERS AND VISITORS FOR RELIGIOUS CENSUS

The ministers and those who are to assist in the religious census which is to be taken next Friday, are asked to take special notice of the place from which the different chairmen will work. A number of visitors is being assigned to each chairman. The chairman will have an office and all who assist are asked to meet him promptly at two o'clock, or even a few minutes before two. He will the assign the work to each set of visitors who are to go forth two by two.

District 1—Mr. W. G. Read, Headquarters St. Andrew's Sunday School.

District 2—Mr. Wm. Madill, Headquarters Y.M.C.A.

District 3—Mr. R. C. Braund, Headquarters Knox Church.

District 4—Mr. A. J. Johnston, Headquarters Nugent's Drug Store, 386 George street.

District 5— Mr. John Spear, Headquarters Mark St. Church.

A meeting of all visitors and workers will be held in Charlotte Street Sunday School, corner of Reid and Charlotte streets, on Thursday evening at eight o'clock. This meeting will be addressed by Mr. Halpenny of Toronto who will give full instructions to the visitors. It is very necessary that the visitors be present at this meeting if at all possible.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 29, 1917

MORE ARMCHAIR FARMING.

MR. R. [illegible] HALL has shot his bolt and his bomb has [illegible] in the atmosphere, working no damage except to himself and—to the newspaper which accorded him its support, joining in the fusilade against the Union Government, a fusilade every shot in which proved a boomerang. Mr. Hall in his campaign made much of production. There was nothing original in this except perhaps as to details. There was more farming from the vantage point of an armchair, and the farmers of Canada were pelted with further advice as to the management of their business.

Mr. Hall and his journalistic support die hard. They still seem to share the opinion that the nearly six thousand voters who failed to be impressed by their teachings made the mistake of their several lives. Mr. Hall was right in his production talk so far as he went. Let him persevere in it now with the same energy and ability which he exercised in the recruiting campaigns earlier in the war, and he may yet render his country a real service.

It is unfortunate, however, that a profession as old and important as that of the farmer cannot be preserved from the suggestions of ambitious but misinformed amateurs. Mr. Hall, it seems, wrote a letter to the Globe, dealing with his favorite theme, and that journal at once fell in with his proposition. This bad special reference to the matter of breaking up the uncultivated land in the West next spring and seeding the new acreage to oats. Here both the Globe and Mr. Hall get their heads together and indulge in that pleasing occupation of counting their chickens even before the eggs are secured. The oats that they are going to produce next year will permit the doubling of the live stock in Canada, particularly hogs, and these days "pigs is pigs," and will provide millions of tons of food for the people and for the live stock of Great Britain.

What could sound better on paper? But it is for the farmer of the West to laugh, that is provided he is able to take a joke. Any man who has spent a year in the Prairie Provinces knows that the only crop that can be raised there on virgin soil is flax. Let any new farmer on the prairie follow the advice of Mr. Hall and the Globe, and he will have a reason for every dollar he invests to regret his departure from the lessons taught by the experience of others.

The farmers of Canada are suffering from an oversupply of amateurish advice. What they really need is more man-power. It is idle to talk of investing in new and up-to-date machiney while no men can be secured to operate a machine. The armchair farmer tells us that agricultural implements can be worked by women and children. This is another of their delusions. For example, a tractor plow brought to this neighborhood last spring stood idle for days lacking an expert to run it.

The farmers of Canada are an intelligent class of men who understand their business and who can make the most of their opportunities. They can be depended upon to know where to raise oats or any other kind of grain. They will no more attempt to raise crops where neither soil nor other conditions are favorable than they would undertake to produce tropical fruits in a temperature that was at the freezing point six months in the year.

The Globe has for some time abandoned its pet scheme to raise cattle for the butcher on the wild lands of New Ontario. It was laughed out of that theory. The wild grasses of the north are not suitable for the purpose, the winter season is too long, and the black flies and other pestiferous insects in the summer time would fret the stock into semi-madness and complete emaciation. But oats, again, is another proposition.

SOLDIERS AND CONSCRIPTION.

ACCORDING to the despatches, the majority of the soldiers in the Australian army have voted against conscription. This may be accounted for on the ground that the soldiers have concluded that with twenty per cent. of the population under arms their native country has done as much as can reasonably be expected of it, and that the burden of defence should be more evenly distributed. There may be political and other domestic reasons, too, which are not revealed in the reports that reach the outside world. At all events, the matter is one which causes surprise in every allied nation in the world.

When Mayor Mitchell was a candidate for re-election in New York he was recognized as the friend of the soldier, and the supporter of the nation's war policy as announced by President Wilson. His opponent was branded as a pro-German and a pacifist. Yet Mayor Mitchell was not only defeated, but received only twenty-one per cent. of the votes cast by the American soldiers. Here is something again that appears inexplicable.

It may be that it is pure unselfishness, the highest of all human motives, that induces a soldier at the front or with the prospect of military service ahead of him, to vote against forcing others into the same life, when the opportunity to do so is given him. There is the highest of all precedents, an illustrious scriptural parallel for such a line of conduct.

Dives and Lazarus filled their allotted spheres in life, the one reveling in wealth, the other dependent on charity and receiving no compassion except from the vagrant curs of the street. Both died in the natural order of events. It was the costly sarcophagus for one, a narrow bed in the potter's field for the other.

According to one of the most striking of all the parables by which great truths were impressed upon the wondering disciples, Dives, being in torment as the result of his life on earth, saw the man who had begged at his gates, resting with the saints. The former rich man prayed for a drop of water, but prayed in vain. It was then that he showed himself possessed of sentiments that were a credit to any mortal. He asked that Lazarus be sent back to earth to warn his five brothers, living no doubt the life he himself had led, to mend their ways that they might escape his fate. The man who thinks of others while suffering himself cannot be wholly bad. That solicitude of Dives for his relatives is the one redeeming trait in his character and is the most touching feature of the story.

The man living in the hell of war may be anxious to do nothing that would force others into the same condition. But there is a difference in the two cases. The relatives of Lazarus, coming to the same place as himself, could only hopelessly suffer with him. The soldier joining his fellowmen in the trenches can help to avert a disaster that threatens the world, even if it entails privation that another would have spared him.

"REFORM" IN PRUSSIA.

DETAILS of the Prussian suffrage reform bill have been received in this country at last, and some of them are decidedly significant. The Kaiser, as king of Prussia, repeatedly has promised genuine reform of that notorious suffrage system which even Bismarck in his day was frank enough to characterize as the worst in Europe. The changes proposed in the bill that Chancellor von Hertling, in obedience to the Kaiser's rescript, has laid before the Prussian diet are a fair test of the present sentiments respecting popular rule among the dominant class in the state that controls the German Empire.

So far as the lower house of the diet is concerned, direct, equal and secret suffrage is provided for in the measure. This is a fairly substantial concession to the democratic spirit. There is, however, one illiberal feature even in these provisions. No Prussian subject is to have the vote until he completes his twenty-fifth year. Evidently the junker caste is suspicious of youth and its enthusiasms, which often include devotion to progressive ideas.

It is the upper house of the Prussian diet that is to be relied upon by the junkers and the privileged classes generally to thwart and defeat democratic legislation. The maximum number of members, apart from princes of the house of Hohenzollern, who are to be appointed for life by the king, is fixed at 510. Sixty members are to be appointed by nomination from representatives of former imperial houses, of princes, counts, barons, and other hereditary nobles. One hundred and fifty members are to be appointed for life by the king from those who "enjoy special royal confidence."

It is easy to see that the nominated representatives of cities and towns, of agriculture, industry and the handicrafts, of the universities and the churches, will find themselves opposed by a solid array of royal appointees and hereditary lords.

The upper house will have the power to veto any bill and any appropriation.

There is nothing democratic or progressive about the changes proposed for the upper house. It will remain, and is designed to remain, a bulwark of caste and privilege. Prussians of liberal tendencies will be easily fooled if they are content to accept this sham measure of so-called reform.

COST OF LIVING IN ENGLAND.

IN SPITE OF ALL government control, the cost of living in England has gone up one hundred and six per cent. since the beginning of the war. This beats the record in Canada, that is when the increase in the general price of commodities is taken into consideration.

In no country engaged in the war has the increase in living expenses been so low as in Canada, with the possible exception of the United States, which has not been long enough in the war to be affected in the same degree as the others. In no country as in Canada has the complaint against these conditions been so vehement and so general. The reason for this is that political bias in this country has worked public judgment out of all normal shape. Everything possible is seized upon by the party in opposition to use as a weapon against the Government. In war time, especially in a war that has already lasted over three years, and in which the number of men involved is reckoned by the millions, a rise in prices is to be expected. The food controller and the fuel controller have demonstrated to the satisfaction of all unprejudiced persons that this is a matter over which the Administration has little or no jurisdiction. Prices may be regulated provided a start is made at the base and the work carried upward. If a pro rate reduction is made, the matter practically ends just where it started. The workman, for example, getting two dollars a day, when bread is five cents a loaf and other living expenses in proportion, is as well off as the man receiving twice as much and paying twice as much for household expenses.

It has been claimed that food prices have been regulated in some places in England. It is a different proposition over there, where it is not necessary to take into account the cost of production. The bulk of the food there is imported, and the original cost to the dealer is easily ascertained. It is no difficult task for a government official to fix the spread between the buying and selling prices, just as the controllers have done in this country wherever possible.

Expensive living is one of the misfortunes that inevitably follow in the wake of war. After all, it is one of the least of the misfortunes, a trivial matter when compared with the loss of life and destruction of property, one a loss that can never be replaced, another that is possible of reparation only after years of suffering and effort. Of all war evils, the excessive cost of living is the one which will right itself first and automatically when peace is restored.

BECAUSE Mr. Hall succeeded in raising a bumper crop of political whirlwind for himself and party is no reason to conclude that he could make a success of raising oats on virgin soil in the West.

WHEN IRISH AND GERMANS MEET

Policeman Henry O'Brien passed his life on the bounding ocean before he joined the force, and to him the world outside of the United States is peopled only by Dagoes, Scandinoovians and Dutchmen. He has heard college bred cops distinguish between the subdivisions of the Latin and make subdistinctions of the Teuton and draw shades of differences between the Norse, but to him there exist only the main stems; especially that the Dutch are Germans.

He dashed from the West Sixty-eighth street station with a glad cry yesterday when the Lieutenant hung up the telephone and told him that a group of German sailors were making the neighborhood of Riverside Drive and Seventy-ninth street raucous with "Die Wacht am Rhein" and "Deutschland Ueber Alles," were trampling on the American flag and threatening women and children. On the basis that one cop of Irish descent is a match for a full cargo of German seamen O'Brien foresaw no difficulty in surrounding the Germans and hauling them to the coop.

At the place designated he found William Holl, Peter Van Dyk Beages, Gerandos Alsosos, Mothy Beagenberg and Jacobus Hock, giving a perfect imitation of five sailors ashore and making the vicinity throb with melody. They massed in close formation when they saw him coming along and elected Alsosos as their spokesman.

Alsosos said as coherently as he could that whereas it was undeniable that they had partaken of schnapps it was untrue that they were Germans, but on the contrary were Holland Dutch and on shore leave for the day from the Dutch steamship Texal lying at midstream in the adjacent Hudson.

O'Brien enunciated as final the proposition that the Dutch are Germans and hence all Dutchmen are subjects of the Kaiser. Having induced Gerandos Alsosos to repeat his name and having announced that there was a syllable too many on each end of it and that nobody but a German spy would endeavor to secrete himself behind a name as obviously untrue to life as that, O'Brien took the five singing sailormen to the station house and charged them with making a hostile demonstration.

O'Brien's skipper, himself not free from the suspicion that between Dutchmen and Germans the distinction may be too purely academic for police purposes, put the men in storage for ultimate disposition by a Magistrate.

EDITOR'S MAIL

A DESIRABLE CANDIDATE.

Editor Review: It is with pleasure I noticed "Observer's" endorsation in your valued paper on Thursday of Mr. J. M. Greene's candidature for member of the Board of Education. Mr. Greene is a comparatively young man who, starting with but a few dollars, has built up a very large business with branches at Lindsay, Kingston, Belleville and Madoc. It is such men as he—successful and prosperous in his own personal undertakings—in whom should be vested the care and conduct'on of so important a branch of his community's life as that under the Board of Education's control. The retiring members of this board are all men whose successful business acumen was appreciately applied in the interests of education, and if their good public work is to be continued it is necessary that their successors shall be of at least equal capable calibre. For this reason I trust that one of our school trustees for 1918 will be Mr. J. M. Greene, an energetic enterprising young citizen, whose integrity and character stands beyond question, and who, if elected will unselfishly devote whatever time is necessary to further the interests of Peterborough's educational needs.

Wit and Wisdom

An Amateur's Disappointment.

Mrs. Simpleton, having been a business girl, was a bit worried over the intricacies of housekeeping.

"I'm having such trouble keeping our food," she confided to her bosom friend. "I bought a real nice looking refrigerator, but it doesn't seem to work well at all."

"Do you keep ice enough in it?"

"Ice!" gasped Mrs. Simpleton. "Ice! I hope you don't think, after spending all that money on a refrigerator, we'd go to the additional expense of buying ice!"

Prepared for the Worst.

"Will you lend me $5?"

"Yes. Here it is. Good-bye and good luck."

"But why shake hands in this formal way?"

"I may not see you again for a long time."

"Hi, Bill! Here comes a gas wave!"

"Thank heavens! This toothache's almost killin' me."

THE BIBLE IN SLANG.

Billy Sunday's first literary venture is "Love Stories of the Bible" (G. P. Putnam's, Sons). If the reader has listened to any of Mr. Sunday's so-called "picturesque eloquence" he will have some light thrown on the style of the evangelist's book, which is nothing if not sprightly. Here, for example, are the opening paragraphs of Jacob and Rachel's story:

"It was a case for a quick getaway.

"Young Jacob was caught with the goods, and he had to beat it.

"I imagine he squeezed through the cellar window, and reached down for the suitcase that his mother, Rebecca, pushed up to him.

"The boy pulled the suitcase after him and for a moment stood listening.

" 'All serene—so far,' he whispered. 'Now for the tall timbers!'

"His brother, Esau, who had sworn to kill him, was evidently still down at the railroad station with his gang, expecting him to try to take the midnight train out of town.

"The house was as quiet as the night before Christmas. Even the cat had hit the hay."

The book will prove valuable to those who will never get their Bible save by the motion picture route.

POST OFFICE IS ROBBED OF CASH

A daring burglary took place about 7 o'clock last evening at Campbellcroft. The post office is situated in Mr. P. C. Hanna's store, and last evening two men called to purchase boots. Not being suited with any of the downstairs stock, the clerk took his customer to the second floor. While they were inspecting the stock upstairs the other gent rifled the post office till and made away with $150 in cash. The matter has been placed in the hands of the police at Millbrook and an arrest is expected shortly. Mr. Hanna was not in the store at the time.—Port Hope Guide.

TEN MILLION YEARS AGO IN CANADA

(1) Prof. Walcott, discoverer of the Fossil Beds at Field, B.C.
(2) Climbing into the undiscovered past.

PROF. CHARLES D. WALCOTT, of the Smithsonian Institute, has discovered a deposit of extremely valuable fossils of early marine life on Mount Field, overlooking Emerald Lake Chalet and the beautiful Yoho Valley in the Canadian Pacific Rockies. Far up over Burgess Pass, at an altitude of nine thousand feet, where the tourists in the fashionable summer hotels and camps can barely hear the boom of the blast as he quarries down to the fossil bearing shale, the professor has been securing some wonderful specimens of sea life of over ten million years ago. These are of the period when life was just emerging from the jelly-fish stage into an era where a bony structure was becoming apparent. Dying, they were deposited in the mud of the ocean bottom that has since hardened into rock, and been raised to the snow-covered mountain top.

The strata of fossil-bearing rock discovered by Professor Walcott is of much earlier age than any in the surrounding mountains, and has, he says, been pushed up over the newer formations for a distance over twenty-five miles.

The fossils were discovered by Prof. Walcott while travelling over Burgess Pass, a peculiar formation of a piece of shale attracting his attention. He followed up the shale slide almost to the top of Mount Field, and finally located its source, far above the timber line. The workings are very peculiar, because of their height, and are probably the only ones of their kind in the world. Some of the specimens taken out are so perfect that Prof. Walcott has been able to determine what they ate just before they were buried in the mud over ten million years ago.

BOWSER'S CARDS.

They'd Have Won but For the Tactics of Mrs. B.

TRICKERY ON EVERY HAND.

Mr. Bowser Is Amazed, Then Indignant, as He Realizes How He Has Been Swindled Out of His Hard Earned Money by the Wife of His Bosom.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, by Associated Literary Press.]

NO one had stepped on Mr. Bowser's feet all day.

He found a seat in the car going home.

No one had found fault with his legs stretched across the aisle.

There were no stray hogs in the front yard as he reached the house.

Mr. Bowser ascended the steps with a feeling that it was good to be alive and to have a wife and a cat to come home to. When Mrs. Bowser met him in the hall and announced that the new cook was incompetent and the dinner was spoiled he simply said:

"Well, we won't worry about that. I guess you can scrape enough together to make some sort of a meal."

In a Suspiciously Amiable Mood.

There was plenty of occasion to find fault, but he ate what was set before him and continued to smile. When Mrs. Bowser told him that he must order a ton of range coal in the morning he did not charge her with selling half the last ton to buy caramels, and when he saw the gas bill for the last month he actually complimented her on keeping down the family expenses. As they reached the sitting room he found a hairpin on the floor, but he had nothing to say about reckless extravagance and the poorhouse, and when she told him that the clock had stopped for want of cleaning he beamed on her instead of asking whether she had punched it with a crowbar or battered it with an ax. Mrs. Bowser looked upon these signs as ominous. In hopes of averting a calamity she suggested a call on a neighbor.

"Not this evening, my dear," he remonstrated. "I wish to remain at home and take solid comfort. All the way home I was saying to myself that I had the nicest wife and the pleasantest home in the world."

"That was good of you," she replied, delighted at the compliment and forgetting her fears for a moment.

"Yes; the nicest wife and the pleasantest home, and I want you to understand that both are thoroughly appreciated. If all men were as well off as I am there would be very little in this world to complain of."

Too Good to Be True.

Mrs. Bowser murmured her gratification, and the family cat came downstairs and rubbed against Mr. Bowser's legs and said to herself that there'd be an explosion in that house before the evening was over. There was silence for two or three minutes, and then Mr. Bowser said:

"If you know how to play poker we'll run into Green's some evening. He says they have a little party there almost every night. It's just a neighborly game, you know, with a penny ante and a two cent limit, but still one ought to know a little something about poker to take a hand in it. Hasn't it ever occurred to you to learn?"

"Why, I played poker with you one evening," she replied, with sinking heart.

"Did, eh? I don't recall it."

"And you got mad because I won."

"I don't see how you could have won unless I dropped to sleep. But we'll let that go. I only hope you win this time. Where are the cards?"

"I think I would rather wait until some other evening. You haven't read the paper yet."

"Never mind the paper, and it will be no trouble to explain things to you. Draw up your chair, and I'll take the first deal."

Mrs. Bowser looked at the cat and sighed, and the cat looked at her and shook her head in a pitying way.

Cheek or Ignorance.

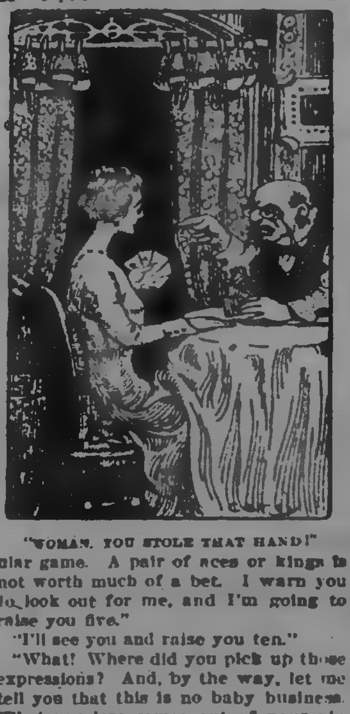
"There's your hand," continued Mr. Bowser, "and if you don't want to stand pat, as they call it, you can discard and draw. If you have a pair retain them. What do you do?"

"I—I think I'll stand pat."

"Oh, you will? That's either cheek or ignorance, of course, but we'll see. What's your bet?"

"I should like to bet as much as $5."

"Five dollars! Why, woman, you'd be scooped blind in two hands in a regular game. A pair of aces or kings is not worth much of a bet. I warn you to look out for me, and I'm going to raise you five."



"WOMAN, YOU STOLE THAT HAND!"

"I'll see you and raise you ten."

"What! Where did you pick up those expressions? And, by the way, let me tell you that this is no baby business. What you lose comes out of your pin money on Saturday. If I lose I'll pay at once. That's the only way to learn how to play poker. Do you want to take it all back and bet 10 cents?"

"I think I would rather bet $10."

"All right. That's two weeks' pin money. I'll call your hand."

Mr. Bowser laid down two big pairs, with a sugary smile, and was going to ask if she had ever heard of bluff when she showed a flush of hearts and held out her hand for the money.

"How—how did you get any such hand?" he demanded as his face grew red and he regarded her with deep distrust.

"You dealt it to me. When I stood pat you ought to have known that I had a good hand."

"But how did I know you knew anything about pat hands? It was all an accident, however, and it won't happen again. Deal away."

High Expectations.

This time Mr. Bowser got a pair of aces to draw to, and Mrs. Bowser got only queen high. He got a small pair with his three cards, and she had the luck to draw two more queens. He was determined to crush her at a blow, and he said:

"No baby business, now. I'll bet $10 on this hand."

"I'll raise you five," she calmly said.

"But how can you?" he shouted. "You only held up one card."

"I know it, but I'll raise your bet just the same."

"You will, eh? Well, I'll see the raise and call your hand, and if you ain't the sickest woman in this town"—

But Mrs. Bowser maintained her health. When he laid down two pairs she laid down threes, and his chin was shaking as he exclaimed:

"There's trickery here somewhere, but I'll soon get on to it. No human being ever held two such hands running. Give me the deal."

Wonderful luck attended Mrs. Bowser's hands. On the third deal she got a straight, while Mr. Bowser got threes. When she announced that she'd stand pat again he looked at her for a minute and made up his mind that she had heard of "bluffs" somewhere and was trying it on him. He didn't better his hand, but he thought threes good enough to see her bet of $5 and raise her $10. She came back at him, and there was supposed to be $50 in the pot when he got scared and called.

"Woman, you—you stole that hand!" he shouted as soon as he could find his breath.

"But how could I?" she protested.

"You stole 'em all and have swindled your own husband. Think of it. I sit down here to give you a few pointers, and you deliberately go at it to defraud me."

"Mr. Bowser, you know it was fair. You had two deals to my one. You owe me"—

An Outrageous State of Affairs.

"Not a cent—not a red cent! I have not only been robbed by my own wife in my own house, but my evening has been turned into a hollow mockery. Woman, you can sit with your conscience, and I will go down to the club. They may rob me there, but they will not grieve my soul."

She began to protest and entreat, but he hustled down the hall for his hat and bounced outdoors. Five minutes before, but unknown to the players, three dogs had chased a cat into the open vestibule, where she turned at bay and defied them. They were standing on the steps, waving their tails and showing their teeth, and the cat had her back up and her claws ready when Mr. Bowser walked out on the quartet. His advent precipitated a climax. His yell of surprise was answered by a screech from the cat and a growl from each canine, and by the time Mrs. Bowser reached the door he was lying on the sidewalk and the cat and dogs were leaping over him as they fought. The Bowser cat ran down and took a hand, and it was not until a policeman came up and used his club that a rescue was effected. Then Mr. Bowser crawled up the steps and tottered into the hall, and as he leaned against the wall for support and panted for breath he managed to say:

"It only needed this! Robber of her husband and would be assassin—tomorrow—tomorrow!"

SEVEN YEARS TORTURE
Nothing Helped Him Until He Took "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

ALBERT VARNER
Buckingham, Que., May 3rd, 1915.
For seven years, I suffered terribly from Severe Headaches and Indigestion. I had belching gas from the stomach, bitter stuff would come up into my mouth after eating, while at times I had nausea and vomiting, and had chronic Constipation. I went to several doctors and wrote to a specialist in Boston but without benefit. I tried many remedies but nothing did me good. Finally, a friend advised "Fruit-a-tives". I took this grand fruit medicine and it made me well. I am grateful to "Fruit-a-tives", and to everyone who has miserable health with Constipation and Indigestion and Bad Stomach, I say take "Fruit-a-tives", and you will get well".

Turning the Tables.

Mrs. Exe—You take an awful long time to dress to go anywhere. Doesn't your husband get angry waiting so long?

Mrs. Wye—Why, no. You see, when he calls up to me to hurry I tell him to get his hat and cane and I will be right down.

"Well?"

"Oh, I've previously hidden them, and when I go down and find them for him he has to apologize for keeping me waiting."—Boston Transcript.

WHITE VELVET HATS SHOWN

Visit to Exclusive Shops Reveals Some Interesting Things, Says Millinery Bulletin.

White hats of panne velvet, also of beaver, are now being shown for fall wear, according to the bulletin of the Retail Millinery Association of America. The bulletin goes on:

"Velvet hats of the better class continue in favor in soft effects in small shapes. Hats trimmed or combined with fur are good. The better grades of hatters' plush hats also are in demand, principally in straight sailor effects with soft crowns. Black and brown are the favorite colors.

"A visit to the exclusive Fifth avenue shops reveals some new and interesting things. Among the things displayed are satin antique dress hats, combined with velvet, in large shapes, some with high-turned backs. Some high side effects, or old-fashioned pokes, are also seen. Crowns are both high and low, soft or draped. The trimming consists of paradise, goura, chous of antique satin and burnt effects. Hats of chiffon velvet of a cubist pattern are among the novelties shown. They are combined with velvet and are trimmed with fur and velvet figures.

SCHOOL HEADACHES

A Physician's Advice to Mothers—Exercise and Good Food Essential

The headache is the bugbear of the girl at school!

There are several reasons for this schoolgirl complaint. They are so simple and so easily remedied that we wonder, when attention is called to them, that we have not thought and acted before. One of the commonest causes is shortsightedness. An equally common one is farsightedness! Tight corsets, late lunches, continuous reading without the proper counterbalance of outdoor exercise are also first aids.

Headaches are always more frequent among girls who think a great deal and have a highly nervous temperament than among the girls who treat life lightly and do not worry. The very active girl who gets plenty of exercise is usually free from them.

There are two well-known types of schoolgirl headache. The first and most common one, perhaps, is the indigestion headache. Its chief causes are insufficient or unsuitable foods, the candy and pastry habit and indolence. The cure for this is plain, wholesome food at regular times and proper exercise in the open long enough to offset the hours of study and confinement in the schoolroom.

The second type of headache is the "sick" headache.

It gets this name from the fact that it is accompanied with a constant nausea or sickness at the stomach. With the schoolgirl, this headache often begins in the morning as soon as she wakes from a heavy sleep. She feels an intense pain in the temples, which sometimes extends to one eye. The hands and feet feel clammy.

The remedy is a gentle emetic, which will cause vomiting without too much strain. Then give the stomach a good rest and the headache will pass off naturally.

To sum it up, the schoolgirl with the headache is very often the girl whose diet is not plain enough or whose supply of exercise and fresh air is lacking.

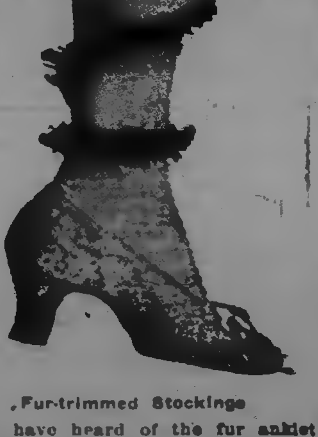
We cannot expect the schoolgirl to know this unless she is taught. The parent is the proper teacher.

Cleaning Picture Frames

Here is a hint which will be found useful at house-cleaning time. Take sufficient flowers of sulphur to give a golden tinge to about 1½ pints of water. In this liquid boil about four or five bruised onions, or some garlic. Strain off the liquid, and let it stand till it is cold. Then take a soft brush, dip it in the liquid, and wash any of the gold frames that require restoring. When it is dry, the gilding will be as bright as when new.

Care of the Feet

For perspiring feet, bathe them frequently with warm water, to which a little ammonia has been added. After drying, the feet should be dusted over with boracic powder. Bathing in alum water will afford relief to burning and tender feet. There is nothing more strengthening to the feet than salt.



Fur-trimmed Stockings

We have heard of the fur anklet in this country, but now Paris sends us the very latest in stockings showing a snake of fur coiling from the ankle to the garter. This fur-edged stocking is much in vogue with evening dress.

Lentil Croquettes

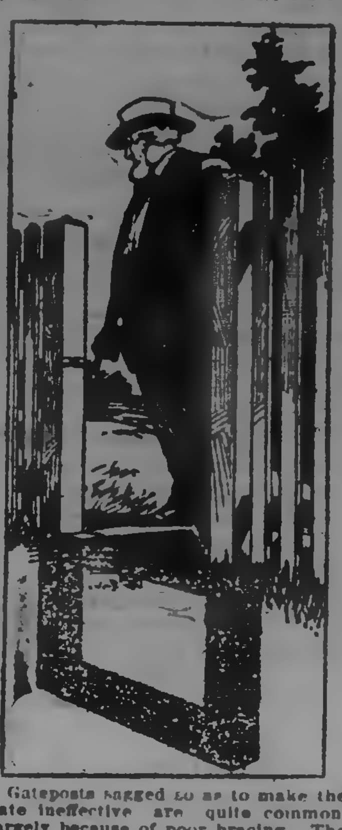
Wash 1 cup of lentils and ½ cup of dry kidney beans. Put over slow fire in 3 cups of cold water. Allow to heat slowly and when nearly at boiling point add 1 stalk of celery and ½ a small onion. Cook until soft enough to be forced through a sieve. Salt to taste, dash of pepper and 1 teaspoon of minced parsley. Beat together, then fold in 1 scant cup of fine bread crumbs. Make thick white sauce by creaming 2 tablespoons of flour with 2 teaspoons of butter. Add this mixture to 1 scant cup of milk. Cook in double boiler until thick. Mix thoroughly. Shape and set aside for 3 or 4 hours. Dip in egg. Roll in fine crumbs and fry in deep hot fat.

Keep Lemons in Water

Lemons may be kept a long while without becoming dry if put into a jar of water with a lid. The water should be changed once a week if the lemons are to be kept long. When used they will be quite as firm as when fresh, and, if anything, more juicy.

Put a thimble over the end of the curtain rod and the curtain can be easily run on to it.

UNDERGROUND BRACE FOR WOODEN GATEPOST



Gateposts sagged so as to make the gate ineffective are quite common, largely because of poor bracing. The method illustrated of bracing the posts underground is simple and substantial. It leaves the exit clear of surface braces and provides a rigid support for the gate even when the posts are sunk only 15 inches in the ground. A cross brace is housed into the gateposts at the surface, and another binds the posts at their lower ends. The joints should be spiked together strongly, and the portion underground should be tarred to prevent it from rotting quickly.—Popular Mechanics.

"TELL HIM HE'S DINED"

Absent-Minded Peer Believed the Lying Waiter

Among the many excellent stories which Mr. Leslie Ward, the famous cartoonist "Spy," tells in his reminiscences are one or two concerning the absent-mindedness of Lord Crewe's father, the poet-peer, better known as Monckton-Milnes.

"I remember," says "Spy," "the eccentric lord coming into the club one evening looking tired and hungry. On the mantelpiece a white paper gleamed. It was a list of the Derby lottery. Something stirred in his mind, which was far away on other subjects bent, and reminded him that he was hungry. He scanned the lottery list, and at last he was heard to murmur in dissatisfied tones: 'Waiter, I don't see anything to eat here.'" On another occasion, after careful scrutiny of the actual menu, he ordered a herring.

Monckton-Milne used to dine at the Athenæum, and usually at the same table. Another member came rushing in one day to obtain a place for himself. But every seat was occupied save that reserved for Lord Crewe. "Tell him when he comes," said the would-be diner to the waiter, as he sat down, "that he's dined!" It is to be supposed the waiter found the deception worth while, for when Lord Crewe arrived he was met with surprise and quiet expostulation. "You dined an hour ago, my lord," said the unscrupulous servant. "So I did," murmured the poor victim, as he retraced his steps.

BILL SIKES' GRIEVANCE

"Holiday Thief" Was Caught For Trying Luck Too Often

A certain prominent British prison official used to take his annual holiday regularly during the first weeks in September, when he would lock up his house and hand the key to a local agent. For two years in succession the holiday burglar had paid the premises a visit, and when his third year's holiday became due, knowing something of the rogue's fondness for returning constantly to the same spot, he decided to remain and see whether he could lay a trap for the intruder.

His house was, as usual, shut up and deserted, but he returned home stealthily. On the fourth day, when he should, in the ordinary course of events, have been well out of town, he discovered two men entering his premises through a back window. He waited until they were busily engaged indoors, and then, summoning help, he caught them redhanded.

When the rascals were brought before the magistrate, one of them remarked in surly tones that "it was jolly hard lines that Government officials did not take their holidays at the same time every year!"

"Gassed" Neighbors Children

Sentence of three months' hard labor was passed at Warwickshire Quarter Sessions on a Coventry toolmaker named Ernest Lord, charged with causing acetylene gas to be taken by two children so as to do them bodily harm. The prisoner was alleged to have made a hole through the wall from his bedroom to the next door house and passed the gas into a room where two children were in bed. There was stated to be some trouble between the prisoner and his neighbor.

Climbing Fish

The curious climbing fish of Brazil actually climbs trees, so that frequently, when a hunter shoots at a bird in a tree he may find that he has also brought down a fish.

FOR THE HOUSEKEEPER

An egg becomes a complete food if rice is added to it.

Dried figs are more nourishing than an equal weight of bread.

Half a pint of milk and half a pound of dates form a perfect meal.

Summer squash may be fried exactly like eggplant.

If the oven is too hot sprinkle a little coal on the fire.

Good macaroni is of a brownish color, not pure white.

Don't use soiled suds for colored clothes unless you expect them to look muddy.

Ferns will not do well if placed on the window sill. They cannot stand a draught.

It ruins the flavor of vegetables to remain in the cooking water after they are done.

A baked apple is more easily digested than apples prepared in any other way.

It is not wise to consult the invalid as to the menu, as the various surprises will serve to tickle his appetite.

When boiling rice add a little lemon juice to the water. This will make the rice fluffy and separate the grains.

For broken skin on the heel break a fresh egg, take the inner skin of the same and apply it in place for a few minutes. It will adhere to the flesh and relieve the pain.

There are so many uses for mussed tissue paper that none should be cast away. It is good for drying mirrors and lamp chimneys; and if it is not too much crumpled fold it carefully, roll it into a small roll and it will be useful when packing a trunk or grip.

Anaemic persons should eat spinach, leeks, yolk of egg, beef and apples, as all of these contain iron.

Old age is rarely attained by the excessive feeder. Moderation and mastication are factors in long living.

Ten ounces of wholemeal bread and a pint of skim milk are equal to an ordinary restaurant dinner.

The value of vegetables lies in their mineral salts. Vegetables should be steamed, not boiled, or the salts are lost.

The energy used in our bodies for the work of circulation, respiration, digestion and keeping up the temperature is equal in one day to raising 2,500 tons one foot high.

TAKE TIME FOR NAILS

Be Your Own Manicurist—Simple Directions Given

Many a busy working girl, while she is desirous of caring for her nails, is unable to devote much time to this all-important function, and may like to know a simple method which would occupy only a few minutes daily. Any one will find the following method simple to understand, and requiring a few minutes only to perform, and although, of course, you cannot expect to obtain the same results as when your nails are submitted to a professional manicurist, yet after a few weeks you need never be ashamed of them again. Soak the fingers in warm, soapy water, so as to soften the nails and the surrounding cuticle. Then dry them on a soft towel, and taking an orange-wood stick, deftly insert this under the nails to extract any colored matter. Next trim them with a pair of curved scissors, and then, with the rough side of the file, or emery board sold for this purpose, finally bevelling it with the finer side.

Now for the cuticle; this must be loosened with a cuticle knife, which should be blunt-pointed, or the orange wood stick may be used for the same purpose. Care should be taken not to bruise the nail during these processes, or little opaque spots of white will appear. Now dip the fingers in a toilet cream, wiping off with a soft towel or tissue paper. Then take some polishing powder, and, sprinkling on the nail, briskly apply the polishing pad. When finished, see that none of the powder remains on the nails. Never use a knife or any sharp instrument in cleaning your nails. They only scratch little fissures into the nail substance, in which lodge particles of dirt and dust that are very difficult to remove and keep the nails discolored and gray looking.

[illegible] Muffins

Cream a third of a cup of butter and beat in a quarter of a cup of sugar. Then add an egg beaten light. Sift together four even teaspoons of baking powder, a quarter teaspoon of salt and two cups of sifted flour and add to the other ingredients. Pour into hot muffin pans and bake.

Smothered Sausage

Prick the sausages and lay in a baking pan. Press some boiled potatoes through a sieve, add a little butter, salt, pepper and milk, and spread over the sausages. Cover with an egg beaten well, dust thickly with fine bread crumbs and bake in a moderate oven half an hour.

Something to Try

Before using tea, spread it on a sheet of brown paper and place in a warm, but not hot, oven for from 10 to 15 minutes. The tea will go much farther and the flavor will be much improved. By this method there is a saving of a quarter of a pound on every pound of tea.

VICTORY LOAN

Payments due on January the 2nd may be made at any time to and including January the 11th. Scrip Certificates will be delivered in exchange for payments then due. Payments due January the 2nd must be made at the Bank branch mentioned in the application.

The extension of time to January the 11th is given for the convenience of subscribers and Banks so that subscribers will not be unduly detained waiting their turn at a Receiving Teller's wicket, as would most likely be the case if all payments had to be made on one day only. Subscribers should not wait until January the 11th, or a day or so before and thus create the situation sought to be avoided. In every case, interest at the rate of five and one half per cent per annum from January the 2nd must be paid if payment is not made on or before the 11th.

For the convenience of subscribers, by arrangement of the Canadian Bankers' Association, Banks will remain open on the evenings of Thursday and Friday, January 3rd and 4th, and on the afternoon of Saturday, January the 5th. Evening hours 7.30 to 9.30. Saturday afternoon from 2 until 6 o'clock.

It has been brought to the attention of the Finance Department that a considerable number of subscribers, who have deposits with Banks, are under the impression that their Banks will take care of their January payments by automatically debiting their accounts with the necessary payments. This is incorrect. Each and every subscriber must personally arrange for these payments.

Deputy Minister of Finance.

Demand For Young People in Business

There is a large and growing demand today for young people in business avocations, never so much so in the history of the world. Banks, industrial and commercial offices are in need of young people with a business training, to whom they are offering advantageous openings. In fact, last year's graduates from the Peterborough Business College, of which Mr. J. A. McKone is the capable principal, are filling desirable positions at salaries of $1100 and over, and with bright prospects for advancement. The reputation of this educational institution for training its students to thoroughly meet the requirements of all lines of business is an enviable one, and its graduates are much sought after. A course in the Peterborough Business College takes but a short time, the cost of same is small, and its results eminently satisfactory. The winter term opens Wednesday, January 2nd, and parents with boys and girls to start in life would make no mistake by arranging for them a term to begin on opening day. With a thorough business man at its head, assisted by the best of experienced assistants, the Peterborough Business College offers advantages in business education excelled by none.

NO DELAY IN DELIVERY.

Order in Council Deals With Food Shipments.

Ottawa, Dec. 29. — An order in Council has been passed, upon the recommendation of the Food Controller, to prevent unnecessary delay in the unloading or reshipment of food or food products in freight cars. It provides that no freight car containing such products shall be allowed to remain under load at its destination for more than four days after notice of its arrival has been given by the railway company to the consignee.

BEAUTY HINTS.

How to Take Care of Your Complexion After Motoring.

Either hot or cold water applied to the complexion directly after a long automobile ride may do harm to the skin. And water need not be expected to take out the grime that hours of facing wind and dust have driven into the pores. A vigorous scrubbing at the journey's end will only make the flesh stiff and shiny and leave a painful burning sensation for hours thereafter.

Defer the hot water bath for an hour and apply, when you come in from your ride, some good cold cream, plastering it thickly over the face, around the ears and on the neck. Then rub it off with a soft cloth and powder lightly with talcum. The cool, fresh feeling will be very different from the stiff, hot sensation following a soap and water scrubbing. Before starting out on a motor trip protect the complexion by rubbing in a little vanishing (or greaseless) cream. A harmless lotion for the purpose may be made at home, using an ounce of precipitated chalk, an ounce of glycerin and about a cupful of water. Shake thoroughly before using.

METHODIST SUNDAY SCHOOLS RALLY ON NEW YEAR'S DAY

Arrange Big Meeting in George Street Church.

The Methodist Churches of the city have arranged for a grand rally of their Sunday school forces on New Year's Day at 10.30 a.m. This is in line with similar plans which have been carried out very successfully in other Canadian cities for a number of years. The five schools, St. James, Mark St., Grace, Trinity, and George Street will cooperate and will assemble at their own school room at 10 o'clock. Thence they will proceed to the corner of Hunter and George streets where under the direction of the marshall, Mr. C. N. Meserve of the Y.M.C.A. they will form into line and headed by the Salvation Army Band will march to the George Street Church. A most interesting program has been prepared and printed for the occasion. Rev. B. Greatrix will preside and His Honor Judge Huycke will deliver an address. Each school will provide a selective and each Superintendent will give a minute talk. A large orchestra will assist in the musical service and the singing of appropriate and inspiring hymns, the words of which will be found on the printed program will be a special feature of the gathering. Great interest is being taken in the plan and it is expected that a very large number will be in attendance.

LIGHTS OF THE NIGHT.

The Heavens Shine as Ever, While This Old World Changes.

Night is the astronomer's accepted time. He goes to his delightful labors when the busy world goes to its rest. A dark pall spreads over the resorts of active life; terrestrial objects, hill and valley, and rock and stream, and the abodes of men disappear; but the curtain is drawn up which concealed the heavenly hosts.

There they shine and there they move as they moved and shone to the eyes of Newton and Galileo, of Kepler and Copernicus, of Ptolemy and Hipparchus—yes, as they moved and shone when the morning stars sang together and all the sons of God shouted for joy.

All has changed on earth, but the glorious heavens remain unchanged. The plow passes over the site of mighty cities; the homes of powerful nations are desolate; the languages they spoke are forgotten, but the stars that shone for them are shining for us; the same eclipses run their steady circle; the same equinoxes call out the flowers of spring and send the husbandman to the harvest; the sun passes at either tropic as he did when his course began, and sun and moon, and planet and satellite, and star and constellation and galaxy, still bear witness to the power, the wisdom and the love which placed them in the heavens and upholds them there.

The Shortest Railroad.

A railway whose total length of track does not exceed a quarter of a mile, and whose rolling stock consists of but two battered lorries, and yet earns a handsome profit every year, is an enterprise worthy of notice. It is at once the shortest and best-paying railway in the world. The official title of this unique line is the Grand Island Railway. Built of strap-iron laid on wooden rails on top of wooden ties, it stretches across Grand Island, a strip of land a quarter of a mile long lying in the centre of the Athabasca River, in Northern Canada. On either side of the island, and running its full length, is a dangerous rapid. The right-hand channel, however, can be navigated by scows. Along this river pass a large quantity of trade goods for the fur posts in the great wilderness beyond, while in a like manner millions of pounds' worth of furs are brought out to civilization every year by means of the river. Although the scows can negotiate the rapid, there is always the risk of their capsizing, which means the loss of valuable goods or furs. At either end of this island, however, the water is fairly quiet, offering an excellent passageway for the conveyance of goods while the scows are coming down "light" through the rapid. It was this fact that brought the "Grand Island Railway" into being about half a century ago. The rolling stock, as already stated, consists of two old lorries, and upon these goods are loaded at the upper end of the island. The lorries are then propelled by hand at the lower end.

People making use of the railway must not only load the cars themselves, but haul them to the other end of the island. The charge is ten shillings a ton. Sometimes, on the trip "out" boats are carried across, when the charge is two pounds. The fortunate owner of this queer little railway makes an income of several thousand pounds a year, and declares that since its inception it has returned a million dollars in profits.—Wide World.

In the Arctic Circle.

In every Eskimo village of any importance in Arctic Alaska stands a large frame schoolhouse. The building, contrasting sharply with the low mounds which are really the native igloos, is more than an ordinary schoolhouse. It is in a very real sense a community center.

The villagers gather in the school room on week days for instruction in the English language, manners, and customs. On Sundays their simple religious services are held in this same room. On holidays they gather there for the feasts prepared for them by the teacher in charge, or by the missionary.

There is also in the schoolhouse a room set apart where the villagers may gather at any time of day or evening to sit around the fire and smoke while they visit. At these informal gatherings everything is discussed from the teacher, whose popularity depends to an appreciable extent upon the number of presents he hands out, to hunting, the [illegible] the white man's ships, etc.

Is there illness in any igloo, the medicine chest in the "big house" is the first thing thought of, and to the "big house" the Eskimos come for aid, be it night or day.

If a dog team is sighted coming toward the village, messengers hurry to the "big house" to inform the teacher of the coming of "strangers," so that he may be prepared to receive them.

And so it goes. The center of all activity and thought and life in the village is the red-roofed schoolhouse and the white man in charge. Besides a fairly well-equipped schoolroom, there is a large storeroom in the building where are provisions of all kinds, and living quarters for the teacher and his family.

It is believed that not much more than one-half of the cultivable area of India is under cultivation at the present time.

Resigns from Y.M.C.A. Here to go to Lincoln, Neb.

Mr. C. N. Meserve has resigned his position as general secretary of the local Y.M.C.A. to accept the associate general secretaryship of the Association at Lincoln, Nebraska, U.S.A. This association is to dedicate a new building on February 1st, to be devoted exclusively to High School boys. The building is closely connected with a new $600,000 city High School building and will make it possible to carry out a program in High School work of a very unique nature. This new work will be something of an experiment to be tried out under the direction of the Y.M.C.A. International Committee and is similar to work now undertaken for college students.

Mr. Meserve's first responsibility will be to organize the High School work but as the present general secretary has asked to be released for overseas military work, the responsibilities may soon be extended.

Lincoln has a population of 60,000 and is the capital of the State of Nebraska. In this city is located the State university and an agricultural college.

The Lincoln Y.M.C.A. has a membership of 1700 and employes ten secretaries and physical directors. Wm. Jennings Bryan is a member of the Board of Directors which extended to Mr. Meserve an unanimous call allowing him a salary of $1,800 and $200 moving expenses.

Mr. Meserve has done a splendid work here. The late remodeling of the local building, made according to plans drawn by him, has increased the association's income more than $1500 per year. The activities of the association are set up for the present season better than in previous years and the attendance at Bible and gymnasium classes is larger than in any previous year of our association's history.

Mr. Meserve expects to move his family to Lincoln previous to February 1st, although his eldest boy Ralph will remain here to complete his collegiate course.

VALUABLE DOGS ARE POISONED

Tweed, Dec. 29. — Dog poisoners are at work here, and a Highland Scotch terrier owned by C. F. Fawcett has been poisoned. The animal was a valuable one, having taken first prize at London and second prize at Toronto. Messrs. W. Salisbury and A. Wager also had their dogs poisoned.

New Orders Issued To Control U.S. Coal

NO CONTRACT SHALL BE FOR LONGER PERIOD THAN ONE YEAR.

Washington, Dec. 29. — Orders under which the United States Fuel Administration will obtain absolute control of the coal and coke output of the nation as soon as existing contracts run out were made public yesterday. It is provided that no new contract shall be for a period longer than one year, that all contracts may be cancelled at any time by the Fuel Administration, and that all coal thus sold under contract shall always be subject to requisition by the Government.

Contracts for coal shipments involving what is known as a cross-haul are absolutely forbidden. Under this ruling industries in various sections of the country must obtain their supply of coal and coke from the fields nearest to their plants. This rule will not apply to gas coal and coal used for by-product purposes.

The new orders are the most important which have been issued by the Fuel Administration for many weeks, and will affect the entire industry.

FOR

Board of Education

141 Hunter St. E.,
Peterborough, December 25, 1917.

To the Electorate of the City of Peterborough:—

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

Should it be your pleasure to elect me as one of your representatives on the Board of Education for the city of Peterborough at the coming civic elections, it will be equally my pleasure to willingly serve you in that capacity to the best of my ability to do so.

I am fully aware of and appreciate the importance of the continued development of our educational facilities, in the general interests of our young people and the city of Peterborough, both from the standpoint of "General" education and "Technical" education, and I am of opinion that neither branch can be neglected with impunity.

As a graduate in Engineering Science of the University of London, England, I am not unacquainted with the preparatory needs of students who purpose entering similar institutions.

Above all things I am a believer in giving our young people and our "artisans" and "craftsmen" generally, every educational opportunity within our means, so that they may be able to look back, in the years to come, with satisfaction, on our efforts of today.

I take this opportunity of expressing my appreciation of the good work which has unquestionably been done, educationally, in the past, by previous Boards of Education, and will endeavor, if elected, to do my duty also, with due consideration for the students, the teachers, the city of Peterborough and the public purse.

Yours very truly,
W. H. PRETTY.

G. REID MUNRO

MRS. TEWSLEY'S FATHER DIES AT BROCKVILLE.

The sudden death of Capt. Christopher Humble, which took place yesterday, has caused sincere regret among the deceased's many friends in town, says the Brockville Times.

The late Christopher Humble was born in Maitland 67 years ago the son of the late William Humble. Surviving to mourn his demise are his wife, four daughters and two sons: Mrs. Smith, Spencerville; Mrs. Tewsley, Peterborough; Misses Viola and Annie, at home; Herbert, of Edmonton, and Henry, of Oswegatchie, N.Y.

In religion deceased was a Baptist and was also a member of the A. O. U. W.

WILL NOT TAKE OVER RAILWAYS

UNITED STATES EXAMPLE NOT TO BE FOLLOWED IN CANADA.

Ottawa, Dec. 29.—While nothing definite will be known until the Premier and his colleagues come back to the Capital, it is not believed here that the example shown by the United States in the matter of railway operation will be followed by Canada. Responsible Government officials, closely in touch with Canadian railway affairs, point out that some time ago a Railway War Board headed by Sir George Bury, and representing all the railway directorates and the Government, was formed for the purpose of co-ordinating railway services in the Dominion, and for the prevention of wasteful and unnecessary duplication. The board, it is claimed, has already achieved good results in the matter of distributing and interchanging rolling stock and motive power. Efficiency is expected to accrue from the operations of the board.

So far as the earnings of the roads are concerned, these, it is stated, will be amply secured by the new increase in rates ordered yesterday by the Railway Commission.

There is at least, no possibility of an immediate adoption of the attitude taken by the United States.

NORWOOD

(Special Correspondence.)

Norwood, Dec. 29.—Gnr. Stan. Laing and Gnr. Percy Ingisch of 73rd Battery, Kingston, spent a few days at their homes here.

Mr. Gilbert Richardson of Erin was visiting friends in town this week. Mr. Richardson is an ex-member of the Union Bank staff of Norwood.

Mr. Arthur Duffield of Toronto spent the week-end and Christmas at his home here.

Mr. Jack Puffer spent Christmas at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Puffer.

Miss Ldema and Miss Thelma Johnston, both of Toronto, spent Christmas with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Johnston, town.

Misses Hattie and Gertrude McLaughlin are visiting their sister, Miss Minnie McLaughlin.

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Millof, who have been for the past seven months in Cutler, returned home on Saturday night.

Mr. Arthur Brethen has purchased from Mr. Fred Stuart that desirable property known as the Robson farm, comprising fifty acres. Mr. Stuart is holding an auction sale on Saturday of this week, comprising his entire farm stock and implements. We understand Mr. Stuart intends going West.

Mr. Robert Tedford, who recently sold his village property to Mr. Parker of Roseneath, has purchased from Mr. Bouck his beautiful home on the Hastings road comprising twenty-five acres.

Miss Myrtle Hendren of Old Havelock is spending the holidays at her home here.

A disastrous fire occurred in Norwood early on this Thursday morning when ex-Councillor Thomas W. Morrison lost his beautiful home on Belmont street as well as all his household effects. Mr. Morrison had retired early in the evening and was awakened about 2.30 in the morning and discovered that his house was in flames and was forced to make a hasty exit. The fire had gained such headway that Mr. Morrison and the outsiders who were called by the fire-alarm bell found it impossible to save any of the house furnishings. In his endeavor to save his secretary, Mr. Morrison was severely burned around the hands and had to escape through a window. The only article which was saved from the beautiful home was a hall rack. Fortunately Miss Hazel Morrison and little Miss Ivy Morrison had not returned to the village after visiting their aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. McNeely. The loss will be heavy as the property was only partially covered by insurance.

Mr. Samuel Thompson, a highly respected resident of the Township of Dummer died suddenly at his home on Christmas Day after a very brief illness. The funeral took place on Thursday afternoon to the Norwood cemetery.

Miss Grace Hartshorn of Peterborough visited at the home of Mrs. Stephens, Queen street, for the week-end.

Mr. Keith Waters of Toronto spent Christmas at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Waters.

Mrs. L. E. Killoran and her son, Flight Cadet Joe Killoran of Peterborough visited town on Wednesday.

Mr. Theodore Burgess, who has recently joined the Flying Corps, has received orders to report in Toronto early in January.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Laing and daughter, Miss Elsie, also Gnr. Stanley Laing spent Christmas the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Erle Laing, Havelock.

Miss Mae Reynolds of Toronto is visiting her home here.

We are glad to say that Wallace Reynolds, who has been serving for the past three years on the battle fields of France, arrived in the village on Monday night on furlough.

Corporal Fred Garlick of Kingston spent the holiday at his home here.

Miss Ruth Saunders is the guest of Miss Muriel Searight, Peterborough street.

Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Searight spent Christmas the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Ira Moore, Peterborough.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace Calder of Toronto spent Christmas at the home of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Baskin.

The series of evangelistic services which have been held for the past three weeks in the Methodist Church under the management of Evangelist Sharpe and the Hartshorn sisters, was concluded on Sunday evening last. The meeting was splendidly attended it being necessary to open the Sunday School room in order that all the audience might be seated. Mr. Sharpe did splendid work while in our village.

Miss Olive Drain is spending the holidays at her home, Clarina.

Miss Mae Lawson is visiting her parents at Trent River.

Miss Mae Smith was the guest at the home of Mr. J. B. Pearce over the holiday.

Miss Florence Harrison is spending the week at her home near Westwood.

NOW SLEEPS ALL NIGHT, HE SAYS

GETS UP EVERY MORNING RESTED AND READY FOR WORK, SAYS CARROTHERS.

"There was hardly a time in three or four years before I began taking Tanlac, when I felt right," said William B. Carrothers, a well known carpenter living at 151 Dreaney Avenue, London, while in the Standard Drug Store, recently.

"I was almost a nervous wreck," he continued, "and it seemed that I was just about ready to collapse. I would just roll and toss half the night, unable to sleep. Why, my nerves were so unstrung that I couldn't hold a pen steady enough to write, and I was so worn-out and weak that I never felt like doing my work. The least little job of work would fag me almost completely out.

"I was lucky to get as much as three or four hours sleep at a time before I took Tanlac, and that seemed to do me no good. But now I can sleep all night without waking and get up in the mornings rested and ready for my work. I don't have that nervous, weak feeling like I did and am gaining my strength back rapidly.

"My wife had been suffering from stomach trouble and indigestion and nothing seemed to help her. But Tanlac certainly is doing her a world of good. We have taken three bottles between us, and are going to keep it up as it has given us better results than anything else we have ever been able to find. Tanlac certainly is fine and I don't hesitate to recommend it to anyone."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Watne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co. Ltd.

Centre Ward Electors

Ladies and Gentlemen,

In appealing for your votes in my behalf as candidate for Alderman of Centre Ward, I beg to draw your attention to the fact that I am a firm believer in Municipal Government by Commission, recognizing the fact that better results are to be obtained under the system and if elected will do all I can to have the system fully explained and an opportunity given to the ratepayers to decide the question for themselves.

The foot-bridge at the C. P. R. speaks for itself as the result of my work when in Council. I take the credit for this, as councils in previous years tried to secure this bridge but were unsuccessful. This bridge is very convenient and useful to the general public. There are several important matters coming before next year's council requiring careful consideration and I assure you, if elected, will have my careful consideration.

Trusting you will see to it that I am elected as your representative in Centre Ward.

Yours truly,
JOHN EDGAR.

NO COAL AT WINDSOR.

Windsor, Dec. 29.—Zero weather descended upon this city and found many families utterly unprepared. There is not a pound of coal of any sort to be had, and, except for the few fortunate enough to have laid in their coal supply during the summer, a very limited supply of natural gas is the only source of heat for citizens of this border town.

EXERCISE YOUR LUNGS

Deep Breathing as Necessary For Health as Frequent Bathing

Millions of people live on "half breaths" all their lives. There are trusts on food, and trusts on drink and trusts on clothes. But there is no trust yet on air. There is enough and to spare of this one great health-giving, life-prolonging commodity to go around. It's free and it's fresh all the time. Hardly a day passes in which some individual does not proudly say: "I never did try deep-breathing, though I understand it is a very good thing to do."

In plain words "deep-breathing" is an ordinary washing of the lungs. It is as important, or more important to cleanse the inside of the body than the outside. It is more injurious to breathe worn-out air than to forget or neglect to bathe. The person who cultivates the habit of taking long breaths will be as hungry for them as he is for food. If you haven't yet formed the habit which is not in any sense a fad, begin now.

Take at least one real breath a day and see how it goes. Multiply this by ten, giving ten inhalations and ten exhalations at each time. The result will be 100 real breaths during the day. Breathe these long breaths from the open window or better still out of doors. Follow the general rule taking the breath in through the nose and exhaling it through the mouth.

It is so simple that most people forget to do it. It is so efficacious as an aid to health that it is a wonder anyone neglects it. Try taking one real breath.

OLD FRIENDS ARE THE BEST FRIENDS

When middle age creeps along and one is forced to realise the fact that the best of youth and its ambitions have passed for ever, one of the greatest comforts especially to a woman—is the recollection that, during the course of her life, she has gathered around her some real friends.

I suppose you will be moving further afield, now, was asked of a woman, whose husband has just retired from business life.

"Well, my dear," she answered, "we've decided to keep where we are, and I'll tell you why. All our married life we have lived here, and we don't like the thought of parting with the friends we have gathered round us. They know my children, I know theirs; we have spent many happy hours together, and have sympathized with each other in the little ups-and-downs that have occurred at different times. If we went away I've no doubt we should make new acquaintances, but they could never compensate us for the loss of such tried and true old friends."

It is a wise woman who [illegible] values so fully the happiness that such friendships bring [illegible].

The fair-weather friends fade quickly away in [illegible] trouble and need, but it is then that the light of real friendship shines truest and strongest.

It is not always [illegible] that can soothe a breaking heart, or ease a worried mind. It is the [illegible] genuine sympathy, and the [illegible] grip of a friend's hand that can act as a balm and give one [illegible] forward.

Woman Outwits Man

"[illegible] carry on their love-[illegible] strange ways," declared [illegible] who knows. "They make [illegible] take by carrying their [illegible] the field of subtle manœuvring [illegible] the average woman can [illegible] wit the average man in that [illegible] and, for the sake of the [illegible] the proving of her wit, she'll [illegible]. Whereas, if a man would mass his forces and make a perfectly direct charge—(How do you like my military metaphor?)—in nine cases out of ten he'd win the day."

Refused Sixpence a Week

"To save the committee from getting into disgrace by making the fabulous advance of three farthings a day to me at the age of seventy-eight, I much prefer to tighten my belt and to save them from further trouble." That was the sarcastic reply of a Dover, Eng., old-age pensioner to a committee which added sixpence a week to his pension.

To Prevent Pneumonia

To guard against pneumonia, keep yourself in the best physical condition, get all the fresh air you can, and keep your home well ventilated. If you become overheated at your work, take ample time to cool off gradually before going out in severe weather. Be careful of contracting any chill.

OYSTERS IN CANADA

Maritime Provinces Could Establish A Native Industry

The depleted oyster beds of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island offer an excellent field for oyster culture—an industry which has proved very remunerative in several Atlantic states, notably Rhode Island. For years Canada has been importing more oysters than she has been producing, measured in dollars and cents, and there is little doubt that a reduction in price would greatly increase the consumption. During the five years, 1910-1914, the value of oysters imported into Canada averaged nearly $390,000 per annum, while the value of the Canadian production averaged less than $196,000. In view of the market advantages, coupled with the large areas available for culture and the superior flavour of the oyster grown in northern waters, oyster-farming in Eastern Canada holds out every inducement to capital and enterprise. Since 1912, when the jurisdictional dispute respecting the right to grant leases to oyster-bearing areas was settled, the industry has made considerable progress. Prince Edward Island has leased about 5,000 acres and, during the last two years, more than 6,000 barrels of seed oysters have been planted. The Shemogue Oyster Co., formed in 1913 and operating in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, is a pioneer in the field. In the selection and planting of areas it has employed a Rhode Island expert, familiar with the methods found most successful in oyster culture in that state. This company hopes to be in a position within five years to command half of the trade now in the hands of United States producers. Serious difficulties have arisen from lack of capital and adequate protection, as well as from the depredations of sea-pests. These obstacles are not insuperable and, considering the productivity of the beds, the quality of the product and the excellent market, the ultimate development of a large and profitable industry seems assured.

LIFE'S LITTLE IRONIES

Drunken Automobile Driver Allowed But Engineer Never

"Why is it," we were asked by an Ordinary Citizen the other day, "that a railway engineer has to pass years of apprenticeship, take all kinds of physical and mental examinations, foreswear liquor, and keep himself in perfect health, before he is considered fit to run a train along a fixed steel track, while any crazy fool who can buy a 75 horse power automobile is allowed to plough through crowded streets at his own sweet will, with as many drinks under his belt as he can carry, providing he doesn't show it? The engineer doesn't even have to steer the train. All he has to do is to start it and stop it. Yet before he is even allowed to try that he has to have a certificate of character and experience. All the fellow in the automobile has to have is the price." And there's something to it when you stop to think it over. Isn't there?—Carleton Sentinel.

EGG PRODUCTION

Great Opportunities Open to the Western Provinces

Canada has all the requisites for the production of a quantity of eggs far in excess of her own requirements, and with her favorable climatic conditions can, with proper care and attention, produce quality equal to the best in the world. Only the fringe of production possibilities has been touched up to the present. The Western provinces, with their volumes of cheap feed, are the natural home for the Canadian hen. The bulk of the surplus at the present time comes from the province of Ontario and Prince Edward Island. Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Quebec do not produce sufficient for their own requirements. They must do more; and there is now an opportunity for the Western provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta to demonstrate to Canada and the Empire as a whole what they can do in this connection in this great hour of trade expansion.

The Best Potato.

"Irish Cobbler" will become the standard early potato in Ontario, with possibly "Green Mountain" as the standard late variety. These two varieties met with general endorsation by the conference of growers and experts that met in Toronto recently, under the chairmanship of Dr. G. C. Creelman, Commissioner of Agriculture. The conference was called for the purpose of deciding upon the best varieties of potatoes to put forward as standards and to discuss potato diseases.

Opinion was almost unanimous in favor of "Irish Cobbler" for general use and the conference agreed to recommend it, naming at the same time "Early Ohio" as suitable for market gardening purposes in some sections. The growers generally favored "Green Mountain" as the best late variety, though some liked "Empire State" better.

It is understood that the Department of Agriculture will take step ment of Agriculture woll take steps to make effective the recommendations of the conference in regard to standard varieties. Educational propaganda will be carried on and probably arrangements made to secure a supply of seed at cost for the farmers ready to grow the standard varieties.

Sir William Hearst addressed the conference, emphasizing the importance of the potato industry and assuring the growers of the readiness of the Department of Agriculture to do everything possible to put the industry upon a better footing by creating standard varieties and fighting plant diseases.

The conference was attended by W. A. Orton, potato expert for the Department of Agriculture at Washington, by experts of the Federal and Provincial Departments of Agriculture and by many prominent growers from different parts of the province.

His Profession.

"Now," said the colonel, looking along the line of recruits, "I want a good, smart bugler." At that, says London Opinion, out stepped a dilapidated fellow who had a thick stubble of black beard. "What!" said the colonel, eyeing him up and down. "Are you a bugler?" "Oh, bugler!" said he, "I thought you said burglar."

Synopsis of Canadian Northwest Land Regulations

The sole head of a family or any male over 18 years old, who was at the commencement of the present war, and has since continued to be a British subject or a subject of an allied or neutral country, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion Land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for District. Entry by proxy may be made on certain conditions. Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of land in each of three years.

In certain districts a homesteader may secure an adjoining quarter-section as pre-emption. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Reside six months in each of three years after earning homestead patent and cultivate 50 acres extra. May obtain pre-emption patent as soon as homestead patent on certain conditions.

A settler after obtaining homestead patent, if he cannot serve a pre-emption, may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

Holders of entries may count time of employment as farm laborers in Canada during 1917, as residence duties under certain conditions.

When Dominion Lands are advertised or posted for entry, returned soldiers who have served overseas and have been honorably discharged, receive one day priority in applying for entry at local Agent's Office (but not Sub-Agency). Discharge papers must be presented to Agent.

What "Bolsheviki" Means in English

Dr. Frank Bohn, translating Bolshevigi as "majority" and Menshevikt as "minority," says:

"The word 'Bolsheviki,' in Russian, means 'majority.' Tho particular Bolsheviki the world is now talking about are the majority of the Russian Social Democratic party. The Social Democratic party has its main strength among the industrial classes in the cities. The Social Revolutionist party of Russia, the other great Socialist party, counts the vast majority of its members among the peasantry. Distinct from the Bolshéviki at present also are the Mensheviki, or minority of the Social Democrats. It must be understood, however, that the Bolsheviki, though their very name means 'majority,' are quite likely an actual minority of the Socialist and Socialistic urban population."

PEESNESS vhas pad mit me vhen dot little tailor comes in und says:

"Hans, you vhas a good cobbler, but a poor peesness man, und if you don't do deeferent you vhas a failure und der poorhouse!"

"How can I do deeferent?" I asks.

"It vhas all in offering attractions," he says. "You must gif something to each and eafery customer. I gif avhay two brass collar buttons to eafery caller, und my tailor shop vhas full all der time."

For two days I don't know vhat to buy, but den I pelief it vhas shoeblacking. I buy feefty boxes for 4 cents apiece and put 'em in der window, und der painter makes me a sign to read, "One Box Free to Eafery Customer." I look into dot vindow und vhas pleased, und my wife says we shall be rich in two veeks. Purty soon a man comes in to get a patch on his shoe. He sees my sign und says:

"Maype you take me for a cheap man who lives on der sixth floor?"

"But how vhas it?" says I.

"How vhas it? Vy, you bad better go around among some cobbler shops und see how it vhas. Don't you know dot der man on der next block is gifing avhay a shoebrush, a box of blacking und a pair of shoestrings to eafery customer? I vhill take my job down to him!"

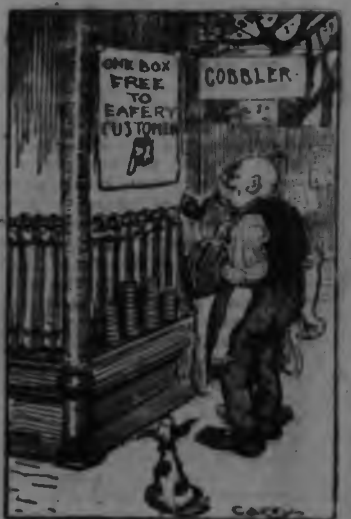
He goes avhay, und I vhas hurt in my feelings, und while I vhas trying to figure oudt how a cobbler can gif avhay 25 cents on a fifteen cent job a woman comes in. She wants a child's shoe fixed for 10 cents. She sees dot sign und says:

"Do you pelief I shall gif you my work und take a box of blacking when other cobblers are offering granite ware, tea und coffeepots? Gif me back dot shoe!"

Der next caller was a man who wants a pair of shoe strings. I make shust a cent on dot pair, und I vhas almost happy vhen der man sees dot free blacking und says:

"Vhell, vhell, so it vhas a box free to eafery customer! Vhell, it vhas a good idea. I'll take a box along mit me, und as my brother und sister vhill be in some day dis week I'll take der boxes now."

I lost shust 'leven cents by dot trade. I vhas pegging avhay vhen in comes a man mit a twenty cent job, but he keeps der shoe in his hand und says:



ONE BOX FREE TO EAFERY CUSTOMER
COBBLER

"I LOOK INTO DOT VINDOW"

"My friend, maype you wasn't long in America?"

"Only three years," says I.

"Und maype you belief you know der peoples und can deceive 'em?"

"I neffer deceive somepody."

"Oh, you don't! Look at dis sign und dose boxes und tell me you vhas a square man. It vhas a Cheap John trick to beat innocent peoples. Do you belief I leave a job for you und accept a fife cent box of blacking vhen some other cobbler vhill gif me a gas stove or a refrigerator?"

"But how can he do it?" I says.

"Dot vhas none of my peesness so long as he does it."

Der next caller vhas a womans, and she vhas mad because I don't gif avhay sewing machines. Dot eafnings I goes by dot tailor und told him all about it. He says:

"Vhell, dot beats me. I know all der womans will pay 10 cents car fare und push und jam two hours to safe a cent on a cake of soap."

"But maype it vhas der deeference between a store und a cobbler shop," says I.

"By golly, Hans, dot vhas it! A cobbler shop vhas not a store, und peoples expect too much of it."

I doan' know yet vhat I shall do mit dot blacking vhen a mans comes along und begins to put der boxes in a bag.

"Vhat is it?" I says.

"Board of health," he says.

"But how?"

"She vhas der yellow peril, und I confiscate her. One dollar, Mr. Cobbler."

"For vhat?"

"For my trouble."

Und he takes my dollar und all my [illegible] und goes avhay!

New Friends.

Mr. Edmund Gosse, vice-president of the Anglo-French Society, pleads for the maintenance of individuality in the literature of France and England. It seems hard to believe that the close friendship which exists, and will continue to exist, between the two countries when the war is a thing of the past, could produce anything so futile as a hyphenate literature. But Mr. Goose knows best, and it was very good advice which he gave to English writers in commending them to a close consideration of the precision and logic of French classics, the "luminous amplitude of the Latin mind," to make use of his own "luminous" expression.

TO STENCIL PAPER SHADES

They Can Be Painted In Designs and Stripes to Match General Decorative Scheme.

The girl who stencils will recognize in her oiled stencil paper a possibility for making one of the new paper lamp shades. The oiling of the board of paper makes it translucent. They can be painted in designs and stripes to match the general decorative scheme. Used in the natural old-gold color they are equally lovely, especially if the base of the lamp is of a solid bright color.

Another way to treat the paper shade is to paste cut-out designs from cretonne on the paper and paint in the background with black enamel thinned out as much as possible. This method makes the light shine through the colored designs and leaves the background opaque. Such a shade should not be used, however, where there is only one lamp in the room and where plenty of light is needed.

A clever way of mellowing the light from these more decidedly designed paper shades is to cover the outside with a layer of delicate gauze in a deep cream or rose color. This will not interfere with the effect of the design, but will prove to give a much softer lighting effect than the plain shade.

French Airmen Busy.

Paris, Dec. 29.—There was nothing to report last night with the exception of a patrol encounter north of the Chemin des Dames and another near Sapigneul, says today's official statement. "French aviators last night bombarded the railroad stations at Nalzieres les Metz and Thionville and German establisments in the vicinity of Vouzieres and Rethel."

John G. Bowers, aged 42, foreman at the C.N.R. loading dock at Prince Albert was instantly killed when he became entangled in the mechenism of a gasoline engine.

The prospects are that an English-speaking member will be named Deputy Speaker of the Commons, and a western representative may secure the appointment.

HEALTH ASSOCIATION'S AT HOME SUCCESSFUL

Receipts Including Donations Were $158.90.

The annual "At-home" of the Peterborough Health Association, held in the Empress Hotel yesterday afternoon and night was a very enjoyable and successful event. The association had receipts amounting to $158.90, which included donations from the following: W. H. Denham, $5; W. H. Dunsford, $10; Dr. F. C. Neal, $10; Rev. Fr. Phelan, $5; Dr. A. E. Hammond, $5; E. A. Peck, $5; F. L. Roy, $3; C. C. Abbott, $2; James Kendry, $5.

The afternoon was spent at cards, Miss Dorothy Aylmer winning first prize at bridge, and Mrs. F. L. Roy the second prize. Mrs. F. L. Robinson won the Five Hundred prize. Delightful music was provided by Mr. Gliddon and his orchestra. Tea was served from 4:45 to 5:30.

In the evening the dance room was filled by a merry throng of dancers.—Messrs. W. Moher and W. Fitzgerald furnished the music for dancing. The piano used was a Heintzman upright kindly loaned by Mr. R. H. Britton, the local representative of the firm.

Mrs. J. A. Aylmer, convenor, Mrs. (Dr.) Gallivan, secretary, Mrs. G. J. Scott, Miss Archer, Mrs. (Dr.) Cameron, Mrs. A. E. Coulthard, Mrs. R. R. Hall, Mrs. Gardiner, and Mrs. Jas. Kendry made up the committee in charge of the "at-home."

The grateful thanks of the association are tendered to Mr. Graham for the use of the hotel and his many kindnesses; to the whole hotel staff for their ever-ready and courteous assistance, to Mr. Gliddon and his orchestra, and to the ladies who sent cakes.

FUR APPEARS ON ALL COATS

In Many Cases It Is Used as a Border Somewhere Around the Hem—White Trimming Popular.

Attention is focusing on coats of cloth, duvetyn and the like. Made in one of the charming ways in which they are variously being presented, they are all the most fastidious woman could either wish for or obtain.

In nearly all the new models an artistic tendency is very apparent. The lines are straight, yet full and loose; there are often large Oriental-shaped armholes, a kind of "shapeless shapeliness" being cleverly imparted.

Another feature is that though the coat itself may not be of fur, fur of some kind enters prominently into its composition. There is perhaps a roll-back fur collar, fur cuffs or fur buttons. In many cases there is a border of fur somewhere around the hem, sometimes very narrow, sometimes extending to quite a considerable depth.

Golden-colored raccoon is being used very much in this way and lynx cat also plays its own inimitable part and there is no mistaking the tremendous liking existing for white fur trimmings. White fur is to be seen on coat after coat, sometimes some superior fur such as white fox or tailless ermine, sometimes some substitute, of which lapin is the fashionable name, but which is, frankly speaking, rabbit.

White or gray lapin, however, is by no manner of means to be despised. It is a fur with which marvels can be wrought. The soft "flat" surface is a delight, and one remarkably becoming.

NOT ALL NARROW

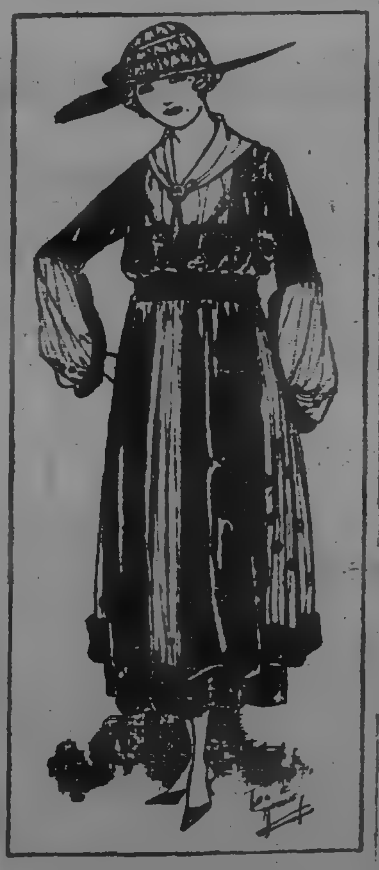
Skirts of Comfortable Width Seen Despite Season's Edict.

Women Learning to Express Individuality in Dress Instead of Blindly Following "The Style."

Women are learning more and more to express individuality in their dress and to select styles that are individually becoming rather than to seek and accept what is bulletined as "the style."

Early this season fashion announcements stated that skirts were to be longer and narrower.

This is true. Skirts that are longer and narrower than for several seasons are shown, and they have had the formal approval of fashion. But it also is true that very short skirts are worn, and that skirts of comfortable width are seen as often as are the tight, semihobble effects. All this means inspiration for style designers. If a uniform width or length is accepted the designers have little encouragement to go ahead with new and different things, says the Washington Star.



Skirt of Comfortable Width.

The clever little afternoon frock here shown, which may be made of satin or velvet combined with either chiffon, georgette or net, corrects any belief that all skirts are to be extremely narrow. This has a comfortable width—two and a quarter to two and a half yards. The touch of fur gives a pretty finishing touch, and altogether it has an excellent model for dressy afternoon wear.

In this fabric combination an excellent suggestion for making over a last season dress is found.

GOOD SINGING BY CHOIR PARK ST. BAPTIST CHURCH

Choral and Solo Parts in the Nativity of Christ Sung With Enthusiasm and Spirit.

The Christmas cantata, The Nativity of Christ, was sung by the choir of Park street Baptist Church last night, under the direction of the organist and choirmaster, Mr. A. Nicholls. The choir did splendidly. The blending of the voices was excellent, but perhaps the most noteworthy feature of the singing was the enthusiasm and the sympathy with the spirit of the cantata, that the choir put into their work. This was true not only of the choral numbers but also in the solo parts, and is much more to be desired than the class of singing that makes an auditor unconsciously grip his seat, fearing a breakdown on the part of the vocalist.

The soloists were Miss F. Nicholls and Messrs. George Baldwin, Edward Pemberton and Joseph Iredale, and all acquitted themselves very creditably.

As Rev. Dougald Brown, the chairman, said, the program given reflected great credit upon the choir and Mr. Nicholls. The choir was twenty-seven strong, nine being male voices.

Mrs. Nicholls, contributed a reading.

Big Red Blooded War Drama at Royal

The program at the Royal Theatre for Monday and New Year's day should not be missed by lovers of high class moving pictures. In addition to the every-day show, the management has secured at considerable expense the latest Vitagraph Blue Ribbon special, "The Girl Philippa," in which the people's favorite actress, Anita Stewart, is featured. This picture gives the story of a French cabaret girl who was forced to spy on all who frequented her little cafe. She held the fate of nations in her hands. "The Girl Philippa" smashed the world's box office record for tickets sold, and hundreds were turned away each performance in New York. In order to relieve the rush at the Royal Monday night and Tuesday afternoon and night, his picture, with an ordinary program, will be shown at Monday's matinee, at the usual admission of 10c.

ENTERTAINMENT FOR CHILDREN

Entertainments for the primary departments of the Sunday schools at All Saints' and Knox churches were held last night in the respective Sunday school halls.

BRITISH READY TO TALK PEACE

The Review Wishes its Readers A Happy New Year

BRITISH WILL MAKE SERIOUS REPLY TO GERMAN PEACE OFFER WHEN OFFICIALLY RECEIVED

Significant Statement Made in Manchester Guardian Today—Lloyd George Leaves for France to Consult on Subject of Peace Terms With French Premier.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Dec. 31.—The Manchester Guardian says it is the intention of the British Government, when the Austro-German terms of peace are presented officially, to return a serious and reasoned reply. Premier Lloyd George has arranged to visit France, according to that newspaper, to confer with Premier Clemenceau on this subject.

WHAT THE PEACE TERMS INCLUDE.

The Austro-German peace terms referred to are those presented by representatives of the Central Powers at the negotiations with Russians at Brest-Litovsk. These negotiations were interrupted for ten days to give the Entente Allies an opportunity to state whether they would join in them. The principal point in the Austro-German outline of the peace terms was the acceptance of the Russian formula of no annexations or indemnities.

HOPES FOR VICTORY.

London, Dec. 29 (via Reuter's Ottawa Agency).—Lord Derby, in a message to Le Matin, hopes that the coming year will see the troops returning home after a victory of right over might.

Lord Robert Cecil, in a message, admits that the French and British troops have a hard year before them, but hopes that, strengthened by America, they will hold on ttill victory. "Let us hope that the war will end before the next New Year," he says.

TO THE CENTRE WARD ELECTORS

Although nominated to succeed myself as alderman in the Centre Ward, a position which I have held for the past four years, I will not have time to canvass the electors, but will leave the matter to the judgment of the people. I will take this opportunity of submitting several reasons why I feel myself justified in asking for the votes of the electors in the election Tuesday. In the first place, I am a resident of the ward in which I seek election.

I have been chairman of the Finance Committee, the most important in the Council, for the past three years. I believe I have warrant for saying that I understand the financial affairs of Peterborough better than any member of the Council, present or prospective.

During the next two years the city will be called upon to lay out nearly half a million dollars over and above the ordinary expenditures, on the high level bridge and the sewage disposal plant. If ever care was necessary in the handling of municipal money matters, it will be during the period for which the new aldermen are being elected.

I am one of the largest ratepayers in the city, and as such should be entitled to confidence that I will combine progress and economy in all matters of public interest.

My record as Finance Minister is before you. I have always striven to save the people's money, and that will continue to be my policy if you honor me with a renewal of your confidence.

DOG NOT UNDER LEASH AND NOT COMPLETELY MUZZLED MEANS $2 FINE FOR THE OWNER OF ANIMAL

Owners of dogs take warning. Here is the charge which in a few words explains the new dog by-law, for the violation of which two citizens were each fined $2 in police court this morning:

That John Jones did permit a dog owned, possessed or harboured by him, to run at large in a highway to wit, George St. Without being under the control of some person and held firmly in leash, and also effectually and completely muzzled to prevent persons from being attacked or bitten by such dog contrary to by-law 2068 of the City of Peterborough.

Turks Still Falling Back in Palestine

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Dec. 31.—General Allenby on Friday continued driving back the Turks and advanced his line two miles on a front of thirteen miles. This advance gives the British control of the high ground four miles from Jerusalem and north of the Jericho Road. The enemy is falling back but the rough country makes pursuit slow.

WHY SIR JOHN WAS REMOVED

LOSS OF THREE DESTROYERS WHAT COST HIM HIS POSITION.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Dec. 31.—It is popularly believed here that Sir John Jellicoe was removed from the admiralty owing to the loss of three destroyers near the Dutch coast, which happened some days ago, although only announced yesterday.

HUN AIRCRAFT COME TO GRIEF

THIRTEEN IN ALL ARE BROUGHT DOWN BY THE BRITISH FLIERS.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Dec. 31.—German artillery was active Saturday near Hargicourt, south and west of Lens and east and northeast of Ypres. British aircraft dropped sone hundred bombs on the enemy airdromes north of Lille Saturday. Our airplanes and anti-aircraft guns brought down eleven enemy aircraft and compelled two others to descend. Three British machines are missing.

ENEMY FAIL IN RAID AT YPRES

GERMANS ATTACK RAILWAY STATION BUT ARE COMPLETELY REPULSED.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Dec. 31.—German artillery was active Saturday near Hargicourt, southwest of Lens and east and northeast of Ypres. Saturday night the enemy attacked our positions in the neighborhood of Ypres railway station but was completely repulsed.

CATHOLIC CHURCH, SCHOOL AND CONVENT BURNED

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Halifax, Dec. 31.—The Catholic church, convent and school house were destroyed by fire at Glace Bay. The fire is now under control.

GETS $5000 AS DAMAGES FOR WIFE'S PARENTS

George R. Webb of Gananoque Sued for Alienation of Affections.

CALLED HER HUSBAND PIE FACE

Justice Clute Says Young Man Had Suffered Grievous Wrong.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Toronto, Dec. 31.—In a judgment given by Mr. Justice Clute today Geo. R. Webb, merchant of Gananoque, is awarded $5,000 damages in his action against his wife's father and mother, William V. and Mrs. Bullock of the same town, for the alienation of his wife's affection. George was 30 and his wife, Lora 22.

In her pre-nuptial days she wrote to him as "Dearest George," but after she became Mrs. Webb her letters referred to him as "That Pie-faced." There were married in her parents absence, and afterwards Mr. and Mrs. Bullock took the bride away with them to Manitoba. Later, she secured a divorce in Ohio.

In the judgment today Justice Clute remarks that the young man had suffered a grievous wrong and was entitled to substantial damages. Webb sued for $20,000.

1400 Prisoners Taken by French

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Rome, Dec. 31.—In the Monte Tomba region, on the northern front. The French have captured enemy positions between Osteria Dimonferena and Maranzine, the war office announces. They also captured about 1,400 men, ten machine guns and seven cannon.

CIVIL WAR IN PROGRESS NOW IN EASTERN SIBERIA

French Counsel and Three Countrymen Murdered by Rioters.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Pekin, Dec. 31.—Civil war is in progress at Irkutsk, in Eastern Siberia on the Trans-Siberian Railroad, and in the surrounding districts. The town was set on fire by Red Guards after they had murdered the French consular agent and three other Frenchmen. Many persons, including women and children, are being murdered, and street fighting is under way.

The Bolsheviki continue to receive reinforcements and ammunition from Krasnoyarsk.

Germany Behind Revolt.

London, Dec. 31.—The Times prints a long letter from its Petrograd correspondent, dated Saturday, which purports to substantiate the view that the Bolsheviki revolt was managed by Germany and that the movement is essentially anti-national and anti-Russian. The letter says: "It is a notorious fact, that has been proved by documents in the possession of the Kerensky government, that Germany commissioned Lenine and gave him money to go to Russia to sow disaffection in the Russian army."

VALUE OF CANADA'S FIELD CROPS FOR YEAR JUST CLOSING WAS OVER BILLION DOLLARS

Mayor Duffus' New Year's Greeting

TO ALL THE CITIZENS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:—

May I be permitted, before the close of the mayoralty year, to supplement my review of the business of 1917 presented at the last meeting of the Council, by tendering you sincere and hearty thanks for the cordial goodwill which has existed toward me during my term of office?

While the restraints on my private business and domestic affairs have been somewhat of a severe nature during the past two years, I frankly acknowledge that the duties and privileges associated with the mayor's chair have brought with them a pleasing sense of the honor of the position, but more especially enlarged experience in municipal and public affairs.

At this festive season, when all are endeavoring to forget the wrongs of the past and trying to remember the blessings of the present, further reference to the city's business would seem out of place.

With renewed thanks for your kindly support and the hope that the year of 1918 may be a year of victory for the British Empire and her Allies, progress for Canada and Peterborough, and of prosperity and happiness for you individually, believe me,

Yours faithfully,

JOS. J. DUFFUS.

First Time This Record Has Been Made—Most Prosperous Year in Country's History.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Toronto, Dec. 31.—General prosperity from one end of Canada to the other, with cheerful optimism for the future, is the epitome of the annual New Year's delivery articles contributed to the Monetary Times by the premiers of all the provinces of the Dominion.

Hon. W. H. Hearst of Ontario emphasized more than the ordinary activity of Ontario's three great branches of production, agriculture, mining and lumbering and expressed the hope that in the year's prosperity this province will not forget conditions prevailing elsewhere or fail fully to realize how solemn and binding is the obligation in the great struggle through which the world is passing.

The Monitary Times Review says that the value of production in Canada, during the year ending today from field crops, forests, mines and fisheries was approximately $1,307,687,000 as compared with $1,275,734,812 in 1916.

In 1908 the value of Canada's production was $703,590,000. For the first time on record in 1917 the value of Canada's field crops was over one billion dollars.

Change in Standard For Forestry Units

NEW MILITARY ORDERS WIDEN DOORS AS FAR AS MEDICAL FITNESS GOES.

Men will be accepted of lower category than "A" for service with forestry units, states a new military headquarters order, provided they are specially qualified and able to do a full day's work of ten hours. Providing the man has no other defects, defective vision and hearing will not disqualify, and hernia, capable of being held by a truss, will not disqualify if a man is otherwise fit and specially qualified.

It will be necessary in both these cases that the man have bush and mill experience, as: (1) general hand, (2) log makers, (3) ax men, (4) teamsters.

If men are subject to rheumatism or accustomed to indoor work only they are unsuitable for forestry operations.

Category "B" men will be accepted for forestry work providing their physical defects, including shortsightedness, loss of fingers or toes, flat feet and deafness does not prevent them from doing a ten-hour day's work.

Military appointments are announced as follows: Hon. Capt. Henry J. Elton, paymaster of the 1st Battalion, 2nd Central Ontario Regiment, transferred to 2nd Battalion, C.O.R., as paymaster.

Lieut. Arthur E. Thompson, 19th Battalion, appointed to 2nd Battalion, 1st C.O.R.

Lieut. Samuel M. Harman (3rd Regiment), late 24th Battalion, to 2nd Battalion, 1st C.O.R.

MINERS KILLED IN EXPLOSION

Scranton, Pa., Dec. 31. — Many miners are reported to have been killed by a gas explosion in the Underwood mine of the Pennsylvania Coal Company, near Throop, about six miles from this city. Company officials are silent, and information is vague. At noon seventeen bodies, some dead and some alive, were reported to have been taken from the mine.

Some draftees at Brantford have already received their notice to report for service at Toronto on Jan. 3rd

BERLIN ADMITS BRITISH GAINS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, Dec. 31.—The British have recovered part of their lost territory on the Cambrai front near La Vacquerie. The losses of the British are said to have been heavy.

GUNNER PERCY NEIL KILLED

Former Peterborough Boy Meets Death in Action.

Mrs. J. M. Gemmell, 333 Burnham street, Ashburnham, has received official notification from Ottawa that Gunner Percy Neil, of the 2nd Canadian Heavy Battery, was killed in action on December 1[illegible]

Gunner Neil enlisted from the Bank of Commerce at Winnipeg. He was a Peterborough boy and when here, was a member of St. Luke's church choir, a member of the Marlborough Club, and was on the staff of the Bank of Nova Scotia. He was a popular young man, and his many friends here will be sorry to learn of his death.

BRITISH ARE WINNERS IN THE AIR

London, Dec. 31.—Five German airplanes were destroyed or put out of action yesterday by the British, who lost none of theirs.

"Two hostile machines were brought down in our lines on Saturday," says an official statement just given out. "A third was brought down in the enemy's line. Two other hostile machines were driven down out of control. None of our airplanes are missing."

ON THE FRENCH FRONT.

Paris, Dec. 31.—Artillery actions occurred last night northwest of Rheims, the war office reports. There were patrol encounters north of the Chemin des Dames, on the Aisne front, and near Bezonvaux, Verdun front. Everywhere else the night was calm.

PTE. M. NORTHEY MET HIS DEATH WHEN OUT WITH WORKING PARTY

A letter from Lieut. E. C. Smythe of the 21st battalion says that Pte. M. Northey of Bobcaygeon, brother of Mrs. Harry Black, Ashburnham, was killed in action on the 9th November last in the attack on Passchendaele. "He was killed while out on a working party by shrapnel from a high explosive shell. Although in the line at the time I was not out on this particular working party so cannot give you as full particulars as I would like to be able to. One of our officers was killed and one wounded on the same working party so it is very hard for me to write this letter.

"He was one of the best soldiers in the company and was a general favorite with all ranks. No matter what hardships we had to go through, he always came out smiling, which had a great effect in keeping up the spirits of the men. We miss him very much and he is a great loss to the Company.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, DECEMBER 31, 1917.

HAPPY NEW YEAR.

WHEN THIS REVIEW wishes its readers "A Happy New Year" it speaks this year to a larger constituency than it has ever addressed before on a similar occasion. The year just closing has been a prosperous one in Canada, and under its new management this paper has had its full share of the good times that have been so general.

During the past year The Review has more than doubled the number of its readers and the general volume of business transacted. It has added to its mechanical equipment until it is in a position to turn out more work of a higher grade than ever before. The management have spared no effort to give the public a live newspaper, but the best is yet to come, and still greater efforts will be made in the future. Thanking the public for their generous patronage, The Review wishes its many friends in city and country a bright and prosperous New Year, hoping that before the end of 1918 triumphal peace may have been restored in Canada.

THE ELECTION TOMORROW.

WHEN THE VOTER retires behind the screen in the polling booth tomorrow he will certainly face a serious problem when he sets out to mark his ballot for members of the School Board. The names of eight prominent and capable citizens will confront him. The voter's difficulty will not be the matter of deciding for whom to vote, but as to which three he shall scratch, for he can only vote for five. Whatever his choice may be, he is not likely to make a serious mistake, because every man whose name is on the ballot paper is well qualified for the position to which he aspires. There is not a man among the eight who is choosing the Board of Education as a stepping-stone to higher office. All of them have volunteered their services in the interests of the school system of the city, and all are in favor of a proposition that has been before the public for some time—the establishing of a Technical School in Peterborough.

The desirability of such an institution is so apparent that the matter scarcely calls for an argument. In the first place, the cost, aside from the initial expense, will be nominal. Once the city shows itself in earnest by taking the preliminary steps, the provincial authorities will step in and assume the heavy end of the outlay.

A Technical School will benefit all classes in the community alike. The son of the workingman will be given a chance to receive a practical education, to fit himself for the duties of life, so that from the outset he can command higher wages instead of being compelled, as at present, to serve several years of apprenticeship at nominal pay. Best of all, he will make no mistake in his life vocation, and will not lose time experimenting as to the particular line for which he is best fitted. He will ascertain his natural endowments before he leaves school and will enter his proper sphere at once. With all such the battle of life is half won. Happy is the man who has found his work.

The employers of mechanics and every form of skilled labor will be benefited, too, by the operation of a Technical School. They will be able to recruit their staffs as required, and no time will be lost in experimenting with new hands who turn out eventually to be failures for the simple reason that they have taken up some line for which they are not equipped by nature.

Where technical schools have been established it has been found that there is no clash between such institutions and Organized Labor in the matter of apprentices and that this has been arranged to the satisfaction of all concerned.

Among the members of the Board of Education who hold over for another year, there are supporters of the technical school idea. Prominent among these is Mr. V. Eastwood, who during the year just closing has held the position as chairman of the Board. With the election of five technical school advocates tomorrow the Board should be unanimous on this important issue.

A member of the School Board should possess peculiar qualifications. His interest in educational affairs should be above question. The man who will insist on excessive economy should have no place among the educational directors of the city. The entire future of the rising generation depends upon the opportunities that are offered them during the years they spend at school.

Educational qualifications in the members should be regarded as one of the most important assets. The man who has been through the mill himself is certainly better qualified, everything else being equal, to make provision for others, than is the man who may have been deprived of similar advantages in his youth. The law is clear with reference to all school affairs, and it is the duty of the members of the Board to be guided by what is laid down in the statutes.

THE CLOSING YEAR.

THE YEAR THAT CLOSES with the stroke of twelve tonight will always be remembered as the year of the most remarkable election ever held in Canada, an election in which party lines were forgotten and the people united on the great issue of the war, when a Union Government was placed in power by an overwhelming majority and compulsory military service was endorsed.

The year 1917 will always be an outstanding period in the history of the world. So far as the war is concerned, it has proved something of a disappointment to the Allies. One year ago it was the general belief that the strength of the Germans would collapse before the next Christmas, but 1918 is ushered in and the end seems as remote as ever. Germany is massing its forces on the Western front, and the atmosphere is tense with preparations on both sides. There is a feeling that a battle is impending, the most serious since the beginning of the war, and one which will go a long way toward finally deciding the issue.

It was on the third day of February that the United States broke off diplomatic relations with Germany, and from that date a state of war really existed between the two nations, although hostilities were not actually declared by the Americans until April 2, at a special gathering of Congress. One month before that, President Wilson was empowered to arm American merchant ships as a protection against the German submarines.

It was in March that the world was surprised by a revolution in Russia, when the Czar was deposed and imprisoned and a republic set up. The former empire has ceased to be a factor in the war, and this is one of the reasons why the struggle is likely to be prolonged for years to come.

The Canadian troops have continued to cover themselves and their country with glory at the front. Their feats of valor at Vimy Ridge will never be forgotten, and the charge of the Fort Garry Horse at Cambrai early in December holds the record as one of the greatest cavalry achievements in the history of war. The death toll has been heavy and there is mourning in many a Peterborough home today for some member of the family who will never return.

Canada, in spite of the war, or unfortunately, perhaps, because of it, has had a year of unexampled prosperity. Every line of business has been worked to capacity, and, if the cost of living has been high, wages have in many cases fully kept pace with the increase.

The fiftieth anniversary of Confederation was celebrated on July 1, and the event found a united, a contented and a prosperous nation. If there is any discord in evidence today, it is due to the agitation carried on by a few self-appointed leaders with a craving for notoriety, and the federation that has existed for fifty years is in no serious danger. There is unanimity among the Canadian people as the year 1917 goes out, such as has never been known before.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

Dry Times Ahead.

(Toronto Telegram.)

Dominion-wide prohibition of the manufacture, importation, wholesale and retail sale of intoxicating liquor is headed straight for the statutes of Canada. Canada throughout the vast extent of the greatest half-continent under the stars, will, to quote the words of an eminent orator, "Soon be dry as the throat of the guest who has dined on codfish."

Conservation of Coal.

(Brooklyn Eagle.)

Certain aspects of the coal situation are becoming so clear as greatly to simplify the problem if the authorities and the public will face the facts and act promptly in meeting the emergency. It is apparent that there is a real coal shortage, brought about by an abnormal demand, amounting to some fifty million tons for the year. Production at the mines is above normal, but while transportation problems have contributed to the problem, the shortage cannot be entirely overcome by better transit. Since the excessive demand will continue for the duration of the war, merely temporary and half-way measures will not prove effective.

TEUTONS' FIGHTING MAN POWER

(By an Army Officer.)

The virtual elimination of Russia as a belligerent gives the German high command a preponderance of man power on the Western front. This is one of the problems which the inter-allied conference has had to face frankly in dealing with the general war situation.

More available men, a huge centralized force and unity of command make the Teuton military menace more dangerous now than it will ever be again, according to the military experts. This is why speed in getting America's fighting forces ready is now of vital importance.

There are persistent rumors that Germany is preparing for the greatest offensive effort of the war on the Western front, with the idea of getting in her strongest blows before man power supremacy is wrested from her by the arrival of strong American forces in France. The opinion is general in War College circles that any German effort along this line now cannot be decisive; but it is admitted that it may result in territorial gains and may temporarily reduce Italy to a position of relative military helplessness. In speaking of the Western front the Italian front is included.

The German high command doubtless realizes that the defection of Russia from the ranks of its enemies gives it a distinctive temporary advantage. The idea of holding on to the line in sustained resistance appears to have found less favor in German military circles now because of the realization that America's war preparations are on a scale which was regarded some months ago as unthinkable. A slow and long drawn out fight to exhaustion looms up as a dangerous game for Germany, and experts in Washington will not be surprised to see an effort made by her to strike powerful blows in the near future.

In estimating man power, without resort to War College confidential figures, calculations are based on population rather than previously published figures of standing armies because in this war practically every able-bodied man is under arms. Many factors are eliminated from consideration on the ground that they about balance each other on the German and the Entente side. Thus the troops which Canada and the United States have now in France, the army of Portugal and Belgium and troops from the foreign possessions of Great Britain and France are not considered, nor are the fighting forces of Turkey and Bulgaria computed as assets of the Central Powers.

The man power is calculated from the fighting forces of France, Great Britain and Italy on the one hand and of Germany and Austria-Hungary on the other. The preponderance in men power of the Central Powers is in the ratio of about 14 to 10, with Russia counted definitely out, according to one series of calculations.

Taking first the populations of the principal fighting powers at present the figures are as follows:

Germany	67,812,000
Austria	28,995,844
Hungary	20,886,487
Total	117,694,331
Great Britain	46,407,037
France	39,601,509
Italy	35,597,784
Total	121,606,330

These figures are the latest available, but were compiled prior to the outbreak of the war and do not take into consideration how man power has been sapped by the struggle. The preparedness of the Central Powers for the war has resulted in swinging the balance of man power to their side even on the population basis, while the advantage in men actually under arms or engaged in war work has been pronounced in favor of the Central Powers.

Counting the German and Austrian prisoners in Russia as soon to be available for service on the Western front, as well as the bulk of the forces Germany has maintained to guard the long line against Russia, it is estimated that the Central Powers can draw from a bulk fighting force of approximately 14,000,000 men.

The maximum fighting strength of Germany as estimated by the last handbook issued by the German army prior to the war was 9,898,000 men, or 10,000,000 in round numbers.

The Austrian fighting force is estimated at approximately 5,000,000 men upon which to base calculations. The casualties are estimated to be:

Killed or died of wounds—

Germans	1,100,000
Austrians	600,000
Total	1,700,000
Prisoners or hors de combat—
Germans	2,100,000
Austrians	750,000
Total	2,850,000
Combined total	4,550,000

In computing the number of men hors de combat consideration is taken of the fact that a very large percentage of men wounded return later to the firing line. Deducting 1,000,000 men as the estimated number of German and Austrian prisoners captured by Russia, the man power of the Central Allies would be 11,550,000; but this does not take into consideration the increases provided by the coming of age of new men during the years 1915, 1916 and 1917, nor does it include the men past the legal fighting age who have been drafted into service by unparalleled exigencies of the world struggle. It is figured that 2,500,000 additional men must be counted on this score, which brings the total man power up to 14,000,000.

On the Entente Allies side France is given a maximum man power of 6,000,000 as a basis of calculation, with 3,000,000 for Great Britain (taking into consideration the fact that British troops must not be too extensively withdrawn from home) and Italy 2,000,000. This makes a total of 11,000,000 irrespective of losses or additions. The estimated Entente losses are as follows:

Killed or died of wounds—

French	1,100,000
Italians	225,000
British	350,000
Total	1,675,000
Prisoners or hors de combat—
French	1,750,000
Italians	850,000
British	650,000
Total	3,250,000
Combined total	4,925,000

Subtracting this from the previous total of man power brings the figures down to just about 6,000,000, but the new men coming to the colors and the extension of the age limit swing them back to approximately 10,000,000 as an estimate for the present strength of the Entente armies.

It is important of course to note that the fighting on the Western front is in the heart of France and Italy and at a considerable distance from Germany or Austria. This permits concentration of defending forces to a far greater extent than is possible for the invading force, which must use up great numbers of troops in guarding supply lines, etc.

On the other hand, the fact that the Teuton forces are concentrated and operate along the inner lines permits any part of the line to be speedily reinforced and enables masses to strike with calculated force at any given point.

The unified German command also is superior to any consulting body if the most elemental of military principles are to hold good in this war.

Russia's military forces now out of consideration, were drawn from a European population of 131,796,800 and numbered approximately 7,000,000 men, although Russia could have put as many as 14,000,000 men in the field if she could have armed and equipped them.

The growth of Great Britain's military power and the entrance of the United States into the war are not going to overwhelm Germany by man power. But American participation in the war together with the sustained efforts of the Entente is going slowly but surely to bring about the downfall of the Teuton war machine by means of an ever-increasing preponderance of guns and more guns, ammunition and more ammunition, airplanes and more airplanes, together with other sinews of war.

The big outstanding fact is that the only limit to the military resources of the Entente Allies is to be the amount needed to win the war. Man power will remain about as it is or fluctuate slightly. But the real strength of the Entente Allies' fighting machine is increasing at an accelerating pace and there is no means whereby Germany can prevent its growth.

The German machine, on the other hand, has already passed its point of maximum power. It cannot increase in strength, and it cannot stand still. It can only recede before the inevitable.

Sixteen hundred children of soldiers overseas were entertained to a Christmas tree at Brantford yesterday by local war veterans.

TODAY'S STORY

"I don't understand why Gamboge is so unpopular," said Westerly. "He has a hundred fine qualities which we usually admire. He is honest and industrious, and reliable as the town clock, and there's never been anything disreputable associated with him. One might draw out a long list of his merits, and a stranger seeing that list would say that Gamboge must be an ornament to his sex.

"Yet there isn't anybody in town so generally disliked or so lonesome. Nobody seems to want to have anything to do with him."

"Gamboge reminds me of an automobile I bought several years ago before I knew much about cars," observed Fitzdick. "I took a long time making up my mind what car to buy, and read about one hundred bushels of literature put out by the different makers. At last I decided upon the Sidewinder car, because its specifications couldn't be beaten. It had everything a fine car ought to have.

"It had the classiest radiator and the best bearings in the market, and the finest steering gear. Notwithstanding which the car was a false alarm and a heart breaker, and I aged ten years every time I drove it. It should have been a solace and a joy, with such a list of specifications, but it was the worst frost that ever blighted a man's life.

"It's the same way with Gamboge. It's hard to lay hold of any point of his character that won't wash, and you can write out an endless catalogue of his virtues, and yet he is such an uncomfortable sort of gun that nobody wants to associate with him. For one thing, he's always afraid that somebody's going to infringe on his sacred rights.

"Jimuelson told me the other day that he lived next door to Gamboge for a while and made a determined effort to get along with him in a friendly way. In order to do it he found he had to be always explaining or apologizing. One day his wife hung some rugs over the fence dividing the property of the two neighbors, and Gamboge came over with a severe face and a law-book in his hand and quoted authorities showing that a line fence couldn't be used in such a manner without the consent of all parties. He explained that the north side of the fence was his, and nobody had a right to throw rugs over it.

"He's that kind of a man. Jimuelson stood it for a long time, for he was bound and determined to live in harmony with his neighbors. But one evening in the fall he raked up a pile of dead leaves and set fire to it. He made sure that the wind was blowing away from Gamboge's before he started the fire, but suddenly the breeze swung around to the opposite direction and blew the smoke over to Gamboge's place.

"Then Gamboge came over with his lawbook and his expression of outraged innocence and began expounding statutes, and Jimuelson couldn't stand it any longer. He broke down three panels of fence with Gamboge's person and cheerfully paid his fine next morning."

UNEXPECTED EVENTS HAVE FURNISHED SURPRISES.

It Was Hoped That War Would End in 1917, but the Russian Revolution Upset the Calculations of the Allies—Important Changes Have Taken Place in Canada.

It must be admitted that the past year was in many ways disappointing to the Allies. Last January it was confidently stated that the war would be over by Christmas, and now there are men who believe that it may last two years longer. This change was mainly due to the revolution in Russia, which added one more democracy to the brotherhood of nations. Unfortunately for the Allies, however, the revolution and the reaction from autocracy to democracy have combined to cause a radical wave to sweep over the Slavs. Revolution has followed revolution, and the end of the year finds the extreme radicals in control. It will be some years before Russia becomes normal, with a moderate and progressive government. In the meantime the Germans have profited by the collapse of Russia. They have been enabled to secure fresh troops for the French and Italian fronts. Military experts believe that the Allies must now face the most important crisis of the war. They will have to hold back the overwhelming forces of the Teutons until the American army is ready to take the field. Then the deferred victory will come.

When the Germans decided to resume their ruthless submarine campaign, they took a step that brought the United States into the war. The war lords believed that the U-boats would bring the Allies to their knees before Uncle Sam could give them any aid, so the Kaiser risked this powerful addition to his enemies. The submarines did not accomplish what the Germans expected, and the British now have the U-boat menace well in hand, one of the great triumphs of the year. The United States entered the war, and will shortly be ready to give valuable assistance. The coming together of the three great democracies, Great Britain, France, and the United States, will probably be one of the most important events in the history of the world. The friendship cemented in war should alter the entire future of our civilization. The great branches of the Anglo-Saxon family are completely reconciled. That is the most significant happening of 1917, and it offsets the many disappointments of the year.

Even without the assistance of Russia, the Allies made steady advances all summer. Their outstanding setback was the Italian disaster. The Germans, having used pacifism propaganda to weaken the morale of the Italian troops, launched a great offensive, and are now invading Italy. In other fields the Allies have made important gains. The British now occupy Bagdad and Jerusalem, thus dominating Mesopotamia and Palestine, and late in the year they cleared the final handful of defenders out of German East Africa, the last of the Hun colonies. On the Western front, with the exception of the defeat at Cambrai, the Allies have been invariably successful.

Canada has voiced its determination to have conscription and to stay in the war to the finish. The adoption of the Union Government idea may alter the whole face of our politics, and by process of evolution that system of governing the country will possibly lead to important changes in our national life. The chief danger and problem in this country is the bitter race hatred that has been fomented this year. At the present moment Quebec is lined up solidly against the English portion of the Dominion. The situation may yet lead to an acute crisis, and Canada, as a nation, must face and solve this difficulty in the future.

JANUARY.

4. The Russians announced the evacuation of the Roumanian Province of Dobrudja.
5. The Germans occupied Braila.
7. The French forces left Piraeus in Greece on account of the demonstration of the royalists against the democratic allies.
Sir Frederick Borden, former Minister of Militia in the Laurier Cabinet, died at Canning, N. S.
Capt. Fred Selous, the famous big game hunter, was killed in action.
8. The Allied Governments sent an ultimatum to Greece regarding the pro-German attitude of King Constantine and his advisers.
The Germans occupied Fokshani.
Speaker Sevigny joined the Borden Cabinet.
Portuguese soldiers arrived on the French front and began to take an active part in the war against Germany.
10. Premier Trepoff of Russia resigned.
11. Greece accepted the Allied ultimatum, though it later turned out that the acceptance was insincere.
12. The Allied Governments answered the peace note issued by President Wilson shortly before the end of the year. They declared that the war would have to continue until the Central Powers relinquished their purpose to dominate the world by brute force.
Anzac troops destroyed the Turkish position at Rafa in Palestine.
?. The Allies issued their final ultimatum [illegible] all Allied diplomats were ordered to leave Bucharest.
16. Admiral Dewey, the United States seaman, the hero of Manila Bay, died in his 80th year.
18. Earl of Elgin died in Scotland. Canadians were interested in this Scotch nobleman because he was born in the Dominion during the days of political storm and stress when responsible government was being established here.
28. Two small naval engagements took place in the North Sea. Several German war vessels were destroyed while attempting to leave Zeebrugge on account of the ice.
29. Earl of Cromer, one of the greatest of British statesmen, who made his fame by his handling of the Egyptian situation, died suddenly.
31. The Kaiser hoisted the black flag. It was officially announced by the German Government that the ruthless submarine campaign would be resumed at once.

The most important incident in the month of January was the announcement of Germany's return to the campaign of piracy. For many months the brutal element in the Hun Government had been advocating the adoption of this form of warfare. They promised that it would starve England and end the war before the end of June. At last the more humane and progressive German statesmen were defeated and the war lords got control. It was generally recognized even in Germany that the ruthless warfare might cause a rupture with the United States, but the war lords believed that they could bring the war to an end before the Americans could be ready to give the Allies any effective assistance. Their diplomats did everything possible to delay the action of the United States during February and March, and were ably assisted by the pro-German politicians in the United States. Their prophecy that the submarine warfare would end the war before midsummer has miscarried, and they also woefully miscalculated regarding the United States.

FEBRUARY.

3. The United States broke off diplomatic relations with Germany on account of the ruthless U-boat campaign.
5. Seven survivors of Sir Ernest Shackleton's South Pole expedition reached Wellington, N.Z.
6. The Turks evacuated the south bank of the Tigris following a successful British offensive.
7. Germans evacuated Grandcourt, which was occupied by the British troops.
8. General Haig's troops captured Sailly-Saillisel Hill on the Somme front.
11. The British army in Mesopotamia reached the outskirts of Kut-el-Amara.
The Duke of Norfolk, the ranking member of the British nobility and the foremost member of the Roman Church in England, died in London.
13. The United States Government urged all Americans to leave Germany as soon as possible.
China made the official threat to sever diplomatic relations with Germany.
A revolution that Germany had fomented in Cuba burst into flame, but it was suppressed in less than a month.
18. The British troops advanced on the Ancre.
The Turks were defeated by the British near Kut-el-Amara.
19. Major-General Frederick Funston, who commanded the American standing army, died suddenly.
21. Sir Robert Borden reached England to take part in the Imperial Conference.
25. The Germans retired three miles on the Ancre, making the greatest retreat in two years, under cover of a fog. This retirement was the result of the battle of the Somme, and definitely stamped that great offensive carried on by the British during the summer of 1916 as a victory for General Haig's troops.
The New Brunswick Government met defeat at the polls.
26. The United States Government voted $100,000,000 for war purposes.
The British occupied Kut-el-Amara after a sweeping victory over the Turks. Thus did General Maude avenge the great disaster that the British suffered at this spot during the first year of the war.
27. The Provincial Legislature of Ontario gave votes to the women of the province.
29. It was discovered that Germany had proposed to Mexico and Japan that these two countries should attack the United States before that nation could be ready for war.
Gommecourt, on the western front in France, was captured by the British.

MARCH.

1. President Wilson was empowered by Congress to arm American ships to fight the submarines.
2. The Germans settled down in new positions after their great retreat, and the Hindenburg line was first heard about.
The British announced that 185,000 slaves in German East Africa had been given their freedom.
4. The United States Congress expired without taking any decisive action against Germany. This was the result of a handful of traitors described by President Wilson as wilful men [illegible]
5. British took [illegible] Somme front [illegible]
8. Count Zeppelin [illegible] The failure [illegible] use the [illegible] England [illegible]
11. The British [illegible] Maude captured [illegible] the Turks. [illegible] particularly interesting to Canadians because [illegible] was aide-de-camp [illegible] and became widely [illegible] the Dominion.
12. French made an advance in the Champagne district.
14. The Germans evacuated [illegible] paume [illegible]
The Duchess of [illegible] in London.
15. A revolution took place in Petrograd. The Czar abdicated and the Romanoff dynasty came to an end.
18. The British and French [illegible] tremendous drive [illegible] Germans, capturing 800 square miles of territory, including [illegible] ronne and other towns.
The Russians routed the Turks in Armenia and the British scored another success in Mesopotamia.
Three United States ships were sunk by German U-boats.
27. The Germans torpedoed the British hospital ship Asturias.
Berlin offered a separate peace to the Russian revolutionists.
29. Germany refused to modify the U-boat warfare to meet the demands of the United States.

The month of March will always be remembered on account of the revolution that shattered the autocracy of Russia. During the first years of the war the Russian autocrats had been playing a treacherous game to establish themselves more firmly in power. The pro-German party, headed by the Czarina and the monk Rasputin, had leading Russian statesmen working to betray the people. More than once treachery enabled the Germans to massacre the Russian army. The pro-German autocrats had decided on a separate peace, but they feared the people. There were many signs of a coming revolution, and the Czarina's party decided to use them to accomplish their ends. Their plan was to foment an uprising. The Russian soldiers were to be called in to crush it, and the assistance of the German army also secured to defend the sacred (?) person of the Czar. This revolution was to form an excuse for a separate peace. It would also give the autocrats a chance to crush the democratic movement and execute the leaders. The leaders of the Duma feared to take a strong stand against the autocratic government. They foresaw some treacherous scheme. Conditions in Petrograd went from bad to worse, as the autocrats planned, and at last the revolution started. The army was called in to massacre the people, but the soldiers joined with the civilians and turned on the autocrats. The leaders of the Duma joined them immediately, and the revolution became a success. Czar Nicholas abdicated, and the autocracy and the dark forces of Russia were crushed. The pro-Germans and the aristocrats of Russia had been hoisted on their own petard.

APRIL.

2. The United States declared war against Germany at a special meeting of Congress.
6. A Brazilian ship was sunk by a U-boat.
8. The United States seized 91 German ships in the various harbors of the country.
9. The Canadians captured Vimy Ridge, with 11,000 prisoners and 100 guns. This was one of the most glorious pages in the history of the Canadian army.
10. Labor deputies failed in an attempt to upset the new Russian Government and establish a separate peace with Germany.
Brazil severed diplomatic relations with the Central Powers.
11. British troops captured Monchy.
It was decided that an Allied council would meet at Washington, with Mr. Balfour representing England, and Viviani and General Joffre representing France.
16. The Dominion Government placed wheat on the list of free importations.
17. French captured Auberne.
18. Germans burned a number of Roumanian towns.
20. French won a battle in the Champagne.
23. Hon. Arthur J. Balfour arrived at Halifax on his way to Washington.
25. A fight occurred in the English channel. The sailors on the British warship boarded the German vessel and fought its defenders hand to hand. It was one of the most picturesque incidents of the war.
29. The Canadians captured Arleux from the Germans.
30. The Germans were pushed back in the Champagne by General Nivelle's troops.

MAY.

1. Carranza took oath of office as the first constitutional president of Mexico.
3. The Canadians captured Fresnoy.
4. Village of Craonne was taken by the French, who dislodged the enemy from their last position on Ladies' Walk.
Bishop Mills of the Anglican Diocese of Ontario died at Kingston.
7. Venezilist Greeks clashed with the Bulgarians.
8. The National Coalition Ministry was returned to power in Australia with majorities in both the House of Representatives and the Senate.
?. General Russky was removed from the command of the Russian troops.
12. General Viviani was received at Ottawa by a joint session of the House of Commons and the Senate.
14. Premier Borden reached Quebec on his way back from the Imperial Conference.

19. Herbert C. Hoover was appointed food administrator of the United States.
23. Brazil decided to enter the war against Germany.
24. The Italians smashed the Austrian lines in the Carso.
Hon. A. J. Balfour said farewell to the United States.
25. Hon. A. J. Balfour arrived in Canada.
29. Premier Borden conferred with Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and made an effort to organize a national government in Canada.

JUNE.

4. General Brussiloff was appointed the new commander-in-chief of the Russian army.
5. British and German air squadrons battled over the Thames, and eight of the raiders were brought down.
German destroyers were sunk in a fight off Zeebrugge.
The Cossacks condemned the idea of a separate peace with Germany.
6. Sir Wilfrid Laurier definitely rejected the coalition proposals made by Premier Borden.
Lord Northcliffe was chosen head of the British War Mission.
8. The Stockholm Socialist Congress was called off, as the representative socialists from several nations refused to meet with the blood-stained Germans.
General Pershing, commander of the United States Expeditionary Force, arrived in England.
10. Russians rejected the German plan for a separate peace.
The Italians seized Janina in Greece.
11. The Conscription Bill was introduced into the Canadian House of Commons.
The Italians captured Aguello Pass.
12. King Constantine of Greece abdicated, under pressure exerted by the Allies. The Crown Prince was passed over on account of his pro-German feelings, and Prince Alexander became King of Greece.
14. General Byng retired from command of the Canadian army in France.
18. It was announced that the crisis in Spain, which had threatened to end in a revolution, was definitely passed.

UNEXPECTED EVENTS HAVE FURNISHED SURPRISES.

It Was Hoped That War Would End in 1917, but the Russian Revolution Upset the Calculations of the Allies—Important Changes Have Taken Place in Canada.

It must be admitted that the past year was in many ways disappointing to the Allies. Last January it was confidently stated that the war would be over by Christmas, and now there are men who believe that it may last two years longer. This change was mainly due to the revolution in Russia, which added one more democracy to the brotherhood of nations. Unfortunately for the Allies, however, the revolution and the reaction from autocracy to democracy have combined to cause a radical wave to sweep over the Slavs. Revolution has followed revolution, and the end of the year finds the extreme radicals in control. It will be some years before Russia becomes normal, with a moderate and progressive government. In the meantime the Germans have profited by the collapse of Russia. They have been enabled to secure fresh troops for the French and Italian fronts. Military experts believe that the Allies must now face the most important crisis of the war. They will have to hold back the overwhelming forces of the Teutons until the American army is ready to take the field. Then the deferred victory will come.

When the Germans decided to resume their ruthless submarine campaign, they took a step that brought the United States into the war. The war lords believed that the U-boats would bring the Allies to their knees before Uncle Sam could give them any aid, so the Kaiser risked this powerful addition to his enemies. The submarines did not accomplish what the Germans expected, and the British now have the U-boat menace well in hand, one of the great triumphs of the year. The United States entered the war, and will shortly be ready to give valuable assistance. The coming together of the three great democracies, Great Britain, France, and the United States, will probably be one of the most important events in the history of the world. The friendship cemented in war should alter the entire future of our civilization. The great branches of the Anglo-Saxon family are completely reconciled. That is the most significant happening of 1917, and it offsets the many disappointments of the year.

Even without the assistance of Russia, the Allies made steady advances all summer. Their outstanding setback was the Italian disaster. The Germans, having used pacifist propaganda to weaken the morale of the Italian troops, launched a great offensive, and are now invading Italy. In other fields the Allies have made important gains. The British now occupy Bagdad and Jerusalem, thus dominating Mesopotamia and Palestine, and late in the year they cleared the final handful of defenders out of German East Africa, the last of the Hun colonies. On the Western front, with the exception of the defeat at Cambrai, the Allies have been invariably successful.

Canada has voiced its determination to have conscription and to stay in the war to the finish. The adoption of the Union Government idea may alter the whole face of our politics, and by process of evolution that system of governing the country will possibly lead to important changes in our national life. The chief danger and problem in this country is the bitter race hatred that has been fomented this year. At the present moment Quebec is lined up solidly against the English portion of the Dominion. The situation may yet lead to an acute crisis, and Canada, as a nation, must face and solve this difficulty in the future.

JANUARY.

4. The Russians announced the evacuation of the Roumanian Province of Dobrudja.

5. The Germans occupied Braila.

7. The French forces left Piraeus in Greece on account of the demonstration of the royalists against the democratic allies.
Sir Frederick Borden, former Minister of Militia in the Laurier Cabinet, died at Canning, N. S.
Capt. Fred Selous, the famous big game hunter, was killed in action.

8. The Allied Governments sent an ultimatum to Greece regarding the pro-German attitude of King Constantine and his advisers.
The Germans occupied Fokshani.
Speaker Sevigny joined the Borden Cabinet.
Portuguese soldiers arrived on the French front and began to take an active part in the war against Germany.

10. Premier Trepoff of Russia resigned.

11. Greece accepted the Allied ultimatum, though it later turned out that the acceptance was insincere.

12. The Allied Governments answered the peace note issued by President Wilson shortly before the end of the year. They declared that the war would have to continue until the Central Powers relinquished their purpose to dominate the world by brute force.
Anzac troops destroyed the Turkish position at Rafa in Palestine.
The Allies issued their final [illegible] all neutral diplomats were ordered to leave Bucharest.

16. Admiral Dewey, the United States seaman, the hero of Manila Bay, died in his 80th year.

18. Earl of Elgin died in Scotland. Canadians were interested in this Scotch nobleman because he was born in the Dominion during the days of political storm and stress when responsible government was being established here.

23. Two small naval engagements took place in the North Sea. Several German war vessels were destroyed while attempting to leave Zeebrugge on account of the ice.

29. Earl of Cromer, one of the greatest of British statesmen, who made his fame by his handling of the Egyptian situation, died suddenly.

31. The Kaiser hoisted the black flag. It was officially announced by the German Government that the ruthless submarine campaign would be resumed at once.

The most important incident in the month of January was the announcement of Germany's return to the campaign of piracy. For many months the brutal element in the Hun Government had been advocating the adoption of this form of warfare. They promised that it would starve England and end the war before the end of June. At last the more humane and progressive German statesmen were defeated and the war lords got control. It was generally recognized even in Germany that the ruthless warfare might cause a rupture with the United States, but the war lords believed that they could bring the war to an end before the Americans could be ready to give the Allies any effective assistance. Their diplomats did everything possible to delay the action of the United States during February and March, and were ably assisted by the pro-German politicians in the United States. Their prophecy that the submarine warfare would end the war before midsummer has miscarried, and they also woefully miscalculated regarding the United States.

FEBRUARY.

3. The United States broke off diplomatic relations with Germany on account of the ruthless U-boat campaign.

5. Seven survivors of Sir Ernest Shackleton's South Pole expedition reached Wellington, N.Z.

6. The Turks evacuated the south bank of the Tigris following a successful British offensive.

7. Germans evacuated Grandcourt, which was occupied by the British troops.

8. General Haig's troops captured Sailly-Saillisel Hill on the Somme front.

11. The British army in Mesopotamia reached the outskirts of Kut-el-Amara.
The Duke of Norfolk, the ranking member of the British nobility and the foremost member of the Roman Church in England, died in London.

13. The United States Government urged all Americans to leave Germany as soon as possible.
China made the official threat to sever diplomatic relations with Germany.
A revolution that Germany had fomented in Cuba burst into flame, but it was suppressed in less than a month.

18. The British troops advanced on the Ancre.
The Turks were defeated by the British near Kut-el-Amara.

19. Major-General Frederick Funston, who commanded the American standing army, died suddenly.

21. Sir Robert Borden reached England to take part in the Imperial Conference.

25. The Germans retired three miles on the Ancre, making the greatest retreat in two years, under cover of a fog. This retirement was the result of the battle of the Somme, and definitely stamped that great offensive carried on by the British during the summer of 1916 as a victory for General Haig's troops.
The New Brunswick Government met defeat at the polls.

26. The United States Government voted $100,000,000 for war purposes.
The British occupied Kut-el-Amara after a sweeping victory over the Turks. Thus did General Maude avenge the great disaster that the British suffered at this spot during the first year of the war.

27. The Provincial Legislature of Ontario gave votes to the women of the province.

29. It was discovered that Germany had proposed to Mexico and Japan that these two countries should attack the United States before that nation could be ready for war.
Gommecourt, on the western front in France, was captured by the British.

MARCH.

1. President Wilson was empowered by Congress to arm American ships to fight the submarines.

3. The Germans settled down in new positions after their great retreat, and the Hindenburg line was first heard about.
The British announced that 185,000 slaves in German East Africa had been given their freedom.

4. The United States Congress expired without taking any decisive action against Germany. This was the result of a handful of traitors described by President Wilson [illegible] wilful men.

5. British took [illegible] Somme front [illegible]

8. Count Zeppelin [illegible]

11. The British [illegible] Maude captured [illegible] the Turks. The [illegible] particularly inter[illegible] dians because G[illegible] was aide-de-camp to [illegible] and became widely [illegible] the Dominion.

12. French made an advance in the Champagne district.

14. The Germans evacuated Bapaume.
The Duchess of [illegible] in London.

15. A revolution took place in Petrograd. The Czar abdicated and the Romanoff dynasty came to an end.

18. The British and French [illegible] tremendous drive against the Germans, capturing 900 square miles of territory, including Peronne and other towns.
The Russians routed the Turks in Armenia, and the British scored another success in Mesopotamia.
Three United States ships were sunk by German U-boats.

27. The Germans torpedoed the British hospital ship Asturias.
Berlin offered a separate peace to the Russian revolutionists.

29. Germany refused to modify the U-boat warfare to meet the demands of the United States.

The month of March will always be remembered on account of the revolution that shattered the autocracy of Russia. During the first years of the war the Russian autocrats had been playing a treacherous game to establish themselves more firmly in power. The pro-German party, headed by the Czarina and the monk Rasputin, had leading Russian statesmen working to betray the people. More than once treachery enabled the Germans to massacre the Russian army. The pro-German autocrats had decided on a separate peace, but they feared the people. There were many signs of a coming revolution, and the Czarina's party decided to use them to accomplish their ends. Their plan was to foment an uprising. The Russian soldiers were to be called in to crush it, and the assistance of the German army also secured to defend the sacred (?) person of the Czar. This revolution was to form an excuse for a separate peace. It would also give the autocrats a chance to crush the democratic movement and execute the leaders. The leaders of the Duma feared to take a strong stand against the autocratic government. They foresaw some treacherous scheme. Conditions in Petrograd went from bad to worse, as the autocrats planned, and at last the revolution started. The army was called in to massacre the people, but the soldiers joined with the civilians and turned on the autocrats. The leaders of the Duma joined them immediately, and the revolution became a success. Czar Nicholas abdicated, and the autocracy and the dark forces of Russia were crushed. The pro-Germans and the aristocrats of Russia had been hoisted on their own petard.

APRIL.

2. The United States declared war against Germany at a special meeting of Congress.

6. A Brazilian ship was sunk by a U-boat.

8. The United States seized 91 German ships in the various harbors of the country.

DOES NOT KNOW BILLY SUNDAY

BUT THE EVANGELIST KNOWS BONAR LAW AND HIS KIND.

In the British House of Commons, says the London Daily Chronicle, the following interesting dialogue took place:

Mr. Whitehouse—May I ask the Prime Minister if Mr. William Sunday has been invited, on behalf of the government, to visit this country, and for what purpose?

Mr. Bonar Law, who replied for Mr. Lloyd George—The answer is in the negative.

Mr. Billing—Will the Right Honorable gentleman say who is Mr. William Sunday

Mr. Bonar Law—I am sorry to say I do not know. (Laughter.)

The Daily Chronicle then explains the identity of Billy:—

"The Mr William Sunday referred to in Mr. Whitehead's question is the 'Billy' Sunday who has achieved great notoriety in the United States as a revivalist preacher. He was formerly a professional baseball player and, as a preacher, has been described as 'the man with a punch in every sentence.'

"Unconventional is a mild way of describing his methods as a preacher and evangelist. He has a voice of thunder, which, it is said, would easily fill the Albert Hall, although at times he can coo like any dove. He imports the jargon of the baseball field into his sermons, and flings himself about the pulpit in fierce contortions. He is highly popular in America, and Mr. Whitehouse's question was presumably based on a rumor that Mr. Sunday had been invited here to take part in a war loan propaganda.

Doesn't Give a Whoop.

Warsaw, Ind —Billy Sunday doesn't mind it a bit—in fact he doesn't give a whoop in Texas—because Bonar Law never heard of him. But he knows Bonar Law. Asked if he had ever heard of the Englishman, Billy said, "Oh, yes, I've heard of Bonar Law. I keep posted on both statesmen and preachers."

The city needs men like J. M. Greene on the Board of Education. Give him a big vote.

Capt. Burnham Stays Neutral

"You ask me when the Provincial elections will come on and if there is any stir as to a candidate I cannot say. It will be enough for me to mind my own business. Whoever is chosen by the convention I will help to the best of my ability, be it a man or woman. Many have spoken to me in favor of having a woman candidate. That would be very interesting. But as I say I do not care to express myself further than to say that a convention ought to be called at an early date."

So Capt. Burnham spoke today when The Review asked him for an expression of opinion on the Provincial situation.

Take Care of Your Stomach and You will Avoid Dyspepsia

Dyspepsia is an advanced stage of indigestion, arising from the stomach refusing to perform its normal functions. Digestion consists in the changing of foods from an insoluble to a soluble form, so that they may pass through the walls of the alimentary canal and become part of the blood. The stomach keeps the food in almost constant motion for a considerable time to accomplish this purpose, and should this organ not be kept in good condition, indigestion results, to be followed in due course, if not relieved, by Dyspepsia. You can keep the stomach performing its functions, assist Digestion, and even relieve and cure Dyspepsia, if you

Take Care of Your Stomach and You will not have Catarrh

Catarrh is an inflamation of the mucus membranes. Many people associate it solely with their nose and throat, as if catarrh were a local trouble. As a matter of fact, to treat this dread disease it is necessary to go into the stomach, the root of the trouble, to weed out the poisonous acids, and allow nature an opportunity to repair whatever damage has already been done. A stomach tonic is needed to prevent the formation of poison and those symptoms which culminate in Catarrh of the stomach, and spreads to throat and nose. You can keep the stomach in normal condition, and even relieve and cure catarrh therein if you

Good Start on New Year's Day

The Methodist Sunday Schools at their session yesterday made arrangements for the rally in George street Church on New Year's morning at 10.30 o'clock. Great enthusiasm is being manifested and it is thought that this will be a splendid way to begin the new year. A hearty invitation is extended to those who are not members of the schools to be present at the service. The offering which will be taken will be devoted to the Armenian and Serbian Relief Fund, after the expenses of the day have been met.

Carpenters only, and not plumbers or electricians, are needed at present for reconstruction work at Halifax, it is announced.

OBITUARY

MRS. MARGARET MORROW.

Mrs. Margaret Morrow, mother of Mr. W. G. Morrow, 302 Water street, died today at her residence in Bowmanville. Mrs. Morrow was 84 years old and the widow of Robert Morrow who died twenty years ago.

Two other sons and one daughter survive. They are Andrew and James Morrow of Orono and Mrs. James Gillies of Bowmanville.

The funeral will be at Bowmanville on Wednesday afternoon at two o'clock.

MRS. W. M. WELBOURN.

The funeral of Mrs. W. M. Welbourn, who died in Nicholls Hospital, Saturday night was held this afternoon from Belleghem's undertaking parlors to Little Lake Cemetery. Rev. Robert Pogue conducted the funeral service.

Mrs. Welbourn was taken ill on Saturday morning, at the American Hotel, where with her husband and son Earl, she had made her home for some time. The deceased was born at Bridgenorth 33 years ago. She was a member of St. Andrew's Church, and was held in high esteem by a large circle of friends.

RUTH MADELINE ZAVITZ.

Ruth Madeline, the seven months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Zavitz, 780 Water street, died in Toronto where the parents had taken the child to undergo treatment. The funeral will be held here tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock to Little Lake Cemetery.

No Liquor Goes To Halifax Now

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Halifax, Dec. 31. — Temporary but comfortable shelter for one thousand families rendered destitute by the disaster will be provided before long by the reconstruction committee was the statement made today by Col. Robert Low, manager of reconstruction. Col. Low said that the committee was confining itself at the present time to the provision of temporary housing and emergency repairs. As the result of a visit of ministers of the Federal Cabinet to Halifax, transportation of liquor into this city has been banned.

Some Changes In Local Service Of The C. P. R. on January 6

Peterborough will not fare badly in the general change which the Canadian Pacific Railway will make in the service on January 6th.

The mixed train which now leaves at 6:45 a.m. for Toronto and makes the trip by way of Lindsay will take the direct route to the Queen City.

The passenger train which now leaves North Toronto at 10 p.m. will leaving Peterborough at 5.59 will be cancelled Saturday nights only, and the westbound passenger train cancelled Sunday mornings.

The night local leaving this city at 8:40 will stop its run at Havelock.

The local office has not been notified as to any changes in the time-table.

AT ST. ANDREW'S

Rev. Mr. Macdonald of Toronto occupied the pulpit at St. Andrew's yesterday, and delivered two interesting and inspiring sermons which were greatly enjoyed by those present.

There will be no mid-week prayer meeting on Wednesday of this week.

Thursday at 8 p.m. at Trinity Sunday School, those who are taking part in the religious canvass are requested to meet and receive instructions. Rev. Mr. Halpenny will be present and will address the canvassers.

Friday from 1 to 2, Mr. W. G. Read, chairman of No. 1 district, will meet the canvassers at St. Andrew's Sunday School room.

Next Sunday services will be conducted by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Rowand.

On Monday evening, Jan. 7, at 8 p.m. at the home of Mr. A. MacNab the annual meeting of the Sunday School. It is hoped that all the officers and teachers will endeavor to be present.

Guatemala Is Laid in Ruins

EARTHQUAKE WRECKS CITY AND 125,000 PEOPLE ARE HOMELESS.

Washington, Dec. 31. Guatemala City, capital of the Central American republic of Guatemala, has been laid in ruins by a series of earthquakes beginning on Christmas Day and culminating Saturday night in violent shocks which completed the work of destruction. A cablegram to the Navy Department said 125,000 people were in the streets without shelter and that a number were killed by falling walls.

Naval vessels in Central American waters have been ordered to the stricken city to render all possible assistance.

Following is the brief despatch which brought the news of the catastrophe:

"Bad earthquake yesterday finished the work of others. Everything in ruins and beyond description as a result of last night's shock. One hundred and twenty-five thousand people are in the streets. Parts of the country are very cold and windy. Help is needed badly. Quite a number killed yesterday by falling walls."

French Pierce The German Lines

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Berlin, Dec. 31.—French forces on the northern Italian front yesterday took the offensive. In the afternoon French infantry penetrated portions of the Austro-German positions on Monte Tomba, the German general staff announced today.

Farmers and farm help were in most cases granted exemption by the Petrolea Appeal Court, while they remained farming.

Pass the De Laval By-law

The De Laval bylaw should receive a record majority in the voting on New Year's Day.

This splendid company has gone far beyond the agreement with the city, and is developing fast as one of the premier manufacturing concerns in Ontario.

There should not be a single vote cast against the bylaw tomorrow.

141 Hunter St. E.,
Peterborough, December 25, 1917.

To the Electorate of the City of Peterborough.—

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

Should it be your pleasure to elect me as one of your representatives on the Board of Education for the city of Peterborough at the coming civic elections, it will be equally my pleasure to willingly serve you in that capacity to the best of my ability to do so.

I am fully aware of and appreciate the importance of the continued development of our educational facilities, in the general interests of our young people and the city of Peterborough, both from the standpoint of "General" education and "Technical" education, and I am of opinion that neither branch can be neglected with impunity.

As a graduate in Engineering Science of the University of London, England, I am not unacquainted with the preparatory needs of students who purpose entering similar institutions.

Above all things I am a believer in giving our young people and our artisans" and "craftsmen" generally every educational opportunity within our means, so that they may be able to look back, in the years to come, with satisfaction, on our efforts of today.

I take this opportunity of expressing my appreciation of the good work which has unquestionably been done, educationally, in the past, by previous Boards of Education, and will endeavor, if elected, to do my duty also, with due consideration for the students, the teachers, the city of Peterborough and the public purse.

Yours very truly,
W. H. PRETTY.

WHICH ONE SHALL I MARRY?

"Which One Shall I Marry?" will be the attraction at the Grand Opera House for two performances next Saturday. The play is full of heart throbs, screamingly funny comedy, and a strong moral lesson also runs through it.

Besides this, those who are interested in its production claim that it brings out an idea that is entirely new in play-writing.

This is not only in its dramatic construction, but in the scenery which is used to introduce the character of a young girl whose fate is the subject of the struggle of opposing interests. In certain parts of the story, the waking dreams of the girl are actually pictured on the stage, and to give her the proper atmosphere it was absolutely necessary to surround her with an environment of scene which would be convincing.

The play is not a farce by any means, and has a serious lesson underlying it, but the characters are humorous lower middle Irish working class, and some of the situations into which they are led are screamingly funny. But the main subject, that of a good honest everyday Irish-American girl, with the difficult choice put before her of a marriage which is offered by her rich employer, and also by a poor workman of her own class, is just the subject that always rings true in the hearts of an American audience. The labor troubles of the period are touched upon, and the money-making struggles which dry up the sympathies of the human heart also develop their share of the interest.

The company is under the management of Ed. W. Rowland, the prominent producer, and Lorin J. Howard, one of the cleverest of the younger stage directors. A magnificent scenic production is promised and the company includes Miss [illegible] Lee as "the girl," who has appeared in many notable productions.

"MOST GRATEFUL WOMAN IN TOWN"

"THE WAY TANLAC HELPED ME IS SIMPLY WONDERFUL," SAYS MRS. EDWARDS.

"I feel so happy over what Tanlac did for me I just want to tell everybody about it," said Mrs. Florence Edwards, a resident of Buttonwood avenue, Mt. Dennis, Toronto.

"Several weeks ago," continued Mrs. Edwards, "I contracted a severe pain that settled in my side. In a little while my left side, arm and shoulder began to throb and ache till I suffered agonies from rheumatism. The trouble got worse and worse till finally my arm and shoulder were so stiff it almost killed me to bend over and I actually was unable to put on my shoes. My shoulder hurt so I couldn't rest and sometimes for two whole nights I wasn't able to sleep a wink. My side felt like a sharp knife was sticking in it and I was so weak and helpless I just had to give up my housework, for hardly an hour passed over my head that I wasn't miserable the whole time.

"Just as soon as I started taking Tanlac I began to feel better and the pain seemed to be leaving me. I am now on my second bottle and already that awful pain in my side is entirely gone and I am feeling better all over. My arm and shoulder are entirely free from rheumatism and I can now do all my housework as well as I ever could. The way Tanlac has relieved me of that awful rheumatism is simply wonderful and it has made me the most grateful woman in town."

Rheumatism is not only one of the most prevalent, but one of the most painful and difficult to treat of all present day diseases. When the digestive organs and bowels are not working properly, and the kidneys become clogged up, the whole system becomes deranged and saturated with uric acid poisons and other impurities which accumulate in the joints and other parts of the body and produce the condition known as rheumatism.

Tanlac is a powerful reconstructive tonic and quickly overcomes this condition by acting directly on the vital organs, toning them up and enabling them to perform their proper functions, so that the impurities are soon eliminated from the system in a natural way. Liniments and external applications as a general thing only afford temporary relief. Tanlac is a constitutional treatment and gets right at the root of the trouble by removing the cause.

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Wayne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. [illegible], in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.

GEORGE STREET CHURCH.

The watch-night service will be held in George Street Methodist Church tonight from eleven to twelve. Mrs. J. R. Renwick will sing, and Rev. R. A. Whattam of Mark Street Methodist Church will preach. The pastor of the church will be in charge. A cordial invitation is extended to all to be present.

Charges of misconduct against Daniel J. Kearney, an Inland Revenue officer of Montreal, will be enquired into by Commissioner T. J. Coonan.

Centre Ward Electors

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

In appealing for your votes in my behalf as candidate for Alderman of Centre Ward, I beg to draw your attention to the fact that I am a firm believer in Municipal Government by Commission, recognizing the fact that better results are to be obtained under the system and if elected will do all I can to have the system fully explained and an opportunity given to the ratepayers to decide the question for themselves.

The foot-bridge at the C. P. R. speaks for itself as the result of my work when in Council. I take the credit for this, as councils in previous years tried to secure this bridge but were unsuccessful. This bridge is very convenient and useful to the general public. There are several important matters coming before next year's council requiring careful consideration and I assure you, if elected, will have my careful consideration.

Trusting you will see to it that I am elected as your representative in Centre Ward.

Yours truly,
JOHN EDGAR.

HISTORY OF

[illegible]

9. Another revolution occurred in Russia. Petrograd was seized by the Bolsheviki, giving Lenine and Trotsky control. Premier Kerensky escaped from Petrograd.
General Maude occupied Tekrit.
9. A new combination of French, British, and Italian strategists took control of the Italian army, replacing General Cadorna.
The Bolsheviki proposed a three-month armistice so that an attempt might be made to arrange peace.
10. General Allenby captured Askalon.
12. The Italian army, thoroughly reorganized, settled down to defend a new line on the Piave.
15. Clemenceau became premier of France, succeeding Painleve, who was forced to resign when M. Thomas, the leader of the Socialist wing, refused to support his Cabinet on account of the imperialistic tendencies of certain of its members.
18. The British occupied Jaffa, the port of Jerusalem.
21. General Byng made a great thrust at Cambrai, advancing over five miles the biggest success of the year.
26. Sir Leander Starr Jameson, remembered for the famous Jameson raid, died in South Africa.

DECEMBER.

2. The Germans made counter-attacks at Cambrai, and retook a part of the ground. It was the most serious defeat that the British had suffered at the hands of the Germans since the spring of 1915.
3. East Africa was announced to be completely cleared of Germans, so that the last of the Kaiser's colonies—with the exception of Bulgaria and Austria —became a British possession.
7. An ammunition ship collided with another boat in Halifax Harbor, causing an explosion that wrecked the city, causing the death of over a thousand. This was the most serious disaster in the history of Canada.
7. General Allenby occupied Hebron.
The United States declared war against Austria.
5. The Cossacks started a revolution against the Bolsheviki.
10. The British captured Jerusalem.
Sir Mackenzie Bowell, a former Premier of Canada, died at Belleville.
16. An armistice was signed between the Russians and the Germans, and peace negotiations will continue until January 12 1918.
17. The Union Government of Canada was returned to power by a large majority.

Settling the Score.

Was it envy that caused the elderly spinster to criticize so severely the home and furniture of her newly-married friend?

Whatever it was, the young wife was getting tired of it.

"Well, anyway," she said presently, as she pointed to a pretty little china clock, "if you don't like my furniture you must surely like that?"

"Yes; it is rather nice," said the visitor, grudgingly. "Who gave it to you?"

"Oh, it wasn't a present!" explained the bride. "I won it in a raffle."

"A raffle!" The spinster drew her angular figure rigidly up. "I never lend my face to such things!"

"Perhaps that's just as well," retorted the younger woman, as she gazed meaningly at the other's sour features, "because if you did I'm afraid nobody would buy the tickets!"

On the Right Trail.

"I guess we're on the trail," declared the great detective.

"Yonder is a shepherdess."

"Eh?"

"Now for the crook."

Judge Masten of Toronto commenced the hearing of appeals at Haileybury yesterday from the decisions of the Local Tribunals.

A refrigerator, a garden hose and an ice pick were stolen by a burglar in Detroit yesterday at a time when it was three degrees below zero.

What It Was.

Our society editor tells us that she called up a bride-to-be the other day in order to get some eleventh-hour dope on some details of the affair. She succeeded in getting the young lady on the wire, but the information was somewhat confused.

"Oh, dear, Im afraid I can't tell you much!" said the bride-to-be "I'm so distracted. I simply don't know anything! What? Oh, the gown is——"

(Here she described the gown. Excuse!)

"And what about the veil?" asked the S. E.

"The veil is of real old Chantilly lace," answered the B2B.

"Is it an heirloom?" prompted the S. E.

"A what?"

"I asked if it was an heirloom?"

"No. It was a bargain."

Synopsis of Canadian Northwest Land Regulations

The sole head of a family or any male over 18 years old, who was at the commencement of the present war, and has since continued to be a British subject or a subject of an allied or neutral country, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion Land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for District. Entry by proxy may be made on certain conditions. Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of land in each of three years.

In certain districts a homesteader may secure an adjoining quarter-section as pre-emption. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Reside six months in each of three years after earning homestead patent and cultivate 50 acres extra. May obtain pre-emption patent as soon as homestead patent on certain conditions.

A settler after obtaining homestead patent, if he cannot secure a pre-emption, may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

Holders of entries may count time of employment as farm laborers in Canada during 1917, as residence duties under certain conditions.

When Dominion Lands are advertised or posted for entry, returned soldiers who have served overseas and have been honorably discharged, receive one day priority in applying for entry at local Agent's Office (but not Sub-Agency). Discharge papers must be presented to Agent.

PETERBOROUGH MAY HAVE SOLDIERS' TEAM IN THE INTERMEDIATE O.H.A. SERIES

Belleville Has Bob Armstrong, Star of 247th Seven

Big doings are promised in the hockey situation, for Peterborough. The latest is the possibility of a team being entered in the Intermediate series of the O. H. A. to play in the district now made up of Whitby, Oshawa, Belleville and Cobourg.

The probability of draftees being stationed in Peterborough for the winter makes a team here likely, unless somebody else has corralled all the players.

Lieut. Col. E. D. O'Flynn, who managed the 247th team here last season is located in Belleville and is at the helm of the Belleville Intermediates. Coincidently, it is said that Bob Armstrong is wintering in the Quinte town, being a member of the Aviation Corps. They talk about [illegible] pennies, etc., etc., but there are no rip van Winkles around the peekers of the gallant Irishman of Baytown.

If the other fellows are willing, a Peterborough team will be entered in the group. The schedule already drawn calls for the opening game at Oshawa on Friday night with Whitby as the visiting team.

EDITOR'S MAIL

WHO BUILT THE FOOTBRIDGE?

Editor Review: I see that John Edgar, candidate for alderman in the Centre Ward, takes to himself the credit for building the C. P. R. footbridge. Mr. Edgar has no more right to claim this improvement as his idea than he has to allege that any other improvements for which he voted in common with the rest of the aldermen, was a result of his initiative.

If any man deserves credit for the C. P. R. footbridge it is ex-Ald. Evans. He not only voted for it, but its construction was possible by means of money that ex-Ald. Evans had saved by economical administration of the fire, water and light committee.

Just how much ex-Ald. Evans' former colleagues believed the footbridge was due to his exertions was made manifest last summer when an attempt to name the bridge for him was turned down by Council.

MILLS—HOWSON.

The marriage of Miss Fleda Howson, only daughter of Mrs. T. J. Howson of this village, to Sergeant Lisle K. Mills, recently returned from overseas, and formerly of the 75th Battalion, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Mills, Healey Falls, formerly of Campbellford, took place on Wednesday afternoon, December 26th, at four o'clock, at the residence of the bride's mother, Queen street.

The bride was given away by her mother, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. A. M. Irwin, pastor of the Methodist Church.

Mrs. Robert McMillen played the wedding march. Later in the evening Sergeant and Mrs. Mills drove over to Hastings and took the evening train. After a short trip they will return to Norwood and Mrs. Mills will stay with Mrs. Howson while Sergeant Mills goes to Kingston for further treatment.—Norwood Register.

CROFTS—EAGLETIN.

A quiet wedding was solemnized on Friday evening, December 28th, at the George Street Methodist parsonage, when Miss Rosana Eagletin was united in marriage to Mr. Bert Crofts, both of Peterborough. The service was performed by Rev. A. J. Thomas.

Mr. and Mrs. Crofts will reside in the city.

Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Browning and daughter Margaret have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Harry Eoanes, of Tweed.

Miss Evelyn McCutcheon is visiting at her home in Stirling.

Mrs. M. Thompson, Miss Lottie and granddaughter, little Madeline Brill, of Tweed, are visiting Mrs. Geo. E. Rodgers, city.

Cadet Halliday Crane has returned from Clifton Springs, where he spent the holiday with his mother, Mrs. John Crane. Cadet Crane is the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Cameron while in the city.

Miss Margaret Thorburn, Niagara Falls, is the guest of her aunt, Mrs. W. H. Hill, Brock street.

Miss M. Carruthers, who has been in charge of Mr. T. R. Preston's millinery department for the past season has returned to her home at Port Hope. While stepping from the train at Peterborough, the step being slippery, she fell and struck her head against the hand rail of the car. The injury was quite serious, but a physician was summoned immediately and she was able to continue her journey home.—Tweed News.

Mr. Thomas Heffernan, of Otonabee, was brought to St. Joseph's Hospital on Saturday and underwent an operation. Mr. Heffernan is doing as well as can be expected. He is 71 years old.

Mr. Wm. Simpson, Conger street, had the misfortune on Saturday at his home to fall and fracture his right leg below the knee. Mr. Simpson was removed to Nicholls Hospital.

The following from the Saskatoon, Sask., Star, refers to the marriage of a former Lakefield boy, Dr. R. H. Chant, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Chant:—The marriage of Miss Vilda Wunder and Russell Havelock Chant, D. D. S., of Foam Lake, took place at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Wunder, at Sheho, Sask., on Friday, December 14, the officiating minister being the Rev. J. Smith-Windsor of Wilkie, a former pastor. Only the immediate friends of the family were present. After the ceremony a wedding supper was served, and the happy couple left on the east-bound train for their honeymoon. The bride is the youngest daughter of one of the earliest families to settle in the Sheho district, and the groom has for several years occupied a prominent place in the town of Foam Lake. Dr. and Mrs. Chant will reside at Foam Lake.

Mrs. Mulholland and children have returned from Toronto, where they spent Christmas the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Coulson.

Rev. P. M. Macdonald, editor of the Presbyterian and formerly of Cowan Ave. Presbyterian Church, Toronto, preached at St. Andrew's Church on Sunday.

The monthly business meeting of the Woman's Patriotic League of Ashburnham will be held in the work room on Wednesday, Jan. 2nd, at 4 o'clock.

Miss E. M. Hunter, B.A., who has been visiting relatives in Peterborough for the past six months, returned to her duties as teacher at Duval, Sask.

"OPEN HOUSE" AT THE Y.W.C.A.

New Year's Day will be "Open House" at the Young Women's Christian Association," and a hearty invitation is extended to all girls and young women to come and visit the Association whether members or not. A cheerful open fire in the reception hall, the hospitality of the comfortable rooms, and a warm welcome all will await you here. It will be a good place to meet with your friends on the holiday, in the afternoon or evening.

Put the first X on the Board of Education ballot for J. M. Greene.

Film About Which The World Raves

The show at the Royal Theatre tomorrow afternoon and night should not be missed by lovers of high-class moving pictures. In addition to the every-day show the management has secured at considerable expense the latest Vitagraph Blue Ribbon special, "The Girl Philippa," in which the people's favorite actress, Anita Stewart, is featured. This picture gives the story of a French cabaret girl who was forced to spy on all who frequented her little cafe. She held the fate of nations in her hands. "The Girl Philippa," the picture about which the whole world raves, smashed the world's box office record for tickets sold, and hundreds were turned away each performance in New York's leading theatres.
